NODONG SINMUN Article

SK031126 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1107 GMT 3 Jun 82

[Text] Pyongyang, June 3 (KCNA) -- Papers here today dedicate articles to the 45th anniversary of the victory in the historic Pochonbo battle which was personally organised and commanded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the period of the anti-Japanese armed struggle.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who had powerfully organised and directed the military and political activities of the Korean People's Revolutionary Army in close combination with its operations of advance into the homeland, organised and commanded the historic Pochonbo battle on June 4, 1937, reflecting the rigorous situation in the mid-1930's and the matured demand of our developing revolution.

In an article titled "Immortal Exploits Recorded on the Road of Restoration of the Fatherland" NODONG SINMUN says that the Pochonbo battle was a historic one which imbued our people with the firm conviction of national liberation and sternly announced the ruin of Japanese imperialist aggressors.

Referring to the significance of the Pochonbo battle, it says: First of all, the victory in the battle demonstrated the firm will of the Korean people to drive the Japanese imperialist aggressors out of Korea, resolutely resisting their colonial rule and inspired our people with the conviction that if they fought against the Japanese imperialists, they would surely win victory.

The respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song said:

"Its significance lies not in that it killed a few Japanese aggressors, but in that it showed the Korean people were not dead, but alive and it threw out revolutionary rays of hope which inspired them with the confidence that they could defeat Japanese imperialism if they fought it. The battle of Pochonbo declared to the whole world: The Korean people are resisting Japanese imperialism; they do not accept the notion that Korea and Japan are one.

"The Japanese imperialists and the Koreans are not of the same ancestry; the Koreans will not join the Japanese imperialists in invading China; Koreans will not abandon their mother tongue, nor will they change their surnames into Japanese ones; the Korean people are not dead but are alive; and they can defeat the Japanese imperialists if they fight them. This is the strategic significance of the battle of Pochonbo. Herein lies the historic significance of the battle of Pochonbo."

Through the victory in the Pochonbo battle which highly displayed the resourcefulness, courage and dignity of the nation, our people were convinced that as long as the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song guided them, they could certainly defeat the Japanese imperialists and achieve the cause of independence on their own strength. The victory instilled great national pride in our people and the officers and men of the Korean people's Army and inspired them with strength and courage in the period of building a new fatherland including the days of democratic construction after liberation and the hard-fought fatherland liberation war.

The victory in the historic Pochonbo battle also dealt a heavy military blow at the Japanese imperialist aggressors, smashing their guard along the border area and caused serious ideological vacillation within the enemy.

The victory totally exploded the "myth" about the "mightiness" of the Japanese imperialists. The Pochonbo battle which showered a fire of revenge upon the arrogant aggressors showed that the Japanese imperialist aggression army was not an "invincible imperial army," and when the entire people fought in firm unity, they could surely defeat the enemy.

The news of the Pochonbo battle which broke the spine of the enemy was widely spread among broad masses of people the world over through mass media of Korea, China, Japan, the Soviet Union and other countries. This inspired the people with the conviction that if they fought against the imperialist aggressors, they could win and powerfully encouraged them to the struggle for the realisation of the cause of freedom, independence and justice.

Indeed, the Korean People's Revolutionary Army's operations of advance into the homeland and its victory in the Pochonbo battle shine as an immortal feat performed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in leading the struggle to achieve national liberation and independence to victory under the banner of the chuche idea.

NORTH SETS 15 MILLION TON GRAIN GOAL FOR 1982

[Roundtable talk from the feature program "Today's Feature"]

[Text] [Kim Chol-min] According to Pyongyang Radio, to which I listened, agriculture of the North is continuously developing along with industry. It is said that rapid progress is being made in grain production in particular. Would you tell us about the ever-increasing grain production of the North?

[Madame Yun] In the North, grain production has been continuously increased since right after the liberation. By 1948, the North achieved a self-sustaining development in grain production. And right after the cease-fire, the North exceeded the level of grain production of prewar days. It is said that the North produced 3.8 million tons of grain in 1960 -- nearly two times the production in the days before the liberation. Since then, grain production has also been continuously increased. In 1979, the North produced 9 million tons, thus recording the largest crop in history. It is said that the North has so far maintained this level of grain production.

[Sin So-hyon] It is surprising for the North to continuously maintain the level of a record-high crop year, not that of the average crop, under the adverse circumstances in which the North must produce, possessing limited cultivated land and affected by abnormal weather conditions. Please say more about the grain production produced in the North.

[Madame Yun] Sure. The quantity of 9 million tons is not small at all. This is more than four times the 2.16 million tons of grain production in the North before national liberation. This is 2 million tons more than the total grain production produced in the entire area of the North and the South before liberation.

[Sin So-hyon] Yes. I think that one of the reasons for the increase in grain production is the increase in the yield per tanbo [one tanbo is equivalent to about 991.7 square meters].

[Madame Yun] You are right. It is said that the North was able to produce only 100 to 200 kgs of rice per tanbo and 60 to 70 kgs of corn per tanbo right after the liberation. However, in 1974, the North produced 590 kgs of rice and 500 kgs of corn per tanbo, becoming one of the world's agricultural powers. According to the report on the North's yield per tanbo as of 1979 issued by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the production of rice and corn was increased to 720 kgs and 630 kgs respectively.

[Kim Chol-min] How about comparing the North's yield per tanbo with that of other countries?

[Madame Yun] Okay. Among the countries of the world which engage in rice farming, Japan, Italy, Spain and Australia are reputed to enjoy a high yield per tanbo. The average crop of these countries ranges from 415 to 440 kgs. And their highest level is (?480) kgs. They fall far behind the North. The fact that the North produced grain at the world-highest level of yield per tanbo means that the North is the most advanced in mechanizing agriculture.

[Sin So-hyon] As we talked before, the North is making great progress in grain production. This notwithstanding, the North does not want to stay as it is but has set the goal of producing 15 million tons of grain. Will you tell us on which point the North focuses to attain such a vast goal?

[Madame Yun] To produce 15 million tons of grain, the North is placing great emphasis on reclaiming 300,000 chongbo of tideland and newly cultivating 200,000 chongbo of land as part of the four-point nature-remaking projects, and constructing the Nampo sluice and the Taechon power plant. The North is paying attention to carrying out farming scientifically and technologically in conformity with the demands of the chuche farming method by introducing comprehensive mechanization and chemicalization, breeding farm produce well and improving the method of cultivation.

It is expected that the North will increase the production of rice and corn per tanbo to an average of 900 kgs and 950 kgs respectively in the foreseeable future. If the North attains the goal of producing 15 million tons of grain, it would realize "the distribution according to demand" in rice first.

[Kim Chol-min] I come to realize well that foreigners, who admired the North's agriculture for developing at a fabulous speed, are right. Thank you.

TIMES COLUMNIST COMMENTS ON 'NEW ECONOMICS'

SK300116 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 30 May 82 p 5

[Text] A relative of mine pointed out the other night that I lacked a sense of money. It wasn't true, I protested. I was thus forced to demonstrate my sense of the order of magnitude concerning how much a specific sum of money was worth. I present here samples of it, hoping that they would be useful to those who are struggling to catch up with the "new economics" in this enlightening month of May. In the following, each grouping is represented by a single number, for example, 100 stands for 100-999.

1 won. Useful when paying taxes in cash or leveling a chest of drawers. Also find use as chips in a poker game.

10 won. Pays for 3 minutes on a pay-phone, a few balls of bubble gum or a stamp for surface mail.

100 won. Buys a bus token, a ball-point pen, a daily newspaper, a 22-hole briquet of coal or a carnation.

1,000 won. One can ride a taxi without bothering about the change and have reasonable lunch in town. Sufficient to pay a doorman or a traffic policeman for doing nothing.

10,000 won. With this, one can afford a luxurious shirt, a pair of ladies shoes, an electric fan, a plane ticket to Cheju-do or an 80 kg sack of rice.

100,000 won. Nearly all of monthly salaries fall in this category. Sufficient for a color TV, tuition fee for a semester in college or a new refrigerator.

1,000,000 won. An Assemblyman's monthly salary and the content of a presidential envelope are said to be in this range. Buys a car or a good piano.

10,000,000 won. Ordinary apartments and houses are traded on this level. Also compensates for a life lost in traffic or a shooting accident.

100,000,000 won. Corresponds to a Nobel Prize money or a big corporation's "voluntary" contribution to the national defense. Usually sufficient to buy a big house, an Exocet missile, a bank manager or a former general.

1,000,000,000 won. Annual profit of a large manufacturing company in a good year. Sufficient to cater to a whole regiment for a few years or purchase a submodern jet fighter. This was the range Pak Yong-pok controlled in the loan scandal of 1974.

10,000,000,000 won. Can support the construction of either a good-sized petrochemical plant or a Sheffield-class destroyer, either a Christian church in Yongdong or an Asiatic cultural center. Yulsan group went bankrupt in 1979 for its failure to raise such a sum.

100,000,000,000 won. Original British estimate on the total cost of the Falklands war or the annual sale of a multinational corporation. Enough to purchase a 600 MW nuclear power station or a nuclear submarine. The official estimate on the sum Chang Yong-cha swindled out of a number of banks and manufacturing companies is in this range.

1,000,000,000,000 won. The governmental budget for 1982. Total damage on the industry and civilian properties during the Korean war. The "big hand" behind the present loan scandal is said to be in control of sums of this magnitude.

THREE MAJOR PARTIES AGREE TO MEET CHON

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan and leaders of the three major political parties are expected to meet at Chongwadae next week to discuss the settlement of the recent curb loan scandal and other state issues.

The date of the meeting has not been set pending consultations with Chongwadae, but it would most probably be early next week, if not this weekend.

The "political summit" will be based on an agreement reached by the secretaries-general of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP) and the second minority Korea National Party (KNP) at the National Assembly yesterday afternoon.

Interparty negotiations over the summit, first proposed by DKP President Yu Chi-Song in a news conference last week, had rough sailing because of conflicting views over the number of participants.

Following a meeting with his DKP and KNP counterparts, Kwon Ik-hyon, secretary-general of the Ruling Party, told reporters that the three agreed to allow the DJP to arrange for a meeting with the president by heads of the three parties at the earliest possible date at the convenience of Chongwadae.

Concerning the agenda, Kwon said that discussions will be on overall pending national issues, with an emphasis on the conclusion of the aftermath of the curb loan scandal.

He added that the outcome of the meeting will be made public based on a report to be jointly drafted.

"I can not tell when the meeting will take place. We have to consult with Chongwadae," he said.

Political observers predicted that the meeting may be held next week as participants will need time to prepare themselves for the political summit, the third since President Chon was inaugurated in September 1980.

The participants, besides the president, will be DJP Chairman Yi Chae-hyong, DKP President Yu and KNP President Kim Chong-chol. The president concurrently heads the DJP.

The political parties had been at odds over the proposed Chongwadae meeting, and the breakthrough came yesterday morning when the DKP withdrew its persistent demand that the "summit" should be conducted only between the president and Yu.

The ruling party and the KNP insisted that it should be attended by their parties, to jointly solve national difficulties.

Earlier in the day, O Se-ung, minister of state for political affairs, visited Yu at the DKP head office and consulted with the opposition leader for about 30 minutes.

CHAN SI ADDRESSES ADMINISTRATIVE TRAINING COURSE

[Text] The first administrative and judiciary cadre training course for 180 trainees from various central, municipal and provincial ministries and departments throughout the PRK was opened at the administrative and judiciary cadre training school at 0830 on 9 June under the chairmanship of Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers. Attending the opening ceremony were Comrade Mat Ly, member of the party Central Committee, vice chairman of the National Assembly and member of the KUFNCD honorary Presidium; Comrade UK Bunchhoeun, minister of justice; and many deputy ministers and cadres from various ministries and departments.

In his opening speech, Comrade UK Bunchhoeun, the justice minister, said:

[Begin recording] Today, we open the first course of the PRK administrative and judiciary cadre training school at a time when our people throughout the country are elated by the great victories scored during the past 3 years after escaping from the danger of genocide, the resolutions of the third party congress and the party Central Committee, and the success of the second session of the National Assembly which adopted a law on the establishment of the state organs -- another indication of the development and growth of our revolutionary state power.

This initial course will last for about 3 months. The objective of this course is to provide the trainees with a basic knowledge of the state and socialist laws; the principal, significant parts of the party lines and policies adopted at the fourth party congress; the role, tasks and establishment of the state apparatus; and a number of the most essential elements of the specialized work of the administration, the tribunals and the public prosecution.

It is also designed to enable the trainees to increase their proletarian stand and views and to temper themselves as administrative cadres of the new regime so that our cadres will be able to begin to work gradually in accordance with the state rules and regulations in the service of the two strategic tasks of the Kampuchean revolution in this immediate period. This course is being held to meet these objectives and is in line with the historic stage of building and strengthening our country's revolutionary state power.

On behalf of all cadres responsible for the training of the administrative and judiciary cadres of the Council of Ministers, I announce the opening of this first administrative and judiciary cadre training course. [end recording]

In his speech, Comrade Chan Si noted the great victories and developments scored in all fields during the past 3 years by the Kampuchean revolution under the correct leadership of the KPRP. The comrade also exhorted all the trainees as follows:

[Begin recording] Today is the day that we open a course to train cadres in the party lines and policies with particular emphasis on administrative and economic control and basic legal problems. All the trainees are key cadres of various central and local ministries, including important cadres from the people's revolutionary committees, the provincial police offices and the provincial and municipal people's courts.

On this occasion, I would like to mention a number of problems relation to this course. Now, 3 years after the liberation, we have established the state power from the central down to the commune and village levels, as well as built up the ranks of cadres within the framework of the state. Every field of work in our country has been restored and rebuilt. Thus, the effort to stimulate the work of cadres is one of the most necessary tasks.

However, this effort alone is insufficient. Cadres must be knowledgeable in their work and have the means to carry out their work well. For this reason, the most important objective of this course is to educate cadres in administrative and judiciary work.

Since this course will only last for 3 months, it will only provide basic knowledge for the administrative cadres so that they can carry out their necessary daily work. We will have to learn more and study more in our daily work. Each trainee must grasp the important principles of the party, that is, national unity and international solidarity. Only if we implement well the spirit of national unity and international solidarity can we succeed in all our endeavors.

Our state power is the state power of the people, by the people and for the people. Each trainee must study hard in order to serve the people well. He should not place himself above the people, look down upon or oppress the people. He must strive to temper and turn himself into a qualified cadre with good ethics so that the people will trust, love and support him and have confidence in the revolution of our new regime.

This course is also a model course from which we can draw experience for our future courses. Thus, the committees in charge of the course and the school must become close to the trainees and encourage their cadres and personnel to pay attention to providing facilities for the trainees in their (?study), meals and travelling. Together with the teachers, they should help advise the trainees in their study. [end recording]

This ceremony ended at 1030 in an extremely joyful, cordial and warm atmosphere.

VODK HAILS RESOLUTION OF NONALIGNED MEETING

[Station commentary: "The Ministerial Meeting of the Nonaligned Movement Coordinating Bureau Adopted a Resolution Asking for the Complete Withdrawal of Vietnamese Troops from Kampuchea"]

[Summary] "On 6 June, the ministerial meeting of the Nonaligned Movement Coordinating Bureau in Havana adopted a resolution reiterating the aims of the movement: to struggle against imperialism, neocolonialism, apartheid, racism, any form of aggression and the occupation of other countries, interference in the internal affairs of other countries and hegemonism. The resolution emphasized the necessity to respect the principle of noninterference in the internal affairs of other countries, because this is the fundamental principle of the Nonaligned Movement.

"Concerning the Kampuchean problem, which was caused by the Hanoi Vietnamese expansionists sending their troops to attack and occupy Kampuchea in violation of the principles of the Nonaligned Movement and the UN Charter, the resolution of the ministerial meeting of the Nonaligned Movement Coordinating Bureau stated that all foreign troops must be withdrawn from Southeast Asia and Kampuchea in order to guarantee respect for the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of the Southeast Asian countries, including Kampuchea."

During the past few years the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy and the Cubans, who are both cat's-paws of the Soviet international expansionists, have carried out many acts of sabotage aimed at destroying the principles and ideals of the Nonaligned Movement. They have also attempted to drag the movement into serving the aggressive and expansionist strategy of the Soviet international expansionists and their lackeys. "They have tried to propagate a heinous theory to the effect that the Soviets are the natural allies of the Nonaligned Movement."

Before and during the meeting, the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy and their Cuban allies made every effort to obstruct the discussion of the issue of Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea. The Cubans used their position as chairman of the sixth summit conference of the Nonaligned Movement to demolish the Democratic Kampuchean representative and take away his rights and seat.

"Therefore, the fact that the ministerial meeting of the Nonaligned Movement Coordinating Bureau -- which was held in Cuba, in the very house of an ally of the Vietnamese enemy aggressors -- adopted a resolution demanding the complete withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea is a victory for the principles of the Nonaligned Movement and also represents a common victory for the overwhelming number of nonaligned countries who love peace and justice, respect and principles of nonalignment and who are faithful to this movement." This resolution stands as a shameful defeat for the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors.

"The Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government would like to express their sincere thanks to those countries who adopted this just resolution and hope that the nonaligned countries will continue to work actively to demolish the unjust decision foisted by Castro in keeping with his law of the jungle against Democratic Kampuchea. The rights of the Democratic Kampuchean representative and Democratic Kampuchea's seat in the Nonaligned Movement must be restored. Measures must be taken to bring pressure to bear on the Vietnamese until they respect and implement the resolutions of the Nonaligned Movement and the UN General Assembly, which call for the complete withdrawal of the Vietnamese aggressor troops from Kampuchea, and let the Kampuchean people determine their own destiny by themselves with no external interference."

[Text] In the past week, Israeli aircraft heavily bombed Beirut, the capital of Lebanon, and other Lebanese towns, killing and wounding hundreds of people, including women, old people and children. Later, the Israeli forces fired artillery pieces and employed hundreds of tanks and armored vehicles cars in their invasion os southern Lebanon and attacks against various areas in Lebanon, thereby committing untold crimes and causing overwhelming indignation. among the Lebanese people and Palestinian refugees.

The blatant and open acts committed by Israel with the support of the imperialist circles headed by the U.S. imperialists constitute a grave challenge to world public opinion and, at the same time, seriously violate the UN Security Council resolutions and the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Lebanon, Such acts have also caused a tense situation in the region,

The Foreign Ministry spokesman solemnly condemns the criminal acts of aggression committed by Israel with the support of the U.S. imperialists against the Lebanese and Arab-Palestinian people. The spokesman resolutely demands that Israel halt all its acts of aggression and urgently and unconditionally withdraw all its troops from the Lebanese territory. It must strictly comply with the UN Security Council resolutions.

The Lao people once again affirm their full support for the Lebanese, Palestinian and other fraternal Arab people in their just struggle against Zionist Israel and for the defense of their independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

[Text] Bangkok, 10 Jun (AFP) -- A group of Asian lawyers today said they were "morally certain" that chemical weapons had been used in Cambodia and Laos.

The verdict came from Senior Supreme Court Advocate P.N. Lekhi of India at the conclusion of a week-long inquiry here into alleged human rights violations in the two Vietnam-controlled Indochinese states.

The inquiry, sponsored by the Thai chapter of Lawasia in conjunction with the Thai Friends Relief Foundation, was conducted by jurists and academics from Bangladesh, India, Indonesia, Singapore and Thailand. Observers from Australia, New Zealand and Japan also participated.

In a press statement released here this evening, the inquiry committee said it had reached a "consensus" that "circumstances existed, which would be sufficient to convince a reasonable person, that there had been widespread but selective employment of some form of chemical weapons in Laos and Kampuchea (Cambodia)." Elaborating, Mr. Lekhi said the inquiry committee was "morally certain" that deaths and injuries had been brought about by "unnatural" factors.

The committee found that two different "patterns" prevailed. In Laos, there had been "aerial transmission of agents" whereas in Cambodia, water resources had been polluted "with modern techniques," he noted. But the committee had no plan to identify the chemical weapons used, he added.

Hanoi has condemned the inquiry as a move that "suits the scheme of Chinese expansionists and U.S. imperialists against the people's of Indochina."

Senior Advocate A.B. Nasution of Indonesia said the reaction was "understandable" and invited Vietnam to "join us in the inquiry so that we would have better access to the sites."

The inquiry committee, in visits to refugee camps along the Laotian and Cambodian borders, interviewed alleged victims including three Laotian children, aged between five and 10, who survived a recent attack.

The committee plans to publish a report on their findings "as soon as possible."

HANOI SCORES 'PLOT' TO FORM KHMER COALITION

[Text] To cope with the coming session of the United Nations General Assembly, the Chinese expansionists, the U.S. imperialists and certain authorities in the ASEAN countries are trying their best to form a so-called coalition of three Khmer groups in exile. The chief leaders of these Khmer groups are busily preparing for their trips to Geneva to make a bargain this time. Here is our commentary:

As a matter of fact, there is nothing new in this arrangement. To form a coalition of Khmer reactionary groups is a plot hatched by China, the United States and the ASEAN countries a long time ago. Last year they did intend to bring such a political offspring to the 36th Session of the UN General Assembly to replace the political corpse of Democratic Kampuchea of the genocidal Pol Pot clique which is hated by every one of conscience, even by some close allies of the United Staes and China.

Until now they still fail to achieve their plot. There are many reasons. First of all it is due to the stubbornness, greediness and hostility of the chief leaders of these three Khmer groups. More important is disagreement between the bosses: China, the United States and the ASEAN countries. These bosses have in common the goal of forming a coalition against the revival of the Kampuchean people, but they all want to make a profit for their own sake. China, having the Pol Pot force in its control, only wants to use the coalition as a show case for its henchmen to manipulate the other two groups. China's aim is to exert its influence on all Khmer reactionary forces, but it is contrary to the intention of the United States and the ASEAN countries to nurture their own forces. Obviously, whereas their coalition is a (?drawn cake) there already has been a fierce scramble between the greedy bosses and servants.

It is necessary to say more about their ambition. At first they decided to set up a real government closely uniting their henchmen from top to bottom. However, in Singapore the three Khmer chief leaders could only agree to one thing; that is, to stop attacking one another. Then they met in Bangkok nine times in the presence of the Thai and Singapore foreign ministers, but could not break the deadlock. For this reason, they later decided to form a loose coalition. In February 1982, they again met in Beijing in the presence of Chinese strongman Deng Xiaoping. As Son Sann flatly rejected the invitation to Beijing, the meeting turned out to be a failure. Last May Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila went to Beijing with his new proposal and still failed to achieve anything. Newspapers in Bangkok reflected Bangkok's disappointment in the following remark: It is not easy to mix oil with water.

After that the Khmer reactionary leaders passed the word that they would meet to form a coalition in an ASEAN country's capital before the ASEAN foreign ministers meet on 14 June. But now they have decided to meet in Geneva.

To shut wild beats in the same cage is not easy, but the Chinese expansionists, the U.S. imperialists and the ASEAN countries are still trying. Even if they succeeded, the so-called coalition of Khmer reactions will only breed skin diseases for the People's Republic of Kampuchea, no more and no less.

The exiled Khmer reactionaries may talk big in Beijing, Bangkok or in the Oval Office of U.S. President Reagan, but in Kampuchea they are sure to have no foothold. They are just criminals who have been sentenced to death by the Kampuchean people.

SRV JURISTS ASSAIL HUMAN RIGHTS INQUIRY

[Text] Today, 8 June, the Vietnam Lawyers Association issued a statement concerning the human rights inquiry being conducted by a group of Asian lawyers. The statement says:

A group of Asian lawyers called the Asian Lawyers' Legal Inquiry Committee and a Thai organization called the Thai Friends Relief Foundation -- a component of the Law Association for Asia and the Western Pacific -- are holding a conference in Bangkok 4-10 June purportedly to make an inquiry into possible violations of human rights in Kampuchea and Laos, to determine whether chemical and biological warfare has been or is being waged against the Kampuchean and Lao people, to find out whether provisions and medicines provided by the United Nations and other international relief organizations have in fact reached the Khmer people, and also to determine if refugees from Kampuchea and Laos have been arrested, maltreated and exploited by foreign armed forces and governments. These passages are taken from a letter written by a Mr Samutthawanit, a former Thai ambassador to Kampuchea and the coordinator of the aformentioned conference, for distribution to whom it may concern. This letter further states that the conference will charge a representative with gathering documents, information, statements and comments related to the issues under inquiry from various sources such as the press, appropriate organizations and embassies.

The Vietnam Lawyers Association, which always pays attention to the activities of its colleagues in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world for the sake of peace and national independence, holds that the aforementioned dubious allegations and activities by these Asian lawyers, who outwardly appear to be neutral, impartial and objective and who profess a desire to serve peace and human rights, are all too obviously a move to bolster the slanderous charges of violations of human rights constantly leveled at the governments and peoples of the three Indochinese countries in a blatant and shameless manner by the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists. This slanderous campaign has been carried out for many years under the banner of human rights.

Everyone knows that the persistent and blatant fabrications issued by the United States and other reactionary forces during the past few years about the so-called chemical war started by the Soviet Union and Vietnam have already backfired. On 15 March 1982 the Pugwash Conference held in Geneva, Switzerland, rejected these slanders by the United States as groundless. On the contrary, many newly discovered documents have revealed details about the use of toxic chemicals in South Vietnam and Laos by the United States during its war of aggression against Vietnam.

Ample evidence has been made public about the storage and use of chemical weapons by the imperialists and international reactionaries in Pakistan and against the Afghan people. The Thai army, on 11 and 14 February 1982, fired many shells containing toxic chemicals into the Phnum Malai area of the PRK, seriously posioning many civilians. During the February 1979 war of aggression started by China against the Vietnamese people, Chinese troops used toxic gas on a number of population centers and poisoned drinking water sources along their paths of advance.

The obvious truth is that the very culprits who have used chemical weapons to commit crimes have tried to make fabrications and slanderous charges against others. The world press recently exposed this campaign as a smokescreen designed to deflect the attention of U.S. and world public opinion from the criminal decision of the United States to produce and use on a large scale a new generation of chemical weapons, such as binary chemical warheads.

Everyone knows that the distribution of humanitarian aid given by various countries and international organizations to the Kampuchean people inside Kampuchean territory has been carried out in the presence of the representatives of these countries and international organizations. These representatives have also recognized Vietnam's disinterested cooperation in this issue.

Conscientious people throughout the world know full well that tens of thousands of Lao and Kampuchean refugees now living in Thai territory are truly the only victims of starvation, illness and privation. International humanitarian aid, instead of being given to them, has been appropriated by the very people who have clamored about starvation in Kampuchea in order to assist the Pol Pot army remnants who are opposing and sabotaging the Kampuchean revolution.

Faced with such a situation, the Vietnam Lawyers Association calls on the lawyers in the ASEAN countries and in other countries in Asia to make the voice of truth and justice heard -- especially in those matters related to human rights -- and not to act against their professional conscience and genuine justice and not to help the genocidal war maniacs in opposing the legitimate interests of the peoples of Southeast Asia and the rest of the world.

NHAN DAN ASSESSES 'REVOLUTIONARY SITUATION'

BK110700 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 14 May 82 pp 3, 4

[Dao Duy Tung article: "The Revolutionary Situation in Our Country" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] One of the successes of the fifth party congress was that our party reviewed all of the activities of the party and people over the past years, correctly evaluated the achievements scored, pointed out the character and causes of immediate difficulties and shed light on the political situation in our country.

The assessment of the situation this time around is of great importance. The past 7 years were the first years of a new stage -- the stage of the entire country's advance to socialism. Advancing to socialism from an economy generally characterized by small-scale production is a very new experience and practically has no precedent in history. During this period of time, the situation developed in a fairly complex manner. While embarking on building socialism, our people had to mobilize forces to fight and defeat two wars of aggression waged by the Chinese reactionary clique. We have performed not only our national duties, but also fulfilled our international obligation. Faced with the growth of the Vietnamese revolution, the reactionary forces have colluded with each other, considering Vietnam as a principal counteroffensive point in their counterrevolutionary strategy. Under these historic circumstances, there are problems which we have understood thoroughly; there are also problems which we have understood only through the realities of their solution; there are tasks which have yielded satisfactory results while others have still left much to be desired; and there are a great deal of both strengths and shortcomings. At present, we are facing many serious difficulties. The struggle between the two paths is taking place in a difficult and complex manner.

This situation requires that our party make a profound analysis of the situation in the country and draw upon conclusions serving as a basis for the concretization of lines and the formulation of solutions in order to help our country's revolution overcome difficulties and continue to progress. This is an objective requirement of the development of our society. Aware of this requirement, the congresses of all-echelon party organizations devoted a large amount of time to evaluating the situation. Concentrating the intellect of the entire party, the fifth party congress assessed the situation correctly and thoroughly, drew upon many important conclusions and achieved a high identity of views within the party. These results clearly reflect our party's sense of responsibility toward the revolutionary cause of the class and nation as well as toward the fatherland's future and the people's happiness. They also reflect our party's very serious attitude regarding criticism and self-criticism, and its scientific method of assessing the situation.

Analyzing facts objectively, the congress affirmed vigorously the great revolutionary achievements which our people have scored over the past years:

With A PROLETARIAN DICTATORIAL SYSTEM ESTABLISHED RAPIDLY THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, we completed the settlement of the basic problem of the revolution -- to whom power belongs and which path the country has to follow. With the proletarian dictatorial system established countrywide, our people have in hand the most important tool to achieve their revolutionary objectives.

Our party and state carried out many policies aimed at UNIFYING THE COUNTRY RAPIDLY, thus satisfying our people's earnest aspiration and creating an harmonious life in the country. This has caused our country's revolutionary forces to become unprecedentedly stronger, enabling our people to use the comprehensively rich potentials of a unified country with more than 50 million people.

With large revolutionary forces grown as a result of the establishment of the proletarian dictatorial system throughout the country and as a result of the unification of the country, our people FOUGHT AND DEFEATED SWIFTLY THE TWO WARS OF AGGRESSION WAGED BY THE CHINESE REACTIONARY CLIQUE, firmly defended their fatherland, helped to liberate a nation from annihilation, smashed an expansionist base of the Chinese reactionary clique, formed an unprecedented interdependent strategic position of the revolution in the three Indochinese countries, and expanded and consolidated the vanguard post of the socialist system in Southeast Asia.

Struggling under extremely difficult conditions, our people HAVE SCORED REMARKABLE ECONOMIC ACHIEVEMENTS AND MANY CULTURAL SECCESSES. Economic establishments damaged during the war have been restored. Many new economic establishments with modern equipment have been and are being built. The production capabilities of economic sectors have been increased a step further. Our economic successes have not only met to a great extent the people's daily needs, but have also provided a basis for expanding production in the years to come.

With the VIETNAM-USSR TREATY OF FRIENDSHIP AND COOPERATION AND WITH THE PARTICIPATION OF OUR COUNTRY IN CEMA, the all-round cooperation between our country and the socialist community -- in particular, between our country and the Soviet Union -- has created for our country favorable international factors so as to enable our people to fulfill their national and international duties satisfactorily.

During the past 7 years -- which is a short time compared to a man's life or a nation's history -- our people have accomplished a fairly large amount of work and achieved successes not only in national defense, but also in building socialism; not only in the political, military, economic, domestic and diplomatic domains, but also in their national and international duties. These successes, of which we can be very proud, are comprehensive and historically significant.

The successes achieved by our people during that period have created a new revolutionary situation in our country. Our revolution, far from going downhill, is on an upward trend; the revolutionary strategic position of the entire country, far from being weak, is becoming even firmer; the revolutionary forces, far from declining, are growing strong; and the exploitable potentials of the country, far from being reduced, have become even more abundant. In the overall picture of the country, frankly speaking, we clearly see that these achievements are essential.

It is with this significance that that fifth party congress affirmed: "THE PAST 5 YEARS WILL GO DOWN IN OUR NATION'S HISTORY AS A STAGE OF VERY GLORIOUS VICTORIES OF THE VIETNAMESE REVOLUTION. OVERCOMING COUNTLESS DIFFICULTIES, OUR PEOPLE HAVE TAKEN THE VIETNAMESE REVOLUTION FORWARD TO A NEW STRATEGIC POSITION, MORE SOLID THAN BEFORE, AND CREATED GREATER POSSIBILITIES FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE FATHERLAND AND THE SUCCESSFUL BUILDING OF SOCIALISM."

In assessing the situation of the all-level party congresses, we succeeded in overcoming the tendency to see only difficulties and shortcomings while ignoring the great achievements scored by our people; or to recognize only political, military and diplomatic achievements while paying little attention to economic ones. Such a tendency is reflected in our practice of understanding things in a simplistic manner; of not being aware of the degrees, contents and significance of our economic achievements; and of separating political and military achievements from economic ones. Also, when we examined the situation of the economy and daily life, we based ourselves on originally prescribed norms -- many of which were inconsistent with reality -- and not on the fact that complex developments of the situation gave rise to new factors that adversely affected the achievement of these norms. We also failed to base ourselves on the historic conditions that created the standards of living of our people both in the north and in the south in the past, and on the historic conditions that have created the present standards of living of our people throughout the country.

The congress pointed out the basic causes of our people's successes, namely the party's firm leadership, the heroism of the people and armed forces and international support and assistance. In particular, our party correctly solved problems concerning its revolutionary line and strategic policies at the crucial moment of the country, such as the policy of coping with the Chinese reactionary clique's scheme of annexation of our country, the policy of helping the Kampuchean people avoid the danger of annihilation, the policy of signing a treaty of friendship and cooperation with the Soviet Union, and so forth. Without such clear-sighted and timely strategic policies, our people could not score these revolutionary achievements; moreover, they might lose all of the gains they had won, and even experience unfathomable tragic catastrophes. Our party's clear-sighted leadership led to the revolutionary successes that belonged to the entire party in which the Central Committee, the Political Bureau and the comrade general secretary played an important role. Therefore, a resolution of the fifth party congress "highly evaluates the correct activities of the Central Committee (fourth tenure), headed by General Secretary Le Duan, in leading the entire party, people and army to implement the domestic and diplomatic lines laid down in the resolution of the fourth party congress."

As citizens of an heroic nation, combatants of the army of the communists and leaders and organizers of all victories of our people, all party cadres -- in whatever position, on the production or combat front -- have contributed all of their energies and talents to these victories. We highly esteem, take pride in and are enthusiastic over our people's achievements, whereas the hostile forces and opportunists, by nature, are unhappy with and seek to slander them. This is natural. What we should do is to coordinate our actions promptly to smash their slanderous arguments.

The congress emphatically pointed out our people's achievements, thoroughly analyzed the actual economic and social situation in our country and cited the very serious economic and social difficulties facing our people. For instance, the national income has not yet ensured social consumption; the national economy has not yet created accumulation; the amount of grain, cloth and other essential consumer goods is insufficient; the situation concerning the supply of energy and materials, and the communications and transportation situation are very tense; the market and prices are unstable; the life of working people is rife with difficulties, negative manifestations in everyday life still linger; and the gains of socialism have been encroached upon by capitalist and nonsocialist factors.

Thus, our party has looked straight into the truth and pointed out the existing economic and social difficulties; it has neither dodged nor refused to see these difficulties.

The congress analyzed the objective causes of the difficulties. One of the primary causes is that OUR ECONOMY IS PRINCIPALLY A SMALL-SCALE PRODUCTION ECONOMY. In this connection, Lenin's following theory is all the more significant: The more a country is economically backward, the more difficulties it will experience in advancing to socialism.

Russia, an averagely developed capitalist country in 1913, had a population then of 130 million and produced 4.3 million tons of steel, 29.2 million tons of coal, 10.3 million tons of mineral oil and 31,000 tons of brass, and its per capita grain income was 500 kg. Yet, in the wake of the victory of its revolution, it encountered countless difficulties in advancing to socialism. Vietnam, with a population of 55 million -- nearly half that of Russia -- can produce only 40,000 tons of steel and 6 million tons of coal, while its per capita grain income is less than 300 kg and mineral oil has not yet been exploited. Thus, it cannot avoid many serious difficulties.

The country's economy has encountered difficulties not only because of its small-scale production, but also because of THE VERY SERIOUS CONSEQUENCES OF A PROTRACTED WAR AND OF COLONIALISM. These consequences have adversely affected not only the economic sector, but also the cultural and social fields. They have caused material losses and inflicted considerable moral damage. Overcoming them is not a matter of days, but requires a long time. In the 20th century, few nations have suffered such a protracted and atrocious war and borne such heavy war consequences in so many respects.

The problem is thatwe have suffered not only the consequences of 30 years of war. During the past 7 years, WE HAD TO CONDUCT A 3-YEAR NATIONAL DEFENSE WAR; as the old wounds have not yet healed, new losses have been incurred by the two wars of aggression waged by the Chinese expansionists.

That is not all. The Chinese reactionary clique is presently carrying out its hostile policy intensively. It is plotting to annex Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries. Our country is simultaneously enjoying peace and coping with a type of multifaceted war of destruction by the Chinese hegemonist expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists. Meanwhile, we must be ready to cope with the possibility that the enemy will launch a large-scale war of aggression. Under these circumstances, an ordinary citizen can understand that we have devoted considerable human and material forces to the national defense effort.

Perhaps in the world few nations have experienced so many multifaceted and serious difficulties. In spite of this, we HAVE TO MEET THREE VERY PRESSING BASIC REQUIREMENTS SIMULTANEOUSLY -- TO SATISFY THE NEEDS OF NATIONAL DEFENSE, TO ENSURE THE PEOPLE'S LIVELIHOOD, AND TO BUILD STEP BY STEP THE MATERIAL-TECHNICAL BASIS OF SOCIALISM. UNDER THESE CIRCUMSTANCES, DIFFICULTIES AND IMBALANCES ARE UNAVOIDABLE. (footnote: party Central Committee's Political Report at the fifth party congress)

The congress analyzed extensively the shortcomings and mistakes we have committed as a result of impatience, conservatism and sluggishness; shortcomings and mistakes in assessing the situation; and shortcomings and mistakes in concretizing and implementing set lines. These mistakes, in the last analysis, are due to the fact that we do not understand the law of the advance from small production to large-scale socialist production, are not aware of reality and are lacking economic knowledge.

These mistakes are serious. In definite respects, as the political report pointed out, the shortcomings and mistakes in leadership and management have been instrumental in creating or worsening the difficult economic and social situation over the past years. Such criticism by the congress is very correct and appropriate. We must understand, however, that these subjective shortcomings and mistakes are not the only or main causes of all difficulties. If we did not commit shortcomings and mistakes and if they were not serious, we could more satisfactorily solve some problems concerning grain and consumer goods, the situation of some economic sectors would not be so tense and the negative manifestations would not develop so seriously. In fact, there are many difficulties and imbalances which have not yet been basically overcome. Overcoming them needs time.

These shortcomings and mistakes, with their many manifestations, are general. They reflect the leadership abilities of party committee echelons and the managerial abilities of state organs from the central to the grassroots levels. This is a common problem and is not limited to some organs. Naturally, each organ and individual must be conscious of its or his responsibility in a concrete manner.

As the organizer and leader of our people's revolutionary undertaking, our party has sought ways to reduce shortcomings and mistakes. When shortcomings and mistakes are noted, it does not fail to submit to self-criticisms in order to find ways to overcome them. Only naive and utopian people think that in revolution the party never makes mistakes. These people, when faced with mistakes, will tremble with fear. When the Russian revolution encountered difficulties, Lenin said: "It must be admitted that any communists who think that an 'undertaking' of world historic significance -- such as the establishment of a socialist economy (especially in a small-farmer country) -- can be accomplished without mistakes and setbacks and without unfulfilled or unsatisfactory tasks being done again and again many times, will certainly meet with failures. Those communists who do not entertain illusions, who are not discouraged and who keep themselves physically fit and healthy in order to 'start all over again' when faced with the most difficult tasks, will not experience failures (or will very likely not experience failures)" (footnote: V.I. Lenin: Collected Works, vol 14, Tien Bo Publishing House, Moscow, 1978, Vietnamese version, p 514).

The assessment of the situation in order to understand fully the revolutionary developments in our country is significant in many respects.

First of all, OUR PARTY HAS UNDERSTOOD OUR SOCIETY MORE THOROUGHLY. It has a firm grasp of our country's rich potentials and our people's capabilities to exploit them. It is aware of the strengths and weaknesses of our people as well as the advantages and difficulties facing them. In war, understanding one's enemy and oneself is a requisite for defeating him. In socialist construction, understanding the actual situation in the country thoroughly is a primary condition of decisive significance for the accomplishment of set duties. The recent shortcomings in holding form to the realities of the country make us all the more aware of the significance of the correct assessment of the situation.

From the assessment of the situation, our party has drawn many useful experiences in defeating the Chinese expansionists' two wars of aggression, building socialism, settling domestic and diplomatic problems and performing national and international duties. From economic leadership our party has drawn many important conclusions on the steps and degrees of economic development and the adoption of practical economic forms and a system of economic management. Also highly important to us are important lessons on the settlement of the relationship between industry and agriculture and between the central and local economies, on the coordination of national economic development with the expansion of economic relations with foreign countries, on capital construction, on the combination of large, medium and small projects and so forth.

It is on the basis of these lessons that the fifth party congress CONCRETIZED AND FURTHER IMPROVED THE REVOLUTIONARY LINES LAID DOWN BY THE FOURTH PARTY CONGRESS. A thorough study of these lessons will enable us to understand fully the problems which the fifth party congress solved: The initial stage of the transition period; the economic and political requirements of that stage; the industrialization requirements in the 1980's, the one-step advance of agriculture to large-scale socialist production; guidelines and measures for eliminating the subsidy-based management system; the establishment of a new management system; and so forth.

Also through the assessment of the situation, the UNITY AND IDENTITY OF VIEWS WITHIN THE PARTY HAVE BEEN STRENGTHENED A STEP FURTHER. Prior to the congress, there had been differing views on this or that aspect of the assessment of the situation. Such a difference often originated in different methods of examining things, in the varying amounts of information received by local party committee echelons and in the accuracy and inaccuracy of information. This is normal. At the all-level party committee congresses, through discussions of the draft documents of the congress the delegates were supplied with more information on the general situation. Thanks to the many opinions contributed by the delegates at these congresses, we were able, at the fifth national party congress, to achieve a high identity of views in assessing the situation. Many erroneous views were overcome, and the enemy's slanderous arguments were revealed. This is an important success.

It can be said that through the assessment of the situation our party has matured to a great extent. "We have overcome the perplexity which is hard to avoid when entering the new stage. We have made more concrete and rich the revolutionary lines laid down by the fourth party congress. We have gained a deeper comprehension of our country and people. We have identified the enemy and clearly seen the obstacles on our path. We have gained a more accurate and more concrete appraisal both of our possibilities and strengths and of our difficulties and weaknesses. The lessons of experience drawn from the practice of building socialism and defending the fatherland over the past 5 years are very useful to us. All this, which we could not have had 5 years ago, constitutes our most valuable revolutionary equipment as we enter the new stage of struggle." FRASER CALLS FOR STRONGER PACIFIC TIES

[Text] The prime minister, Mr Fraser, has suggested stronger official links between Pacific countries. Mr Fraser was speaking in Sydney at the opening of the Pacific resources convention. He said President Chon of South Korea had recently raised with him the idea of a summit meeting of Pacific heads of government.

Mr Fraser said Europeans, Africans and Americans held such talks but no single meeting gathered the Pacific countries and he believed the idea was worth pursuing. The prime minister said it was difficult for some of the Pacific countries to compete against organized groups, such as the European Economic Community, and regional summit meetings would help bring the issues into focus in a way that individual efforts could not achieve.

The resource convention is being attended by 11 Pacific countries.

LAW TO PROTECT DEFENSE POLICIES PLANNED

[Text] The prime minister, Mr Fraser, says the highest priority will be given to new legislation to ensure that federal responsibility in defense and foreign policy matters is adequately backed by law. The attorney general, Senator Durack, has recommended that such legislation be introduced as soon as possible.

The announcement follows the Victorian premier's statement that his state would be declared nuclear free, involving, among other things, a ban on the entry of nuclear-powered or nuclear-armed ships into the state's seaports.

Mr Fraser had also strongly criticized the reported statement by the federal opposition leader, Mr Hayden, that a national labor government would not allow nuclear-armed warships into Australian ports. Mr Fraser said if the report on the statement was accurate, then the opposition had destroyed an important element of the bipartisan approach to the nation's policy on defense and foreign affairs.

SHIPPING RULE LEADING TO 'TIFF' WITH U.S.

[By Suharyoni]

[Text] Jakarta, 6 June (AFP) -- A "tiff" is emerging between Indonesia and the United States over a government shipping rule that could lead to American and other foreign shipping lines losing millions of dollars. The ruling, which obliges all export and import commodities owned by the government to be transported by Indonesian vessels, has caused quite a stir among foreign shippers here.

It was imposed in the form of a presidential decree and was intended to help Indonesian shipping lines in the face of growing competition from foreign shippers, a sea communication department official said.

However, should Indonesian ships prove inadequate in the transportation of government-owned goods, there is still a [word indistinct] that foreign vessels will be used, the officials said.

The U.S. has presented an "aide memoire" to the foreign office here complaining that the ruling is bound to bring about adverse effects on American shipping lines, and describing it as "sheer flag discrimination."

However, according to official sources, the need for the decree should be understood by foreign shippers since they had hitherto made a lot of money while Indonesian shipping lines have suffered. "We are late in introducing such a policy as it should have been carried out long ago," the sources said.

They pointed out that in Japan, South Korea and some European countries the same policy was tightly implemented.

The government has helped expand the fleet of our major Indonesian shipping lines -- Jakarta Lloyd, Trikora Line, Gesuri Lloyd and Admiral Line -- by providing loans for the purchase of container ships, the sources said.

In its effort to conduct direct trade with buyer countries the government has names four big ports as export harbours -- Belawan (north Sumatra), Tanjung Priok (Jakarta), Tanjung Perak (east Java) and Ujungpandang (South Celebes).

The sources said the government was generally displeased over the quick negative reaction of foreign shipping lines. "They had better not eat the soup when it is still hot," they said, and added that in spite of the protests the rule would remain and would be implemented consistently.

The sources dismissed suggestions that the decree was against an international law banning discrimination in shipping practices. Being a sovereign state, Indonesia has the right to impose regulations which will help safeguard its national interests, they said.

Meanwhile, rumours are rife that the U.S. may consider sanctions against Indonesia if the ruling is strictly enforced, but Indonesia appears unshaken. "We are not closed to negotiations with those interested in this matter, but it must be understood that the policy is irrevocable," they said. They added they did not believe that the ruling would affect Indonesia's own foreign trade if the government was too rigid in implementing it.

A total of 22 foreign shipping lines in Jakarta will now no longer be able to make as much profit as they used to, but it is understood that the government has not closed the door on chartering their vessels if these are needed.

According to shipping officials an immediate problem may arise in the case of some commodities which have been paid for by foreign countries, such as rice, wheat and cotton. These commodities are being shipped by vessels flying foreign flags, the officials said. As an example they cited the case of wheat. Indonesia imports from the U.S. under the PL-480 aid program" and which allows the consignments to be sent here by a U.S. flag vessel.

However, the officials said, the government already has several alternatives to deal with problems arising from the new ruling, but they refused to say what these were.

The ruling is part of the government's policy of raising non-oil exports which have been declining since the end of last year due to the current world economic recession.

TROOPS AGAIN CROSS PAPUA NEW GUINEA BORDER

[Text] Port Moresby, 9 Jun (AFP) -- Indonesian troops again crossed the Papua New Guinea (PNG) border at the weekend it was revealed here today.

But the latest encounter was the result of poor weather. A military helicopter carrying the military commander for the Irian Jaya Province, Brigadier General Sentosa, with 13 troops and two civilians was forced down at Wasengla Catholic mission, about 7 kilometers (4 miles) inside PNG on Saturday [5 June], government sources said. The helicopter was on its way from Jayapura to the central highlands of the Indonesian province. The helicopter landed in PNG on Saturday afternoon and was able to continue its journey within 2 hours.

The brigadier general apologised to the priests at the mission and told them he would also be apologising to the PNG Government.

Government sources said they were not treating the incident as a deliberate border crossing.

PNG Briefed on Violation Report

BK091411 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] The Foreign Affairs Department in Jakarta today summoned the acting charge d'affaires of Papua New Guinea to brief him on the real situation of the report on violation of the common border. On the occasion, the Indonesian Government expressed its strong wish that the Papua New Guinea Government, in dealing with border problems, take more coordinated efforts to prevent the recurrence of incidents in future. The Indonesian Government also expressed the hope for understanding and cooperation of the Papua New Guinea Government on joint efforts to overcome border problems. This was announced by the Foreign Information Directorate of the Foreign Affairs Department today.

PNG Charges Denied

[Text] Jakarta, 10 Jun (ANTARA) -- The Department of Foreign Affairs has denied charges by the government of Papua New Guinea that Indonesian troops had made border violations in hot pursuit of the self-styled OPM [Free Papua Movement] rebels who had fled into the neighour country. The department Wednesday [9 June] summoned the PNG charge d'affaires ad intermin to clarify the situation.

Issuing a press statement here Wednesday the department explained that, according to investigation, security troops of the armed forces of Indonesia on May 14, 15 and 21 did not carry out military operations in the common border area between Indonesia and PNG as claimed by the PNG Government.

According to reports received here, the rebel troops in October last year kidnaped 58 employees of the PT Hanurata logging company including a Malaysian national named Ling Thai Hoe.

These hostages were carried across the border into PNG by the rebels, the statement said. The people of Selmus village, who knew that the hostages were in PNG territory at their own initiative and effort, had freed their relatives kept hostage including the Malaysian national mentioned earlier in PNG territory.

Under a border agreement concluded between Indonesia and PNG in 1979 it was provided that in such cases the government of Papua New Guinea had the obligation to notify the Indonesian Government on the abuse of PNG territory by the rebel forces. But since October 1981 until May 14, 1982 the government of PNG had not notified the Indonesian Government about the matter until the people of the border village in Irian Jaya freed the hostages themselves detained by the revels in PNG territory, the statement explained.

The Indonesian Government has always made efforts to strengthen relations and close cooperation and friendship with Papua New Guinea and the Indonesian Government will continue efforts towards this direction in the mutual interest of the two countries and their peoples aimed at materializing peace, stability and success in development in their respective countries.

For this reason the Indonesian Government greatly hopes that the government of PNG in dealing with border issues would carry out integrated efforts to prevent incidents like this in the future, the statement appealed.

The Indonesian Government also hopes for understanding and cooperation from the PNG Government in the efforts at resolving border issues, the statement of the Department of Foreign Affairs said.

[Excerpts] Tasikmalaya, 1 Jun (ANTARA) -- The series of eruptions of the Mt. Galunggung volcano since April 5 till the end of May have claimed 27 deaths and caused material losses of rp. 10,532,899,500 as well as rendered 22 villages uninhabitable.

A spokesman of the Tasikmalaya regency disaster relief coordination command post, Apang Sofyan, said at the weekend the figures were as yet not final, as the volcano was still continuing its activity.

Mt. Galunggung until today is still shrouded in clouds, and still spewing smoke waves of sometimes white, sometimes soot-black or gray colour 500 metres up into the sky, interspersed by light tremors and explosions.

Refugees registered at the command post so far total 36,922 people for whom a daily RP, 5 million and 12 tons of rice have to be issued. The relief aid had come from the government and private donors, excluding incidental donations such as food ingredients, pastry, medicine, clothing and food items, which are generally doled out among the refugees equitably by the benefactors, he said. The coordination unit (satkorlak) has so far received funds amounting to RP, 259,942,440 and 1,199,063 kilograms of rice of which it has distributed or used RP, 222,638,595 and 468,793 kilograms of rice.

Speaking about the 27 deaths, the spokesman said they had died either in the rush of panic, particularly children being trampled on or squeezed, or been hit by rocks thrown up by the volcano, died in traffic accidents or from disease in refugee camps.

Giving details about material losses, he said 24 houses were smashed, 471 houses heavily and 9,141 others lightly damaged, 73 religious schools (madrasah) were seriously and 16 others lightly damaged, 21 religious boarding schools were heavily damaged, 83 mosques were wrecked and 24 others lightly damaged.

In addition to these losses, 418 hectares of ricefields were ruined, 151.3 hectares heavily and 70 hectares lightly damaged, 70 hectares of dry farms were badly and 26 hectares lightly damaged; 74.14 hectares of ponds were destroyed and 78.28 hectares heavily and lightly damaged, and 602,28 hectares of forestry lands were ruined and 55 hectares heavily damaged. Damage to roads included 1 kilometre destroyed, 11 kilometres heavily damaged, while 30 kilometres of irrigation canals were badly and 12 kilometres lightly damaged.

The 22 villages rendered inhabitable by the volcano eruptions include 10 in Cisayong district, 4 in Leuwisari district and 8 in Indihiang district, the official said.

Meanwhile, the situation around the volcano is still filled with uncertainty, with the volcanology institute still seeing no immediate end to the volcano's activity.

So far, some 302 families comprising 1,323 people have been transmigrated to Sekayu, Palembang, and Riau. Some 32,000 refugees are still being put up in barracks, tents, halls and emergency housing units in and around Tasikmalaya and Garut.

Other efforts being made to deal with the volcano's activity include the building of lava checkdams, which have now been completed to a total length of 7.5 kilometres in 13 locations, with a height of from 1.5 to 3 metres, at a cost of RP. 500 million in presidential aid funds.

ASEAN OFFICIALS DISCUSS POLITICAL, ECONOMIC ISSUES

[Text] Singapore, 10 Jun (AFP) -- Senior officials of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) today discussed a broad range of political and economic issues in preparation for the ministerial conference opening here Monday [14 June]

But the major issue -- Kampuchea -- will only be taken up tomorrow after the expected arrival here tonight of Sinapore's permanent representative to the United Nations, Tommy Koh.

The UN representatives of the four other ASEAN members -- Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines and Thailand -- have already joined their delegations for the important talks on Kampuchea.

Delegations from the ASEAN five split into two groups today: one, political, and the other structural and economic.

The Political Committee, which groups the heads of the foreign ministries in the five countries, reviewed regional and international issues that will be tackled in the ministerial talks. The issues include the situation in Afghanistan, the latest flareup in Lebanon and the Iran-Iraqi conflict and their impact on ASEAN's own search for peace and stability in the region and beyond. The officials also touched on the refugee problem with the Thai delegation drawing attention to the continued inflow of refugees from Kampuchea.

The second group, meanwhile, discussed the streamlining of the association's structure. The idea is to turn the Jakarta-based secretariat into a cohesive and action-oriented body. Also discussed were the reports of the various ASEAN committees which will be incorporated into the conference's final document.

On economic issues, the officials were concerned about the drift in the industrialised countries and its adverse impact on ASEAN countries, whose economies are based on private enterprise. They felt that the industrialised countries were not taking the problems of developing countries into account when framing their own economic policies.

Conference sources said ASEAN foreign ministers would stress, in their talks with their six so-called "dialogue partners" next Thursday and Friday, that the developed world should show greater awareness of the economic problems facing developing nations, particularly ASEAN producers of primary commodities. The "dialogue partners" are the United States, Canada, Japan, the European Economic Community, Australia and New Zealand.

When the senior officials discuss the Kampuchean problem tomorrow, they will be briefed by their UN delegates on this week's meeting in New York of the seven-nation Ad Hoc Committee on Cambodia set up after last year's UN special conference. The committee, comprising Japan, Malaysia, Thailand, Nigeria, Senegal, Sri Lanka and Sudan, was entrusted with the task of speeding up a Cambodian solution in line with UN resolutions.

Conference sources said Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr, who was the chairman of the conference, might soon visit Hanoi to ssek Vietnam's cooperation in implementing the resolution which Vietnam has rejected as illegal. Vietnam also boycotted the UN conference.

The ASEAN standing committee, chaired by Singapore's Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan, will meet on Saturday to approve the annual report, the conference agenda and the recommendations of the various committees on economic and technical cooperation.

The ASEAN foreign ministers' conference will be formally opened by Singaporean Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew on Monday, over the next 2 days, the five foreign ministers will hold closed-door discussions.

COUNTRY'S BID FOR ASEAN SUMMIT CALLED 'NON-STARTER'

[Text] Singapore, 10 Jun (AFP) -- The Philippine proposal for a summit of Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) leaders will almost certainly be a non-starter at the ASEAN foreign ministers' conference next week, an ASEAN senior official said tonight.

The official told AFP after a day-long meeting of the ASEAN senior officials that the Philippines had revived the idea of a summit "in the lobbies" apparently to gauge the reaction of its four other partners: Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore and Thailand, to the idea.

The Philippine thinking seems to be that if the reaction is encouraging, Foreign Secretary Carlos Romulo can then raise it formally during the 3-day foreign ministers' conference opening Monday.

Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos first had already called for such a summit at the ASEAN economic ministers' meeting in Manila last month "to give a political boost" to the association's efforts to forge closer economic ties.

But the official said Indonesia, Malaysia and Singapore had reacted cooly to the suggestion because they feel that a summit will not achieve any tangible results at this time.

Malaysia is particularly against such a proposal because if a summit is held, the venue is most likely to be Manila, since the last two were held in Jakarta and Kuala Lumpur in 1976 and 1977 respectively. But Malaysian Prime Minister Dr Mahathir Mohamad has made it clear that he will not visit Manila until the Philippines takes constitutional steps to drop its claim to the east Malaysian state of Sabah.

President Marcos verbally renounced the claim at a Kuala Lumpur summit 5 years ago and said he was taking formal steps to drop it, but nothing seems to have been done.

Indonesia and Malaysia are also lukewarm since there is no major issue which warrants a heads of government meeting.

Thailand is understood to be willing to support the proposal provided there is a consensus among other ASEAN members. Thailand was disappointed that its own idea of an informal summit during the 200th Rattanokosin celebrations in Bangkok last April did not materialise but would apparently not be averse to a summit to highlight the Kampuchean crisis.

Juding by the reaction today, the senior official said he doubted whether Mr. Romulo would raise the issue formally, though he expected it to be brought up informally.

UN TEAM TO EXPLORE PROSPECTS FOR KHMER SETTLEMENT

[Text] Singapore, 12 Jun (AFP) -- A three-member United Nations mission will visit several European and Southeast Asian countries soon to explore prospects for speeding up a solution to the Cambodian problem.

The team will be led by Senegal's ambassador to the United Nations, Masamba Sarre, chairman of the ad-hoc committee appointed by the UN conference on Cambodia held in New York last July. The other members are Belgium, vice-chairman, and Malaysia rapporteur.

A top Association of Southeast Asian nations (ASEAN) diplomat told AFP today that the three-member delegation had a full mandate to explore all the avenues to bring about an early settlement in Cambodia in line with the conference decisions, which include a call for the withdrawal of all foreign forces, a cease-fire and free elections.

The mission also wants to visit Hanoi, but Vietnam which boycotted the UN conference has described its decisions as "unacceptable."

The UN has already approved the budget for the visit. Although no definite plans have been worked out, the diplomat said the visits would be completed before September, when the UN General Assembly reconvenes.

The diplomat also said that the Austrian Foreign Minister, Willibald Pahr, who chaired last July's UN conference, will visit Hanoi next month. Although the visit will be on a bilateral basis, Mr Pahr will seek Vietnam's cooperation in finding a solution to the three-year old crisis. Mr Pahr had earlier visited China, Malaysia, Singapore and Moscow on a similar mission.

Singapore's Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan today confirmed the forthcoming tour of this region by the three-nation delegation and said ASEAN would welcome attempts to maintain the contacts on a trilateral basis. He was speaking to newsman after chairing the ASEAN standing committee meeting laying the groundwork for the foreign ministers' conference opening Monday.

Mr Dhanabalan said the United Nations has laid down the framework for a solution of the Cambodian problem. "We think this is the best solution, and it is for Vietnam to respect it. I hope they will realise this and come to their senses," he noted. Mr Dhanabalan acknowledged that ASEAN foreign ministers had nothing new on the Cambodian problem but shot back at reporters: "It is not incumbent on us to make a proposal whenever we meet."

Mr Dhanabalan declined to comment on press reports that Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach would visit Singapore soon. He said Mr Thach had made no approach to him. "I don't take cognizance of press reports," he added. Mr Thach was to have visited Singapore two years ago in response to an official invitation, but cancelled the plans following ASEAN condemnation of the Vietnamese incursion into a Thai border village. Meanwhile reports from Hanoi said Mr Thach might soon visit Malaysia and Indonesia.

The Standing Committee, chaired by Mr Dhanabalam and comprising ambassadors of the other four ASEAN countries -- Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines and Thailand -- today approved the agenda for the three-day ministerial conference and the two-day follow-up talks with six dialogue partners: the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Japan and the European Economic Community.

ASEAN OFFICIALS DISCUSS KAMPUCHEA ISSUE

[Text] Singapore, 11 Jun (AFP) -- Senior officials of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) today wound up their 2-day meeting after more than 8 hours of discussions centring on Kampuchea.

Also taking part in today's meeting, in preparation for the 15th ASEAN foreign ministers' conference opening here Monday, were the United Nations representatives of the five countries -- Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand -- who briefed the officials on the discussions of the ad hoc committee on Kampuchea in New York early this week.

A senior official told AFP that the meeting recognised that attempts made so far to seek a political solution of the 3 year old Kampuchean problem had bogged down and that a new initiative would be required to break the logjam.

Similarly the strenuous efforts to form a coalition government of the three anti-Vietnamese Khmer groups had suffered a major setback after the somewhat hopeful signs last September. Officials believe a new initiative will be required on the Kampuchean issue, which would have to come from the ministers. But in the short term, ASEAN's efforts would be focused on retaining the Democratic Kampuchean representation at the United Nations, held by Khmer Rouge.

The officials also put together a draft joint communique into which will be incorporated the gist of the ministerial thinking on key issues.

While preparing the draft agenda, Philippine's Foreign Ministry Director-General Pablo Suarez was understood to have insisted on including President Marcos' call for a new ASEAN summit. But this was opposed by three of the participating countries, spearheaded by Tan Sri Zakaria Ali, secretary general of the Malaysian Foreign Ministry. Indonesia and Singapore were also lukewarm about the proposal which many participants feel will be a divisive influence on the organisation at this time.

The main objective appears to be that if a summit is to be held, the venue would be Manila and Malaysian Prime Minister Dr Mahathir Mohammad will not go there until the Philippines takes constitutional steps to drop its claim to the east Malaysian state of Sabah.

Meanwhile, the second committee on structural and economic affairs also completed its work today.

Today's meetings approved the repotts of the various committees, which will now be considered by the Standing Committee tomorrow before submission to the minister. The Standing Committee this year is headed by Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan, and consists of the ambassadors here of the four other countries.

Political discusions today also went beyond the ASEAN region. After contacts were made with the other foreign ministers, Mr Dhanabalam issued a strong statement on behalf of ASEAN condeminng the Israeli thrust into Lebanon and demanding the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Israeli troops.

The final communique is also expected to show ASEAN's concern about the continuing Iran-Iraq war.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, who is a member of the nine-member committee set up by the Organisation of Islamic Countries, is flying here direct from Jeddah after the latest abortive attempt to bring the two warring parties together. He will brief his fellow ministers on his deliberation in the Saudi capital.

The foreign ministers meeting will also be attended by observers from Papua New Guinea and Brunei, a British-protected sultanate which becomes fully independent next year.

FOREIGN MINISTERS COMMENT ON KAMPUCHEA PROPOSAL

Singapore's Dhanabalan

BK121147 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] The Foreign Minister, Mr Dhanabalan, said Hanoi will one day realize that the solution ASEAN has proposed for the Kampuchean problemis the only way out for the Vietnamese.

Speaking to reporters after the closing session of the ASEAN standing committee in Singapore this afternoon, Mr Dhanabalan said it was not incumbent upon ASEAN to keep on making proposals. It has already laid down the framework for a fair and just solution taking into account the interest of all parties involved.

The 3-day meeting of the Standing Committee was to prepare for the ASEAN foreign ministers meeting starting on Monday. According to a statement of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the committee had drawn up a joint communique for the ministers' approval.

Mr Dhanabalan is also the chairman of the Standing Committee. The Foreign Minister of Thailand, Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila will take over the chairmanship next week.

Philippine's Romulo

[Text] The Philippine Foreign Minister, Gen Carlos Romulo, says the 15th ASEAN ministerial meeting, which opens in Singapore tomorrow, is a culmination of the organization's search during the past year for solution to problems which affected the five member states. He said this is a statement issued on his arrival in the republic this evening for the meeting.

General Romulo said the pact had witnessed outstanding ASEAN achievements in the political, economic and social-cultural spheres. ASEAN's record has made his delegation confident that the organization will survive and endure. It's imperative that ASEAN states husband their resources in a collective endeavor to meet common threat.

Speaking to reporters at the airport, General Romulo said that while ASEAN considered the coalition of the three Kampuchean resistance factions as an important matter, it has not the center piece of ASEAN's option. Other options will be discussed by the ASEAN foreign ministers in Singapore before they present it to the next UN General Assembly. He said ASEAN hoped the General Assembly would continue to support the decision of the ministers.

General Romulo pointed out that ASEAN's aim had always been to isolate Hanoi from the international community and it had succeeded in doing this.

In reply to questions, General Romulo said that among other main topics for discussions at the ministerial meeting would be ASEAN's industrial complementation scheme, tariff preferences and ASEAN's views on various international issues, including the Middle East.

General Romulo was met on arrival by his Singapore counterpart Mr S. Dhanabalan.

ASEAN CONDEMNS ISRAELI INVASION OF LEBANON

BK111411 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0600 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] ASEAN foreign ministers have strongly condemned Israel for invading Lebanon. They said Israel had contravened the principles enshrined in the UN Charter and disregarded the decisions of the UN Security Council.

A Foreign Ministry statement in Kuala Lumpur said Israel's aggression against Lebanon had resulted in greater instability and turmoil in west Asia and posed the danger of a wider war. It had also undermined efforts on the part of the international community to find a peaceful settlement of the conflict in west Asia.

The ministers also fully supported the UN Security Council resolution calling for a cease-fire and the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon.

DPRK TURNS DOWN PROPOSED PARLIAMENTARY VISITS

OW120549 Tokyo KYODO in English 0452 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 12 KYODO -- North Korea has turned down proposed visits by Japanese parliamentary delegations, touching off speculation something is happening within the communist leadership in Pyongyang. Pyongyang previously has welcomed Japanese members of parliament, leftists as well as conservatives, though there are no diplomatic relations between the two countries.

But the atmosphere appears to have changed slightly over the past few months, North Korea watchers here said. They cited North Korea's rejection of a visit by a pro-Pyongyang Dietmen's group. The Dietmen's League for Promotion of Japan-(North) Korea Friendship had planned negotiations on a private fishery agreement expiring at the end of this month.

A cable from Pyongyang reached Tokyo Monday, only three days before their scheduled departure. It said North Korea cannot accept the delegation because of a schedule of various events, but gave no further details.

This was North Korea's first rejection of the group's visit since the fishery agreement was first signed in 1977, group leader Chuji Kuno said.

The senior Dietman of the Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) said he had waited to hear from Pyongyang on the group's planned visit but there had been no response. "They (the North Koreans) did not say why. We tried to talk with them over the phone but it did not get through," Kuno said. He has frequently visited North Korea in the past.

Another LDP Dietmen's group recently had to cancel a trip to North Korea because of what was described as "unpreparedness on Pyongyang's part."

A group spokesman said there had been no response from North Korea more than a week after a list of prospective visitors had been sent. "We have not experienced this before," the spokesman added.

Yohei Kono, a leader of the small opposition party New Liberal Club, however, is not apparently wondering but feeling rather humiliated. He was invited to visit North Korea last year but had to postpone his scheduled trip at his host's request due to "inconvenient circumstances."

A second North Korean invitation came to Kono in March and he planned to visit the country late May. He waited but there was no final, official invitation from the North Korean Government. "Let's not discuss a trip to North Korea any longer," Kono's secretary said.

North Korea's rejections of Japanese delegations have prompted the Foreign Ministry to try and find some reasons. Describing the situation as "highly unusual," a ranking ministry official said, "we have started collecting information."

Some North Korea watchers in Tokyo say it may be due to a possible power struggle.

The newspaper TONGIL ILBO, published in Tokyo by South Korean residents in Japan, went even further and said a general rioting broke out in North Korea's northeastern provinces of Yanggang and Hamgyong. The rebellion, which is not confirmed independently, is part of resistance against the Communist Party's alleged purge carried out by Kim Chong-il, the son of President Kim Il-song, the daily added.

The speculation was flatly denied, however, by the pro-Pyongyang Korean residents organization Chongnyon in Tokyo.

Chongnyon officials say they asked the Japanese delegations to cancel their trips because the Pyongyang government is now busy "cleaning house" after national celebrations of the 70th birthday of President Kim on April 15.

The anniversary was called the most important event since North Korea's national foundation in 1948.

"Members of parliament deserve the best treatment by the state but the North Korean Government cannot meet the requirement at present," one Chongnyon official said.

JAPAN, USSR RESUME SUPERVISION OF SALMON FISHING

[Text] Kushiro, Hokkaido, June 12 KYODO -- Three Japanese patrol boats left Kushiro Saturday with Soviet observers aboard for the first joint Soviet-Japanese supervision of salmon fishing in six years.

Three Soviet Fisheries Ministry officials and three Soviet interpreters boarded the Japanese fishery agency ships to observe operations of medium-sized salmon fishing boats during this year's season in northern waters.

Japanese patrol boats began carrying Soviet observers in 1962, but the practice was suspended in 1976.

The joint supervision has been revived at the strong request of the Soviet Union following a recent rash of illegal operations by Japanese salmon fishers.

MITI TO ASSESS WAR DAMAGES ON PLANTS IN IRAQ

[Text] Tokyo, June 12 KYODO -- In expectation of a ceasefire in the Iran-Iraq war, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) has decided to start assessing war damages for compensation on Japanese plant projects in Iraq.

MITI officials said there are 13 large plant projects now in Iraq, whose total costs on a contract basis amount to yen 612.4 billion (dollar 2.5 billion). But since the outbreak of the war, the costs for the projects have increased by an estimated 20 percent, because of the suspension of construction, increases in wages and materials and changes in transportation routes.

Japanese companies concerned have discussed the problem separately with the Iraqi Government, but the Iraqi side has been reluctant to approve most of the damages.

ANTINUCLEAR RALLIES HELD IN TOKYO, OSAKA

[Text] Tokyo, June 13 KYODO -- Japan's antinuclear citizen groups held rallies in the nation's two largest cities, Tokyo and Osaka, Sunday to coincide with an international antinuclear campaign being held in New York, organizers said.

More than 5,000 people crowded Tokyo's Hibiya outdoor music hall in the sunny afternoon and agreed on handing a note of antinuclear proposals to Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, who attended and delivered a speech at the United Nations' special session on disarmament Wednesday.

The proposals called for opposing the government's policy of promoting nuclear electric power plants and demanded the setting up of a civilian committee which would hold an authority to check whether Japan's nonnuclear policy is broken or not.

Workers, students and women's group leaders also spoke out against Japan's Self Defense Forces which they say are contrary to Japan's Constitution banning military forces.

In Osaka, western Japan, about 40 members of an antinuclear group held a rally in front of a department store in Minami Ward to warn Sunday shoppers how dreadful nuclear weapons are. The members, holding a banner reading "Osaka grand appeal zeros in on tying up with New York's grand demonstrations before the United Nations," hung pictures of the atom-bombed city of Hiroshima and an imaginative map of Osaka as it would be after a nuclear attack. A folk group sang antinuclear protest songs.

FIRST QUARTER ECONOMIC REPORT SHOWS SMALL GAINS

[Text] Tokyo June 11 KYODO -- Bouncing back from the first drop in seven years in the fourth quarter of 1981, the Japanese economy grew mildly in the first three months of this year, closing fiscal 1981 with a lackluster 2.7 percent gain, the government announced Friday.

The inflation-adjusted growth in fiscal 1981, ended March 31, was the slowest since fiscal 1974 and far lower than the revised government projection of 4.1 percent, making it impossible in effect to attain a 5.2 percent growth projected for current fiscal 1982. Fiscal 1980 saw a 3.7 percent GNP gain.

Preliminary figures from the Economic Planning Agency showed Japan's gross national product (GNP) -- the value of total goods and services the nation produced -- was running at a seasonally-adjusted annual rate of yen 196,224.7 billion (dollar 791 billion) in the January-March period allowing for inflation, up 0.8 percent over the previous quarter. The growth translated into 3.3 percent at an annual rate.

The GNP showed a revised 0.7 percent decline in the last quarter of 1981.

Leading the fiscal 1981 growth were exports, which jumped 16 percent. Consumer spending, accounting for more than half the GNP, climbed 1.4 percent.

Business capital spending, another main force of economic activity, slowed to a 0.7 percent rise in fiscal 1981 from the previous year's 5.7 percent increase, substantiating the protracted economic slowdown.

Private housing investment edged down 0.4 percent, improving from a 10.1 percent slump in fiscal 1980.

The performance in the first quarter of 1982 showed the economy was upheld by strong consumer spending during the period rather than exports. Consumer spending rose 1.9 percent over the last quarter of 1981 while housing construction, business investment and most other sectors of the domestic sector declined. Exports grew 0.7 percent in the first quarter largely due to a special factor -- increased vessel exports -- but failed to recoup the previous quarter's 3.7 percent dive.

GNP as calculated on an expenditure basis (in billions of yen, real terms, with percentage changes in parentheses):

	Fiscal 1980	Fiscal 1981	1st Qr. 1982

[Excerpt] Pyongyang, June 14 (KCNA) -- A military delegation of the People's Republic of China headed by Comrade Geng Biao, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China, member of the Standing Committee of the Military Commission of the CPC Central Committee, state councillor and minister of national defence, arrived in Pyongyang today by plane for an official goodwill visit to our country at the invitation of the Military Committee of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea.

NODONG SINMUN Commentary

[NODONG SINMUN 14 June editorial: "Mighty Demonstration of Friendship and Unity Between the Peoples and Armies of Korea and China"]

[Text] At the invitation of the Military Affairs Committee of the KWP Central Committee, a PRC military delegation led by Comrade Geng Biao, member of the Politburo of the CCP Central Committee, Standing Committee member of the Military Commission of the party Central Committee, member of the State Council and defense minister, will arrive in Pyongyang today to pay a friendly official visit to our country. Our people and the officers and men of the People's Army warmly welcome the visit to our country by the PRC military delegation.

This visit will greatly contribute to the consolidation and development of the traditionally militant friendship and unity between the parties, countries, peoples and armies of Korea and China. It will also greatly encourage our people, vigorously struggling to accelerate the work of imbuing society with the chuche idea, to expedite the country's independent and peaceful reunification under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party center.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Through the struggle to achieve a common cause, the peoples of Korea and China have always shared weal and woe and closely supported and cooperated with each other.

Korean-Chinese friendship is an invincible, great friendship which has been cultivated with blood in the flames of the arduous revolutionary struggle and has overcome all historic trials. On the single road of struggle against a common enemy -- the imperialist aggressors -- the peoples and armies of Korea and China have linked their destinies since the early days and shared their fates and weal and woe. In the fatherland liberation war, when our people experienced difficulties and trials, the fraternal Chinese people and army offered aid to us, shedding their blood. They are now actively supporting and encouraging the Korean people's struggle to build socialism and achieve the country's independent and peaceful reunification. The Chinese people are a wise and courageous people who have a long history and a fighting tradition. Under the wise leadership of the Chinese Communist Party led by Comrade Mao Zedong, their great leader, the Chinese people won victory in the national revolution by waging an arduous struggle to achieve freedom and liberation and founded the People's Republic of China -- a true people's state for the first time in the history of several thousand years. After founding the republic, the Chinese people, firmly united around the CCP and displaying the revolutionary fighting spirit of self-reliance, have built a lively, new socialist China in a Chinese territory once plagued by a backwardness and poverty.

The Chinese People's Liberation Army, the Chinese people's revolutionary armed force, has played a great role in this epochal change which has occurred in the history of China. Activated in the flames of the fierce struggle to achieve national and class liberation, the PLA has been loyal to the party and the people and achieved brilliant victory in the anti-imperialist, national liberation war and in the domestic revolutionary war. Thus, it has helped to unfold the new history of the people in the vast land of China. The PLA, which has developed into an invincible revolutionary armed force firmly prepared politically, ideologically, militarily and technologically in the proud course of struggle shining with victories and glory, is now safeguarding the Chinese people's socialist gains.

Today the fraternal Chinese people are struggling to accelerate socialist modernization and achieve the cause of the country's reunification by having Taiwan return to the fatherland. While firmly abiding by four principles, they have attained new achievements in revolution, construction and in all other sectors, such as the work of achieving socialist spiritual and material civilization. They have vigorously advanced with resolve to achieve stability and unity throughout the country and build a highly democratic, civilized, modernized, and powerful socialist country.

The might of the PRC has increased with each passing day, and its international position has been enhanced. The Korean people and the People's Army sincerely rejoice as their own over all successes attained by the Chinese people and their liberation army and hope that they will achieve greater successes in their worthwhile struggle to implement the resolutions of the sixth plenary meeting of the 11th CCP Central Committee and the fourth meeting of the 5th National People's Congress.

Today the international situation is very complicated and extremely strained. Because of the imperialists' aggressive war maneuvers, which have become more brazen with each passing day, the danger of a new world war has increased. While strengthening its policy of aggression and war in South Korea, the U.S. imperialists have instigated traitor Chon Tu-hwan to provoke a new war. Strengthening the friendship and unity between the peoples and armies of Korea and China is thus of great significance. The planned visit to our country by the PRC military delegation will once again powerfully demonstrate the might of the great friendship and unity between the peoples and armies of Korea and China and contribute to protecting peace in Asia and the world.

We are delighted at having comrades-in-arms who are faithful to revolutionary fidelity like our neighbor, the Chinese people. Just as they defeated two imperialists in the past, the peoples and armies of Korea and China forever will oppose imperialism as revolutionary comrades-in-arms and struggle shoulder to shoulder to attain victory in the cause of socialism and communism.

We sincerely hope that, while staying in our country, the friendly delegation of the fraternal Chinese people and their liberation army have enjoyable and worthwhile days and attain successes.

KIM IL-SONG SENDS SUPPORT MESSAGE TO 'ARAFAT

[Text] Pyongyang, June 12 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, on June 12 sent a message to Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization and commander-in-chief of the Palestine Revolutionary Armed Forces, expressing solidarity with the Palestinian people in their struggle against the armed invasion of southern Lebanon and Palestine bases in this area by the Israeli aggressors.

The message reads: On June 6 the Israeli aggressors, encouraged by the U.S. imperialists, launched the largest-scale armed invasion ever known against the whole area of southern Lebanon and Palestine bases in this area.

In this connection I express deep concern for the grave situation created in this area and, on behalf of the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the Korean people and on my own, express firm militant solidarity with you and, through you, with the Palestine Liberation Organization and the people and resistance fighters of Palestine who are fighting valiantly against the Israeli aggressors.

The high-handed aggressive act the Israeli aggressors are now committing, crudely violating the publicly recognized norms of international law, had long been planned and prepared; it is a brigandish encroachment on the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Lebanon and their desperate attempt to crush the cause of Palestine revolution and gratify the expansionist desire of the Zionists.

The Korean people sternly denounce the war action of the Israeli Zionists under the patronage of the U.S. imperialists as a naked challenge to the entire Arab people and the world peaceloving people and a criminal act of leading the overall situation of the Middle East to the worst phase and disturbing world peace and security.

We strongly demand that the Israeli aggressors stop at once their war of aggression and mass destruction against the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples and withdraw from the occupied land unconditionally without delay.

The Korean people regard as their own the heroic and valiant struggle waged against the Israeli Zionists by the fraternal Palestinian people who are standing on the common front against imperialism and for independence and are firmly resolved to actively support and encourage their righteous cause with might and main in the future, too. Today the peace-loving people the world over are unanimous in supporting the Palestinian and Arab peoples and condemning the Israeli aggressors.

I express the belief that the fraternal Palestinian and Lebanese peoples and other Arab peoples will win final victory in their struggle against the Israeli aggressors and you and the Palestinian people will certainly accomplish the sacred cause of taking back the occupied Palestinian land and restoring the legitimate national rights including self-determination and establishment of an independent state.

VRPR SCORES STOESSEL'S SENATE REMARKS ON NORTH

SK131140 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Text] In this hour we will talk about the absurd remarks made by U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Stoessel at a U.S. Senate hearing.

In an appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on 10 June, U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Stoessel babbled about the increase in the North's military capabilities and the maintenance of a credible deterrent to the North's aggression against the South.

Such very improper remarks can only be made by errand boys of war who are accustomed to interference with and aggression against another's country.

While Stoessel was raving about the increase in the North's military capabilities, the U.S. Pentagon announced its decision of providing the South Korean Air Force with 6 F-4D Phantom fighters to bolster South Korea's air offensive capabilities. Stoessel's absurd remarks are like a thief shouting: "Stop thief!"

The U.S. ruling circle's babbling about a southward invasion by the North and the increase in the North's military capabilities is only an excuse to justify their military buildup and aggressive maneuvers.

As is well known, the U.S. aggressors have clamored that, since the threat of southward invasion by the North continues, the perpetrual occupation of U.S. troops in South Korea is required and that, since the North continues to beef up its military capabilities, military support for South Korea is inevitable. This is a downright lie and brigandish logic. The U.S. aggressors have repeatedly babbled about the threat of southward invasion by the North. However, what exists in this land is not the threat of southward invasion, but the threat of northward invasion from the United States. The threat of southward invasion has never existed so far and will never exist in this land. Only the threat of northward invasion by the South exists [words indistinct].

Addressing the inaugural ceremony on 4 June, Sennewald, the new commander of the U.S. Army in South Korea, brazenly raved that he will smash the North by continuously increasing military capabilities while at his post.

Prior to this, U.S. Vice President Bush said the United States will remain a strong force in South Korea. At the 14th U.S.-South Korea annual defense consultative meeting on 30-31 March, the two sides adopted an 11-point joint statement including the transition of stockpiled material needed in wartime to South Korea, giving first priority to the reinforcement of South Korean security, the improvement of conditions of the foreign military sales credit, the development of the cooperation system of the defense industry with South Korea and the continuous pushing ahead with the plan of modernizing the U.S. troops in South Korea.

It is the United States that is running amok in preparations for a war against the North, frequently staging large-scale military exercises simulating the North as the enemy. It is also the U.S. aggressors who are straining tension, flying SR-71 high-atlitude reconnaissance planes all over the truce line everyday. Every fact shows that it is none other than the U.S. aggressors who are running amok in preparations for a new war to invade the North, disturbing peace on the Korean Peninsula and straining tension.

For this reason, the U.S. aggressors' babbling about the maintenance of a credible deterrent to the North's aggression against the South and the increase in the North's military capabilities is a brigandish logic reversing black and white and a downright lie to conceal their aggressive maneuvers.

We cannot but view U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Stoessel's babbling at the U.S. Senate hearing as absurd remarks exposing such a wicked attempt.

The U.S. aggressors should not make such aggressive remarks, but withdraw from South Korea without delay, taking along the armed forces of aggression, in accordance with the United Nations' determination and the unanimous demand of the masses at home and abroad.

NODONG SINMUN ON S. KOREAN STUDENT 'CRACKDOWN'

[Text] Pyongyang, June 13 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN in a signed commentary today titled "Fascist Offensive to Bridge Over Ruling Crisis" flays the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist cliques brutal crackdown on South Korean students and people.

Recalling that the Chon Tu-hwan military gangster clique harshly suppressed the anti-U.S., anti-puppet demonstration of students of Yonsei University and University for Foreign Studies in Seoul and arrested several students, passed heavy penalties upon Yonsei University students who were arrested in April last year, put down a sit-in struggle of female workers of the U.S. computer parts company in Seoul and arrested nearly 50 of them to persecute them, the commentary says:

This suppression by the fascist group is a high-handed challenge to the unanimous purpose and desire of the South Korean people to live in a new society of independence without aggressor and traitor and a new reactionary offensive for tiding over the crisis of its "regime" by the threat of bayonet.

The anti-U.S., anti-Chon Tu-hwan struggle of the South Korean people and students is an inevitable product of the U.S. imperialists colonial enslavement policy in South Korea and the flunkeyist-treacheries of the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique.

The Chon Tu-hwan group now finds itself in a serious crisis previously unknown in face of the mounting anti-U.S., anti-puppet struggle of the South Korean students and people. This crisis is becoming more acute owing to the recent scandal of the puppet clique.

The Chon Tu-hwan group is attempting to prevent the expansion of the struggle by mercilessly suppressing the anti-U.S., anti-puppet struggle of the South Korean students. But, facist suppression is not almighty. Pent-up indignation and grievances of the people are bound to erupt.

The Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique must immediately discontinue suppression of the just struggle of the students and people and promptly step down from "power" as demanded by them.

RPR HITS SEOUL VISIT BY ZAIRE'S MOBUTU

SK110428 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0334 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Pyongyang, June 11 (KCNA) -- The Propaganda Department of the Central Committee of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification published a commentary titled "We Denounce Seoul Trip of Mobutu," which reads in full:

A ridiculous farce of two despicable servants subsisting on the bread crumbs falling from the table of U.S. imperialism was presented recently in Seoul.

According to a report, Mobutu, president of the Republic of Zaire, paid a so-called official visit to South Korea from June 7 to 10. As soon as he set foot in Seoul, Mobutu held summit talks with the traitor Chon Tu-hwan. He visited the Suwon Air Base, the paratroopers command and the Pohang marines to watch war exercises and encourage the ROK Army soldiers.

He did a lot of pep talking at a news conference and issued a joint statement on June 10.

At the summit talks and in the joint statement he praised the traitor Chon Tu-hwan to the skies, as if he had done something for the reunification of Korea. Mr. Mobutu's visit to South Korea and all his demeanours can hardly be considered to be fitting for the head of state of a dignified, independent country.

There may be visits between heads of state in the course of relations between countries, but why has Mr. Mobotu who styles himself something in Africa come to the traitor Chon Tu-hwan, of all persons, who has won all ill fame in the world and earned the curse and condemnation of all people and acted so indiscreetly and ridiculously? Is there no other place for him to visit?

This only tells that both Mobutu of Africa and Chon Tu-hwan of Asia are twin servants of the United States.

As for Chon Tu-hwan of South Korea, he is a shameless robber of power and murderer who had long been trained in a planned way by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and Pentagon and staged a bloodbath in Kwangju with tanks and ursurped power at the point of the bayonet under the active protection and manipulation of Wickham, former commander of the South Korea-U.S. combined forces.

The same can be said of Mobutu who came to Seoul to take the blood-stained hands of the traitor Chon Tu-hwan. The May 12 issue of the U.S. paper INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE said that Mobutu Sese Seko seized power with the help of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency in 1960 when the Eisenhower administration proposed a military coup.

The paper also noted that corruption and irregularities are the essential mission of the government system of Zaire. Chon Tu-hwan has also gained notoriety in the world for the loan scandal, an unprecendentedly large swindle, which has been brought to light in the wake of continued corruption and irregularities. There is a saying in our country that like attracts like.

It is self-evident that if he is not like-minded and is not in the same position, Mr. Mobutu would not have made a long journey to Seoul to do such an indiscreet act as hugging the murderer and encouraging the war frenzy of the traitor, inspecting the powder-reeking grounds of war exercises.

Mobutu said that he had learned a lot of things this time in Seoul. If there is anything he learnt, what is it if not the criminal acts of the traitor Chon Tu-hwan as a faithful lackey of U.S. imperialism in harshly suppressing democracy and civil rights, betraying the country and the nation, slaughtering patriots and practising swindles?

To all intents and purposes, Mobutu's visit to South Korea must be regarded as one scripted and stage-manned by the U.S. imperialists.

Now the South Korean people brand the United States instigation of Mobutu to visit Seoul as a crafty trick to give a shot in the arm to the fear-stricken traitor Chon Tu-hwan isolated within and without and driven in a quandary and to put down the mounting anti-U.S., anti-Chon Tu-hwan sentiments of the people.

During his stay, Mobutu at his talks with Chon Tu-hwan and a news conference and in the joint statement, referred to the question of our country's reunification.

There he praised the South Korean rulers for playing a "leading role" for the reunification of the country and highly estimated their so-called "unification proposal for national concord." His utterances distorting the truth and lacking common sense can hardly be regarded as words of a man of sober judgement. It is doubtful if Mobutu knew when he made such utterances that the unification proposaladvertised by Chon Tu-hwan is like. It is a senseless act for one who is ignorant of the internal affairs of others country to talk nonsense, dancing to the tune of a traitor.

The question of our country's reunification is too important one for such a man as Mobutu who has his sense benumbed and his eyes blinded by a few dollars thrown by the U.S. master and by Chon Tu-Hwan's hospitality to argue for or against.

The question of our country's reunification is one related to the destiny of our nation to rejoin the territory bisected by the foreign forces and restore the dignity and sovereignty of the nation. It is the desire and aspiration of all our people to reunify the divided country by themselves without outside interference, independently and peacefully on a democratic principle.

The unification proposal of Chon Tu-hwan highly appraised by Mobutu is not for unification but for fixing the division. While crying for unification in words. He is begging for the permanent presence of the U.S. troops standing in the way of the country's reunification, kicking up an anti-communist row to incite North-South confrontation, and stepping up the arms buildup and arms race to create a war atmosphere and aggravate tension. Can it be said that to foster hostility within the nation and agitate for a war is for national concord and unification? Welcoming it is to support the division, not unification and to encourage North-South confrontation, not concord.

Mobutu himself pressed the signal button for the sortie of the air force whipping up a war fever in Suwon. This means that he encourages and chimes in with the war racket and splitting schemes of the Chon Tu-hwan clique, far from desiring the reunification of our country.

The splittist machinations of the Chon Tu-hwan clique are in step with the aggression policy of the U.S. imperialists to keep one territory divided into two for ever and create "two Koreas" to keep hold on one half of the country as their colony and military base.

Mobutu zealously encouraged the splittist schemes of Chon Tu-hwan and gave a shot in his arm. This bespeaks that Mobutu played a puppet, dancing to the tune of a flute blown by the U.S. master. We South Korean people denounce the Seoul tour of Mobutu as a meeting of two dogs.

To begin with, Mr. Mobutu is known as having no political faith, principle and morality worthy of a state leader, a statesman, and stooping to any act despised by people, if it is for the interests of imperialism, his master, and for his power and wealth. Many people in the world regard him as one no less than a political charlatan.

It is widely known a fact that from the time when he seized power, he bartered away the national interests in close relation with an intelligence organ of imperialism, mercilessly suppressed and stamped out the patriotic forces who valiantly fought for the establishment of an independent and sovereign state free from the domination and plunder by foreign forces of aggression and built his political ground. His action invited vehement condemnation and denunciation from the Zairese people as well as the entire African peoples and the peace-loving people of the world. Earlier, he earned the disgust and hatred of the people. Some time ago he announced the resumption of diplomatic relations with the Israeli Zionists. This gave rise to deep regret and astonishment among the African and Arab peoples and the world people.

As the shock force of U.S. imperialism against the peoples in the Middle East and Africa, the Zionists are viciously committing anti-Arab manoeuvres, actively backed and patronized by the United States, and are running wild to realise their expansionist ambition. They are now practically waging a war of aggression attacking Lebanon, with the mobilization of huge armed forces.

Mobutu resumed diplomatic relations with them. This alone is enough to show that he is only playing into the hands of imperialism and betraying the common anti-imperialist cause of the peoples of the Third World and nonaligned countries. It is unconceivable that Mobutu has committed such criminal acts without the instigation of the imperialists.

No one knows for how many dollars he has visited Seoul. But it is undoutedly a very shameful tour. The traitor Chon Tu-hwan with whom Mobutu dovetailed is a dirty executor of the U.S. imperialist's policy of aggression on Korea, truculent murderer, splittist, war-maniac and traitor cursed by the nation. Moreover, as the prime mover of the big financial precedent in the world, he is condemned and rejected by the South Korean people and has become a target of the world people's contempt. Mobutu, who called on this wretch and read a libretto given by the same master, cannot be called but a partner of Chon Tu-hwan. History will detest such dirty action.

PARTY LEADERS DISCUSS UPCOMING 'POLITICAL SUMMIT'

[Text] The ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) held a Central Executive Council meeting yesterday to finalize its preparations for a meeting between President Chon Tu-hwan and leaders of three major political parties.

The date of the "political summitry" has not yet been set, but political observers expect it in the middle of this week.

Spokesman Kim Yong-tae told reporters that council members asked Chairman Yi Chai-hyong to fully reflect at the forthcoming political summitry the DJP package designed to resolve the repercussions of the recent curb loan scandal. The secretaries-general of three major political parties agreed last week to have the upcoming summitry focus on the loan scandal.

Council members called for the formulation of substantial economic measures, now that the nation's economy has faced difficulties, Kim said. They also stressed that the meeting should be steered in a manner that will produce fruitful results, the spokesman said. He said that they further urged the government to come up with an agricultural modernization package. The Council members shared the view that the forthcoming summitry should provide the momentum to resolve the aftermath of the loan scandal, he said.

Secretary-General Kwon Ik-hyon briefed the council on the negotiations launched among the three major political parties to arrange for the Chongwadae meeting. The DJP had held a series of informal meetings to pool wisdom for the upcoming Chongwadae meeting. In the meantime, Yu Chi-song, president of the opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP), said that he hoped the political summitry would provide the means to settle "perturbed popular sentiments" and develop democratic politics.

Yu, who proposed the Chongwadae meeting June 2, said that participants in the meeting should discuss overall issues "in national perspectives." "I hope the meeting will be utilized as an occasion to overcome the present difficulty," he said.

He said he will do his best to reflect the people's opinions at the meeting, while trying to understand the government's problems.

Summit Set 14 June

SK140420 Seoul YONHAP in English 0325 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, June 14 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan and the leaders of Korea's three political parties will discuss state issues at Chongwadae, the presidential mansion, Wednesday, presidential spokesman Hwang Son-pil said Monday.

The three are Yi Chae-hyong, chairman of Chon's ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), President Yu Chi-song of the opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP), and the Korea National Party (KNP) President Kim Chong-chol.

Chon and the politicians are expected to discuss ways of curbing the aftershocks of the recent loan scandal which rocked the financial community here. The conference will also deal with revitalizing the national economy and political issues such as "activation of the National Assembly and the press."

An informed source said measures to stabilize the economy will be disclosed and the "firm resolution" of the chief executive will be revealed during the meeting. The source also hinted at the possibility of a partial Cabinet reshuffle.

Although the ruling DJP is in no mood to deal with political issues such as the revision of any politics-related laws, opposition parties maintain that Chon make an "epoch-making" resolution to remedy the current situation which has been caused by a series of incidents. They demand that laws pertaining to National Assembly, press and elections be amended to stimulate political and journalistic activities.

HERALD Favors Dialogue

[Editorial: "Impetus to Interparty Talks"]

[Text] The agreement reached among the three major political parties to hold an interparty "summit" shortly is an encouraging sign of emerging politics of dialogue in the Fifth Republic. To look back on the lack of communication between parties and politicians that had hamstrung Korea's political scene of the past, it certainly strikes us as a significant development in the right direction.

According to an accord reached by the secretaries-general of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), the opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP) and the second minority Korea National Party (KNP), top leaders of the three parties are expected to meet President Chon Tu-hwan for openminded discussions on the aftermath of the recent curb loan scandal and other major affairs of state.

Attending the Chongwadae (presidential mansion) summit will be DKP President Yu Chi-song, KNP President Kim Chong-chol and DJP Chairman Yi Chae-hyung with the presence of President Chon. It is construed that the president will be there in the capacity of the chief executive rather than as a representative of his party, the DJP.

The top-level political parley was first suggested by the DKP which kept insisting on having its president meet exclusively with President Chon. The major opposition party has done well to open the door for wider participation by fellow political parliamentary parties are naturally and desirably entitled to attend such a gathering.

Since his inauguration in 1980 President Chon has met with the leaders of rival parties on two similar occasions. The upcoming third summit will add to the evolving tradition of dialogue and the quest for a joint approach to the pressing political issues of the day on a suprapartisan basis.

No advance decisions on the subjects to be taken up at the meeting indicate that the conferees may talk on a wide and free range of topics. The majority party, as well as President Chon, appears ready to lend its willing ears to what its counterparts have to say. The latter should also respond in kind.

Sincerity, candor and responsiveness are required to make the political dialogue meaningful and productive. Above all, the participants must be dictated by genuine concern for national interest that goes beyond all sectarian, sectional and partisan interests. The gravity of internal and external challenges the nation faces calls for their suprapartisan cooperation.

Democracy and representative government will not function without effective dialogue, communication and accomodation of differences between the ruling and the ruled, between contending parties and personalities. Liberal and democratic competition and rivalry do not aim at dividing the house or rocking the boat; they seek to forge a harmonious consensus and a viable solution for the common good.

Our triparty talks set a good example of not only a symbolic but also a practical exercise in maturing statesmanship of the Korean political world. On its outcome will depend the future of the process of open and productive dialogue which is barely under way in this country.

Kim and three other students are accused of having instigated a campus demonstration, together with 30 other students, in front of the library after attending a symposium called "What is the Third World?" held in the college library at 1600 on 11 June under the sponsorship of the Liberal Arts College.

HERALD NOTES SPECULATION ON NORTHERN UNREST

[Text] There have been persistent reports that something unusual must be happening in the communist hierarchy of North Korea.

The Tokyo-based TONGIL (unification) ILBO have twice reported speculations on revolts in North Korea. The SOUTH CHINA MORNING POST in Hong Kong has recently reported that strange events are apparently taking place in North Korea. The KYODO news service is the fourth to speculate on revolts taking place in North Korea.

The news reports, based on evaluations by those familiar with the intricacies of the North Korean regime, are believed to be credible. The Hong Kong newspaper obtains information on North Korea from Communist China, one of North Korea's allies.

The Japan news services obtains information on North Korea from Chochongnyon, the association of pro-Pyongyang residents in Japan. Moreover, the KYODO news service reports that the Japanese Government is closely monitoring the unusual series of events in North Korea.

The three news services base part of their suspicions of Pyongyang's refusal to allow Japanese parliamentary groups to visit North Korea. They say the reasons cited by Pyongyang for the refusals are hardly convincing.

Pyongyang watchers assert that revolts against the regime have sprung up along the North Korea border. According to news reports, revolts allegedly have been staged in the northern areas of Hyesan, Chongjin, Nanam and Kyongsong where concentration camps are located. Those areas are said to populated by those Koreans sent to North Korea while living in Japan who are disaffected with the Kim Il-song regime.

ZAIRE'S MOBUTU ARRIVES FOR VISIT IN ROK

[Text] Seoul, June 7 (YONHAP) — Zairian President Mobutu Sese Seko, accompanied by his wife Bobi Ladawa and a 146-member entourage, arrived here Monday morning for a four-day state visit as the guest of President Chon Tu-hwan.

Upon arrival at Seoul's Kimpo International Airport, Mobutu and his party were met by President and Mrs. Chon for a red carpet welcome with a 21-gun salute in the presence of other Korean Government dignitaries and representatives of the diplomatic corps. The Zairian leader was presented with a key to the city by Seoul Mayor Kim Song-pae.

Mobutu is scheduled to confer with Chon at South Korea's presidential mansion, Chongwadae, Monday afternoon on ways to step up Zairian-South Korean cooperation in economic, technical and political fields.

During the Chongwadae talks, Chon is expected to seek Zaire's support for Seoul's position in international forums, including the Baghdad nonaligned summit in Spetember, according to Korean officials.

Africa is an arena of strong diplomatic competition between North and South Korea. Pyongyang has diplomatic relations with 39 African nations, compared with Seoul's 28. Zaire, like many other African states, has diplomatic relations with both North and South Korea.

The two-way trade volume between Zaire and South Korea stood at 2.7 million U.S. dollars last year, according to official Korean statistics, and officials here said bilateral trade was expected to grow in the future because of Zaire's abundant resources, including copper and diamonds for industrial use.

Chon, Mobutu Hold Summit

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan and President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire yesterday held a summit conference at Chongwadae and agreed to promote bilateral political and economic cooperation, particularly in the fields of technology, trade and resources.

Presidents Chon and Mobutu also agreed to promote joint-venture projects in the private sector, including Korea's participation in the development of natural resources in the African country. Hwang Son-pil, the Chongwadae spokesman, said the leaders of the two countries agreed to promote bilateral cooperation aimed at seeking mutural prosperity, such as the extension of Korea's technical assistance and experiences which it gained in the course of executing economic development projects.

During the summit meeting which lasted one hour and 15 minutes beginning at 4:20 P.M., the heads of state of the two countries further agreed to maintain close cooperative relations with the common goals of peace and security, Hwang said.

The Chon-Mobutu conference also dealt with overall world situations, including those surrounding the Korean Peninsula and Africa. President Mobutu expressed his "positive" support for Seoul's peace initiatives on the peninsula while Chon extended his support for Zaire's policy calling for the termination of racial discrimination on the African continent, according to the senior presidential press secretary.

President and Mrs. Mobutu arrived in Seoul earlier in the day for a four-day visit, accompanied by a 146-member official and unofficial entourage, including Foreign Minister Yoka Mangono and Minister of Economic Planning Bokana W'Ondangela.

Upon arrival at Kimpo International Airport, the Zairean leader was greeted by President and Mrs. Chon, and was presented with a key to Seoul by Mayor Kim Song-pae during a welcoming ceremony.

The presidential spokesman quoted Chon as having expressed a hope during the summit that the Korean visit by the African leader, will provide a momentum for further promoting cooperation particularly in the field of trade, economy and culture. Chon said he believes that the two countries will enter into a category of advanced nations at an early date if the two mutually complement in those fields, Hwang said. President Chon expressed a deep gratitude for Zaire's continuing supports for Seoul's position in the world society.

Prior to the meeting, Chon conferred the Grand Order of Mugunghwa, the highest ROK decoration, on the visiting African leader who also gave Chon the "Ordre National du Leopard." They also exchanged gifts. While the summitry was in progress, Mrs. Bobi Ladawa, wife of the Zairean head of state, met with first lady Yi Sun-cha.

Today, President Mobutu will visit the National Cemetery and later will receive a honorary doctor's degree in politics at Seoul National University. He will also visit a military unit and will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be hosted by the heads of four economic organizations at the Hotel Shilla.

In the evening, he will attend a state dinner at Chongwadae in which folk dances and music will be presented.

Chon Seeks 'Complementary' Ties

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan yesterday said complementary relations could be developed in the interests of the Koreans and the Zaire people. He noted that Zaire is rich in natural resources, while Korea has abundant skilled manpower, experience and know-how attained through economic development programs.

In his speech delivered at a dinner he hosted for Zairean President Mobutu Sese Seko at Chongwadae, President Chon said the two countries share the common goals of peace, justice, freedom and prosperity. "However, if we take a look at the international situation, we should realize that there are many obstacles on the road to achieving those goals," the president remarked. Under these circumstances, it is particularly meaningful that "he review with the Zairean leader the international situation in general and exchange of opinions on the ways of realizing the common goals, he said.

"Our two countries share the painful experiences of national independence and territorial integrity maintained at a great sacrifice," Chon said. The president said the two countries face the same tasks of consolidating national security while improving the welfare of the people through economic development.

Meanwhile, President Mobutu said in a speech that the Korean question should be solved through direct dialogue between South and North Korea without outside interference. "In this context," he said, "We pay high tribute to the initiatives offered by H.E. President Chon Tu-hwan for the resumption of dialogue between the two parties and do believe that such a dialogue would help promote regional stability conducive to peaceful reunification."

President Mobutu said he was satisfied to know that cooperation between the two countries has been gradually strengthened in a concrete manner since the establishment of diplomatic relations and that the summit talks he held with President Chon will give new impetus to the cooperative relations between the two countries. He emphasized the need for consolidating ties in the private economic sectors in parallel with the cooperation in political fields.

Earlier in the day, President Mobutu received an honorary doctorate of law from Seoul National University, visited an army airborne unite and attended a luncheon hosted jointly by four major economic organizations.

Today, the Zairean leader is scheduled to tour industrial facilities in Ulsan and Pohang.

Foreign Ministers Hold Talks

[Text] Minister of Foreign Affairs, Yi Pom-sok and his counterpart from Zaire, Yoka Mangono held a separate meeting at the capital building yesterday, following the summit talks of the two countries.

At the meeting which lasted for one hour and 40 minutes, the two foreign ministers discussed the political situation on the Korean Peninsula and agreed to enhance economic cooperation between the two countries, a ministry official said.

Saying that North Korea will have to accept the government's proposal for peaceful unification in view of the economic strength and the population of the South, the official said, Yi expressed his hope Zaire will help Korea achieve its goal of unification sooner.

Foreign Minister Yoka said his country, having realized political stability under President Mobutu's leadership, will support the Korean Government's position on unification as before, he said.

ROK Assistance

[Text] President of the Zaire, Mobutu Sese Seko yesterday said Korea and his country will discuss ways to promote economic cooperation between the two countries when the heads of Korea's four leading economic organizations visit the African country.

In a farewell news conference at Hotel Shilla, he said he has invited them to discuss Korea's participation in his economic development plan, especially in agricultural, mining and infrastructural fields. At his request, he said, President Chon Tu-hwan promised to send the heads of the Korean Traders Association, the Korea Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the Federation of Korean Industry and the Korean Federation of Small Business to his country.

He said Zaire has supported Korea's position on unification at international conferences. Zaire's future backing for the proposal for peaceful unification was reiterated in his dinner speech made at Chongwadae, he said.

Though it is difficult to make a comparison between the Republic of Korea and North Korea, he said, it is apparent that the South maintains a free, open society while the North is ruled by Marxist communists. President Mobutu visited Pyongyang in 1974.

He said he was very impressed by hard-working Koreans during his observation tour of industrial complexes. President Mubutu paid a farewell call on President Chon before embarking on his return trip via mainland China.

HERALD Comment

[Editorial: "Zairean Leader Welcomed"]

[Text] The visit here of President Mobutu Seko of Zaire this week marks another milestone in our continuing search for broader and beneficial ties of friendship and cooperation with emerging African nations. Seoul's strengthened relationship with Kinshasha, which plays a leading role in the community of African states, is certain to provide a major boost to that end.

The chief executive of the Republic of Zaire arrived here yesterday for a four-day visit, accompanied by his wife, Foreign Minister Yoka Mangono and Special Counselor Seti Yale. It is very significant that we welcome into our midst President Mobutu, the second African leader to be our guest this year. Last month Liberian Head of State, Samuel Doe visited Korea.

Matters of mutual concern, including international political developments in and around the Korean Peninsula and expanded bilateral economic cooperation between our two countries were discussed at a summit with President Chon Tu-hwan. That summit only heralds the beginning of a lasting and active Korean-Zairean contact and exchange in the years ahead.

Since the successful military revolution in 1965 and subsequent organization of Mouvement Populaire de la Revolution (MPR) in 1967, President Mobutu took dynamic initiatives in forging a stable and integrated republic out of ethnically heterogeneous and dissension-ridden former Belgian Congo. The independent republic then changed its name to Zaire committed to its unique national doctrine of "authenticity."

Under the constant leadership of President Mobutu, Zaire is fast becoming a strong and modern nation. The 25 million people of Zaire are assuming an increasingly greater role in the regional affairs of Africa. Furthermore, it has become a force to be reckoned with as a member of the Third World and the Nonaligned Movement of the world today.

In spite of its apparent "equidistant" foreign relations vis-a-vis East and West, Kinshasha's realistic and moderate stance veered toward the West. In the same vein, Zaire, while having simultaneous diplomatic intercourse with both Seoul and Pyongyang, has in recent years came out in support of Seoul's policies for detente and dialogue with Pyongyang and peaceful unification of Korea in various international forums including the United Nations.

The rich natural resources of Zaire presents bright prospects for mutually profitable economic cooperation with the Republic of Korea which may offer manpower and skill for effective development of the former's untapped resources. Joint commercial and industrial ventures have much room for reciprocal complementation.

The high-level meeting of the leaders of our two governments brought our growing bonds a step forward, narrowing the distance between Northeast Asia and Central Africa. Better understanding and greater cooperation to follow President Mobutu's visit will have to be sustained and promoted in the cause of our common goals of peace and prosperity.

'REACTIONARY' KHMER GENEVA MEETING CRITICIZED

[Station commentary: "A Move Toward Another Failure"]

[Text] At present, as in the past, in a dark design to fool world opinion in order to interfere in Kampuchean internal affairs and seek by all perfidious means to undermine the gains of the Kampuchean revolution, the Beijing expansionists in collusion with U.S. imperialists and the ASEAN countries, in particular Thailand and Singapore, have made frantic efforts to force the three traitorous reactionary Khmer groups of Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk and Son Sann to get together once again in order to achieve their oft-aborted alliance.

This time, the three puppet factions have been directed by their masters to hold a secret meeting in Geneva in the near future in order to achieve this goal, to be used as a propaganda platform at the 1982 UN General Assembly against the Kampuchean revolution. Like other progressive and peace and justice-loving peoplles all over the world, the Kampuchean people are no strangers to this sort of comedy performed on many occasions by the three puppet gangs at the instigation of their masters.

The previous farces of these reactionaries in Bangkok, Phatthaya and Beijing met with successive and serious failures contrary to the dark wishes of their masters. The fundamental differences between the three traitorous, reactionary Khmer groups, in particular the greedy ambitions of Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk and Son Sann, who are afraid of losing their respective leading roles, will not allow them to form a coalition. As for their masters, they also have a serious conflict of interest. This is why the maneuvers, on which they have spent a lot of effort in order to rally the three puppets together, have always been in a quandary. In the face of these repeated failures and under the instigation of the Beijing expansionists in collusion with U.S. imperialists and the ASEAN countries, in particular Thailand and Singapore, the three traitorous Khmer puppet groups have been forced to move their stage and will give a secret performance of the same old farce in Geneva in the near future.

According to Western sources, the three traitorous Khmer groups have made concerted efforts to carry out their masters' perfidious schemes. Prince Sihanouk, power-crazed and pining for the throne, thanked traitor Khieu Samphan for agreeing to meet in Geneva.

As for traitor Son Sann, he has agreed to accept the four conditions of the Democratic Kampuchean regime. These are traitorous activities of the three reactionary Khmer groups in addition to their past numerous antinational and antipopular activities against the Kampuchean revolution which enjoys political, economic and social stability at present. Each of them claims to be the great patriot; but, as ever, they have connived with those whose hands are stained with the blood of 3 million Kampuchea people, that is the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and the Beijing expansionists in collusion with U.S. imperialists and a number of other international reactionaries who have all caused havoc and massacre for the Kampuchean people.

No one is at all surprised that the traitorous activities of the three reactionary Khmer groups of Khier Samphan, Sihanouk and Son Sann, who are going to meet in Geneva, have in fact been stage-managed by their masters, that is the Beijing expansionists in collusion with U.S. imperialists and their ASEAN lackeys. The masters have earnestly tried to apply a new coat of cosmetics to these traitorous groups and ordered them to smile at one another and agree to form the so-called coalition government to be used as a propaganda gimmick in the UN arena to preserve the so-called Democratic Kampuchea seat.

Truth, however, will remain truth. The Beijing expansionists, U.S. imperialists and the ASEAN countries, in particular Thailand and Singapore, cannot hide the sun with their hands. The stench of the Democratic Kampuchea regime has spread all over the world because it applied Maoist doctrines causing 3 million innocent Kampucheans to perish within merely a little more than 3 years. These dirty maneuvers, aimed at getting the three reactionary Khmer groups to form the so-called coalition government to be used as a pretext to preserve the Democratic Kampuchea seat at the United Nations, in fact constitute an overt attempt to return this genocidal regime to Kampuchea and enable to to massacre the Kampuchea people for the second time. This is another gross and naked act of interference in Kampuchea's internal affairs.

This failure-bound formula, used previously by the Beijing expansionists, U.S. imperialists and their lackeys and other international reactionaries in the the 1981 UN General Assembly, is now being tried again in 1982 prior to the opening of the UN General Assembly. The efforts to muster the three traitorous Khmer groups to meet in Geneva this time, as in the past, is not unlike trying to keep live crabs in a flat basket: failure is around the corner.

Wisely and firmly guided by the KPRP and fortified by precious national and international proletarian solidarity, in particular the solidarity with Vietnam, Laos, the USSR and other fraternal socialist countries, the Kampuchean people will trample under foot all the perfidious maneuvers of the Beijing expansionists in collusion with U.S. imperialists and their ASEAN lackeys as well as other international reactionaries who attempt to interfere in Kampuchea's internal affairs and destroy the Kampuchean revolution. All reactionary are bound to fail in the end! The Kampuchean people will certainly achieve new revolutionary gains in their national defense and reconstruction efforts thus greatly contributing to safeguarding peace and security in Southeast Asia and the world.

KHIEU SAMPHAN'S LETTER TO SOLIDARITY CONFERENCE

BK120740 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchean 2330 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] The European Conference of Soldidarity with Kampuchea -- a nation which is struggling against Vietnamese aggression -- was convened on 5 June 1982 at Luxemburg Palace in Paris. The conference was organized by the Kampuchean solidarity movement in France and the International Secretariat for Solidarity with Kampuchea in Stockholme, Sweden after the 1979 Stockhom conference and the 1981 Tokyo conference.

There were 100 participants attending this conference including personalities and representatives of organizations which support the Kampuchean people's struggle from Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, France, Finland, Great Britain, Italy, Norway, Portugal, Holland, West Germany and Sweden. Many representatives of friendly embassies in Paris, Lao and Vietnamese patriotic organizations and many of our compatriots living in Europe also attended this conference for solidarity with Kampuchea.

On that occasion, Khieu Samphan, chairman of the state Presidium and prime minister of Democratic Kampuchea, sent a letter wishing this conference success. Following are highlights of this letter:

In the name of the Kampuchean people, the Democratic Kampuchean Government and the patriotic and Democratic Front of the Great National Union of Kampuchea [PDFGNUK], I would like to express my warmest greetings and sincerely and wholeheartedly wish for the success to the European Conference for Solidarity with Kampuchea which will be held in Paris on 5 June 1982.

The fact that this conference is being convened in the famous city of Paris clearly shows the importance peace and justice-loving peoples and personalities in France and other European countries attach to their assistance and support to the just struggle of the Kampuchean people against the aggression of the Hanoi administration in order to defend and safeguard the Kampuchean nation and race. The presence of many noble personalities in this conference indicates more clearly the distinguished assistance and support which strongly encourage the Kampuchean people who are struggling through a dark period of their history.

As the conference is well aware, the war of aggression waged by the Hanoi administration over the Kampuchean nation and people at present is not a normal aggressive war or a colonialist war but it is a genocidal war aimed at exterminating the Kampuchean race forever. This war has killed many Kampucheans, separated many families and inflicted unprecedentedly great suffering on them. It also has greatly threatened the future destiny of the whole Kampuchean people and their civilization. Under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government and the PDFGNUK, however, the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas have waged a firm struggle against the Hanoi administration's genocidal war.

The Vietnamese aggressors have used all types of weapons -- including famine and toxic chemical weapons -- in their attempt to break the will of struggle of the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas, but they have failed. During the past more than 3 years, although the Soviet international expansionists provide them with many weapons, the more than 300,000 Vietnamese aggressive troops -- their army and their civilian agents -- are bogged down and have been caught in a complete impasse on the Kampuchean battlefield by the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas. Their defeat during the 1981-82 dry season operations -- which they considered as their final offensive -- clearly shows that they bogged down completely and at a complete impasse and they will definitely be defeated in the end.

Since the Hanoi Vietnamese clique has not been able to achieve its goal with military means, it has resorted to diplomatic maneuvers -- in particular its trick just to bury the Kampuchean problem -- in an attempt to achieve it. The Vietnamese have exerted every effort to raise the issue of peace and stability between the ASEAN countries and what they call the Indochinese countries. But in reality it is the Vietnamese themselves who are destroying peace and stability in Southeast Asia through their war of aggression in Kampuchea. All peace and justice-loving peoples and personalities in the world are well aware of this tricky maneuver by the Hanoi Vietnamese administration. Along with these maneuvers, the Hanoi Vietnamese have used propaganda to dupe the world into believing that Vietnam could possibly split away from the Soviet international expansionists. Successive facts show clearly, however, that the Vietnamese and the Soviets are united with each other and are pursuing hand-in-hand the same expansionist strategy.

Concerning the effort made by the Democratic Kampuchean Government to unify national forces to increase the struggle to fight against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors on the military battlefield and in other fields, Chairman Khieu Samphan said: In order to increase the forces of struggle against the aggressive troops of the Hanoi Vietnamese administration, the Democratic Kampuchean Government has exerted every effort since 1979 to achieve the union of all national forces who oppose the Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea. The Democratic Kampuchean Government has earnestly sought to achieve this coalition as wished by the peoples and personalities who have assisted and supported the Kampuchean people's struggle. The aim of the Democratic Kampuchean Government with respect to this coalition is to increase the forces struggling against the Vietnamese aggressors on the battlefield as in other fields to safeguard the Kampuchean nation and race.

Chairman Khieu Samphan continued: The Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government want this most barbarous war of aggression waged by the Hanoi Vietnamese administration to end very soon. They want Kampuchea to be an independent, sovereign, unified, neutral and nonaligned country. They also want peace restored in Kampuchea as well as in all of Southeast Asia.

The Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government are confident that the European conference for solidarity with Kampuchea will achieve concrete results, which will serve as further encouragement to the Kampuchean people who are waging the struggle and contribute to a just solution of the Kampuchean problem. It will also serve as support for the national identity and culture of the Kampuchean people who want to live peacefully in their country with independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. They also want to live peacefully with all neighboring countries.

In conclusion, Chairman Khieu Samphan profoundly thanked the conference and all personalities attending this meeting who have expressed their sympathy, assistance and support to the just struggle of the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors for the safeguarding of the Kampuchean nation and race.

VODK HAILS ASEAN SUPPORT FOR DEMOCRATIC KAMPUCHEA

[Station commentary: "We Wish the 15th ASEAN Foreign Ministers Meeting Success"]

[Summary] "The ASEAN countries -- Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines -- will convene the 14th meeting of their foreign ministers in the near future.

"It is reported that this meeting will continue to pay attention to the Kampuchean issue. It will discuss the procedures and activities to be taken in order to advance a solution to the Kampuchean problem in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assembly, which asked the Vietnamese to withdraw all of their aggressor troops from Kampuchea and respect the Kampuchean people's right to determine their destiny by themselves with no external interference.

"The ASEAN countries have adopted a firm political stand that is strongly opposed to the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy's aggression against Kampuchea. They have played an active role on the international scene, working with all peace and justice-loving countries in the world to demand that the Vietnamese unconditionally withdraw all of their troops from Kampuchea. They firmly support the just struggle of the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea on all international platforms. In particular, they support the Democratic Kampuchean seat at the United Nations as the sole legitimate and legal representative of Kampuchea."

During the past few years, the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy aggressors have launched many diplomatic and political maneuvers in an attempt to divide the ASEAN countries and the other peace and justice-loving countries who oppose their aggression in Kampuchea. But they have repeatedly failed in these attempts.

The Kampuchean people's struggle under the leadership of Democratic Kampuchea is a just struggle. It has helped to check Vietnamese and Soviet expansionism in Southeast Asia and served to maintain world peace.

Various ASEAN governments have frequently reiterated their stand on the Kampuchean issue. Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila, Singapore Foreign Minister Dhanabalan and Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar have stated ASEAN's determination to continue to support the Democratic Kampuchean seat at the United Nations and have firmly asked for the complete withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea as stipulated in the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the international conference on Kampuchea.

"On this occasion, the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government sincerely and wholeheartedly wish the ASEAN foreign ministers full success in their efforts to promote their economic development and defend peace, stability and security in Southeast Asia and throughout the world."

The Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government hope that the ASEAN countries will unite with all peace and justice-loving countries in the world to continue to assist and support their just struggle against the Hanoi Vietnamese enemy aggressors and support the Democratic Kampuchean seat at the United Nations. Pressure has to be brought to bear on the Vietnamese aggressors until they implement the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the international conference on Kampuchea.

ASEAN FOREIGN MINISTERS CONDEMN ISRAELI INVASION

BK111116 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] The foreign ministers of the ASEAN countries strongly condemn the latest military aggression by Israel in invading Lebanon, thereby violating the territorial integrity and sovereignty of Lebanon and causing great loss of lives and destruction of property.

By its acts Israel has contravened the principles enshrined in the UN Charter and disregarded the decisions of the UN Security Council. Israel's aggression against Lebanon has resulted in greater instability and turmoil in the Middle East and poses the danger of a wider conflagration. It has also undermined efforts on the part of the international community to find a peaceful settlement of the conflict in the Middle East.

The ministers fully support the UN Security Council resolution calling for a cease-fire and the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon.

POST REPORTS ASEAN UPSET BY EEC 'SNUB'

[Text] ASEAN is expressing "great disappointment" over the downgrading by European Economic Community of its representation for the forth annual dialogue with ASEAN. Belgium Foreign Minister Leo Tindermanns, president of the EEC, has informed ASEAN that he is not coming himself and that a lower-level delegation will be sent instead for the dialogue which will take place after the ASEAN foreign minister's fifteenth annual conference from today to Wednesday.

ASEAN officials have told the EEC that if he refuses to come himself, the lower-level delegation will be rejected and the dialogue with the EEC for this year regretfully canceled. ASEAN sources explained that the cancellation by United States Secretary of State Alexander Haig of his visit here for the yearly ASEAN-U.S. dialogue was a different matter.

Haig has a tight schedule involving the UN disarmament conference, the arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union, the Falklands war, the explosive Middle East situation and unresolved problems with China. He had also just accompanied President Reagan to European summit meetings. However, some ASEAN officials are disappointed over Haig's failure to attend. They believe that the Soviets and the Vietnamese could misunderstand West European and American intentions in this strategic part of the world.

Deputy Undersecretary of State Walter Stoessel, who will take Haig's place, will bring Asian experts in his delegation. It is possible that the delegation may include former Ambassador to Singapore, John Holdridge who is in charge of East Asian and Pacific Affairs at the State Department.

Economic affairs are expected to dominate the ASEAN dialogues with friendly countries including Australia, Canada, Japan, New Zealand and the United States.

If the president of the EEC Council of Ministers attends, or if his representative is acceptable to ASEAN, Thailand's Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila will preside at the dialogue. Each of the ASEAN foreign ministers will preside at each of the dialogues.

ASIAN LAWYERS FIND EVIDENCE OF CHEMICAL WARFARE

BK111221 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] While visiting refugee camps along the Thai border the Asian Lawyers Legal Inquiry Committee has concluded that there had been widespread but selective use of chemical weapons in Laos and Kampuchea. The committee, consisting of jurists from India, Bangladesh, Indonesia, Singapore and Thailand, conducted an on-sight investigation into the alleged violations of human rights in Laos and Kampuchea during 4-10 June at three refugee camps -- Khao I-Dang in Prachin Buri, Phanat Nikhom in Chon Buri and Ban Winai in Loei.

Concerning the alleged use of chemical weapons the committee has said that its scope of investigation was different from that of the medical inquiry since it did not purport to identify the weapons concerned but to find out if there was any proof that chemical weapons had been used in the two Indochinese countries.

According to the senior advocate of the Supreme Court of India, the committee members had talks with three Mong children in Ban Winai camp and Kampuchean refugees in Khao I-Dang, who claimed they had suffered chemical attacks. The committee has also believed there is sufficient evidence to say that there had been widespread but selective use of some forms of chemical weapons in Laos and Kampuchea.

The committee has also found that there were human rights violations in the two countries which resulted in the exodus of their people from their homeland. It has also been revealed that a report on this matter will be published soon.

VIETNAM MOVES MORE TROOPS TO BORDER AREA

[Text] About 3,000 fresh northern Vietnamese troops were recently despatched to a border area opposite the Thai Province of Prachinburi to replace fatigued Vietnamese-trained Khmer and southern Vietnamese soldiers, a military spokesman said yesterday.

Spokesman of the Supreme Commander Lt Gen Som Khattaphan told the NATION that the rotation resulted from the high rate of defection among the Heng Samrin regime and southern Vietnamese troops on the border areas. The replacement started about 1 week ago at Phnum Mak Hoeun Mountain range opposite of the Thai border town of Aranyaprathet, he said.

He quoted intelligence reports as showing that the fresh troops had been transported to the new post from Battambang. "The Vietnamese-trained Khmer soldiers and the troops conscripted from southern Vietnam are now in low spirits due to the unfavorable rainy season weather and the incessant attacks mounted by Khmer Rouge guerrillas, " he said. He said that the Khemr Rouge have frequently assaulted the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin forces along the logistic supply routed on Highway NO. 5 and at Ban Kop near Phnum Mak Houen which is a major stronghold of the Khmer resistance forces.

Lt Gen Som also quashed speculation that the deployment of the Vietnamese troops on the border areas was designed to retaliate the joint Thai-U.S. military exercise, codenamed Cobra Gold. "Anyway, we are closely monitoring the situation on the other side of the border. We are always on alert," he added.

OFFICIAL DETAILS INDOCHINESE REPATRIATION PLAN

[Text] About 112,000 Khmer and Lao refugees have been repatriated to their native countries since the refugee influx started in 1973, but about 150,000 others are still housed in holding centres in Thailand, a senior official has said.

In an exclusive interview to the NATION, Interior Department undersecretary of state for security affairs, Loet Hongphakdi, said about 100,000 of the returnees are Khmer people. About 50,000 other Khmer refugees have also been resettled in third countries, he added.

The repatriation and resettlement of the Khmer people have brought down the initial number of Khmer refugees totalling about 200,000 to about 80,000 now, he said. Loet said about 20,000 other Khmer refugees would also been soon admitted to third countries for resettlement. However, he said that the ongoing fighting in Kampuchea could prompt more Khmer people to seek refuge in Thailand.

About 200,000-280,000 Khmer civilians are now flocking the Thai-Kampuchean border opposite Prachinburi Province to receive humanitarian aid from international relief agencies, according to the deputy undersecretary of state.

Touching on Lao refugees, Loet said about 10,000 Lao refugees have volunteered to return to their homeland on their own while about 2,000 others were sent back under a joint repatriation programme organized by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), Thailand and Laos. "The efforts to repatriate the Lao refugees are more problematic than in the case of the Khmer as we have to negotiate with the Lao Government over the issue with UNHCR serving as the coordinator," Loet said. He added Thailand fears that the Lao refugees who returned to their homeland on their own could be harmed as the repatriation of these Lao was unilateral.

Lao refugees have been sent back via the border passes at Tha Sadet pier and a ferry pier in Nongkhai. The Thai Government also recently reopened the Chong Mek borderpass in Ubon Ratchathani on a temporary basis to facilitate the repatriation, Loet said. He said officials are stepping up their campaigns at holding centres for Lao refugees to lobby for their consensus to return home. "What we are doing now is to put pressure on them. They have been told to either return home or leave for third countries for resettlement," he said.

Loet said that the efforts to repatriate Vietnamese refugees are now in a stalemate as the Vietnamese Government has refused to negotiate their return since it admitted about 45,000 Vietnamese refugees who fled here during the French Indochina war. "Hanoi is committed to admit about 40,000 refugees and their descendants into Vietnam by the Rangoon agreement," the deputy undersecretary of state said.

The Thai Government and the Vietnamese Red Cross reached the Rangoon agreement in 1960. Under the agreement about 70,000 Vietnamese refugees would be repatriated. But Hanoi asked Thailand to freeze the repatriation process in 1964 after accepting about 40,000 of them, citing the U.S. bombardment of North Vietnam as the reason.

Loet said that Hanoi also refused to negotiate the repatriation of Vietnamese refugees who fled here after the United States was defeated in the Vietnam war. The new generations of Vietnamese refugees are now housed in the Si Khiu holding centre in Nakhon Ratchasima.

The senior official said that some Vietnamese refugees have made use of loopholes in the Thai laws to get Thai citizenship through their marriage with Thai nationals. The Interior Ministry and the National Security Council are jointly drafting a bill to plug the loopholes in their efforts to bar Vietnamese refugees from Thai citizenship, Loet said. He said that if and when the bill is promulgated, Vietnamese women who get married to Thai nationals would be granted Thai citizenship. "Their children will also have no right to be granted Thai citizenship either," he added. [paragraph as published]

Our policy is to repatriate and resettle all illegal immigrants in the final stage and they are now allowed to stay here on a temporary basis only, he said.

PREM REPORTED TO CONTEMPLATE ELECTORAL RACE

WA140925 Bangkok MATICHON in Thai 28 May 82 pp 1,12

[Text] Prem admits he is thinking about running for election in 1983. A Democratic Party MP is concerned about money going to buy votes and advises Prem to appoint a minister attached to the Prime Minister's Office for political development.

Police Lt Chaowarin Latasaksiri, a Democratic Party MP from Saraburi revealed that, at 1115 on 27 May at the National Assembly, he had met with Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon at the National Assembly second-floor lounge for a private meeting. In the conversation Gen Prem voiced interest in political matters concerning the 1983 election. He stated that at this time the biggest problem that must be solved is the failure of the recent elections. It appears that quite a few candidates used money in their campaigns. This situation is a treat to national security.

The Saraburi MP stated, "In 1983 there will be a total of 326 MPs. If a political party spends 3,260 billion baht in order to give each candidate 10 million baht in order to pay 200 baht per vote so as to get 50,000 votes, that party will get a majority in the National Assembly and will be able to form a government. I suggested to General Prem that he appoint a minister attached to the Prime Ministers' Office for the development of a democratic political system. This is possible because the Constitution specifies that there be no more than 44 people in the Cabinet. At this time there are only 41." Police Lt Chaowarin further stated that the newly appointed minister would be charged with a campaign to inform the people of the duties and responsibilities of an MP.

Aside from this, he also invited General Prem to stand for election and the prime minister expressed interest. In their conversation about this, Gen Prem stated that "I am thinking about this," but as to what political party or from what province he would stand from, the general did not say. However, the MP invited Prem to run as a Democrat. "Suppose General Prem ran as a Democrat and won, the party membership might propose that there be a new election for the party board of directors, making Gen Prem the party chief. Even if he didn't become party chief, that would not be an obstacle to his holding the premiership. In the course of a 30-minute conversation, General Prem expressed his serious concern about the democratic process and for that reason he is interested in standing for election," said Police Lt Chaowarin.

On the morning of the same day, General Prem responded to questions at the National Assembly before officiating at a ceremony awarding Freedom Medals to 293 MPs and 6 other MP family members, saying that he would respond on another occasion to the question of whether or not he would stand for election.

Newsmen asked him if it were true that an MP had asked him to join a political party. General Prem responded that he has never contemplated joining a political party and it is necessary to understand that no one has been in contact with him.

A newsman asked him if he would form his own political party and General Prem turned to him and smiled, laughed a bit and refused to answer the question.

Phichai Rattakun, Democratic Party chief gave MATICHON his views concerning this matter. He said that if General Prem runs for election as a Democrat he personally would be as pleased and honored as he would be if others ran under the Democrat banner.

Asked if General Prem were to be elected to parliament and nominated for the party chief's position but not elected to that post, would that be an obstacle to his holding the premiership, Phichai stated that, inaccordance with Party regulations, there must be a 4-year wait between elections for party chief.

"Therefore, there will be a new election only if I die. As to the issue of not being elected party chief, but holding the premiership in accordance with democratic principles, if a party gets a majority and forms the government, the party chief must be the prime minister," said Phichai.

POST REPORTS ON THAILAND'S MUSLIM REVIVAL

[By Tony Davis]

[Text] Across Thailand's volatile southern border provinces fundamentalist Islam is on the move. And if indications to date are anything to go by, the faithful are heeding the call.

The recent upsurge of religious activity has aroused apprehension in government circles concerned about its security implications. But, ironically, it also appears to be worrying radical Muslim separatists committed to the goal of carving out an Islamic republic in the border provinces.

Vehicle for the striking and relatively sudden growth in Islamic consciousness in the majority Muslim Provinces of Yala, Pattani and Narathiwat is the 'dakwah' movement. Meaning simply 'to call' in Arabic, 'dakwah' (also spelt 'da' 'wah') is generally translated as 'missionary'. The revivalist movement that urges a return to the true teachings of God as passed down by the Prophet Muhammad has gained ground rapidly in recent years across the Islamic world in tandem with the political reassertion of fundamentalist Islam. Internationally, the 'dakwah' thrust has divided into a number of different organisations and sects stressing various aspects of bed-rock Islam.

But in Thailand, missionary activity has largely been undertaken by the Jamaat-I-Tabligh, a purist sect founded in northern India in the pre-World War 2 years. Since then it has expanded, gaining a solid following in today's Pakistan and Bangladesh. Some of its adherents in this country wear Bengali-style clothing.

Jamaat-I-Tabligh reached Thailand around two years ago having spread north from Malaysia. Across the border it ranks as one of several independent and government-patronized 'dakwah' organizations engaged in missionary, welfare and educational work in the Muslim community. But in this country Tabligh has grown dramtically to the virtual exclusion of other movements.

Official reaction to the rapid emergence of the fundamentalist preaching in the villages of the south has been mixed. Concern has centred largely on the implications of radical Islam for the low-key insurgency waged by several small separatist factions seeking -- with a conspicuous lack a success -- to establish an independent Islamic state in the south. They have been assisted financially and with weapons and explosives training by Libya and Syria.

One recent intelligence report cited in the English language press pointed to 'dakwah' as a Muslim fundamentalist "group" which posed a "greater threat to national security than the two secessionist bandit gangs" -- the Barison Revolusi Nasional (National Revolutionary Front, BRN) and the Pattani United liberation Organization (PULO).

The press report went on to quote one "high-ranking intelligence officer" who estimated the "group", which was using religion as a front, had recruited some 20,000 "front members" and is "suspected to be clandestinely directing the activities of the PULO and the BRN." Its potential as it prepared to embark on a campaign of armed struggle was, concluded the report, "frightening."

Informed Muslim sources in the south find the depth of misunderstanding and alarm over 'dakwah' a good deal more frightening, however. They point out that 'dakwah' has a following in the southern Muslim belt far in excess of 20,000 and that open missionary activity is to be found in most villages. They add that Jamaat-I-Tabligh is widely noted in Muslim circles for its apolitical, passive approach. "The movement was influenced by Gandhian principles," said one source. "The stress is on 'ahimsa', non-violence, non-confontation, non-politics, its just calling on people to be good Muslims."

Jamaat-I-Tabligh, essentially a mass movement, contrasts notably with some other 'dakwah' groups advocating exclusivity, secrecy and occasionally justifying violence against "infidels." The Malaysian Government, which now maintains a close watch on Islamic "deviationist" tendencies and maverick "dakwah' groups, cracked down sharply on one Kedah-based organization called "sabilillah" (the way of God) in 1976. More recently, in late 1980, it moved against Muslim fundamentalists advocating the destruction of 'idols' which resulted in attacks on Hindu temples.

While conceding the possibility of infiltration of the broad 'dakwah' movement in Thailand by individual separatists, well-placed Muslim sources in the south attributed fears in intelligence circles to general lack of understanding of Islam on the part of some Thai Buddhist officials. They pointed out that officials posted to the Muslim provinces from other regions received an orientation course in Yala of only one week before tackling jobs in a region of sharply differing culture, language and religion.

According to one official source, who requested he remain anonymous, the administrative centre for the southern border provinces which conducts the courses devotes only six hours of the five-day briefing to local customs, and religion. The stress is predominantly on military security -- activities of the separatist movements (estimated officially to number not more than 600 men all told) and the factionalized Communist Party of Malaya (CPM), he said.

But the source added that there was a general recognition that neither the course as a whole nor the period set for broad cultural and religious issues was sufficient. Plans are currently being considered to increase the six hours to between nine and 12 -- which is better than nothing," he said.

Over recent months, however, southern officialdom has been coming to terms with 'dakwah' as a religious rather than potentially para-military phenomenon. In late April a massive 'dakwah' meeting was held in Yala with official sanction and assistance.

Following negotiations over the gathering, the meet was eventually held in a Royal Thai Army camp under the watchful eye of the joint civilian-police-military (Por-tor-Thor) Task Force 43. Security was tight with organizers concerned over possible bombings, but no untoward incidents occurred.

An official count indicated the meeting was attended by over 82,000 devotees, the vast majority from Yala, Pattani and Narathiwat but with some Muslims from other parts of the country as well as Malaysia, Singapore, Bangladesh, Pakistan, India and the Gulf region.

The three-day affair was the first and biggest congregation of its kind in Thailand.

The impression made in official circles was evidently good. Following the meeting, one report being circulated among officials noted that 'dakwah' plays "an important part in promoting understanding and unity among Thais of all religions" and encouraged the people in the border provinces to have "a love for and responsibility towards Thai soil as well as the institutions of the nation, religion and the monarchy."

It also pointedly noted that there was "no discussion of politics" at the gathering.

But while 'dakwah' has clearly come of age in the south, apprehensions over security remain. Proposals have been put forward aimed at forming an officially recognized and accountable leadership for the amorphous missionary movement. A committee to consider the question should comprise Islam's official head in Thailand, the Chula Ratchamonti Prasoet Muhammad, provincial Islamic Council representatives, 'dakwah' representatives, as well as Pho-To-THo 43 and provincial Internal Security Operations Command (ISOC) officials, it was proposed.

Ironically though, separatist organizations also regard the fundamentalist revival with misgivings in view of its avowedly apolitical creed and the key issue of its control and direction. One source close to the leadership of the out-lawed BRN commented: "This movement is about getting people back to the mosque for prayers. This is all very well, but we are worried the movement will be used by the (government) authorities as part of their 'apparatus'."

He went on: "We are fighting for political principles but there are people in the 'dakwah' movement who say 'let us pray, let us remember God, don't bother about politics.' This is what we're worried about. What we want is a 'dakwah' movement that will bring people to fight, to continue the struggle."

Given widespread popular suspicion and apathy towards the separatist call for armed struggle, political observers in the south see little chance of a militant 'dakwah,' emerging. The trend appears in fact to be in the opposite direction.

Observers, both Muslim and Buddhist, concur that support for the splintered separatist movement is not growing at present, and that even among the radically disaffected, disillusion with the failure of armed struggle is deep. This has benefitted the 'dakwah' movement correspondingly.

"Some of the 'alims' (religious teachers) might have supported militant 'jihad' (holy war) in the past," said one foreign Muslim scholar, a frequent visitor to the south. "But now people are tending to support a quiet spiritual revolution that does not affect the non-Muslim population. That way, no one gets hurt."

NHAN DAN CRITICIZES NATO SUMMIT IN BONN

OW130757 Hanoi VNA in English 0711 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 13 -- The Bonn summit conference of N.A.T.O. once again proves that this military bloc is an instrument for war provocations and expansion of the U.S.-led imperialist forces, says NHAN DAN in a commentary today.

The paper remarks that this meeting took place at a moment when the Soviet Union's new peace initiatives are exerting a powerful impact on world public opinion, when the peace movement is vigorously developing in Western Europe, Japan and right in the United States, and when N.A.T.O. is revealing its serious splits.

The paper especially condemns President Reagan's deceitful statements and proposals on disarmement, and continues: "Reagan's 'counter proposals' are in a fact a passive but cunning move to cope with the Soviet Union's successive important peace initiatives.

NHAN DAN Continues: "The United States' stand on this question has been and still is to avoid the limitation of strategic weapons, to maintain and increase its military bases surrounding the Soviet Union and the socialist community, step up the arms race, not only on the ground and the sea but also in the outer space, continue to deploy its counter-revolutionary global strategy... The warlike and expansionist policy which the United States has been carrying out with N.A.T.O. as a tool completely varies with the aspiration of progressive mankind. A new and broad movement for peace has taken shape and is developing from Western Europe to Japan and right in the United States. The growth of this movement has eloquently demonstrated that the imperialist forces cannot easily deceive public opinion."

"Nonetheless, the Reagan administration and N.A.T.O. still fail to perceive the importance and profound significance of this reality," the paper remarks in conclusion.

HANOI ASSAILS PRC'S HOSTILITY TOWARD INDOCHINA

[Text] The situation along the Sino-Vietnamese border remains tense with the frequent Chinese armed provocations.

Since early this year, Chinese troops have many times crossed the border to lay ambushes inside Vietnam. One serious incident is the destruction of Thong Kham Dam in Ngoc Khe village, Trung Khanh district, Cao Bang Province, about 200 meters behind the border. Chinese intruders often fire at collective farmers working in the fields.

Until now, China has still occupied (?30) places in Lang Son, Cao Bang, Ha Tuyen and Hoang Lien Son Provinces. Besides these land incursions China has sent many warships into Vietnamese territorial waters off Binh Tri Thien Province in Central Vietnam to carry out reconnaissance activities and provocations. In a recent incident, Chinese intruders destroyed a Vietnamese fishing boat.

China has also stepped up psychological activities against Vietnam. To make black white, it has accused Vietnam of carrying out armed provocations and incursions into Chinese territory. If this is also true, why did China reject Vietnam's proposal for an end to all armed hostile activities along the border between the two countries? Why did China reject Vietnam's call for early resumption of the second round of Vietnam-China talks in the first 6 months of this year.

There is no doubt about China's plot to maintain a state of tension along the common border so as to hinder Vietnam's national reconstruction efforts.

China's armed activities against Vietnam go alongside with other provocations against Laos and Kampuchea conducted by the Thai authorities. They also go alongside with the military exercises conducted by the United States and other countries in the Eastern Sea and the Gulf of Thailand, close to the Indochinese countries.

At present, China, the United States and their followers, including Thai and Singaporean authorities, are trying to rally Pol Pot remnants and other Khmer reactionary forces in a so-called loose coalition against the revival of the Kampuchean people. China's "bleed Vietnam" policy as well as other criminal actions against the three Indochinese countries further expose itself as a saboteur of peace and stability in Indochina and Southeast Asia.

HANOI COMMENTS ON FORTHCOMING ASEAN CONFERENCE

[Text] As scheduled, foreign ministers of the ASEAN countries will meet in Singapore next Monday, 14 June. Commenting on this event, our commentator has this to say: It would be normal if the five ASEAN foreign ministers gather in Singapore to discuss their own problems, but there is much doubt about the meeting this time. Some officials at the U.S. State Department disclosed that the topic of discussion will be the Kampuchean problem. Word (?had dropped) in Bangkok and Singapore that at this meeting the foreign ministers of the ASEAN countries will discuss a plan to maintain the genocidal Pol Pot clique's seat at the United Nations in case a tripartite coalition of exiled Khmer reactionaries is not set up by September this year.

There are different opinions about the relations between the ASEAN and Indochinese countries. A number of persons see the situation in Southeast Asia from a wrong point of view. The situation in Southeast Asia is tense, of course, and it has been tense for 40 years now. The cause of tension is the war plot hatched by the imperialists, colonialists and other reactionaries against the countries in this region, not the Kampuchean problem or the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea as they claim.

At the Kampuchean people's request, Vietnam has sent its troops to fight together with the Kampuchean people against Chinese expansionism. Vietnamese troops will be withdrawn from Kampuchea only after the removal of Chinese threat. Unless China gives up its hostile policy and its threat against the independence, sovereignty and security of Vietnam and Kampuchea, the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea remains very necessary. If this makes the situation in Southeast Asia tense, what about the presence of Chinese troops on Vietnam's Hoang Sa Archipelago and the stationing of U.S. troops in the Philippines? If Vietnamese troops are prepared to withdraw from Kampuchea, will Chinese and American troops withdraw from those places?

Some persons reason that the situation in Southeast Asia has become tense because of the Kampuchean problem. This is just an imposition of viewpoints. In fact, if China's war of aggression against Vietnam were not defeated, if the genocide in Kampuchea did not stop and the Pol Pot criminals remained in power in Phnom Penh, the situation in Southeast Asia would be quite different from today. It is believed that Vietnam has been a dike preventing Chinese expansion toward Southeast Asia. This point of view is shared by practical-minded political circles in Indonesia.

We have on many occasions made it clear that Kampuchea is a problem between Chinese expansionists and the Indochinese countries not between Indochina and ASEAN. ASEAN should have coordinated with the Indochinese countries to prevent Chinese expansionsim, but it is regrettable that some authorities in the ASEAN countries are falling into China's trap. Experience shows that the Peking expansionists have resorted to all wicked plots to get the ASEAN countries involved in problems not related to themselves and then turn these problems into a problem of confrontation between the ASEAN and Indochinese countries.

It is clear that only the Chinese expansionists make profit from the present tension in Southeast Asia. China's propaganda organ always discussed Vietnam as a small regional hegemonist and the Soviet Union as a big global hegemonist. By so doing, China wants to link the problem between itself and the Indochinese countries with the problem of East-West relations. That is why the direct and fundamental cause of the present tension in Southeast Asia is China's expansionist and hegemonist policy.

A spokesman for the Indonesian Foreign Ministry, Mr (Ishak Darmo), is right to say that his country considers China, not the Soviet Union or Vietnam, dangerous. Moreover, the collusion between China and the United States has aggravated the already tense situation in Southeast Asia. Another problem is the relations between the Indochinese and the ASEAN countries. Beijing and Washington pretend to be worried about the tense relations between these two groups of countries. In fact, they are pleased to see the ASEAN countries falling into their trap. What they want is a confrontation between these two groups of countries. They oppose any sign of dialogue between the ASEAN and Indochinese countries.

Truly speaking, there are still differences between the ASEAN and Indochinese countries at present. But the present relations between these two groups of countries are growing brighter. Previously, there were no relations of any kind. Today, in the capital of each country, there are diplomatic or commerce missions.

We have many times said that if there exist differences in relations between countries, the best way is to sit together to solve these differences; but if they turn their back on each other, no problems would be solved. For this reasn, we advocate dialogue. We have put forth many practical and flexible proposals. The problem now depends only on the other side.

SRV HITS U.S. OPPOSITION TO PIANIST'S VISIT

OW121333 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 12 Jun 82

[From the review of Hanoi press for 12 June]

[Text] NHAN DAN published on page four a "current events talk" entitled: "Fear of Musical Sound." The talk notes that Mr Papp, director of the Shakespeare Festival in New York, recently reported that the U.S. State Department had prevented pianist Dang Thai Son from coming to the United States to participate in the concert at the festival. Assistant Secretary of State Holdridge argued that pianist Dang Thai Son's presence in the United States is inappropriate.

The talk stresses: As everyone knows, pianist Dang Thai Son has given performances and has been acclaimed in many countries, including Japan, France and the FRG. The U.S. administration dares not allow Dang Thai Son to perform in the United States because it fears his musical sound, the music of peace and friendship, which reflects the Vietnamese people's noble hearts. The Reagan administration wants to hear only the rattle of sabres and the voice of rancor and hostility.

TRUONG CHINH SENDS REPLY TO 'ARAFAT MESSAGE

OW111654 Hanoi VVNA in English 1634 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 11 -- President of the Council of State Truong Chinh today sent a message to Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), replying to the latter's message of June 9 on the grave situation in Lebanon caused by Israel's war of aggression.

The message condemns the Israeli Zionists encouraged by U.S. imperialism for unleashing a large-scale war of aggression against Lebanon and perpetrating brutal crimes against the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples. "This is not only a blatant violation of Lebanon's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity but also a serious threat to peace and security of other nations in this region and in the world as a whole," the message says.

It further notes that this is a deliberate war escalation prepared by U.S. imperialism and Israel in an attempt to suppress the resistance of the Palestinian people and seize complete control of Lebanon.

The message says: "The Socialist Republic of Vietnam reiterates its militant solidarity with and firm support for the just and bound to be victorious fight of the Palestinian people under the P.L.O. leadership and the other Arab peoples against Israeli Zionism and U.S. imperialism to wrest back the Palestinian people's legitimate national rights and to defend national independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Arab countries."

"I believe that in spite of many difficulties and hardships the Palestinian people's revolutionary cause will win glorious victory," the message says.

VAN TIEN DUNG ADDRESSES CADRE TRAINING COURSE

[Text] In compliance with a 1982 combat order issued by the ministry of National Defense, the General Staff recently organized a military training course for high-ranking cadres in the armed forces. The trainees studied many practical measures in order to improve their leadership skills with regard to the organization of training for troops and to enhance the management of troops in order to ensure combat readiness.

Sen Gen Van Tien Dung, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and minister of national defense, visited and addressed the trainees. The comrade was briefed by some leadership cadres.

The high-ranking cadres who attended the course have become fully aware of the position, role and tasks of a unit as well as the duties of a commander toward his unit in the new revolutionary stage.

Led by the party committee echelon concerned, a unit leader is the backbone of his unit. Therefore, he must always uphold his responsibility, set a good example and devote himself to training in order to improve his general knowledge and fulfill his assigned functions and duties in a satisfactory manner.

Through their study, all the trainees have become fully aware of the duties of a unit commander, which consist of concerning himself constantly with providing political indoctrination and military training for, improving the combat effectiveness of and cultivating discipline and heroism among his troops. He must also ensure that the entire unit acts in accordance with set regulations. In addition, efforts must be made to provide training for subordinate cadres. He must pay attention to troop management and closely manage and supervise all the unit's activities. He must seek to understand the problems of every cadre and combatant in the unit and concern himself with improving the material and spiritual life of this troops. This is what a unit commander must do to demonstrate his love for his troops.

The high-ranking cadres who participated in the course have all realized the need to join with local party organizations and administrations and people in building combat fortifications for the local people's warfare in order to make each unit's area of responsibility strong militarily, economically, culturally and socially.

NHAN DAN URGES EFFORTS AGAINST ECONOMIC SABOTAGE

BK130858 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 24 May 82 p 3

[Article by Duong Thong: "Prevent and Oppose the Enemy's Economic Sabotage"]

[Text] The fifth party congress pointed out in its resolution: In waging a multifaceted war of sabotage, the Chinese reactionaries are seeking to create instability in all areas of our socialist system and weaken us, thereby rendering us incapable of overcoming difficulties and sowing dissension and preparing conditions for them to carry out their scheme of annexing our country through a peaceful [hoaf binhf], counterrevolutionary process. Thus, their strategy is to invade our country without having to launch a large-scale war.

In this kind of war, the enemy carries out sabotage activities against us in all fields — political, ideological, military, economic, cultural, diplomatic and social — with economic sabotage being a very important point of attack directed against our country's efforts to build socialism. The enemy believes that economic sabotage is an effective catalyst for creating internal opposition supporting its political, ideological and social psychology sabotage activities and its efforts to weaken our national defense potentials. Therefore, it has wielded massive forces and resorted to numerous perfidious and cunning maneuvers to destroy our material-technical bases, undermine our production efforts and disrupt the market and our distribution and circulation activities. Along with targeting nationally important economic establishments for sabotage, the enemy has also directed its sabotage operations against local economic establishments in subtle forms, both covert and overt. On the other hand, it has also sought ways to corrupt some of our cadres and people and encourage them to indulge in a materialistic Western lifestyle, and enticed our people to flee abroad. Its economic sabotage activities have been well coordinated with its espionage, intelligence, psychological warfare and ideological sabotage activities.

The enemy has intensified its economic sabotage activities following its defeat in the 17 February 1979 war of aggression. It has colluded with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces in carrying out a policy of encirclement, imposing an embargo and canceling trade and aid programs in order to cause difficulties to our external economic activities. Along our entire northern border, the enemy has undermined our economy in various forms and through both blatant and subtle maneuvers. It has launched various campaigns such as the "cat campaign" to set up open air markets and release their goods to establish trade routes across the border for the purpose of sending spies and scouts into our country to gather intelligence information. It has also persuaded our people to quit production work and take up trading activities, forming smuggling rackets dealing in contraband ranging from luxury items to gold, silver, opium, rare metals and even weapons and ammunition. Many bands of Chinese smugglers operating in our country to establish contacts, upset our economy and disrupt our finances, prices and the market have been punished by our people. The enemy has also spread groundless rumors about currency changes, price increases and so forth, and distorted economic and social viewpoints and policies in an attempt to upset market prices, create favorable conditions for economic sabotage by outlawed elements, and undermine our people's confidence in the economic line of our party and state.

The enemy has taken advantage of our weaknesses in economic management and our inexperience and shortcomings in the implementation of regulations on observing the criteria and system of responsibilities in production management, warehouse maintenance and technical control to carry out sabotage operations.

Preventing and countering the enemy's economic sabotage, contributing toward the defeat of its multifaceted war of sabotage, is a fierce class struggle and an urgent demand facing our entire party and people.

In the spirit of the resolutions of the fifth party congress, all organs and enterprises must satisfactorily carry out the slogan: Economic construction must be closely linked with protecting the economy; and production with protecting production activities. A task of crucial importance to this undertaking as a whole is formulating well-defined plans for defense and prevention. It is also necessary to see through the enemy's cunning schemes of economic sabotage clearly so as to direct more hatred toward the enemy.

We must fully and satisfactorily observe the various internal regulations, systems and procedures for production and maintenance of warehouses and goods, fully understand the Constitution and the law of the state, strengthen economic law, concretize state regulations, organize scrupulous implementation of tasks and devise effective preventive measures. At the same time, it is necessary to intensify control and supervision. It is required that every ministry, state organ, enterprise, warehouse and construction project, on the basis of fully understanding party and state directives and resolutions, clearly define the responsibilities of each echelon, individual or component, especially heads of organs and enterprises. The organs and units in charge of protecting the economy must carry out effective control and superivision, review the various systems and internal regulation, and organize specialized forces for carrying out their responsibilities satisfactorily.

After 1917, Russian capitalists implemented a scheme designed to strangle the Soviet Russian administration through perfidious economic sabotage. Lenin pointed out: The bourgeoisie covertly undermined the production process (by engineering machinery breakdowns, work stoppages or suspension and other obstacles). They hoped that they could induce the collapse of the democratic republic, the Soviet system and the worker-peasant alliance by introducing unprecedented difficulties, and consequently restore the capitalist rule with ease.... At that time Lenin set forth a strategic line for developing the combined strength of the Soviet administration to smash this scheme and advance the economy of Soviet Russia vigorously. Proceeding from these profound lessons of history and from a thorough understanding of the resoltuions of the fifth party congress, we must bring into full play the combined strength of the whole system of dictatorship of the proletariat and carry out satisfactorily all operational measures for actively preventing and countering the enemy's schemes and acts of economic sabotage. This is an important factor that will contribute practically to defeating the kind of multifaceted war of sabotage currently directed against our country by the Beijing reactionaries in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces.

MARCOS ADDRESSES INDEPENDENCE DAY RALLY

OW121347 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] The president has reaffirmed the country's commitment to free enterprise and democratic politics. The president reaffirmed this commitment during a speech at the Luneta celebrations of the 84th anniversary of the proclamation of Philippines' independence. More than 100,000 people attended the Luneta ceremonies and Jose Carlos was one of them.

[Begin Carlos recording] It was the shortest Independence Day anniversary celebrations at the Luneta so far in years. It lasted for 2 hours. The same was true for the civic-military parade which featured projects under the nationwide KKK livelihood program and various socio-economic activities of the armed forces of the Philippines. But this morning's program at the (Carena) grand stand was no doubt significant.

President Marcos in his address asked each and every Filipino to carry on the work of national independence. Apathy and indifference, he said, is no answer. [end recording]

[Begin Marcos recording] The danger to a nation, we are well reminded, is not only violence and force. It can also be, and this is more dangerous, indifference and apathy, which can just as easily squander what has been accumulated over the years and disfigure a nation's destiny.

The work of national independence irrevocably goes on every day as if someone asks us today, as if someone asks day after day as it did those of our ancestors and those who dreamt and fought to raise the Filipino flag whether it was in Cavite or in Bataan or in the underground or in any of the battles that were fought for independence or in the quiet ways of office and enterprise. [as heard] Let us, therefore, carry this burden. It is a burden that each and every one of us can identify. Let us take it, bear it on our shoulders and carry it forward. [end recording]

Then came the floral offering at the Rizal monument, after which the first couple and other top government officials mustered to the grand stand for the main program. After the communal prayers jointly read by representatives of different religious denominations, newly elected members of the (Sangrian Pampur) of central and western Mindanao took their oaths of office before the chief executive.

Aside from the civic-military parade, other highlights in the day's celebrations included cultural programs in the afternoon, with the first lady opening the KKK exhibit at the (Philtrade) and an exhibit of paintings by the 19th-century Filipino master at the national museum.

FOREIGN MINISTERS ADDRESS ASEAN MEETING

[Text] The 15th ASEAN ministerial meeting was opened at the (?BBS) auditorium this afternoon by Mr Lee Kuan Yew.

The prime minister said ASEAN must stay together for a greater collective strength to withstand external pressures and problems. He warned that ASEAN's problems with the industrial countries might increase. Mr Lee said we might see new economic manifestations of the old colonial policy of divide and rule. He urged ASEAN to resist short-term benefits offered individually, otherwise long-term losses would result in weakened unity and bargaining strength.

Mr Lee stressed that ASEAN countries must make it a practice to act jointly to protect their agricultural, industrial and commercial interests. Already through their unity and cooperation, they have strengthened their position on issues concerning the common fund, the (?GFP), shipping, international civil aviation, commodities, GATT, UNCTAD and other international economic bodies.

Mr Lee said our progress toward regionalism had been less structured than that of the Economic Community. It must be so, because our histories of the colonial period before World War II were different. He said we have to make progress in an Asian manner, not through rules and regulations, but through mushawarah [consultations] and consensus. We have developed a mutual appreciation through differences in culture and learned to make allowances for differences in style.

Mr Lee went on to say that intra-ASEAN economic cooperation was progressing at a steady rate. Under the ASEAN preferential trading arrangement, over 8,500 items had been accorded tariff preferences. Progress had also been made in noneconomic areas. ASEAN's dialogue partners had provided assistance in noneconomic areas in preference to giving better access for ASEAN exports to their markets. Mr Lee said ASEAN has also used such assistance for intra-ASEAN cooperation in the cultural, scientific and social development fields. Turning to global and regional security, Mr Lee said it seems that we were premature in assuming that the congruence of American and Chinese interests in containing Soviet expansion would make them de facto allies. The present balance of relationship among the United States, the Soviet Union and China was more (?fluid) and uncertain than 1 year ago.

Mr Lee said China and the Soviet Union were also engaged in a sustained contest of will and power over Indochina for preeminent influence. Until one side found it burdensome and not worth the cost, there was little hope for peace. This, Mr Lee said, had not prevented the Soviets from making overtures to China for dialogue and accommodation, and these overtures had not been rejected.

Mr. Lee pointed out that the increasing toing and froing between Soviet and Chinese officials and the settlement of China's border dispute in the long Mongolian frontier (?were not signs) which could reassure Vietnam of unremitting Soviet support at any cost and for any time.

As for the United States, Mr Lee noted that Washington had become a spectator in Indochina after being the principal participant until 1975. Mr Lee warned that we, the noncommunists of Southeast Asia, would have to carefully pick our way through the complexities of a new mine field of conflicting great power interests in Indochina.

As for Vietnam and Kampuchea, Mr Lee said it was worth repeating that ASEAN did not object to the Indochinese states coming together. Its objection was over the manner in which Kampuchea was forcibly incorporated by Vietnam. It was in ASEAN's interest to have the Indochinese states work together and cooperate with ASEAN.

According to Mr Lee, time would demonstrate to Vietnam that she has nothing to gain from this primarily Soviet-Chinese conflict. Time would also prove to Vietnam that ASEAN was not acting in collusion with any great power at the international conference on Kampuchea which was convened in New York in July last year. It would show that at that conference ASEAN helped to provide the basis for a fair and just political solution.

First of the foreign ministers to speak was Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila of Thailand.

In his statement, Marshal Sitthi said his country and ASEAN generally wish to see the Kampuchean problem settled for the benefit of all. They would listen and give due consideration to constructive suggestions from other nations, especially from friends and dialogue partners.

Marshal Sitthi said in pursuing a peaceful solution to the Kampuchea problem, ASEAN was every conscious of the inalienable rights of the Kampuchean people to free their land from occupation and domination. ASEAN states had occupied themselves in the Kampuchean problem because it endangers the peace and security of Southeast Asia. Thailand, he said, shared ASEAN's conviction that a peaceful, just and prosperous Southeast Asia, to which they all aspire, can only be achieved in the spirit of reconciliation and cooperation.

Indonesian Foreign Minister Dr Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja expressed deep regret that efforts by the international community to find a peaceful and honorable solution to the Kampuchean problem continued to meet with Vietnamese intransigence and the rigid position adopted by some of those involved.

Dr Mokhtar then dealt with the international economic system and ASEAN cooperation. He said the bleak prospect of the international economy posed a serious challenge to ASEAN in its efforts to contribute toward a more just and equitable international economic order. For ASEAN, therefore, there could be no other choice but to intensify its collective efforts in the various international forums and multilateral dialogues, while continuously maintaining more consultation and coordination among its members on the major international issues.

As for intra-ASEAN cooperation, the Indonesian leader said whatever progress in this regard, it should be seen in the light of the realities that our region is facing. Unlike the vast majority of the developing world, ASEAN had until recently been going through the recession years without losing much of its momentum of development. The political stability and economic viability of the member countries [words indistinct] in the rapid social economic development of the ASEAN region.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie urged the ASEAN members not to view their economic problems in the old fashioned way. He said they should pause for a moment and concentrate on bringing home to the industrial nations of the free enterprise world the stark reality that the system was in great danger of being constricted. He proposed the setting up of an international think-tank with the task of finding a formula not solve the world economic deterioration on a temporary basis, but for the strengthening of the free enterprise system as a whole. Tan Sri Ghazali said this would require attention from moment to moment, replacing outmoded fashion with a new one, while at the same time keeping the fundamental ideas in constant repair so as to be relevant to the changes and challenges of time.

In his statement, Philippine Foreign Minister General Carlos Romulo expressed the need for ASEAN to undertake a review of its numerous economic activities and develop a new comprehensive framework of cooperation. This, he said, could make integrated development possible and nearer the reach of the ASEAN states.

He noted that the growth in ASEAN economic undertakings had not kept with the process within the framework of an integrated whole. The consequences of this unfortunate trend, which was beginning to be visible, would defeat the objective of establishing economies of scale in the ASEAN region.

On the Kampuchean situation, General Romulo urged Vietnam to show a genuine sign that it was prepared to take the initial step toward durable peace in the region. ASEAN, he said, hoped that Vietnam will realize that it was in its long-term interest to withdraw its forces from Kampuchea.

Singapore Foreign Minister, Mr Dhanabalan, said ASEAN cooperation to meet the problem of the Vietnamese invasion and occupation of Kampuchea was the clearest example of its efficacy. ASEAN had successfully denied Vietnam's legitimacy through its action in Kampuchea and enjoyment of the fruits of its military occupation. It had been able to mobilise support to maintain the diplomatic, political and economic isolation of Kampuchea.

The foreign minister said ASEAN will continue in its principled stand until a political solution was found for Kampuchea. ASEAN continued to hold the door open for Vietnam to come to the conference table and until Vietnam agrees with the political solution and withdraws its troops from Kampuchea, ASEAN would continue to apply all-round pressure on Vietnam.

On economic matters, Mr Dhanabalan said ASEAN would have to work together even more than in the past to maintain open markets and fair prices for our goods and services. This was because there were clear trends that industrialized countries, faced with economic difficulties, were increasingly resorting to desperate measures completely contrary to the free trade principles they have preached for so long. He also criticized protectionist practices.

Mr Dhanabalan said that those people, even within ASEAN, who were constantly criticizing ASEAN for lack of progress in economic matters, began to see that the crucial factors for economic development were political stability and a climate of confidence. The greatest contribution of ASEAN had been in helping to ensure political stability and to establish a climate of confidence in the region. ASEAN had succeeded when so many other attempts at regional cooperation, both in Southeast Asia and elsewhere in the developing world, had failed because of several reasons. First, there was a willingness to solve problems by peaceful means. Second, there was a commitment of all ASEAN leaders to accelerate the pace of economic development in their respective countries and not to interfere in the affairs of their neighbors. Rapid economic development was accepted as the main weapon against security threats. Third, an ASEAN consciousness had been developing at all levels and finally, the unique way of making decisions whereby no project is carried out without a consensus.

The Brunei representative, Pengiran Muda Mohamed Bolkiah, said whatever threatened ASEAN also threatened Brunei. He said Brunei was conscious of the need for mutual support and collaboration. The Brunei representative, who was attending the meeting as an observer, said his country welcomed efforts by ASEAN to secure peace and security in this region. He added that Brunei was looking forward to further expand its relations with ASEAN.

Earlier, the ministers led by General Carlos Romulo observed 1 minute of silence in honor of the late King Khalid of Saudi Arabia. The king died of a heart attack yesterday.

ASEAN MINISTERS: TIME 'NOT RIPE' FOR SUMMIT

[Text] Singapore, 14 Jun (AFP) -- Foreign ministers of Singapore, Malaysia and Indonesia clearly stated today that the time was not ripe for an Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) summit conference.

Arriving here this morning to attend the 15th annual meeting of the ASEAN foreign ministers, Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said: "We should not have a summit unless we have something important to discuss".

Dr. Mokhtar told an airport press conference he fully endorsed Singapore's stand that a summit meeting "just for its own sake would not serve any purpose".

Meanwhile, Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan said in an interview published here today that he could not see "anything new that has happened that will require an immediate summit meeting".

President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines last month called for the holding of an ASEAN summit to "give a political boost" to ASEAN efforts to forge close economic ties.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie said: "We are always happy to meet on the summit level if it is worthwhile. But I don't see any reason for a meeting now. We should not institutionalise the summit".

Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed had made it clear that he was prepared to consider the summit proposal although he felt the time was not ripe for it.

MOKHTAR ON VIETNAM TALKS, CAMBODIAN PROBLEM

[Text] Singapore, 14 Jun (AFP) --Vietnam is now in a mood to talk to ASEAN countries on a bilateral basis on the Cambodian problem, Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said today.

Flying in to attend the 15th ASEAN foreign ministers' conference opening this afternoon, Dr. Mokhtar said Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach had expressed a desire to visit Indonesia in July after his proposed visits to Singapore and Malaysia. He said personally he would prefer Mr. Thach to visit Jakarta after the end of the fasting month which begins June 23.

Dr. Mokhtar pointed out that though ASEAN wanted a solution to the Cambodian problem within the framework of United Nations resolutions, which Vietnam had publicly rejected, "We will not be averse to talks if Vietnam wants them."

He also said that ASEAN's objective was to reach a political settlement of the Cambodian problem and to achieve this it was necessary to apply pressures on Hanoi such as the witholding of economic aid. "But that is not the end in itself. We should try to be more positive to come to some arrangement to live peacefully in the area," added Dr. Mokhtar.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie said an invitation had been issued to Mr. Thach, but no date has been fixed.

He said Hanoi appeared "anxious" to find a solution to the Cambodian problem although publicly they had rejected the U.N. call for the withdrawal of troops to pave the way for a political solution.

FUKUDA LEAVES FOR RIYADH TO OFFER CONDOLENCES

[Text] Tokyo June 14 KYODO -- Former Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda left here Monday night for Saudi Arabia as Japan's special envoy to offer condolences on the death of Saudi Arabian King Khalid.

Fukuda is carrying a letter from Acting Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone to King Fahd. Nakasone is sending the letter on behalf of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, who is now visiting Brazil.

He was accompanied by ruling Liberal-Democratic Party Dietmen, including former Transport Minister Seijuro Shiokawa and former Minister of International Trade and Industry Yoshitake Sasaki.

ABE ADDRESSES CORRESPONDENTS ON TRADE ISSUE

[Text] Tokyo June 14 KYODO -- Japan does not carry out concentrated exports of autos and other goods vital to the economies of other industrial countries to help maintain harmony in free trade, International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe said Monday.

He conceded that Japan's voluntary restraint in exports of motor vehicles and steel "runs counter to free trade principles." But, he said, the Japanese Government has limited exports of those products to the United States and other Western countries deliberately because "concentrated exports inevitably press the economies of other countries."

In his first address before the Foreign Correspondents' Club of Japan, Abe underscored the significance of the government's trade liberalization measures in recent months.

The Cabinet of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki announced in late May plans to eliminate or reduce tariffs on 205 items, including 198 industrial goods, to help promote imports of those products.

As Cabinet Minister Abe sees it, the so-called second package has prompted the current of trade friction to "definitely" turn and calls from abroad for opening up the Japanese market wider has subsided. The latest package, he predicted, "will increase Japan's imports by several billion dollars."

MITI Chief Abe noted that further liberalization of imports of farm products chiefly from the United States is extremely difficult as the issue is "not purely economical but is connected with political elements." He did not elaborate what those elements were.

He was optimistic about dealing with the protectionist sentiment in America and Western Europe when he stated, "Some reciprocity bills may be passed but the nature of those bills will be far different" from the original tougher reciprocity legislation.

The Japanese leader also told some 170 journalists and businessmen that interest rates in other Western countries are "too high" and defended the country's relatively low interest rate policy which will help stimulate domestic demand.

MITI inaugurated a business consultant system last week under which some 400 consultants will deal with potential foreign exporters as a step toward implementation of the Japanese trade liberalization measures.

Abe said that a trade conference is scheduled soon to hear opinions of foreigners about Japan's business practices and controversial distribution network.

Working groups of both Japan and the United States will confer on high technology in early July, he related. He also added that MITI plans to encourage the participation of foreigners in forming standards in a drive to give them a better access to the Japanese market.

DOLLAR'S UPSURGE TO YEN 250 LEVEL CAUSES CONCERN

[Text] Tokyo June 14 KYODO -- The dollar's spurt to the yen 250 level on the Tokyo foreign exchange market Monday evoked strong fears of adverse effects on the Japanese economy among industrial circles.

They were especially concerned that the increased costs of imports would trigger a price inflation to the detriment of the Japanese economy, which still remains stagnant, informed sources said.

Even those sectors which could benefit from the yen's depreciation did not seem very happy.

Few of the industries heavily reliant on exports expect an increase in overseas sales because of the dismal economic climate worldwide.

Electric home appliance makers, who could expect exchange profits thanks to their massive exports, are even worried about a possible inflation, which would darken the domestic business climate.

The greenback soared to yen 250.15 on the Tokyo market Monday, breaking through the yen 250 barrier for the first time in about 26 months since April 22, 1980.

Hardest hit by the yen's depreciation will be those industries which depend heavily on imports of raw materials and fuels, among them are the petroleum and electric power industries.

The dollar's upsurge came as an added blow to the petroleum industry, which registered exchange losses to the tune of yen 200 billion (dollar 810 million) due to the yen's depreciation in fiscal 1981 ended last March.

Yasouko Takeuchi, president of Nippon Oil Co., said prices of petroleum products would have to be hiked to offset cost increases resulting from the yen's depreciation. His view was echoed by all other firms.

The electric power industry, which imports most of its fuel, is in for a drop in earnings as a result of the dollar's spurt, the sources said. If the yen's value decreases by yen 1, the expenditures of the nine regional electric firms as a whole will swell by as much as yen 18 billion (dollar 72 million). Their biggest concern is whether the present downtrend of the yen would persist.

Shipbuilders and plant manufacturers also voiced anxiety that large fluctuations in the yen's value could work to the disadvantage of their exports, although they would benefit if the yen's value were stabilized at a low level as against the dollar. Shipbuilders generally quote their export contracts in yen.

A spokesman for Hitachi Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. said that even though the yen's depreciation placed shipbuilders at an advantage in negotiating exports, a sudden surge in the yen's value due to the unstable exchange market could totally change the picture.

Manufacturers of plant equipment do not think the yen's depreciation against the dollar would benefit them appreciably because their main rivals in export of electric power, chemical and other plants are makers in such European countries as West Germany and France, the sources said.

Steelmakers expect little impact of the dollar's spurt because there is at present an equilibrium between exports of steel products and imports of raw materials in terms of value, the sources said. They are afraid, however, that if the yen's downswing persists, it could push up the costs of steel products, since exports mainly to the United States have been decreasing since April, causing imbalance between exports and raw material imports.

Steelmakers are also concerned that the yen's depreciation would worsen the domestic business climate, dampening demand for steel, the sources said.

PRC ORDERS JAPAN STEEL PRODUCTS, MORE ORDERS EXPECTED

[Text] Tokyo, June 15, KYODO -- China has ordered 756,000 tons of ordinary steel products from Japan for the second half of this year, and more orders are expected later, industry sources said Tuesday.

The initial package of orders, which capped negotiations continuing over the past month in Beijing, is usually to be followed by several additional orders.

A team of officials from six leading Japanese steel manufacturers returned from Beijing Monday night, saying Chinese orders for the July-December period would stay little changed at the level of the first half -- a little more than 1.2 million tons.

The anticipated semiannual volume represents sizable gains from the 1981 shipments -- 985,000 tons in the second half of last year and 914,000 tons the previous six-month period.

The steel companies are heartened by the result of negotiations, which came amid signs Japanese steel shipments to the United States and other major export markets are heading for drastic falls in the months ahead.

Amid the worsening export market situation, the team of negotiators, led by Nippon Steel Corp. Director Tokuji Ohashi, had little choice but to compromise with "marginal" price cuts on average, the sources said. The present package order comprise 394,000 tons of cold rolled sheets, 86,000 tons of plates, 80,000 tons of tinplates, 69,000 tons of hot coils, 61,000 tons of galvanized sheets, 26,000 tons of electrical sheets, 17,000 tons of wire rods, 12,000 tons of hot rolled sheets and 11,000 tons of structural carbon steel.

BRIEFS

AID TO NIGER -- Tokyo, 8 Jun, KYODO -- Japan will extend Niger food aid of up to yen 450 million (dollar 1.8 million) in Japanese rice on the basis of the 1980 food aid convention and a grant-in-aid of up to yen 500 million (dollar 2 million) for a medical facilities improvement project, the government said Monday. Notes to that effect were exchanged in Niamey Monday between Yoshikazu Sugitani, Japanese ambassador to Niger, and Daouda Diallo, minister of foreign affairs and cooperation of Niger. Because of a great decrease in agricultural production caused by severe drought in the Sahel region in the 1970s, the government of Niger is stepping up efforts to achieve food self-sufficiency in its national development plan, but had requested food aid from Japan. Niger has also formulated a medical facilities improvement project for both urban and rural areas and requested a Japanese grant for the necessary equipment. AID TO THAILAND -- Tokyo, 8 Jun, KYODO -- Japan has agreed to extend a yen 70 billion (dollar 286 million) credit to Thailand to help finance a natural gas separation plant project in that country, the Japanese Government announced Tuesday. [Speech by O Chin-u, member of the Presidium of the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee, member of the Military Affairs Committee of the Party Central Committee and minister of people's armed forces, at 14 June banquet for PRC military delegation, hosted by the Military Affairs Committee of the KWP Central Committee at the People's Cultural Palace -- read by announcer]

We have greeted with great pleasure the friendly delegation sent by the CCP Central Committee, the fraternal Chinese people and the soldiers of the People's Liberation Army. Entrusted by the Military Affairs Committee of the KWP Central Committee, I, first of all, warmly welcome the Chinese military delegation led by Comrade Geng Biao, member of the Politburo of the CCP Central Committee, Standing Committee member of the Military Commission of the party Central Committee, member of the State Council and defense minister.

At a significant time when Korea-China friendship has more fully blossomed, supported by the warm hearts of the peoples and soldiers of the two countries, the Chinese guests are visiting our country. The visit to our country by a high-level Chinese military delegation is an important event which further glorifies the daily developing Korea-China friendship and which demonstrates to the world that this friendship is firm, unshakable and forever lasting, not only in the political, economic and cultural sectors but also in the military sector.

Korea-China friendship is a militant friendship which has been cultivated with blood in the flames of the arduous revolutionary struggle and is an invincible revolutionary friendship which has been consolidated, overcoming historic, grave trials. The peoples of Korea and China, joining hands, have always linked their destinies on the road of the struggle for achieving national and class liberation and socialist revolution and construction. They are the most intimate revolutionary comrades-in-arms who have shared weal and woe with each other.

Today, it has become a most excellent tradition of the peoples of Korea and China that, whenever they face trials, they closely support and cooperate with each other and wage a joint struggle shoulder to shoulder. During the difficult period of the fatherland liberation war when our people waged a decisive struggle to protect the freedom and indepdence of the fatherland from the enemy's aggression, the fraternal Chinese people aided our people, shedding their blood by sending the volunteer army they had organized with their excellent sons and daughters.

We will never forget the fact that, during the period of fierce battle, the warriors of the Chinese Peoples' Volunteers shared their fate and weal and woe in the trenches with the Korean people and shed their precious blood to defend to the last even a single piece of land in Korea. We will bequeath to our posterity, generation after generation, the noble spirit of proletarian internationalism they displayed.

Indeed, Korea-China friendship is a great example of friendship and unity which only exists among brothers. It shines in the history of the international relationships of the working class.

Our people have profoundly experienced through history and through daily life the fact that the destinies of the peoples of two countries are an inseparable, lips-and-teeth relationship and that, when the peoples and armies of the two countries fight in firm unity, they can repel any formidable enemy and win the final victory of the revolution.

The increase in the might of China, our rear, is a great encouragement to us who are standing in direct confrontation with an enemy one million strong. Therefore, our people have always watehed with deep interest the revolution and construction of the fraternal Chinese people. They sincerely hope that everything will be successfully carried out in China.

Under the correct leadership of the CCP led by respected Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang, the fraternal Chinese people have attained great successes in the work of achieving stability and unity throughout the country, abiding by the four basic principles and building a highly democratic, civilized and modernized powerful socialist country, especially in the struggle to firmly solidify the country's defense capability. They are vigorously struggling to reunify the country by having Taiwan return to the fatherland.

Today, the PRC has grown and been strengthened into a powerful anti-imperialist revolutionary force in Asia and its influence on world developments and its international authority have increased with each passing day. Our people sincerely rejoice as with their own over all these successes which the fraternal Chinese people have attained, warmly congratulate them on achieving these successes and sincerely wish them greater successes in the future.

Respected and beloved Chinese guests, under the difficult circumstances in which the wicked maneuvers of the United States and the South Korean puppet clique to fabricate two Koreas and to provoke a new war have intensified with each passing day, we are struggling to accelerate socialist construction and expedite the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification.

The visit to our country by the Chinese military delegation constitutes an event greatly supporting and encouraging the struggle of our people and the officers and men of the People's Army to enact a new upsurge in all sectors of socialist construction -- firmly uniting around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and our party Central Committee with a single idea and will and upholding the great leader's historic policy speech -- and to safeguard the fatherland from the enemy's encroachments.

While meeting with the workers and soldiers of our country, you will directly observe our people's firm stand and ironclad will to join hands and invariably struggle with the fraternal Chinese people no matter what trials they may face in the future and their warm love and respect for the great Chinese people.

We firmly believe that the current visit of the Chinese military delegation to our country will greatly contribute to developing to a higher stage the traditional friendly and cooperative relations between the two parties, countries, peoples and soldiers and their anti-imperialist joint struggle to meet the requirements of the developments of the present situation.

We hope that, while staying in our country, the intimate Chinese guests will have worthwhile days, with good health and without any inconveniences whatsoever, as if they were at home.

In conclusion, firmly believing that the visit to our country by the Chinese military delegation will bear good results through joint efforts, I propose a toast to the militant friendship and unity between the KWP and the CCP and between the peoples and soldiers of Korea and China, to the great victory of the world's anti-imperialist cause for independence, to the good health and long life of respected Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang, to that of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, to that of respected Comrade Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping, to that of dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, to the good health of respected Minister Comrade Geng Biao, to that of all respected and beloved members of the Chinese delegation and to that of all comrades present here.

Geng Biao Banquet Speech

[Speech by Geng Biao, member of the CCP Politburo, Standing Commiteee member of the CCP Military Commission, member of the State Council, and defense minister, at 14 Jun banquet in Pyongyang -- read by announcer]

[Text] Esteemed Comrade O Chin-u, beloved Korean comrades-in-arms, and comrades, it is with special pleasure that we -- the PRC military delegation visiting beautiful Korea, a country of comrades-in-arms, on an invitation -- convey lofty respects and warm greetings from the Chinese people and all commanders and combatants of the Chinese People's Liberation Army to the Korean people and all the officers and men of the Korean People's Army [KPA] and that we express the warm wishes of the people and soldiers of our country for the Korean people's cause of struggle.

We were accorded a magnificent and warm welcome as soon as we stepped onto your beautiful country. Comrade O Chin-u arranged this splendid banquet and is warmly welcoming us. He made a speech overflowing with emotions of friendship. All this showed the sincere sentiments of the Korean comrades-in-arms towards us.

I sincerely thank you for this on behalf of all Chinese comrades. Traditional friendly relations of mutual trust and support, and unity and assistance have existed consistently from long ago between the two countries, two peoples and two armies.

When the Chinese people are waging an arduous struggle to eliminate imperialism, feudalism and bureaucratic capitalism before the new China was founded, a number of outstanding sons and daughters of the Korean people assisted us with blood and their lives.

After the victory of the revolutions in the two countries, Comrade Mao Zedong, Comrade Zhou Enlai and Comrade Kim Il-song together forged the great China-Korea friendship under new conditions.

The cordial meetings between the leaders of our two parties and two countries on several occasions in recent years powerfully promoted the constant development of a most intimate China-Korea friendship.

The Chinese people and the People's Liberation Army set great store by the steadily consolidating and developing China-Korea friendship and will make tireless efforts for it.

Our army and people will as in the past, so in the future, too, closely cooperate, support and collaborate with the Korean people and comrades-in-arms of the People's Army in our struggle for building socialism and for national reunification, in the struggle for unity with the Third World and against imperialism and hegemonism [paekwonchuui].

Comrades, the courageous and unyielding Korean people crushed barbarous aggression by the Japanese imperialists and the U.S. imperialists through arduous struggle in unity under the tested leadership of their great leader President Kim Il-song for over a half century. They opened up a new chapter in Korean history by achieving national independence and founding the Democratic People's Republic of Korea where the people have become the masters.

After you won the victory in the fatherland liberation war of Korea, by implementing the line of independence in politics, self-sustenance in economy and self-reliance in defense, which was put forward by President Kim Il-song, and relying upon your own industrious labor and wisdom, you healed the war wounds very quickly at the speed of Chollima and have built a socialist state full of life with modern industry and developed agriculture, thus rising up in the East of the world, assuming the fresh looks of a hero.

The fraternal KPA, under the leadership of President Kim Il-song, its supreme commander, recorded proud heroic epics in the struggle against the U.S. imperialists' aggression and for safeguarding national independence and sovereignty. Today, it is making a new contribution to the cause of socialist construction in its fatherland.

The KPA has become a heroic army of high political preparedness and possessed of powerful combat capabilities by making constant new advances in construction or modernization and regularization. We are proud of having the KPA as our comrades-in-arms.

We sincerely rejoice over all the successes won by the Korean people and the KPA and wish you greater successes in the struggle to further vigorously carry out the three revolutions under the wise leadership of President Kim Il-song and to fulfill the Second 7-Year Plan ahead of schedule.

To achieve the independent and peaceful reuinification of the country is a national desire of the entire Korean people who have waged struggle for this for many years, and it is an important factor for peace and stability in the Asian region. But the U.S. forces still remain in South Korea, refusing to withdraw, and the Chon Tu-hwan clique, at the instigation of the United States and with its backing, is becoming more undisguised in laying all sorts of obstacles in the way of the North-South dialogue and the peaceful reunification of Korea. This brings into bolder relief the hegemonist aspect of the United States and its two-Koreas plot.

The KWP and the Korean Government have made untiring efforts for a long period to put an end to foreign interference and achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country at the earliest date possible.

The Chinese people and the People's Liberation Army resolutely support the reunification proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and its ten-point policy put forward by President Kim Il-song, resolutely support the Korean people's sacred cause for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country and strongly demand that the United States immediately pull out of South Korea all of its troops and equipment. We believe that the tapestry-like Land of Three Thousand Ri will certainly be reunified and the 50 million compatriots of the same blood will be reunited in one land in harmony at an early date.

I propose a toast to the blood-cemented great friendship between the Chinese and Korean peoples and armies;

To the good health and longevity of President Kim Il-song, the great leader of the Korean people and a close friend of the Chinese people;

To the good health and longevity of Comrade Secretary Kim Chong-il,

To the good health of Comrade O Chin-u and to the good health of all Korean comrades-in-arms and comrades here.

The peasants plan to carry out intensive cultivation of 3,000 hectares, planting 2,000 hectares of IR-36 seeds. In Samroang District, according to SPK at 1427 GMT on 13 June, the plan calls for 17,300 hectares of rice in the rainy season. Of the 2,000 hectares planted in 11 communes so far, 1,500 hectares have been high yield IR-36. A total of 40 tons of IR-36 seeds have been provided along with 215 tons of chemical fertilizer.

Kandal: The radio reports at 0400 GMT on 12 June that in Kieu Svay District peasants had transplanted 1,294 hectares of rainy season rice by the beginning of June. Of this, 1,170 hectares were IR-36. The authorities have provided 57 pumps, 300 tons of seeds and 700 tons of chemical fertilizer to the people. The 1,410 hectares of dry season rice harvested have yielded 3,413 tons of paddy.

Kompong Cham: At 0400 GMT on 13 June the radio notes that by the end of May peasants had planted 1,002 hectares of rainy season rice -- 453 of broadcast rice, 367 of farm rice and 200 of early maturing rice. They have also planted almost 8,000 hectares of secondary crops -- 4,000 hectares of corn, 2,000 hectares of beans and 1,000 hectares each of beans and sesame.

Prey Veng: The radio reports at 0400 GMT on 13 June that the rainy season rice target in Sithor Kandal District is 16,964 hectares.

[Excerpts] The European conference for solidarity with Kampuchea, organized at the Luxemburg Palace in Paris by the Kampuchean solidarity movement and the international secretariat for solidarity with Kampuchea, which is being attended by delegates from more than 10 European countries, proceeded successfully on 5 and 6 June. A Democratic Kampuchean delegation led by Minister Thiounn Mumm also attended the conference by invitation. Minister Thiounn Mumm conveyed a message from Chairman Khieu Samphan to the conference and spoke on the favorable development of the Kampuchean people's struggle under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean government in all fields -- military, political and diplomatic.

7. Appeals to the whole world to increase its support and assistance to and solidarity with the Kampuchean people's just struggle.

The second day of the conference was devoted to meetings of various special committees which discussed programs and activities to support the Kampuchean people's struggle.

VODK COMMENTARY SUPPORTS LAWYERS CBW INVESTIGATION

[Station commentary: "The Kampuchean People Hope That the Asian Lawyers Committee Will Denounce and Strongly Condemn the Vietnamese Aggressors' Genocidal Crimes Against the Kampuchean and Lao Nations and Peoples"]

[Summary] "The Asian Lawyers Committee is currently conducting an investigation along the Thai-Kampuchean and Thai-Lao borders. It is investigating the Vietnamese aggressors' violation of human rights in Kampuchea and Laos, Vietnam's use of toxic chemical weapons to kill the Kampuchean and Lao peoples and Vietnam's diversion of international humanitarian aid meant for the Kampuchean people to feed the Vietnamese aggressor troops. The Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government express their warm welcome to the Asian Lawyers Committee and hope that the committee will fulfill its mission successfully in the defense of justice, the principles of international law and of human rights and peace in the Southeast Asian region and throughout the world. In this connection, the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government are ready to cooperate with and provide information to the committee."

For more than 3 years, the Vietnamese aggressors have committed barbarous crimes against the Kampuchean people in an attempt to exterminate the Kampuchean race. They have violated the human rights of the Kampuchean people and massacred them with all kinds of weapons, including toxic chemical weapons, and by creating famine to starve them to death.

"The Vietnamese aggressors have used toxic chemical weapons in Kampuchea since the beginning of 1979, that is, after the failure of their blitzkrieg strategy. Millions of Kampuchean people have perished from these toxic chemical weapons." This fact is known throughout the world and doctors from various international humanitarian organizations have treated the Kampuchean victims and found a variety of evidence. Due to the military impasse, the Vietnamese aggressors have intensified the use of toxic chemical weapons to kill the Kampuchean people everywhere, including those in the zone under their temporary control.

The Vietnamese aggressors have plundered and used humanitarian aid as a means for conducting their war of aggression and genocide against the Kampuchean race. Humanitarian aid sent through the Vietnamese aggressive administration has not reached the Kampuchean people. It has been plundered and sent to Vietnam or used to feed the Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea. Moreover, the Vietnamese aggressors have banned the Kampuchean people from going to receive humanitarian aid distributed along the Thai border.

"The Vietnamese aggressors have massacred over 2.5 million Kampuchean people through these most barbarous and cruel methods.

"The Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government hope that the Asian Lawyers Committee will find justice and publicize the outcome of its investigation so as to expose the Vietnamese aggressors' crime of killing and exterminating the Kampuchean and Lao races and we hope that it will mobilize the peace and justice-loving people in the world to jointly condemn the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors more strongly and to pressure the Vietnamese aggressors to respect and implement the resolutions of the UN General Assembly sessions by withdrawing from Kampuchea and Laos."

VODK: LAWYERS FIND EVIDENCE OF CHEMICAL WARFARE

[Text] After a week of investigation along the Thai-Kampuchean border and the Thai-Lao frontier, the Asian Lawyers Committee has stated that it found evidence clearly showing that the Vietnamese have used toxic chemical weapons in Kampuchea and Laos. The committee affirmed that the Vietnamese have used toxic chemical weapons on a large scale. The Asian Lawyers Committee will publish a report on the results of this investigation for world opinion in the near future.

VODK URGES NO AID DISTRIBUTION THROUGH PHNOM PENH

BK310620 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 30 May 82

[Text] At the 27 May meeting of donor countries to consider the process of humanitarian aid to the Kampuchean people taking refuge along the border, a number of countries announced additional humanitarian aid to the Kampuchean people as follows:

The United States, $5 million; West Germany, 4 million DM; Japan, 500,000 dollars; Malaysia, 20,000 dollars; and Finland, 1 million Fmk.

On this occasion, we appeal to the UN humanitarian organizations to please distribute all of this generous aid to the Kampuchean people directly. Do not distribute this aid through the Vietnamese aggressors' administration in Phnom Penh. This is because in the past, humanitarian aid distributed through the Vietnamese aggressors' administration had been fundamentally plundered by the Vietnamese aggressors and diverted in the service of their aggressive war in Kampuchea.

SAIYUT COMMENTS ON KAMPUCHEA, JOINT EXERCISES

[Text] [Saiyut] The current situation along the Kampuchean border is stable. In particular, we had expected that there would be fighting in Kampuchea near our border and that this might result in Kampucheans fleeing to Thailand and stray shells falling in our territory. So far this year there has been no indication that more Kampucheans will flee to Thailand, which is good. The number of shells falling into our territory has also been about average. From these conditions we are confident that we have the situation under control.

[Answer] That is not the case, but it could be that the superpower is occupied with its support for operations in other regions of the world and thus its support for operations in this region has decreased.

[Question] Does the change in Vietnamese domestic structures have something to do with it?

[Answer] We will have to follow Vietnam's actions and attitude.

[Question] It seems that ASEAN's attempt to form a coalition of the three Kampuchean factions is not producing much result. What will happen next? Please comment.

[Answer] I have no comment. Let it be ASEAN's problem. The military is closely following developments.

[Question] What about the problem of minority groups along the borders?

[Answer] There is no problem. We have to carry out the three-point principle which I brought up and which was endorsed at a recent seminar. The first point is that we must tackle the security aspect of the problem by ourselves. There might be situations when we will allow other forces to help us temporarily but we must act ourselves in the long run -- we cannot rely on assistance from others.

The second point is that we must not allow anyone to use our territory against our friends -- this is our country's principal policy. We must try to carry out this policy to the best of our ability. If we cannot carry it out completely, we must do our best. The third point is that all minority groups in Thailand must be subject to Thai law. We must be able to enforce our law.

This is the three-point principle which we must uphold. However, because the border is remote, inaccessible at places and covers a vast area, it might be difficult to implement this principle. In any event, we must sincerely try to carry it out. In some areas we might not be able to carry it out completely but we will try to do more as time passes. In all, we must uphold the principle and must sincerely and honestly try to carry it out. The local authorities must do the best they can. We will understand what is beyond their ability.

[Question] Concerning joint exercises, we now have a joint logistics plan. What other forms of cooperation have you planned?

[Answer] Joint military exercises are just that. They ready the troops if a situation should demand their use. Troops will be able to work together with troops from other countries, which is why we have joint exercises with forces of the ASEAN countries and other countries. This means that, if ordered to operate jointly with another force, our forces, particularly the air force and the navy, could do it. Joint air operations and naval operations are more possible than joint army operations.

[Question] Does that mean that plans for joint operations already exist?

[Answer] No. The task of defending our country belongs to the Thai people.

[Answer] For example in logistics, if the other side said it will help us, we will know what will be received, where and when it will be delivered. This will be in accordance with the set plan. When you say the troops are prepared it means that they have their plans and they must rehearse such plans. The government will issue orders when it wants the troops to act. The troops must be able to perform when ordered.

DEPUTY FOREIGN MINISTER SPEAKS AT UN MEETING

[Text] Deputy Foreign Minister of Thailand Dr Arun Phanuphong told the UN General Assembly on disarmament that he hopes there would be a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in Southeast Asia in the foreseeable future. He disclosed that Thailand and other ASEAN members had been urging such a zone since 1971. Today, almost 11 years after the declaration, Thailand and the ASEAN countries still remain firmly committed to the concept. He told the United Nations that the Thai delegation hopes that the establishment of the zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in Southeast Asia would be realized in the foreseeable future.

Meanwhile, the Thai deputy foreign minister regretted that the proposed conference on the Indian Ocean as a zone of peace had been postponed. He supported the early convening of such a meeting in Colombo, Sri Lanka. He also expressed concern about reported use of chemical and biological weapons in several areas of the world, including countries neighboring Thailand.

PRESS VIEWS PAST WORK OF, FUTURE TASKS FOR ASEAN

POST Editorial

[Editorial: "A Force To Be Reckoned With"]

[Text] Since the 1975 communist victories in Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) has been forced to spend much of its time on political matters. More particularly, since the 1979 Vietnamese invasion of Kampuchea, ASEAN members have united in a search for peace. During this time, and still today even, there have been calls for more ASEAN militancy. And militant militarists have demanded formation of an ASEAN defense force, a sort of Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) by another name.

The Indochina problems remain today. But it is refreshing to see an ASEAN foreign ministers' meeting, like the one this week in Singapore, get down to the work that the group was formed to do. ASEAN is a regional bloc, set up to foster cooperation on economic matters and encourage intercourse in culture, sports and the like.

Ironically, it is as strong and as united and as respected as it is today because of the past 7 years in Indochinese history. Vietnam, which used to dismiss ASEAN as an aggressive military pact, has found out that it is no such thing. ASEAN's power, unlike Vietnamese power, grows not out of the barrels of guns. It grows out of responsibility, maturity, continued economic growth and a political awareness now respected by virtually all the world's nations.

Later this week, after their own meeting, the five ASEAN foreign ministers will sit down for discussions with ministers and senior officials from Western nations. ASEAN is going to talk. The United States, Canada, Japan, the European Economic Community and others may not like what they are going to hear, but they are going to listen, listen closely and probably take action. For ASEAN now is a force to be reckoned with on the world scene.

Our country and the other four ASEAN members are becoming impatient with Western and Japanese ways of doing business with us. They continue to exploit our raw materials. They continue to bar our exports or, much more often, make our exports uncompetitive in their countries with unacceptably high tariffs. This is no longer the way we wish to do business, selling off our irreplaceable natural resources in order to survive. It will not be done this way any more.

And the big countries, knowing this, are coming to talk it over with us this week in Singapore.

There is other work for the foreign ministers, of course, and it must not be overlooked. The Kampuchean situation remains the most pressing and the most dangerous for the area. Vietnam remains intransigent, and there is every sign that the Soviet Union will continue backing Hanoi to the hilt in the struggle to form an Indochina federation by whatever name.

The struggle to help the anti-Vietnam Kampuchean forces find a formula to unite in some sort of coalition is the biggest short-term challenge currently facing ASEAN. The foreign ministers must also give thought to the unthinkable: The coalition may never get off the ground. If so, the ministers must form contingency plans to continue resistance to the Vietnamese consolidation of Kampuchea and Laos under their thumbs. Later this month, Indochinese foreign ministers will also be meeting and will once again offer a sham peace to ASEAN and to the world, a peace which accepts the military subjugation and colonisation of Kampuchea. ASEAN's position must again be stated, clearly and concisely.

When they do so, all the world will listen. ASEAN has many achievements to its record. But much more than that, ASEAN has true respect, won without threats or the sounds of deadly gunfire.

NATION REVIEW Editorial

[Editorial: "ASEAN Mustn't Be Overshadowed by Politics"]

[Text] When the Association of Southeast Asia Nations (ASEAN) was founded 15 years ago, few thought it could amount to anything more than a poor emulation of the European Economic Community (EEC). In fact, many predicted ASEAN would just fold up in no time like many other regional groupings in the Third World. However, the five ASEAN countries have managed to hold themselves together and earn world recognition for being a regional entity to be reckoned with. ASEAN has grown under external pressures. But judging from what that has just come out of the ASEAN senior officials' meetings in Singapore, ASEAN has not matured during these years of growth.

Ture, ASEAN was founded without much hope or interest in developing itself into a successful economic community. After 15 years of "economic cooperation" the economies of the ASEAN five are still as competitive with one another as ever. Political considerations remain the impetus to ASEAN existence and growth. ASEAN did have ["did have" in italics] many political successes -- the fact that it has been in existence for 15 years is one. But we do not think ASEAN can go far by simply seeking political successes but ignoring or failing in economic cooperation among its five members.

Unfortunately, this is the very thing the ASEAN foreign ministers meeting, scheduled to begin in Singapore this morning, is prepared to do. The question of forming an anti-Vietnam coalition in Kampuchea is given a high priority in the annual ministerial meeting. The question of holding another ASEAN summit is made to sound as if it were a sacred idea. When it comes to dialogue with its various partners from the first world, ASEAN plans to ask for more aid and plead for other economic concessions.

ASEAN also wants to complain on the protectionism of the developed countries and urge them to open up their markets for ASEAN exports. We doubt, however, that the ASEAN words will carry much weight. So long as the ASEAN economies are so heavily bound in trade with these developed countries, ASEAN is really not in a position to bargain with them. The fact that these developed countries want to continue the dialogue with ASEAN does not necessarily mean that they will listen, much less act upon ASEAN suggestions.

We understand it is momentous that ASEAN plays an active role in finding a political solution to the Kampuchean question. We appreciate the symbolic importance of ASEAN's dialogues with the developed countries. But we also believe that ASEAN must pay more attention to developing economic cooperation among its five members, for the pace of intra-regional economic cooperation has been far too slow and less than satisfactory.

So far, the five ASEAN joint industrial projects approved by the Bali summit in 1976 have not produced much concrete results. And initial reports indicated that the ASEAN foreign ministers meeting in Singapore will make no progress in this area. The level of intra-regional trade remains low at around 25 percent of total ASEAN external trade. A series of tariff cuts slightly benefit ASEAN traders, but the reduction is too small to really liberalize or promote intra-regional trade. In fact, the ASEAN countries do not expect to form a free trade area until the end of this century or beyond.

Sooner or later, a solution to the Kampuchean question will be found. What, then, is ASEAN going to do after the Kampuchean crisis has been resolved? Waiting for another regional crisis and indulge in it? We hope not. ASEAN must solve the problem of the lack of economic cooperation among the five members. Therefore, we think it is time for ASEAN to hold another summit and examine itself. The question to ask is: Why political will is lacking when it comes to economic cooperation?

Only through proving itself as a self-reliant grouping capable of realizing economic cooperation and attaining economic self-sufficiency can ASEAN really reach maturity. Otherwise, friends in the first world will only continue to talk but not listen to ASEAN; foes in Indochina will show no respect at all.

BRIEFS

TRADE DEFICIT IMPROVED -- The Bank of Thailand reports that Thailand suffered only 7.1 billion baht trade deficit during the first 4 months of this year. This represents a sharp decline from 21.8 billion baht during the same period of last year. The bank says that Thailand's international reserves position has also improved. The decline in trade deficit is attributed to a satisfactory increase in the country's exports and the drop in imports. The country's total export value is recorded at 57.6 billion baht, an increase of 13.6 percent over the same period of last year. [Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 3 Jun 82 BK]

NHAN DAN VIEWS SOCIALIST INDUSTRIALIZATION

BK110520 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 24 May 82 pp 3, 4

[Article by Le Xuan Tung: "Socialist Industrialization in the Initial Transition Stage" -- first installment]

[Text] Socialist industrialization is a law which underdeveloped or poorly developed countries must abide by to advance to socialism. The characteristics of socialist industrialization are to transform a country with a primarily backward agriculture into a country having a modern industrial-agricultural structure, to transform manual labor into mechanized labor and to create the material and technical bases of socialism which constitute the heavy engineering industrial capability of transforming agriculture.

The political report of the party Central Committee at the fifth nationwide party congress outlines the initial stage of socialist industrialization along with its characteristics.

The main economic and social tasks of the 1981-85 period and subsequent years of the 1980's are a continuation of the initial stage in the socialist industrialization process of our country which was opened in the wake of the great 1975 spring victory.

The principal scope of socialist industrialization in this stage is to further develop and advance agriculture to large-scale socialist production, combine the development of agriculture with the vigorous acceleration of consumer goods production and build some of the heavy industrial sectors.

In the process of achieving this major scope, we will create a new production force serving as a basis on which to attain the immediate economic and social objectives. At the same time, we will be making the necessary preparations for implementing the major objectives and tasks in the next stage of the socialist industrialization process.

The main characteristic in this stage of socialist industrialization in our country is to concentrate on vigorously developing and advancing agriculture to large-scale socialist production and on this basis to build a rational industrial-agricultural structure.

We know that the end result of socialist industrialization is to create a large-scale socialist production and to establish firmly the system of collective mastery over the economy. In order to do so, we should advance the two fundamental production sectors of society -- agriculture and industry -- to a certain level of modern mechanization. We cannot fulfill this requirement immediately and simultaneously in the initial stage of the transition period. Moreover, the development of heavy industry on a large-scale basis calls for large amounts of capital, equipment, materials and energy which our socialist production system has not been able to provide. At present, agriculture holds the greatest potential in our economy which can serve our vigorous and comprehensive development. We now have within reach all the conditions to accelerate agricultural production vigorously. This does not mean that we can advance our agriculture immediately to modern large-scale production while our heavy industry is still very small. Our agriculture can therefore advance a step further to large-scale socialist production only within a rational industrial-agricultural structure.

It is an objective requirement that we begin our socialist industrialization with agriculture. This requirement stems from the following factors:

1. The latent potentials and the abilities which we now possess in agriculture

Our agriculture is a tropical agriculture of which the products are abundant and diversified. We still have many conditions for intensive cultivation and multicropping and for expanding the cultivated area. We can raise the level of and tap our abundant forest and maritime resources on a large scale. We have a great agricultural workforce which has inherited long-standing production experiences from our forefathers and has been equipped with new scientific and technical knowledge. We have further learned many lessons from our successes and setbacks in this field of production over the past few years. It should be noted further that unlike other production sectors -- especially heavy industry -- agriculture does not call for substantial investment. Moreover, the production results can be developed quickly without over straining the source of investment in society. On the contrary, we can use our vast human labor, which is an important guideline for investment at present.

These latent potentials and abilities are valuable assets which will permit us to step up agricultural production vigorously.

2. The vigorous development of agriculture is the first important condition in the development of other economic sectors, especially industry. It is the primary measure to settle the relationship between consumption and accumulation at the present time when productivity is still low. The political report has therefore stressed: "We should concentrate on developing agriculture vigorously, considering it the first battle front, and we should advance it a step further to large-scale socialist production."

Primarily, we should have a definite source of grain and food products from agriculture in order to be able to divide social labor and develop other sectors of the national economy, especially heavy industry. As Karl Marx said: "The whole agricultural labor force -- essential labor and surplus labor -- of a social component must be sufficiently able to turn out necessary production means for the entire society including for those not engaged in agriculture. Only in this way can we have a major division of agricultural labor and industrial labor as well as the division between agricultural labor producing grain and agricultural labor producing raw materials." [footnote: Karl Marx, Capitalism, Book 3, Brochure 3, Su That Publishing House, 1963, page 35]

There must be an abundant source of agricultural raw materials to develop handicrafts and artisan and light industries in order to meet the people's many demands. When we advance from small-scale production, the greatest capacity for initial accumulation lies in agriculture.

Consequently, the development of many economic sectors and the fulfillment of our people's essential and immediate demands will largely depend on the level of agricultural development. Past experiences have shown that difficulties in our daily life as well as in our economic construction stem mostly from sluggishness and instability in agricultural production.

Without industry, especially heavy industry, we should be profoundly aware of what Lenin said: "We will be eradicated and no longer an independent country." [footnote: Lenin, Complete Works, Book 45, Tien Bo Publishing House, Moscow, 1978, page 334] Lenin further said: "We must proceed from agriculture to build the socialist bases of our economy and to build our industry." [footnote: quote from Stalin's work "Soviet Economic Situation and the Party Policy" -- Complete Works, Book 8, Su That Publishing House, 1964, page 131].

This does not mean that we should belittle heavy industry nor does it mean that we should not develop it to a certain level in this stage. Agriculture and industry will always remain a structure rationally determined for each stage. The development of heavy industry to a given level primarily stems from the internal requirements of agriculture itself. If we want to surge forward to achieve the three agricultural objectives in this present stage -- grain and food products for society, raw materials and agricultural products for industry and consumer and export goods -- it is impossible to maintain our agricultural production on a small scale. We must develop it a step further to large-scale socialist production immediately in this stage.

In order to do so, heavy industry must be brought to bear on agriculture at the very outset. Without effective support from heavy industry, agricultural production will always remain backward on a small scale.

The general results of advancing our agriculture a step further to large-scale socialist production will help our country overcome the food "crisis," create a relatively stable source of raw materials for industry, use social labor at a higher level, divide labor in a relatively more rational manner, establish a structure of agricultural products in line with the requirements of domestic consumption and exports, and secure an initial source of capital accumulation from within our national economy.

In this connection, the vital link in the first stage of concentrating on agricultural development is established. On this basis, our country will be sufficiently able to shift to the next stage of the socialist industrialization process of which the vital link is to develop on a large scale the relatively perfect network of heavy industries. Then, along with the vigorous development of heavy industry and as a result of its effective influence, our agriculture will advance more quickly on the path to large-scale socialist production with the immediate objectives of mechanizing and electrifying production, systematizing irrigation and using chemurgy.

The implementation of the scientific and technological revolution is one of the fundamental duties in the achievement of the aforementioned scopes of the socialist industrialization process. This revolution plays the key role among the three revolutions and must be carried out simultaneously with the revolution in production relations and the ideological and cultural revolution.

We are carrying out socialist industrialization at a time when the world is engaging deeply in the second scientific and technological revolution. Consequently, the industrialization process in our country begins with the scientific and technological revolution. Nevertheless, the scope of our revolution is not similar to that of the revolution being conducted in the economically developed countries. In these countries, science has become a direct production force. The complete mechanization and automation of production is an immediate objective of the scientific and technological revolution in these countries. On the contrary, the fundamental scope of this revolution in our country is to shift from manual labor to mechanized labor. At the same time, we will implement part of the modern science and technology revolution to mechanize and automate completely a certain number of tasks of some given components of the important sectors. These tasks involve the development of the industrialization process, the dissemination of achievements in the "green revolution," the crossbreeding of animals and the implementation of industrial regulations and advanced production methods. To sum up, the socialist industrialization of our coutnry is a process that moves both gradually and by leaps and bounds to achieve all the scopes of the previous scientific and technological revolution and part of the modern scientific and techological revolution. A country that advances from small-scale production cannot move by leaps and bounds to occupy all the peaks of the world scientific and technological revolution. Nevertheless, the peculiarities of the era allow us to surge forward and grasp some of the achievements in this revolution.

In the immediate future, all the scientific and technical activities must be aimed primarily at implementing the primary tasks of developing agriculture vigorously and all other potentials in terms of labor, land and other natural resources of the tropical region in order to advance a step further to large-scale socialist production. The vital problems in agriculture which technology must contribute to resolving are grain and food products for society, raw materials for industry and goods for export.

In this connection, along with the industrial and economic measures, we should apply broadly biological achievements to increase the productivity of crops and animals and to determine seed allocations and crop cultivation patterns suitable to each season and each ecological area.

We should study all sources of water and the system of water conservancy projects to secure sufficient water for agricultural irrigation in a scientific manner. Moreover, we should apply all the advanced technical measures to increase the effectiveness of organic and inorganic fertilizers, build a network of manual, semi-mechanized and mechanized tools, and pay attention to the raional use, protection and improvement of land and ricefields.

In the fields of light and artisan industries and handicrafts, technological activities must be concentrated on resolving the problem of domestic raw materials to produce consumer goods for the people and commodities for export. In the fields of food and drug industries, we should pay proper attention to the processing techniques.

Technology should be directed to serving the development of some sectors of heavy industry such as electricity, coal, oil, engineering, metallurgy, chemurgy and communications and transportation so that these sectors can support effectively and practically agriculture and the consumer and export goods industries.

In advancing from small to large-scale socialist production, especially in the initial stage, we should specifically emphasize applied science since this will be in line with the requirements and conditions of our economy and the standards of our scientific and technical knowledge. While widely applying the scientific and technological innovations to production, management and other aspects of social life, we should also pay proper attention to fundamental science.

We should combine all manual, semi-mechanized and mechanized techniques. At present the manual and semi-mechanized techniques play a very important role. All of these techniques should be combined on large, medium and small scales, with emphasis placed on the medium and small scales in the immediate future. Moreover, we should struggle to apply all innovations of modern technology while optimally exploiting and using our forefathers' traditional knowledge of and experiences in production by reviewing and generalizing them into scientific values. On the one hand, we should attentively train our scientific and technical cadres and workers in a uniform manner in order to have good technicians. On the other hand, we should launch a mass movement to engage actively in improving technical work, devising inventions and applying technological innovations. We should struggle to make scientific and technological plans part and parcel of the economic and social development plan. The end result of the scientific and technological revolution is the broad application of its innovations, which can make profound changes in production, thereby influencing the entire economy, society and man. In this connection, the scientific and technological revolution will become a production or industrial revolution.

[Article by Le Xuan Tung: "Socialist Industrialization in the Initial Transition Stage" -- second and last installment]

[Text] The fundamental duty of socialist industrialization is to not only carry out the scientific and technical revolution but also build the new economic structure.

The scientific and technical revolution and the building of economic structure is correlated organically. These two duties are linked together at every step of development and are aimed at the same goal of socialist industrialization. The scientific and technical revolution can develop vigorously and exert its great influence only in a rational economic structure. Conversely, the formation and mobility of an economic structure depend largely on the scientific and technical progress.

When a country advances from small scale production to socialism, it means that this country move from an agriculture of monocrop cultivation toward building a relatively perfect economic structure as required by large-scale socialist production.

Under given and stable conditions, a rational economic structure should ensure high economic results for the entire national economy. This is an important premise for guaranteeing high economic results for each sector, each locality and each primary production installation.

The rationality of an economic structure can be evaluated according to the following main criteria:

— The ever increasing demands (requirements of production, individual consumption and national defense) of the entire society can be fulfilled.
-- All of the country's resources -- existing material and technical bases of all sectors, labor -- can be exploited and used effectively.
-- The mobility and harmonious functioning of all components in the national economy can be assured all along the advance to large scale socialist production.
-- The ever expanding division of international labor, especially the socialist division of international labor and cooperation, can be guaranteed.

The socialist industrialization process sets forth the task of building the following main economic structures:

-- Socio-economic structure (economic component);
-- Production recycling structure (production, distribution, barter, consumption, production of materials and nonproduction of materials);
-- Sector structure (heavy, light, food and drug industries; agriculture, forestry, fishery, communications and transportation and so forth) and internal structure of sectors;
-- Economic-technical structure (technical standards and scales);
-- Territorial structure (distribution of local and regional production forces);
-- Economic structures at home and abroad.

The building of economic structures constitutes a uniform and simultaneous process from lowest to higher level. Economic life is just like a living body that can not go without this or that organ. Each organ has its own function and all organs help one another to grow together. The entire economy will also grow in the industrialization process.

In the overall economic structure, we should distinguish those components playing the "backbone" or "core" role so that we can concentrate on developing them quickly. These components must be the industrial and agricultural structures. Industry and agriculture are the two most important sectors of the national economy. They provide all the means of production and consumption to society. In the history of mankind, these two sectors in all countries are always combined, although the form and extent of combination differ from one epoch to another. They rely on each other to develop. Our party advocates: "Industry is the foundation of the national economy. It plays the key role in the economy and uses agriculture as a basis on which to develop itself. Priority should be given to developing heavy industry rationally on the basis of developing agriculture and light industry."

In the initial stage, we should strive to develop agriculture, considering agriculture a frontline battle. This is required primarily to resolve the problem of grain and food products for the entire society (per capita grain quota in our country is still low, averaging to about 270 kgr), then to meet the demands for raw materials and of export. The steady development of agriculture will create conditions for other sectors -- including industry -- to develop. In the immediate future, we should struggle for self-sufficiency in food while having a definite amount of grain for raising animals and some necessary reserve. We should pay attention to both rice and secondary food crops, bringing the rates of secondary food crops in the grain allocation to approximately 18-20 percent. Emphasis should be placed on intensive cultivation to increase the productivity and production volume in high-yielding rice areas.

All provinces and districts (except those areas specializing in growing industrial crops and under special circumstances) must balance their own demands for grain through several measures, including domestic barter and export.

The main guideline is to accelerate intensive cultivation and multicropping to increase yields in combination with the expansion of cultivated area. Food and fruit crops must be developed intensively. We should also accelerate the development of short and long-term industrial crops, medicinal plants and fibrous crops -- especially mulberry for silkworms -- to resolve the clothing problem.

Livestock raising should be stepped up to resolve the problems of draft force, fertilizer and food.

In forestry, we should surge forward to meet the ever increasing demands for timber, firelogs and forest products for domestic consumption and export. We should implement the guidelines of "using forest products to develop forestry" and "ensuring cooperation between the central and local governments and between the state and people." The business procedures are to combine agriculture with forestry, to plant and exploit forests, and to process forest products along with producing grain and raising animals.

Maritime products constitute an important source of food supply to the people and a source of commodities for export. Attention should be paid to the relations between catching and raising maritime products, fresh and salt water fish, manual and modern techniques, production and processing, concentrated investment in those areas of developed fishery and scattered investment, and state-owned fishing forces and fishing forces of cooperatives and individual fishermen.

Agriculture can be developed in an industrial-agricultural structure and in close and rational combination with the consumer goods industry and heavy industry.

The requirements of further stabilizing and improving the people's livelihood necessitate the stepping up of the consumer goods industry. The development of the consumer goods industry will allow us to expand the exchange of industrial commodities for agricultural products. Through such an exchange, we can intensify the relations between industry and agriculture and between cities and rural areas; encourage peasants to produce more enthusiastically; and help the state collect and purchase agricultural products. Consumer goods made from agricultural raw materials will enhance the value of agricultural products and particularly so with regard to export goods. The development of consumer goods production will give us an important source of export goods, and more job opportunities for millions of workers who can be employed in various light industrial sectors and especially in the artisan industry.

Besides, the network of light industry and artisan industry and handicrafts, we should mobilize some of the productive forces of heavy industry and national defense industries to increase the production of consumer goods. Besides the forces of state-owned installations and cooperatives, we should encourage private production teams and individuals to produce consumer goods. Attention must be paid to the consumer good production forces in cities and towns, especially Hanoi, Ho Chi Minh City, Haiphong and Danang. The network of consumer goods industries must be rearranged rationally along the lines of dividing labor and cooperation in production, making full use of modern factories' production capacity and developing major cities' advantages. We must urgently get new technical equipment, unify the production chain, create steady and abundant sources of raw materials and amend and improve policies to accelerate consumer goods production.

Agriculture and the consumer goods industry are developing through their correlations with heavy industry. The vigorous growth of agriculture and light industry creates all the favorable conditions for strengthening heavy industry. In the immediate future, we advocate the policy of developing some sectors of heavy industry in order primarly to support agriculture, light industry and export. These sectors involve electricity, coal, fertilizers, chemicals, insecticide, tools, machinery, equipment and communications and transportation.

We should pay attention to in-depth development to use fully the production capacity of all the existing heavy industry installations; by expanding, transforming and unifying the chains of production; and by creating additional sources of energy and raw materials. Then depending on our capability, we will establish targets for some of these heavy industry installations (such as electricity, coal, oil and engineering...) in order to meet the urgent economic requirements. We must export to import spare parts and raw and other materials necessary to the normal operation of factories. Moreover, we must actively explore resources, conduct research and planning, and establish the infrastructures for building future, heavy industry projects -- especially engineering and metallurgy -- on a large scale.

We now have some shortcomings in the network of communications and transportation. We should reorganize the network, increase transport facilities, improve management, pay more attention to waterways transport and make full use of rudimentary facilities. Particular attention should be paid to the transportation of export and import goods, from north to south and in cities and major industrial complexes.

We should combine the building of the central economy closely with the development of local economies in a unified structure of the national economy.

In advancing from small to large scale socialist production, we should strive to develop the local economies and care for the locally administered economic installations.

In order to give local authorities more independence in production and business so that they can assure good livelihood for the people within their jurisdication, we must accelerate the classification of local managerial control over planning, budget, import, export, labor and cadres. The local authorities should be entrusted with sufficient power, responsibility and facilities. The relationship between central and local governments is bilateral. The central and local governments are bound together by benefits and duties. We should determine clearly the responsibility of central and local governments as well as the duty of local governments to make contributions to the central government. We should stipulate clearly the scope within which local governments may act independently to make decisions concerning production, distribution and circulation plans in accordance with the state systems and policies. The local governments may use the portions of products turned out beyond the plan norms and the obligatory contribution norms. We should accept as legitimate the small differences in the distribution of national revenues among localities depending on the results of their production and business.

We should not close and confine the local economies within bounds. On the basis of national planning and programming we should divide specialized labor between the central and local governments and among localities, expand the relations of product exchange among localities throughout the country and accelerate the export and import activities of localities.

While striving to develop the local economies, we should absolutely not belittle the various unified economic-technical sectors placed under direct central managerial control. These sectors play an extremely important role in creating the material and technical bases for modern large-scale production. They provide the means of production and consumption to the national economy and decide the technical progress and labor productivity of society.

The urgent problem which we face now and in the immediate future is to determine correctly the structures of economic-technical sectors and the economic structures for each province and each district.

At the same time, we should link the central economy to the local economies within a national structure as well as the structure of each locality. We should develop vigorously the relations in the division of labor and cooperation between the centrally and locally administered economic installations. We should avoid the tendency of excessive centralism and bureaucratic restriction which restrain local initiative. We should also avoid the tendencies of separatism, departmentalism, sectarianism and localism which weaken the unified centralism of central government. We should eliminate all the problems interfering with and troubling the relations between the central and local economies. By fulfilling the aforementioned tasks well, we will create conditions for the central and local economies to develop together and to promote each other in advancing the national economy steadily.

It is an objective requirement of socialist industrialization to combine the national economic development with the expansion of international division of labor and cooperation.

In the era of modern industry and scientific and technological revolution, the economic relations among countries are of global significance. As for our country, which is advancing from small scale production to socialism at a time when the world socialist economic system has already appeared, the expansion of international economic relations is all the more essential.

We cooperate with the Soviet Union comprehensively, get effective Soviet support for national construction and, at the same time, expand the relations of cooperation with other fraternal socialist countries. The establishment of relations of cooperation and mutual assistance among the three Indochinese countries is a new task which opens many good prospects for us in the future. We also advocate the policy of expanding the economic relations with all the developing and capitalist countries on the principled basis of firmly maintaining independence, sovereignty and mutual benefits.

The international economic relations of our country are diversified and multifaceted, such as trade, importation of inventions, cooperation in scientific and technical research, coordination of economic plans, cooperation in production, technical aid, extension of credits and labor cooperation. Among these relations, trade and cooperation in production hold an important position.

We are shifting from the stage of mainly receiving aid to the stage of establishing business relations of economic accountability with other countries, from the position of unilaterally receiving aid to the position of bilateral relations of cooperation. In this connection, we must fulfill several tasks. The primary and most important task is to accelerate production in order to be able to make more imports. Wherever and whenever possible, all people, households, production units, localities and sectors must produce export commodities or contribute to supporting exports. We should create every possible condition for getting ever more export goods. We must increase exports in order to import more and narrow the gap between exports and imports. Generally speaking, whoever uses imported goods must export commodities of equivalent value. In this regard, we must also oppose subsidization.

Our great export potentials lie in the field of agricultural production. We must also pay attention to the export potentials of the artisan industry and handicrafts and both light and heavy industries, and to the potentials of onsite exports. The exporting forces involve both central and local economies. The role of local economies in export is ever increasing. We should therefore increase the material and technical bases of exports and intensify the tasks of leading, guiding and organizing exports. Particularly, we must improve and supplement the policies on exports. The principle to be observed firmly is to ensure the system of state monopoly in trade while developing the dynamism and initiative of localities, sectors and primary production units in the field of exports.

Socialist industrialization is a long and hard undertaking. The most difficult task in this process lies in the initial stage because we have to fulfill simultaneously the two heavy and urgent duties of satisfying the people's demands for consumption and the need to accumulate capital for industrialization. This problem is all the more difficult in our country because we just finished a long war and we are now facing the multifaceted war of sabotage waged by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists. Many tasks have arisen in our attempt to resolve this problem. The fifth party congress has pointed out the fundamental solutions of which the most noteworthy is the selection of strategic targets in the initial stage. They also include the correct policies and structures and uniform measures, the development of the general strength of collective mastery both materially and morally, the strength of the three revolutions and the entire system of proletarian dictatorship and the strength of the international division of labor and cooperation which will change the present situation of our national economy and advance our country.

NATIONAL RICE PRODUCTION STATISTICS REPORTED

[Text] According to the General Statistics Department, the northern provinces and municipalities have been reaping the 5th-month spring rice crop. As of 5 June, a total of 465,000 hectares had been harvested, accounting for 44 percent of the rice area, as compared with 636,000 hectares for the same time last year.

The weather has been favorable for the harvest. Nevertheless, the north has only been able to harvest the rice crop at an average rate of 27,000 hectares a day.

Binh Tri Thien Province has almost finished the harvest, having completed work on 95.6 percent of its rice area. Other provinces that have been reaping at a fairly rapid rate are Nghe Tinh, which has completed work on 70.3 percent of its rice area; Bac Thai, 61.3 percent; Haiphong, 58.5 percent; Vinh Phu, 56.1 percent; and Thanh Hoa, 54.3 percent. Meanwhile, Thai Binh, Hai Hung, Ha Son Binh and Ha Nam Ninh Provinces have finished reaping only on 12-14 percent of their respective rice areas.

Along with reaping the rice crop, all localities have been actively bringing in corn, sweet potatoes, beans and peanuts. Many localities are reporting corn and sweet potato yields that are higher than last year.

The southern provinces and municipalities, meanwhile, have planted summer-fall rice on 436,000 hectares, fulfilling 65.8 percent of the area plan, with the provinces from Thuan Hai southward accounting for 360,000 hectares. An Giang Province has overfulfilled its summer-fall rice area plan by 5.8 percent while Nghia Binh province has fulfilled only 8.5 percent of its plan. Other provinces have achieved over 50 percent of their area plans.

The summer-fall rice crop in the south has grown very well. The southern provinces and municipalities are concentrating their efforts on finishing the planting of the summer-fall rice crop on the remaining area before shifting their attention to the 10th-month crop. Meanwhile, the south has plowed a total of 508,000 hectares of land for planting 10th-month rice. Of this figure, 364,000 hectares have already been planted.

MOKHTAR RETURNS FROM, COMMENTS ON FOREIGN TOUR

[Text] Jakarta, 14 Jun (ANTARA) -- Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja commented Sunday that Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi might have cancelled his planned visit to Jakarta because of "lack of time" on his part. Mokhtar made the comment on arrival at Halim Airport Sunday afternoon from New York where he went to attend the UN General Assembly session on disarmament straight from a series of visits to Europe and Africa.

Sakurauchi was originally scheduled to arrive in Jakarta Sunday (June 13) for a visit until Wednesday (June 16). However Tokyo suddenly cancelled the visit Saturday. The cancellation was announced by the Jakarta Embassy [as received] in Jakarta. The visit, Mokhtar said, had actually been planned since a month ago and at first it was planned to take place from June 20 to 23. At the end of last month the dates were changed to June 13-16 responding to the same time both in Tokyo and Jakarta. [sentence as received] He regretted that as it was, the unilateral announcement of the cancellation could give the impression as if Indonesia was considered incapable of arranging well for a meeting of foreign ministers.

He added, however, that Tokyo's manner of announcing the cancellation need not be magnified. He also said he did not know when the Jakarta [as received] foreign minister would be visiting Indonesia in the future.

Questioned on the UN disarmament session, Mokhtar was of the view that the important thing as present is for every nation to state its stance on the issue, not leaving it to the big powers alone. The nuclear arms race has a direct impact on the smaller countries which in general are in the phase of development, he said. Nuclear weapons were being used by conflicting developing countries so that as a result these countries were distracted from their development tasks, he added.

Asked on his visit to the Vatican where he met with Pope John Paul II, Mokhtar reported the head of the Catholic church fully understood the Indonesian Government's policy of Indonesianizing Catholic priests and missionaries in Indonesia. In the past, the Vatican had considered the Indonesianization process too drastic. Mokhtar said he had met the pontiff to give explanations on the matter. There are 600 Catholic foreign workers in Indonesia today. The foreign minister explained: They are being given opportunities to chose to become Indonesian citizens and this process of becoming citizens will take time.

He mediate in the East Timor issue between Indonesian and Portugal. [sentence as received]

Of his meeting with the pontiff, he stressed: We didn't discuss East Timor and Indonesia does not wish to involve the pontiff in political affairs.

After the Vatican, Foreign Minister Mokhtar had visited the Western African countries of Senegal, Gabon, the Ivory Coast and Gambia, before going to New York. He described his tour of these countries as "opening the way" for closer diplomatic ties and technical and economic cooperation between Indonesia and these countries.

As a first step toward these closer ties, the Indonesian Government had appointed Taufik Sudargo as Indonesia's first ambassador to Senegal. From his post in Senegal's capital, Dakkar, we will also represent Indonesia in diplomatic relations with Gabon, Ivory Coast and Gambia.

ASEAN MINISTERS WELCOME UN REPRESENTATIVE

[Text] Singapore, 14 Jun (AFP) -- United Nations Secretary General Perez de Cuellar has sent his special representative Rafeuddin Ahmad to talk to ASEAN foreign ministers as they meet here today for the 15th annual conference.

The presence of Mr. Ahmad was welcomed by Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja and Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie as a sign of the importance attached by the secretary general to the five-nation association.

Pointing out that this was the first time that a U.N. envoy was present, Dr. Mokhtar said: "It is significant that the secretary general has sent his representative here. It emphasizes that despite other flash-points such as the Malvinas (Falklands) crisis and the Lebanon crisis, the U.N. has not forgotten the Cambodian question."

Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie said: "His presence here is recognition that ASEAN deserves attention in its efforts to find a solution to the Cambodian problem."

Mr Ahmad recently visited all ASEAN countries and Hanoi in the United Nations' continuing efforts to seek a solution to the Cambodian problem.

JAPANESE, NEW ZEALAND FOREIGN MINISTERS ARRIVE

[Text] The Japanese foreign minister, Mr Yoshio Sakurauchi, has arrived in Singapore for the ASEAN post-ministerial conference. He was met at the airport by the parliamentary secretary, trade and industry and social affairs, Mr Sidek Saniff. Mr Sakurauchi is heading a 17-member delegation.

A Japanese Embassy official told reporters that Mr Sakurauchi is expected to express Japan's support for ASEAN as an economically and politically stabilizing factor in the region. Mr Sakurauchi is also expected to brief ASEAN ministers on the outcome of the Versailles economic summit. He would also explain China's views on international and regional matters, including the Kampuchean issue, as expressed by Premier Zhao Ziyang in his discussions with Japanese leaders during his recent visit to Japan.

Another representative of ASEAN's dialogue partners in the post-ministerial conference has also arrived in Singapore. He is the New Zealand Foreign Minister, Mr Warren Cooper, who is heading a seven-member delegation. Mr Cooper was received by the parliamentary secretary, trade and industry, Mr Chan Chee Seng.

At a news conference, Mr Cooper expressed his country's support for ASEAN's initiatives on the Kampuchean issue. He also said that New Zealand was prepared to give technical advice on agriculture and other development projects to the ASEAN countries.

MINISTERS HOLD CLOSED SESSION, MEET UN OFFICIAL

[By K.S.C. Pillai]

[Text] Singapore, 15 Jun (AFP) -- The Cambodian issue took top priority in two hours of talks here today between foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and United Nations special representative, Raffeudin Ahmad.

Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan told newsmen after the meeting that the ASEAN foreign ministers would have another session with Mr. Ahmad tomorrow.

Mr Dhanabalan, who is conference chairman and official spokesman, said the talks centered on what further steps could be taken to implement the world body's declarations and decisions on Cambodia. These include a call for the withdrawal of all foreign forces, referring to an estimated 130,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia, and the holding of free elections.

Mr Dhanabalan said they brought themselves up to date on the issue since the UN representative remains "in continuous touch" with all the parties concerned, apparently referring to Vietnam.

Asked whether any new initiative had emerged, or was likely to emerge, from the talks with Mr Ahmad, Mr Dhanabalan said: "I don't see any need for us to come out with a new initiative just because Vietnam has not responded to the solution that we have outlined in the form of various U.N. resolutions. It is a good solution. ASEAN can afford to wait for a long time to pass before Vietnam realizes that it is the best way out for it to solve the Cambodian problem in a manner that will secure its own interests."

He also implicitly acknowledged that there was no new development on the formation of a coalition government of the three anti-Vietnamese factions, saying he was not aware of any approach the leader of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), Son Sann. [sentence as received]

Mr Son Sann was earlier reported to have accepted the conditions set by the Khmer Rouge, which represents Cambodia at the United Nations in the name of Democratic Kampuchea, and is the strongest faction in the field.

Mr Dhanabalan said the three factions, which also include the Moulinaka movement of former Head of State, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, were still discussing matters. "I am still optimistic that they will come together, put aside their differences and unite to form a front to resist Vietnamese occupation forces," he said. He said there was no deadline for them to reach an agreement, "but the sooner the better".

Mr Dhanabalan said he has had no direct communication from Vietnam's Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, who has reportedly shown interest in visiting Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and Philippines. But he said "Anything is possible" and told newsmen to check with him again later for any development.

Mr Thach has a standing invitation to visit Singapore extended two years ago, but has not so far told the Foreign Ministry that he would like to come.

Both the Indonesian and Malaysian foreign ministers have said they had had word from Mr Thach that he would like to visit these countries next month, and no dates have been fixed.

Mr Dhanabalan, who chaired this morning's closed door session of the foreign ministers' conference, said they approved the reports of the various ASEAN committees: trade and tourism, industry, minerals and energy, food agriculture and forestry, transportation and communications and finance and banking.

The foreign ministers also approved the appointment of Mr Chan Kai Yau of Singapore as the new Secretary-General of the Jakarta-based ASEAN Secretariat. Mr Chan, whose term will run for two years, will take over on July 1.

During the morning session, the ministers approved an enlarged ASEAN Secretariat budget for the current year amounting to U.S. $1.2 million.

They also decided to appoint five economic experts, one from each member country, to the Secretariat to strengthen implementation of various economic programmes.

Mr. Dhanabalan confirmed that Belgian Foreign Minister Leo Tindemans will head the European Economic Community (EEC) delegation for the post-conference talks scheduled for Friday.

Clarifying conflicting reports in the last 24 hours, the foreign minister said Mr. Tindemans, chairman of the EEC Council of Ministers, had originally told him it might be difficult for him to come because of his commitments in Europe, but following a cabled appeal from Mr. Dhanabalan he decided to come.

The consensus in ASEAN was that talks with the EEC should not be downgraded to a lower level representation.

The foreign ministers conclude their discussions tomorrow and will issue a joint communique. They will also give a joint press conference in the evening.

On Thursday and Friday, they will have talks with ASEAN's dialogue partners -- the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Japan and the EEC.

DHANABALAN INTERVIEWED ON ASEAN MEETING

BK151258 Singapore THE STRAITS TIMES in English 14 Jun 82 p 12

[Interview on the eve of conference with Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan by Cheong Yip Seng and Lee Kim Chew]

[Text] Q. What are the pressing issues you expect will arise in the ASEAN ministerial meeting?

A. This is the annual meeting of the enterprise, so we will consider the annual report. We will review all the ASEAN activities for the year and make our comments, where we think we can do more, where we think we are off-track. So this is the AGM (Annual General Meeting). Then, of course, we will talk about some issues in detail.

On the political front, for ASEAN in the immediate term, there is really nothing new. We have already formulated our common position on Cambodia, what our attitude is, how we hope to seek the solution, what we see as the elements of the solution.

These have all been set out in past meetings and subsequently incorporated in the UN resolutions as well as the international conference on Kampuchea. So in that sense there is going to be nothing new, as far as I can see, that is going to be said on Cambodia.

The framework is already there. We will discuss, and I am sure that we will agree to continue the present course of action. We have already clearly indicated to the Vietnamese what we see as the solution.

It is a solution that takes into account the interests of all the parties. In order to bring the Vietnamese to the conference table to discuss the solution, we will continue to maintain diplomatic, political and economic pressure on them.

And I think the ASEAN ministers will discuss how we can best maintain these pressures on Vietnam. So I don't think there's going to be anything new in that sense. It will be just a reiteration of past policies.

Q. What issues do you expect will arise in talks with the dialogue countries?

A. We will explain to them again our position (on Cambodia). Although we are having the dialogue with the same countries, there are new personalities involved.

The European Economic Community (EEC) will be represented by Mr Leo Tindemans from Belgium, Mr Warren Cooper, the New Zealand foreign minister, Mr Yoshio Sakurauchi, the Japanese foreign minister, and from the U.S., we have the Deputy Secretary of State Mr Walter Stoessel.

So it will be useful to repeat to them some of the arguments that we have used in the past to explain why ASEAN is adopting this stand we are taking on the Cambodian problem.

We will also have general discussions with them and try to assess what their attitudes and views are to this region, how important they consider the region to be in their total national policies. We will try to assess how they consider this region in the total scheme of things.

We will also discuss with them economic matters, trends in the developed countries, problems that are likely to be faced by us. In the individual meetings we will review the various projects that are going on.

There will also be some developments which give cause for concern. In the case of the U.S., there is concern over the U.S. policy of helping the Caribbean countries by giving them a special position in their trade with the U.S.

This will mean that it will affect some of the ASEAN countries, so they want to bring up these matters. These are the kinds of things that will be discussed in the two meetings.

On the political front, obviously we cannot avoid discussing the latest developments in the west Asian region, the Israeli attack on Lebanon, the Iran-Iraq war and what kind of problems these developments will pose for the future of that area, which is a major oil source.

Q. Do you think these will be discussed at some length given their gravity?

A. Yes, in view of the fact that these are important as well as current, I am sure that these will be items that will be touched on.

I think one other topic will be U.S.-China relations. In the last meeting that we had in Manila, it was an important subject because that was just the time when the U.S. announced that it was prepared to supply arms to China.

We probably want to get an update from the U.S. on the entire U.S.-China relations because that has implications for us in this part of the world.

Q. If we could go back to (the topic of) Cambodia... It will feature prominently in the discussions at the ASEAN level and in the dialogue. But there seems to be no sign of arriving at an early and comprehensive solution to the problem.

The progress towards an anti-Vietnamese Khmer coalition also appears to have stalled. China says she won't interfere on behalf of ASEAN with the Khmer Rouge. Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila on his return to Thailand from China expressed disappointment with the trip. What moves, if any, can ASEAN make on this whole question?

A. This is the question that comes up at every ASEAN meeting: What new moves? There seems to be no movement towards a solution; and what is ASEAN going to do?

First of all in my own mind, it's quite clear that this problem has no short-run solutions.

It's going to take a long time before a solution emerges and after having sketched out the shape of a solution, we just have to continue the policy of making sure that Vietnam, one, does not consolidate its position in Cambodia; two, does not enjoy the fruits of its occupation in Cambodia; three, that the world does not accept as a fait accompli what Vietnam has done in Cambodia; and four, that the world continues to follow a policy that will make it clear to Vietnam that it will continue to pay a heavy price for what it is doing.

These are things that we have already set out before so we will continue the policy.

And the coalition government was just meant to be one method of increasing the pressure on Vietnam. The fundamentals have not changed, that Vietnam has violated a serious principle of international law and relations and that it must pay a price for it, and the world must not accept what Vietnam has done.

Q. Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has said he is preparing to visit Burma, Singapore and the Philippines next month and Indonesia later this year. Can you confirm if this is so?

Is there any significance to be attached to the timing of this visit, especially with the summit of the non-aligned nations in September and the UN General Assembly later this year? Is there any prospect that he will bring fresh ideas on resolving the Cambodian question?

A. First of all, there is a standing invitation which was issued about one or two years ago. That stands. As far as I am concerned, I have not heard anything of him coming to Singapore and my colleagues also tell me they have not heard anything on this.

So there's no point talking about what he's likely to discuss when he comes. If he wants to come, he has got to tell me that he wants to come. I read in the papers and I hear from other people that he's coming. As far as I am concerned, I don't take cognisance of that.

Q. Dr Mahathir had hinted that Khmer Rouge intransigence on the proposed coalition could cause Malaysia to withdraw support from Democratic Kampuchea (DK).

Under the circumstances, how do you see ASEAN sustaining its past efforts to keep the DK seat in the UN especially if the Khmer Rouge continue withholding agreement for the establishment of a coalition government with the noncommunists?

A. Now, the support for the DK in the UN is to indicate clearly to Vietnam that its action is not acceptable, that its action of going into a country and overthrowing its government is unacceptable in international relations.

That is the foundation of the policy that the DK be seated in the UN. Coalition government or no, that policy has not changed.

As far as Dr Mahathir's statement is concerned, as was explained to us, this was to indicate to the Khmer Rouge that they cannot take ASEAN support for granted, and it is not with any other aim.

It's just a clear warning. So, as far as support for the DK in the UN is concerned, we will continue to support it. We are trying to persuade the Khmer Rouge to see that the whole struggle will be that much easier, the pressures on Vietnam that much greater if a front of all the patriotic forces can be formed.

Q. The Cambodian problem appears to have been overshadowed by the trouble spots elsewhere around the world. How do you think these developments will affect the attempts to sustain interest in the Cambodian question abroad and to support the ASEAN position internationally?

A. Well, these things happen all the time. Today's front page news becomes tomorrow's inside page or back page news. A classic example is the Falklands dispute.

Up to last week, every move in Falklands was front page news. Now it is Lebanon. Today, I look at the setback in Port Stanley. It's not front page anymore. So that happens all the time.

As far as public attention and the media is concerned, our job in ASEAN is to make sure that in the minds of the policy-makers and the decision-makers, Cambodia is not pushed into the background as a matter that does not require attention, or that things have changed and that they can follow a different policy.

So we will, in the light of every new international development, have to make sure that the decision-makers and policy-makers maintain the line on Cambodia. This is what ASEAN will do so that the Cambodian problem does not become forgotten in the minds of these people.

It may not of course make front page, or even the back page but it is to make sure that the pressures continue to be maintained, that we continue to pursue a policy that will convince Vietnam that it is not going to get away with it.

Every new problem of course makes it that much more imperative why we have to show the world that we continue to act.

Q. Since the establishment of the ad hoc committee of the International Conference on Kampuchea (ICK), what progress has it made in your view, and what are the prospects of progress through the ICK for a comprehensive solution on the Cambodian question?

A. Mr Willibald Pahr (President of the ICK) has made his visits to ASEAN, China, and I think he will be going to Vietnam sometime later. Obviously, until Vietnam is prepared to come to the conference table, this ad hoc committee will not be able to proceed very far.

But what the committee can do is to keep consulting all the parties involved. The machinery, the institution is available now for Vietnam to use on the day that it wants to find a way out of its dilemma.

It's there and available, to be kept ticking. It will continue consultations, exchange views, keep tabs on the thinking of the parties involved and make itself available. That's the way I look at it.

Q. There have been suggestions that it is about time to have another ASEAN summit. Although summitry is in the vogue, are there in your view sufficient crucial matters in which a consensus is near for a successful summit to take place?

If it is premature to comment, what would be the view of ASEAN ministers on the prospects of convening a summit in the immediate future?

A. We have had two summits so far, in Bali and in Kuala Lumpur. We'll have to see, whoever makes the proposal for a summit meeting, what are the actual subjects we want to discuss.

I think ASEAN leaders have an understanding that we are not just going to have a summit meeting just for its own sake. There will be a summit meeting when a particular issue requires attention of the heads of governments.

I can't see anything new that has happened that will require an immediate summit meeting, but we will have to see what the agenda is first. Everybody takes the same view that there must be a specific agenda, and the agenda must be important enough for the leaders to want to meet.

On Economic Cooperation

Q. In your assessment, how much progress has ASEAN made in the field of economic cooperation?

A. Economic cooperation can probably be divided into two types. One is those projects and schemes which I can classify as projects of integration.

The other are projects that help each ASEAN country to make its own national domestic economic policy more effective.

Integration projects will be things like movement towards a free trade area, preferential tariff agreements, ASEAN projects, complementation agreements and so on.

On integration, I would say that movement has been slow but I am a realistic man and I do not expect this part of ASEAN cooperation to move rapidly for a long time to come.

I have constantly repeated the point that we must not look to the European Economic Community (EEC) as a model. There is a tendency to look at the EEC as a model, measure ourselves against that model and say that we are extremely slow and ineffective in economic cooperation.

There are many reasons why the European Community moved in the way it did. Those reasons don't apply here. Those imperatives that caused them to move in that direction do not apply here and many of the conditions that existed in Europe do not exist in ASEAN.

So I have never looked upon the EEC as a model and come to the conclusion that we have failed. It's going to be a slow process.

It's the second type of projects where there's a lot that has been done and that can be done...ASEAN scheme that improve infrastructure, transport, communications not only within one country but on an ASEAN-wide basis.

These are all noncompetitive in nature but they help each ASEAN country to upgrade its infrastructure and thereby implement its own national policy more effectively, projects like submarine cables, shipping, development of ports and harbours, how we can work together to exchange and pool our resources and know-how.

These are the kinds of things that help each individual country to have a more effective national economic policy. The greatest contribution of ASEAN in economic development, which I will touch on in my speech (at the meeting) is that it has enabled each ASEAN country to get more out of its own national policy.

It has created an atmosphere of stability in the region and therefore confidence on the part of international investors as well as international buyers.

For example, ASEAN is a major producer of very important raw materials and if we had in the region turmoil or conflict, then the world which needs these raw materials will say, "Look, let's start thinking of other sources which can be more stable, more steady."

But the fact that we are stable, the fact that there's a willingness to cooperate and maintain good relations (among ourselves) means that they look upon this area as a safe and stable source for their raw materials. This gives ASEAN countries that much of an edge in the international market.

Q. In the medium term, which areas do you think ASEAN needs to look at more closely and with greater urgency if we are to make even greater progress in regional economic cooperation, especially when there is so much talk of recession, growing unemployment in the West and various other threats to the world economy?

A. Well, the greatest threat is the rise of various forms of protectionism and here ASEAN will be able to act together as we had in the past. We exchange views, for example, in the negotiations on the various textile agreements.

Although these are bilateral negotiations, we pool our knowledge so that our negotiating positions can be stronger. There will be instances where we can act together, as we did in the case of ICAP, as we did in negotiating an extension of the generalised system of preferences.

(Editor's note: ICAP is the acronym for Australia's Protectionist Aviation Policy.)

These are instances where we can act together and I think we will be most effective in the coming years in fighting the rising trend of protectionism. This is the biggest cloud looming on the horizon.

Q. What does ASEAN expect from the session with the dialogue countries -- the U.S., Japan, EEC, Canada, Australia and New Zealand? Many of these countries claim, at least in their public statements, special relationship with ASEAN. How far do you expect the ministers to emphasise these declarations, especially at this time of protectionist tendencies around and world economic problems engaging the attention of everyone? Do you see them reciprocating with actual deeds, if not now at least in the medium term?

A. In the individual dialogue meetings, how we can move economic and non-economic projects along will be a big part of the discussions. I think we are realistic enough not to expect them to give us special treatment on trade matters, in other words, give us special access to their markets.

But we will have to make sure that our own position is not eroded by them giving special access to others. And of course we want to make sure that there is no overall movement towards protectionism, which will affect all of us.

When they formulate policies, they will have to take our concerns into account. It is not just exchanging views. Exchanging views must ultimately result in policies and attitudes which will not be damaging to us. So economic matters will be a major part of the discussions.

AFP REPORTS ON ASEAN MINISTERS' JOINT COMMUNIQUE

[Text] Singapore, 16 Jun (AFP) -- ASEAN today called on Vietnam to joint the international community in its efforts to find a negotiated settlement of the three-year old Kampuchean problem.

A joint communique issued at the end of the 3-day conference of the foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations stressed the global nature of the Kampuchean issue.

It said that "a lasting and peaceful settlement of the problem could only be found through negotiations on the basis of the declaration and resolution of the international conference on Kampuchea" held in New York last July.

The foreign ministers of Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand urged Vietnam "as party to the conflict, to join the rest of the international community in this process."

Hanoi had repeatedly rejected the UN resolutions calling for the withdrawal of its estimated 180,000 troops from Kampuchea as "illegal and unacceptable."

The renewed ASEAN call comes on the eve of the expected visit of Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach to Malaysia, Singapore and Indonesia, possibly next month.

The foreign ministers rejected attempts to give legitimacy to the Hanoi-backed Heng Samrin regime in Phnom Penh, and reaffirmed their continued recognition of Democratic Kampuchea, the regime ousted by Hanoi more than 3 years ago. They also reiterated their support for the representation of the Democratic Kampuchean (Khmer Rouge) regime at the United Nations.

Implicitly conceding the lack of progress towards a political solution in Kampuchea, the foreign ministers noted the presence during their meeting of United Nations special representative Raffeuddin Ahmad.

Mr Ahmad, who had 2 days of discussions with the foreign ministers, had earlier visited Vietnam, Laos, China and Japan in the world body's search for a comprehensive political settlement in Kampuchea.

After a review of the intense efforts to bring about a coalition government of the three anti-Vietnamese Khmer factions, the ministers recognised that such a coalition would help early implementation of UN resolutions.

Though the coalition is to be formed within the framework of the ASEAN-initiated Singapore declaration agreed to by leaders of the three factions, the ministers stressed that it was ultimately for the Kampuchean people to decide on their future government.

Talks between the three factions -- the Khmer Rouge, the Khmer People's National Liberation Front led by former Premier Son Sann, and the Moulinaka of Prince Sihanouk -- remain stalled because of acute differences on the sharing of power. The Khmer Rouge, which is the major resistance group, insists in its dominance of the coalition, a position which Mr Son Sann, who was offered the premiership, has refused to concede.

The ministers noted "with concern" the continued influx of Vietnamese refugees in substantial numbers for whom ASEAN countries are providing shelter and transit facilities.

They emphasised that the provision of first-asylum facilities would depend on resettlement in third countries to ensure that ASEAN nations are not faced with a residual problem.

Stressing that the problem of Vietnamese refugees should be tackled at its source, they called on Vietnam to prevent further illegal departures.

On land refugees seeking refuge in Thailand from Kampuchea, the ASEAN five called for continued international relief assistance. They also gave full support to Bangkok's programme for voluntary repatriation of Kampuchean refugees, a move denounced by Hanoi and the Heng Samrin regime.

The ministers cashiered United Nations and other relief agencies for providing aid to the Heng Samrin regime which they claim has been used for developmental and infrastructural purposes, and called for a more effective monitoring of the aid distribution.

Linking the Vietnamese thrust into Kampuchea with the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, the ASEAN ministers called for the withdrawal of all foreign forces from that country.

On other international issues, the ministers again condemned Israel's aggression against Lebanon, which they had denounced in a joint statement issued here on the eve of the meeting.

Referring to economic problems, which took up one-half of the 15-page communique, the ministers expressed concern over the worsening international economic situation which shows no prospect of immediate recovery.

Registering their "deep disappointment" over the impasse in the North-South dialogue, the ministers urged developed countries to exercise "political will to immediately launch the global negotiations in order to expedite international economic recovery and the establishment of the new international economic order."

The ministers viewed with dismay the continuing trend towards protectionism and called for the practice of free trade in the world market.

The economy of the five ASEAN countries is heavily dependent on the export of primary and manufactured goods.

The ministers welcomed the Philippine's offer to host the headquarters of the common fund which is to finance the various commodity agreements.

They noted with satisfaction that the ASEAN member nations had stepped up their cooperation which had resulted in greater intra-ASEAN trade and industrial complementation projects. The number of items under the ASEAN preferential trading arrangement has increased to 8,563 with plans to add about 1,000 items annually.

Discussing energy problems, the ministers welcomed the moves towards finding alternative sources of energy and energy conservation. In this context they welcomed the decision to establish a coal information centre in Thailand.

Touching on ASEAN's dialogue with third countries, the ministers said market access has "not been up to expectations" though progress in most areas has been satisfactory.

They called on dialogue countries to extend more meaningful cooperation particularly in the following agreed sectors: market access, shipping, energy, transfer of technology, and commodities and international economic issues.

These points will be stressed by the ministers during their talks tomorrow and Friday with their counterparts from the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Japan and the European Economic Community.

ASEAN's expanded contact with Third World organisations such as the Gulf Cooperation Council, the South Pacific Forum and the Andean Pact was welcomed.

They agreed to examine Malaysia's proposal to revamp the free enterprise system.

The ministers announced the appointment of 52-year-old Chan Kai Yau of Singapore as the new Secretary General of the Jakarta-based ASEAN Secretariat.

The next ASEAN foreign ministers meeting will be held in Bangkok in June 1983.

VRPR DENOUNCES TRIAL OF PUSAN ARSONISTS

SK160341 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korea to South Korea 1000 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] On 14 June, the Chon Tu-hwan ring held an opening session for the trial for 16 persons, including Kim Hyon-chang and Father Choe Ki-sik, who were illegally arrested and indicted on charges of involvement in the arson at the American Cultural Center in Pusan.

In the midst of a tight police cordon placed around the court from early in the morning, and with the roads blocked by a large number of policemen, the fascist military Chon Tu-hwan group read the indictment according to a scenario it had written.

From the beginning of the opening session of the trial, the prosecutor's office made various attempts to prove that those involved in the arson at the American Cultural Center are pro-communist and that they have tried to overthrow the government.

This game of trial by the Chon Tu-hwan group is an intolerable criminal act to obliterate the people's aspirations for independence and the anti-U.S. and antigovernment struggle by brutally punishing the students and religionists who joined in the righteous anti-U.S. and patriotic struggle on charges of violating the national security laws.

As you may know, the 18 March arson at the American Cultural Center in Pusan was an explosion of our people's frustration and anger toward the U.S. aggressors. The students' acts of disseminating leaflets urging the United States to leave this country and give up its attempts to enslave South Korea and of setting fire to the American Cultural Center in Pusan -- a U.S. institute to instill American thoughts and culture into South Korea -- were just and patriotic deeds which represented the will and aspirations of the masses of all strata.

The history of the illegal and forcible occupation of South Korea for 37 years by the U.S. imperialists clearly shows that, contrary to their claims of being friends and aid-givers to the Korean people, they are plunderers, aggressors and the declared enemy of our people.

It is the United States which ruthlessly trampled upon our people's human rights and blocked our nation's social democratization and independent and peaceful reunification. It is also the United States which has brought all kinds of misery, pain and calamities to our people.

If the United States has ever protected and helped somebody, it was the facist ruling systems and fascist dictators over successive generations, which it protected and backed by bayonets to maintain its colonial rule in South Korea.

As is well known, it was the United States which put the fascist maniac in the presidency and, 2 years ago, instigated and assisted the murderous Chon Tu-hwan group to ruthlessly massacre the people and students in Kwangju, who called for democracy and reunification, and submerged Kwangju in a sea of blood.

The history of 37 years shows that we cannot hope for social democratization of independent and peaceful reunification of the country and that our people's misery and sufferings will continue if the U.S. aggressors remain in this land. For this reason, the patriotic masses of all strata are now continuing a vigorous anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation under the slogans of independence.

The 18 March arson at the American Cultural Center in Pusan was a righteous anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation which reflected the firm will and aspiration of the people, who are determined to achieve without fail the cause of independence and democratic reunification by driving out the U.S. aggressors from this land.

Naturally, their patriotic deeds should never be the subject of suppression. The Chon Tu-hwan ring, however, has illegally arrested and imprisoned those involved in the arson at the American Cultural Center, subjecting them to torture and repression. Now the ring is trying to punish them with all sorts of fascist evil laws by trying them in courts.

This is a challenge and an intolerable criminal act to our masses hoping for the independence and democracy and reunification of the fatherland, as well as a challenge to public opinion at home and abroad.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring can never thwart the people's aspirations for independence, no matter what brutal suppression it may employ, nor can it obliterate the struggle against outside forces and dictatorial ruling and for democracy and national salvation.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring should look squarely at the trend of times advancing along the road of anti-U.S. independence, act judiciously and stop the trial immediately. It should release those who were involved in arson at the American Cultural Center in Pusan and are illegally imprisoned and all other political prisoners without condition and without any delay. It should step down from power as demanded unanimously by the people.

SOUTH ARRESTS KYONGHUI UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

[Text] Pyongyang, June 16 (KCNA) -- The South Korean military fascist clique on June 15 arrested Mun Yang-su and Song Ha-sok, students of University for Foreign Studies in Seoul, by invoking the fascist "law on assembly and demonstration", according to a report.

Mun Yang-su reportedly scattered anti-"government" leaflets at noon on June 10 in front of the social science hall and played the leading part in the demonstration and Song Ha-sok entered Kyonghui University with over 40 fellow students at around 14:30 on the same day and staged a demonstration.

The fascist clique arrested Kim Won-chin and two other students who took part in the demonstration together with Song Ha-sok and penalized them through a "summary trial" on June 14.

CPRF SCORES CHON CRACKDOWN ON STUDENTS

[Text] Pyongyang, June 14 (KCNA) -- The Secretariat of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland on June 13 made public Information No. 221 denouncing the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique for cracking down more frantically upon South Korean students in an attempt to bar their anti-U.S., anti-"government" struggle.

The information recalls that on June 8 the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique harshly suppressed the students of Yonsei University in Seoul who rose up in an anti-U.S., anti-"government" demonstration and arrested several of them and on June 10 they fell upon students of Seoul University of Foreign Studies and arrested one of them when they turned out in a demonstration, shouting the anti-"government" slogans.

Stating that all this is another unpardonable reactionary offensive, the information goes on to say: By barring the patriotic action of the students of boiling blood and detaining progressive students behind bars, the Chon Tu-hwan group is desperately trying to break the daily growing anti-U.S., anti-dictatorship spirit in South Korea and prop up the military facist ruling system in its crisis, but to no avail.

Convinced through their experiences that way of ending the colonial rule of the United States and destroying the fascist dictatorial system is the only true road of bringing the dawn of independence, democracy and reunification, the South Korean students and people will never lower the banner of the anti-U.S., anti-Chon Tu-hwan struggle which they have already letted.

WALKER COMMENTS ATTACKED IN JAPANESE JOURNAL

[Text] Pyongyang, June 16 (KCNA) -- The May issue of the magazine "SEKAI" published in Japan carried an article on the big stir caused by impudent utterances of the U.S. ambassador to South Korea.

Recalling that more than 2,000 workers and students assembled recently at the East Gate Catholic Church in Seoul and sharply denounced the insulting remarks of the U.S. ambassador, the magazine notes that his wordings have become a controversial political problem in South Korea.

The magazine says: Walker is now offering a base excuse for his outburst branding the dissidents as "insolent fellows", protesting that "he did not say that, but the paper made a mistake," and he "only said that those words were talked among South Korean taxi chauffeurs."

Walker wanted to meet South Korean churchmen to offer this excuse, but was coldly spurned and met with angry accusation and protest from young people, says the magazine. It continues: All this only gave rise to fiercer anti-U.S. sentiments. The families of detainees in South Korea recently published a statement, saying" "This is an insult to our entire nation." Such confrontation will continue.

INCREASED IRON ORE, IRON, STEEL OUTPUT NOTED

[Text] Pyongyang, June 15 (KCNA) -- The Korean iron and steel makers are reporting innovations in production.

According to figures available at the Ministry of Metal Industry, the output of steel showed a gain of 19.8 percent, rolled steel 20.4 percent, seamless pipe 30 percent and wire rope 29.1 percent in the first five months of this year above last year's same period.

The Kim Chaek Iron Works, a metallurgical giant, has largely increased the capacity of iron and steel production by completing the reconstruction and expansion project of its furnace No 2 and rebuilding the cyclic calcining oven into a continuous one. The workers there are overfulfilling their daily quotas by increasing the number of teeming.

The Hwanghae Iron Works has scored new success in iron and steel production through the maximum raise of the utility rate of its existing equipment. The furnacemen are boosting steel output by applying a furnace operating method suitable to the raw materials and cutting the time of a heat.

The Kangson and Songjin Steel Works and other iron and steel works are fully meeting the nation's growing demand for irons and steels by effecting an upswing in production.

Production is on the rise at the iron ore mines under the Ministry of Metal Industry. The Musan, Ullyl, Chaeryong, Tokhyon and other mines are topping their iron ore production plans by actively introducing large-size, modernized and high-speed mining equipment and diversifying transport. The iron ore output under the ministry in the first five months of this year was 22.3 percent up on the like period last year.

The metallurgical industry of Korea, depending on its own solid raw material and fuel bases, is making a vigorous advance towards a 15 million-ton goal of steel, one of the ten long-range objectives of socialist economic construction.

BETTER ECONOMIC GUIDANCE, MANAGEMENT SOUGHT

[NODONG SINMUN 15 June editorial: "Let Us Conduct Proper Economic Guidance and Industrial Management"]

[Text] One of the important things needed in order to attain the 10 long-range goals of the socialist construction of the party and to wage the struggle to accomplish the Second 7-Year Plan ahead of schedule is to further improve economic guidance and industrial management.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: To successfully attain the long-range goals of the socialist construction, economic guidance and industrial management must be further improved.

It is an inevitable requirement for the socialist economic development to further improve economic guidance and industrial management.

As the economic construction develops to a higher stage, the scale of the economy expands and the relations among plants and enterprises become closer and more complicated. Under these circumstances, meticulous industrial activities should be made to more effectively utilize manpower, facilities, materials and money and to ensure a rapid growth in production.

What guarantees the rapid growth is the improvement of economic guidance and industrial management. In particular, today, we face the heavy task of providing a firm guarantee for implementing the great program which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song put forth in his historic political speech and for properly waging the battle of this year to accomplish the Second 7-Year Plan ahead of schedule.

The further improvement of economic guidance and industrial management is a key to successful attainment of the great long-range goals, which will provide an opportunity to make a turn in accelerating the final victory of socialism and improving the people's living.

Today, the revolutionary zeal of the working people, who have turned out to uphold the party's appeal for making this year a most splendid year in the history of our fatherland, is very high.

Only if proper economic guidance and industrial management are conducted, will the elevated revolutionary zeal of the people bear a good fruit and not only will the targets for the first half of the year but also the targets for the entire year be attained ahead of schedule.

The functionaries and working people must be fully aware that the improvement of the economic guidance and industrial management is a very important question to respond to the party's call for making a decisive turn in the economic work this year. In this regard, they must exert utmost efforts.

To improve economic guidance and industrial management, the responsibility and role of the economic guidance functionaries must be further enhanced. With great trust in the economic guidance functionaries, our party has assigned them to important revolutionary posts. The economic guidance functionaries are those who stand on the front line in the work of improving economic guidance and industrial management.

Only when the economic guidance functionaries uphold with all their heart the party's call for making a turn in the economic guidance work and, with a lofty sense of responsibility, make sincere efforts to improve it, can the economic guidance work and industrial management be further improved in accordance with the intent of the party.

In planning and organizing production and rendering guidance, the functionaries must adopt an attitude worthy of masters who would assume responsibility for everything. They must conduct meticulous industrial management in accordance with the Taean work system and carry out to the bitter end the work put forth by the policy of the party.

In this regard, the economic guidance functionaries must become acquainted with the prevailing situation. By staying in the office, they would gain nothing. And, when they go down to where their subordinates are, they must penetrate them. Otherwise, nothing would be gained.

The people are teachers. Concerning the potential for growth in production and pending problems, the people know better. And, the production workers are most familiar with the way to improve the industrial management.

The economic guidance functionaries must penetrate the people, work with them, listen to them and solve the problems competently.

The regularization of industrial management is an important requirement for the improvement of economic guidance and industrial management. Under the leadership of the party, in a manner of setting examples and universalizing them, we have gained precious experience in the regularization of industrial management.

Our experience shows that the regularization of industrial management is in accordance with the basic principle of the socialist economic system established and based on collectivism and is a way of maximizing production through the scientific operation of plants and enterprises.

The functionaries must consider the regularization of industrial management as a fundamental question for the improvement of economic guidance and industrial management and the implementation of the Taean work system and organize all industrial activities to this end.

The regulations and rules of the socialist economic management are for the purpose of regularizing industrial management and are the action programs to be implemented by the functionaries and working people. The functionaries and working people must get acquainted with the regulations and rules of industrial management and make it a habit to observe them under all circumstances. Setting an example at a unit and universalizing it is a superior working method created by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-sung during the anti-Japanese armed struggle and still maintained by our party.

The sectors of the national economy must make further improvement at their model units and make others emulate them. By so doing, they must further upgrade the level of the regularization of industrial management of plants and enterprises.

One of the important questions in the improvement of economic gidance and industrial management is to display the superiority of the new industrial guidance system. The reality in which the new industrial guidance system is brilliantly implemented and its vitality is fully displayed shows that the system is indeed a most superior industrial guidance system of our times which correctly meshes the guidance of the central government with the local creativity and enables us to thoroughly implement the Taean work system. By thoroughly implementing the new industrial guidance system, the functionaries must fully display its superiority. In implementing the new industrial guidance system, the economic guidance committees of the provinces and the economic guidance organs of the state have an important mission.

If the economic guidance organs of all echelons fail in accomplishing their missions, the superiority of the guidance system cannot be fully displayed, no matter how good it may be. The economic guidance organs of the state must intensify their functions in conformity with their missions.

In particular, the economic guidance committees of the provinces, as the economic guidance organs of the state which are functioning at production sites, must take control of the plants and enterprises of the provinces and work out concrete plans in parallel with the situation and in accordance with the requirement of the policy of unified and detailed planning. They must be fully aware of the situation of their subordinates and swiftly solve the problems.

At the same time, the functionaries of the economic guidance committees of the provinces must take command of the struggle to implement the economic policy of the party. They must not try to turn the given task over to someone else but make efforts to work out measures to help their subordinates accomplish the task.

In addition, they must see to it that people, while concentrating on the work of accomplishing the tasks of the provinces, do not violate the regulations of cooperative production.

With bold operation, competent command and vigorous political work, the functionaries of the economic guidance committees of the provinces must carry out the production organizational work and the guidance work to attain the economic targets of the provinces.

In implementing the new industrial guidance system, the committees and ministries of the state administration council have great and heavy tasks.

As the role of the economic guidance committees of the provinces is further enhanced, the committees and ministries of the Administration Council must render more help to them and guarantee cooperative production and material supply.

At the same time, they must establish a firm discipline so that authoritarianism may not appear at the lower units. They must work out timely measures so that the sectors and units of the national economy may attain their daily targets without fail.

In particular, emphasis must be placed on the chemical, metallurgical, coal and other material industries to make an epochal progress in the industries.

The party organizations and the three-revolution team members must consider the improvement of economic guidance and industrial management as an important task of policy and properly lead the economic guidance functionaries and working people so that they may fully display the lofty sense of responsibility and the revolutionary zeal in the work.

By thoroughly responding to the party's militant call for improving economic guidance and industrial management, the economic guidance functionaries must fully display the superiority of the socialist economic management system and the might of the self-reliant national economy of our country.

CHON, PARTY HEADS MEET; CABINET CHANGES POSSIBLE

[Text] Seoul, June 16 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan Wednesday hinted that he might replace some more Cabinet members in connection with the recent curb loan scandal, Press Secretary Hwang Son-pil said.

Chon said he retained some ministers considered morally responsible for the scandle in order to settle the affair as soon as possible. There was a Cabinet reshuffle in the wake of the scandal but most economic portfolios were not affected.

Chon expressed his intentions in a meeting with the top leaders from the ruling and opposition parties at a luncheon at Chongwadae, the presidential mansion. The move was apparently designed to strengthen confidence in the government in the wake of the scandal.

During the meeting which lasted more than three hours, Chon also said he would consider lifting the ban on the political activities of former politicians "gradually and in due course," as he sees fit.

Chairman Yi Chae-hyong of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, President Yu Chi-song of the major opposition Democratic Korea Party and President Kim Chong-chol of the opposition Korea National Party attended the meeting which was proposed initially by Yu during a recent press conference in which he called for various government measures to deal with the aftermath of the scandal.

Hwang said those present at the meeting agreed that all Koreans should unite to overcome difficulties now facing the country and make a fresh start.

According to the press secretary, the political leaders exchanged views on a wide range of state affairs, including the current economic situation. During the meeting, Chon also made it clear that he would not seek another term after the current seven-year term ends in 1987.

He said, "One who enjoys power might think a life time is to short a period, but he who wants to devote himself to serve and sacrifice for the people would feel a seven-year term as a tiring period". "And I would be in no mood to serve any longer even though others might want me to stay on," Chon was quoted as saying.

Yu also recommended that the government invigorate the activities of the National Assembly, lay a foundation for the peaceful transfer of power and ensure that self-autonomy for provincial governments is realized.

Huh Hwa-pyong, senior presidential secretary for political affairs and Kim Chae-il, senior presidential secretary for economic affairs were also present at the meeting.

PROSECUTION DEMANDS JAIL TERM FOR KWANGJU ARSONIST

SK160346 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0200 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] On 15 June, Prosecutor (Yim Si-kyun) of the Public Security Department, of the Seoul District prosecutor's office, demanded 10-years imprisonment for defendant Chong Sun-chol, arsonist at the Kwangju U.S. Cultural Center, on charges of setting fire to an existing building and violating martial law.

The prosecution also demanded a 4-year jail term for defendant Pak Ke-tong, who was arrested and indicted for masterminding behind the scenes the Koryo University students' turmoil at the beginning of 1980, on charges of violating martial law.

They were sought by the authorities in June 1980. Since then, they had attempted to stow away to Japan and then had hidden themselves before their arrest as suspects in the arson case at the Pusan U.S. Cultural Center.

The sentencing trial for them will be held at 1000 on 5 July at the 14th Collegiate Court presided over by Judge (Kim Hon-mok) of the Seoul District Criminal Court.

SINMUN CITES EXPERTS ON UNREST IN NORTH

SK150930 Seoul SINMUN in Korean 15 Jun 82 p 2

[Report by correspondent Pak Hwa-chin from Tokyo]

[Excerpts] Rumors prevail in Japanese political circles and among specialists on North Korea that the recent trend in North Korea is unusual and that something has happened there. Japanese press circles, including the NHK broadcast station and the KYODO press agency, which both sent reporters to North Korea on the occasion of the 70th birthday of Kim Il-song, have rendered unusually low-key reportage on North Korea. Following TONGIL ILBO's repeated reports disclosing the internal situation in North Korea, citing information obtained from high-ranking Chongnyon officers who had visited North Korea, the North Korean puppets, with a clumsy excuse, have canceled on four occasions the scheduled visits to Pyongyang of pro-North Korean Japanese politicians, creating a suspicion that the North Korean domestic situation is unusual.

Kamada Mitsudo, specialist on North Korean affairs from Tokyo SHINBUN, said: North Korea considers Japanese politician's visit to Pyongyang undesirable because it sees them as different from Westerners in discovering something linked to Kim Chong-il's succession to power.

Tamaki Moto, reknowned Japanese specialist on North Korean affairs, said that North Korea's recent cancellation of the Japanese politician's scheduled visit to Pyongyang can be construed as a retaliation for Japan's past refusal to grant Hyon Chun-kuk entry into Japan and for the recent visit to Seoul by Tagawa Seiichi, chairman of the New Liberal Club. He added that this cancellation appears to be the result of North Korea's evaluation of the visit of Japanese politicians to Pyongyang as unfavorable under circumstances in which the discord of views still exists in North Korea in connection with the succession issue involving Kim Chong-il.

He said that Japanese reporters, including those from NHK, who had visited Pyongyang on the occasion of the 70th birthday of Kim Il-song, failed to meet Kim Il-song and Kim Chong-il and found that North Korean newspapers and radios were conducting campaigns on a large scale for the purpose of Kim Chong-il's succession to power. They interpreted this as an indication that the hereditary issue involving Kim Chong-il still has not been settled. He said that this situation can be linked to recent unusual events in North Korea.

Japanese specialists on North Korea have shown deep interest in TONGIL ILBO's report on internal rebellions in North Korea, citing information sources from Chongnyon leaders. Some of these specialists say that the large-scale purge of opponents in the party and the army by Kim Chong-il and his followers have met unexpectedly fierce resistance.

While refusing to disclose the name of the person concerned and citing reliable information, TONGIL ILBO reported that the son of a repatriated Chongnyon executive member has been captured and shot to death while trying to escape to Japan by boat, unable to withstand severe oppression. These specialists said that, judging from these facts, the North Korean people's resistance to the plan for having Kim Chong-il succeed to power is unexpectedly great.

Members of the special delegation will include Korean Ambassador to Saudi Arabia Chang Ye-chun; Energy-Resources Minister Yi Son-ki; Kim Chae-ik, senior presidential secretary for economic affairs; and Cho Yong-kil, secretary general to the premier.

On their way home, they will have talks with high-ranking officials of Arab countries on increased cooperation in the construction field between Korea and the oil-rich states and visit Korean construction sites to encourage workers there.

They are scheduled to return around June 24. The government also decided to hoist flags at half-mast at administrative offices in Seoul today to express condolence over the death of King Khaled.

KHMER ROUGE, KPNLF REACH POWER-SHARING AGREEMENT

[By Jim Wolf]

[Text] Bangkok, 16 Jun (AFP) -- The ousted Khmer Rouge government has finally reached agreement on power-sharing within a proposed coalition of anti-Vietnamese Kampuchean groups, diplomatic sources said today.

The breakthrough came at a high-level meeting last weekend between the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), led by former Premier Son Sann.

According to two well-informed diplomats, an agreement drawn up at that meeting provides for former Head of State Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who heads the third group in the proposed alliance, to become president of Democratic Kampuchea, the official name of the deposed but United Nations-recognized government.

Khmer Rouge Prime Minister Khieu Samphan would become vice president in charge of foreign affairs, while Son Sann would be premier, the sources said.

It was understood that the Khmer Rouge had settled on having Khieu Samphan in charge of foreign affairs after the KPNLF steadfastly refused the creation of a separate portfolio for Ieng Sary, current Khmer Rouge foreign minister.

The KPNLF, the largest non-communist resistance group, has long opposed Ieng Sary on grounds that he was closely associated with the ousted government's brutal rule from April 1975 until the Vietnamese invaded and set up a client government in Phnom Penh in January 1979.

The diplomats said the KPNLF and the Khmer Rouge had also agreed on setting up four "coordinating committees" to handle day-to-day affairs for the future alliance.

There would be separate committees to handle defense, health and social affairs, education and culture, and lastly, finance, the sources said.

There was no immediate confirmation of the pact from either of the two groups, but both have repeatedly stressed their interest in forming a coalition.

Prince Sihanouk, for his part, has maintained that he is posing no conditions for entering a tripartite coalition and is ready to assume the president's job as head of state.

It was understood the "coordinating committees," set up instead of normal cabinet portfolios, would make their decisions by consensus and apparently be tripartite bodies.

The agreement came shortly after Son Sann dropped his long-standing demand to control the majority of posts in a coalition he was entering highly reluctantly.

He did so under pressure from many anti-Soviet states, including the United States, China, and the members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) -- Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines.

Last week, Son Sann's KPNLF announced it had accepted four key "principles" laid down by the Khmer Rouge as a pre-condition to setting up an alliance. These were tripartism, non-predominance of any of the factions, consensus in decision-making and retention of the "legitimacy and framework" of Democratic Kampuchea, the deposed Khmer Rouge state.

Analysts cautioned that even if an agreement had been reached, it was unlikely to have any early effect on the ground, where 150,000-200,000 battle-hardened Vietnamese troops are protecting the hand-picked government they installed in Phnom Penh in January, 1979.

In the short term, the goal of the coalition would be to submerge within itself the identity of the Khmer Rouge, villified internationally for their brutal rule from 1975 to 1979.

The coalition project has been meticulously nurtured by the United States and the non-communist Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), which groups Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines.

ASEAN foreign ministers, who were winding up their annual meeting in Singapore today, may give more details of the reported breakthrough during a scheduled news conference this afternoon, analysts said.

Representatives of the Khmer Rouge were not immediately available for comment.

POST: KHMER COALITION 'CLOSER THAN EVER'

[By Alan Dawson and Banyat Thasaniyawet]

[Text] Kampuchean rebels have moved closer than ever before in recent days to forming their long-sought coalition against the Hanoi-installed regime in Phnom Penh, diplomatic and other sources said yesterday.

The sources said only one issue remained to be settled among the three major groups struggling to set up a united political organisation, but one described it as "an important and troublesome final detail."

The Khmer Rouge and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) of Son Sann have spent the last few days locked in debate over who would control the foreign ministry of a new Democratic Kampuchea administration.

But negotiators have reached agreement on the top leadership, which would make Prince Norodom Sihanouk the president, Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan the vice president and Son Sann the prime minister of a coalition, the sources said.

The Khmer Rouge at first insisted that their current Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister Ieng Sary keep his titles and powers in any new government, but the KPNLF flatly refused this. Son Sann wanted to be foreign minister as well as prime minister.

The sources said the KPNLF, recognising overwhelming Khmer Rouge military superiority, wanted to control the only other important government portfolio, in order to be able to speak for the resistance at the United Nations and other foreign forums.

At the last report, control of the foreign ministry was the final stumbling block between the Khmer Rouge and the KPNLF to an announcement that agreement on a coalition had been reached, the sources said.

Negotiations were said to have been conducted mainly through a senior, experienced Thai military officer respected by both major resistance groups, sources said. The Thai Foreign Ministry had earlier bowed out of the talks after the failure to convince China to help ease Khmer Rouge intransigence.

Apart from the leadership, negotiators representing the Khmer Rouge, the KPNLF and Sihanouk also reached agreement on setting up three "committees" to take the place of what normally would be cabinet ministers.

In this formula, cabinet decisions would be reached after discussions and agreement among the co-equal representatives of the three resistance groups. The sources said they were surprised that the Khmer Rouge agreed to put the coalition's defence ministry under such a committee, since virtually all fighting soldiers are loyal to the pro-communist group.

Meanwhile, a diplomatic source said that a summit meeting of the leaders of the three Kampuchean factions might be held in Kuala Lumpur, instead of in Geneva as earlier suggested by Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

The source said both the KPNLF and the Khmer Rouge had agreed on Kuala Lumpur as the venue of the summit and they would notify the prince who is now in Pyongyang about their proposed site.

NHAN DAN HAILS 12 JUN PEACE MARCH IN NEW YORK

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 14 -- The peace march in New York on June 12 was a firm objection to the Reagan administration's policy of nuclear arms race, says NHAN DAN today. The paper points out that it was also a protest against the bellicose foreign policy of the White House and the Pentagon aimed at exacerbating the international situation.

The paper says: "The June 12 march marked a major progress of the peace movement in the United States. It was the largest rallying of forces since the American people's demonstrations against U.S. aggression in Vietnam."

It notes that the current peace campaign in the United States, Western Europe and Japan deals a telling blow at the attempts of the Reagan administration and other imperialist forces to breed a psycho-war mood while advertising their "good will for peace." "With their resolute stand," the paper continues, "the advocates of peace, freedom and justice in the United States, Western Europe and Japan are maintaining high vigilance over the Reagan administration's next moves. They demand that the United States negotiate as soon as possible with the Soviet Union on strategic arms limitation and other issues concerning disarmament."

The voice of the peace movement in the West is becoming more weighty in international political life, NHAN DAN concludes.

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN ON DISCIPLINE IN LIFE, WORK

BK121433 Hanoi QUAN DOI NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 14 May 82, pp 1, 4

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 14 May editorial: "Discipline in Daily Life and Work"]

[Excerpt] With its policies, guidelines and directives, our party rules over the whole society through the proletarian dictatorial state machinery and through various mass organizations. The party's policies and guidelines are reflected in the Constitution and laws.

The state is an essential tool with which the people exercise their collective mastery. As a state "of the people, from the people and for the people," it is most important that all organs of the state properly carry out their legal functions in order to secure the laboring people's collective mastery, to create a disciplined and orderly communal life, to struggle effectively against unlawful acts and social vices, and to do away with all negative phenomena.

Party cadres and members must exemplarily comply with the law, scrupulously observe discipline in daily life and work, satisfactorily implement the four systems which have already been in force (namely the system of responsibility, the system of labor discipline, the system of protecting public property and the system of serving the people), and motivate everyone to comply scrupulously with the party's policies and lines and with state law. Every citizen, irrespective of his age, profession or social position, must scrupulously comply with the law and the Constitution without placing himself above the law or breaching the law. Instead, he must protect the law and prevent any breach of the law and social order.

At present, due to the serious consequences of the devastation of war coupled with constant sabotage by the enemy in all respects, the life of our people still experiences numerous difficulties. Social vices bequeathed by the old regime have yet to be eradicated drastically. Such a situation has adversely affected the observance of discipline at work and in daily life. However, we should not use the difficult economic situation and certain negative phenomena as an excuse to relax the observance of discipline or of building a new way of life. It would be wrong if we contended that, as we do not now have sufficient conditions to build a new cultural lifestyle, we must concentrate on stepping up economic development and improving the people's livelihood.

Facts show that despite countless difficulties facing the people in many areas -- including those in the frontline where the people are hour after hour coping with the enemy's sabotage schemes and actions -- our people and combatants have still been able to build for themselves a beautiful, orderly and disciplined way of life. Thanks to this, they have performed other activities in productive labor, combat and combat readiness very well. The resolution of the Fifth VCP Congress says that "building new culture and new-type men is mandatory and it can be carried out step-by-step, beginning immediately. In the forthcoming stages, there will be many objective and subjective factors permitting us to start building a beautiful society with modern ways of life and good relations between men and men -- a society in which the laboring people can feel happy even if their living standards are not high enough."

Our people's armed forces are a backbone force of the system of proletarian dictatorship and of the system of socialist collective mastery. With this heavy but glorious duty, our armed forces are determined to develop their fine tradition and character as a people's army and to set good examples as a unified collective with a high sense of organization and discipline. In addition, the scrupulous implementation of the party's policies, state law and the army's regulations and discipline will constitute a lever and a sharp weapon for each of our cadres and combatants to exercise his collective mastery over the society and the country.

The observance of discipline in daily life and work is also regarded as a guarantee for building our armed forces into a revolutionary people's army with a iron-like determination to win, a still-higher degree of standardization and modernization, a constantly-improved combat readiness, and a desire to fulfill all missions entrusted to it by the fatherland.

INDUSTRIAL-COMMERCIAL TAX COLLECTION EXAMINED

[NHAN DAN 9 Jun editorial: "Step Up the Collection of Industrial-Commercial Taxes"]

[Text] Over the past recent years, industrial-commercial transactions in the collectively and privately-run economic sectors have continually undergone considerable change. Artisan and handicraft production has developed fairly well. In a number of localities, marketing cooperatives have developed their own businesses. These efforts have contributed to increasing social products and serving the people's livelihood.

There have been many cases, however, in which production and business practices have not been carried out correctly. Private trade has developed in an unorganized manner and has shown many negative phenomena. Although the revenues of the collectively and privately-run economic sectors have increased, they have been widely distributed among many kinds of earners with those who have engaged in illegal practices -- namely profiteers and hoarders -- having the largest incomes.

Implementing various resolutions of the party and the state on the improvement of distribution and circulation, the party committee echelons and the administrations in various areas have concerned themselves with providing guidance regarding taxes. In these areas, the collection of taxes has contributed to enhancing market management and bringing more revenues for the state budget.

In general, however, the results that have been obtained are still poor due to a failure to develop the effect of tax collection over the control of industrial-commercial transactions and over the redistribution of business revenues. The management of tax collection has not yet been able to cover fully all areas and establishments engaging in production and business and to keep up with price fluctuations. The amount of uncollected taxes has been quite great. Many cases of swindling, speculation and hoarding have not been denounced and severely punished. The revenues of those big-time businessmen with excessively high and unreasonable incomes have not been regulated correctly.

Some people still view the collection of taxes simply as a collection of money for the state budget. Fearing that tax collection would cause prices to rise and private producers and traders to lose their enthusiasm, these people have failed to manage closely the registration of trades, collect taxes fully on various kinds of goods and stipulated, and to adjust levies quickly to correspond with actual trade conditions. Instead, they have allowed themselves to create more levies for their localities or have come up with stipulations contrary to the tax system now in force.

The political report at the Fifth VCP Congress outlines the tasks to be carried out by the distribution and circulation sector, noting that it is necessary to participate in the struggle to expand the battlefield of socialism, reduce the spontaneous battlefield of capitalism, and regulate at all costs the incomes of the people of various strata in a fair and reasonable manner.

In order to adopt a positive monetary-financial policy suitable to the current stage quickly, the state must regard financial and monetary work as an effective tool to improve and develop the economy. The state must promote increased sources of revenues -- ranging from the state-run economic sector to the collectively-run and other economic sectors -- and must strictly control financial revenues and expenditures.

In the same vein, the entire system of industrial-commercial taxes must be revised in order to meet requirements dictated by the political tasks for the new situation. The collection of industrial-commercial taxes must be regarded as an effective tool with which the proletarian dictatorial state can direct and control, in accordance with socialist principles, industrial-commercial transactions -- both collectively and privately-run -- and satisfactorily redistribute national incomes obtained from production and trade.

In order to build socialism at a time when the economy is still characterized by small production and when social products and national incomes are still scattered among various kinds of earners, efforts to accumulate national wealth will be of paramount importance.

In the next 5-10 years, revenues obtained from business transactions of the collectively and privately-run economic sectors will continue to constitute a large proportion of the total revenues of society. Therefore, it is necessary to develop to the fullest the effect of industrial-commercial taxes, to encourage the abilities of various industrialists and traders to contribute, and to regulate correctly revenues obtained from business transactions.

On the basis of scrupulously complying with policies on taxes along with uniformly implementing other policies on prices, market mangement, collection and purchases, and market improvement, the collection of industrial-commercial taxes must be carried out in such a way as to improve and enhance market management and prevent speculation, illegal deals, and theft of state and collective property, thus contributing to maintaining public order and security.

The party committees and administrations at various levels must provide close guidance for the collection of taxes, trying to create a profound change in the organization of its implementation. They must link the collection of taxes with market management as well as with the uniform implementation of all related policies; increase the contingent of tax affairs cadres numerically; improve their work abilities and ethical qualities; and increase the material bases and means of operation for the tax affairs sector. They must enforce tax-related laws and regulations scrupulously and uniformly on a national scale; eliminate liberal phenomena such as failing to observe or misinterpreting policies; and severely punish in accordance with the law those who commit tax evasion and fraud and who oppose tax policies.

As fighters on the distribution and circulation front, cadres and personnel of the tax affairs sector must firmly grasp and correctly enforce various tax policies; improve their control methods and measures; attach importance to organization-building and to the cultivation of their revolutionary ethics; and satisfactorily fulfill their mission of stepping up the collection of industrial-commercial taxes.

NHAN DAN URGES EXPANSION OF WINTER CROP

[NHAN DAN 8 June editorial: "Expand and Intensively Cultivate the Winter Crop"]

[Text] Initiating the cultivation of the winter crop and making it a major production season are among the objectives set forth by the party and state in their plan to develop agricultural production in the northern areas where two rice crops are planted every year.

This stems from a biological revolution which advocates replacing long-term low-yield rice strains with short-term high-yield rice varieties in conjunction with efforts to reschedule the 10th-month and promote increased production through intensive cultivation and multicropping. This is to exploit available potentials in land and labor and the existing material and technical bases.

Experience obtained from the cultivation of the winter crop over the past 10 years attests to the correctness of the requirements set for initiating the cultivation of the winter crop. Each year the winter crop brings us an additional half a million tons of grain in terms of paddy, a large quantity of animal feed and a number of export-oriented agricultural goods of high value. Many districts have concerned themselves with the cultivation of the winter crop. After fulfilling their grain obligations, they have still been able to maintain their normal food consumption standard during March -- the pre-harvest period -- even during years when they were stricken by waterlogging, floods and drought.

The winter crop is closely related to the 10th-month crop, and especially to the early 10th-month rice. The winter crop acreage will increase if the time and space interval between the 10th-month crop and the winter-spring crop that follows is extended. Whether or not we can expand the winter crop acreage actively and steadily will depend on the actual production conditions in each area and on the economic and technical factors needed to ensure the highest results for all the three cropping seasons in the year.

At present, in the movement to actively expand and intensively cultivate the winter crop, there exists an unjustifiable tendency to weigh pros and cons. When there is not enough chemical fertilizer to encourage the expansion of the winter crop, some persons have advocated concentrating labor and materials on cultivating only two rice crops in order to exceed the contracted quota as far as possible while leaving much to be desired with regard to the cultivation of the winter crop. There have been indications that leadership over the cultivation of the winter crop is lagging. In general, efforts to cultivate the winter crop seem to be coming to a standstill and have even dropped in certain areas in recent years, with total acreage dropping from 263,000 hectares in 1980 to 242,000 hectares in 1981. The average output of many major crop plants has also shown a decline.

The planned target for this year's winter crop production is higher than that in previous winter crops. It is essential that we cultivate more than 240,000 hectares under any circumstances. This is 100,000 hectares more than last year. The purpose is to contribute to tackling the grain problem during March -- the preharvest period -- and to produce enough feed to maintain the herd of domestic animals.

All localities, production establishments and responsible sectors must devise comprehensive plans with practical measures to make the winter crop a success in the three areas -- acreage, output and yield. They must do away with all negative phenomena and be fully determined to ensure the best success for this winter crop. It is necessary to reexamine all advantages and disadvantages in order to establish criteria and measures in a positive and steadfast manner.

In this year's winter crop, we must strive to overcome a number of major difficulties resulting from a drop in the supply of some essential technical materials by the state and from the inadequacy of crop seeds, thus making it impossible for many cooperatives to ensure the fulfillment of planned targets for acreage. A lack of draft force and a delay in the cultivation of 10th-month rice, especially in the early 10th-month rice, will hamper the cultivation of major winter crop plants.

In order to ensure the fulfillment of the planned targets for winter crop acreage, localities and production establishments must set a rational cultivation pattern for the 10th-month crop and must ensure that the acreage devoted to early 10th-month rice is equivalent to the acreage of early winter rice.

They must sow rice seeds on dry soil beds in order to ensure the early transplanting of early 10th-month rice in accordance with the schedule. The plowing of early 10th-month ricefields must be carried out quickly with a determination to begin plowing as soon as the 5th-month rice is harvested. We must concentrate the draft force, both mechanized and manual, on soil preparation and, if necessary, we must mobilize peasants to do the plowing with the use of hoes. We must quickly repair broken-down tractors, provide sufficient spare parts and fuel for the operation of tractors and create favorable conditions for the purchase of draft cattle and for their transportation to localities which need a draft force.

Many localities are now in need of seeds for certain kinds of essential crop plants, especially potatoes, and have failed to observe the set crop allocation pattern. Production establishments must check the amount of potato seeds they now have and must care for them carefully until they are planted. We must plant sweet potatoes in the autumn growing season in order to obtain seedlings for the winter growing season and must prepare seedlings for other essential crops such as soybeans and green beans.

Practicing the product-contract system with individual laborers in the cultivation of winter crops constitutes an important measure which will be instrumental in encouraging cooperative members to concern themselves with production.

Local administrative echelons and responsible sectors must devise practical policies and implement drastic and practical steps to overcome negative phenomena and correctly ensure respect for the three interests in order to contribute to making this winter crop a total success.

ANZUS To Discuss Visits

[Text] The controversy over visits by nuclear-armed or powered ships to Australia and New Zealand is expected to head the agenda at next week's meeting in Canberra of the ANZUS Council of Ministers. ANZUS is a pact signed more than 30 years ago by Australia, New Zealand and the United States to cover their mutual defense in the Pacific region.

A spokesman for the Foreign Affairs Department said it was expected that the issue of nuclear-armed or powered ships would be placed on the agenda next Monday [28 June] -- the first day of a 2-day ANZUS Council meeting.

Radio Australia's Canberra office says the United States is becoming increasingly worried about the attitudes of opposition parties on both sides of the Tasman to the issue. Our office says the Governments of Australia and New Zealand are firm in their resolve that the ANZUS pact is the cornerstone of their defense structures and have condemned opposition attempts to restrict the entry of American ships to ports in both countries.

The federal leader of the Australian Labor Party, Mr Hayden, has said the federal government should have the right to refuse entry to them.

In New Zealand, the Labor Party leader, Mr Rowling, has said his party is totally opposed to nuclear weaponry, including nuclear-powered warships. Speaking in Wellington, Mr Rowling said the official New Zealand labor party policy was to remain in ANZUS but to seek a major review of the pact to make it more relevant to today's defense threats.

Fraser's Comment

[Text] Prime Minister Fraser said the debate on nuclear armed ships entering Australian ports raises one of the most fundamental national issues for 30 years. He said the issue was a long-term future of Australia's defense and national security and Australia's status as a firm and reliable partner with the freedom-loving nations of the world. He said the opposition leader Hayden and the socialist left would end Australia's firm commitment to the defense of freedom and democracy by implementing the policy of the Victorian government to ban nuclear armed vessels from its ports.

Fraser accused Hayden and the Labor Party of failing to tell the Australian people of the implications of their decisions on the nuclear ships.

Labor Party Criticism

[Text] A controversy has developed between the federal government, the American State Department and the Australian Labor Party [ALP] over Labor's opposition to nuclear ships using Australian ports. Labor state governments in Victoria and New South Wales want to ban nuclear-powered or equipped warships from their ports.

A State Department announcement claims that the United States needs to use its allies' ports to maintain a strategic deterrence. It says it will be difficult if not impossible for the United States to assist in the defense of its allies if American ships were denied entry to ports.

Australian Foreign Minister Street claims the Labor Party wants to isolate Australia and withdraw from relationships which form the basis of the Western alliance. He says such a policy can only advantage the Soviet Union.

The deputy leader of the Federal Labor Party, Mr Bowen, says the Americans have been misinformed in its criticism of ALP policy on nuclear ships. He said it was quite right for the state premiers to worry about such vessels in Melbourne or Sydney ports because it raised the question of the safety of their citizens.

STREET: MORE AID FOR PACIFIC TO COUNTER USSR

[Text] Australia's Minister for Foreign Affairs Street has said Australian aid programs in the Pacific will be expanded to counter the growing Soviet activity in the region. In an interview on Singapore Government television, Street said Australia was concerned to build up the economies and improve the standard of living of Pacific countries. In conjunction with the United States and New Zealand it had already stepped up assistance with aids such as fisheries research.

Street said Soviet attempts to gain influence among small, isolated and vulnerable countries in the South Pacific would increase. He said Australia was worried about Soviet offers of aid in the region, such as hydrographic surveys or fisheries research and described them as a new development.

Street also repeated Australia's concern over support for Vietnam which had made possible the Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea, which had given Russian military base facilities in Vietnam.

The Singapore television team, which toured Australia also interviewed deputy leader of the opposition Labor Party (Ronald Burn). He said that if the Labor were elected to power as the national government, it would encourage Vietnam and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to work out peacefully their differences over Kampuchea.

OPPOSITION WANTS SINAI CONTINGENT TO RETURN HOME

[Text] The federal opposition wants the Australian contingent in the international peace-keeping force in the Sinai to return home immediately. Labor Party's deputy leader and a spokesman on foreign affairs Bowen said the multinational peace-keeping force had effectively helped Israel invade Lebanon. He said the force represented a United States' presence in the Sinai Peninsula, which covered Israel's southern flank and, therefore, allowed the concentration of Israel's armed forces in Lebanon.

Bowen said the withdrawal of the Australian element in the Sinai force would show Israel's Prime Minister Begin that he would not enjoy the support that he had in the past.

Bowen described the invasion of Lebanon as a disaster, which will have a wearing effect on Israel's relations with Egypt.

The Department of Foreign Affairs says the purpose of the Sinai peace-keeping force is still valid. A spokesman said Australia joined the force in support of the Camp David accords (?which) included negotiations to try to solve the Palestinian problem.

NEW ZEALAND

MINISTER OF WORKS QUIGLEY 'FORCED TO RESIGN'

BK141441 Hong Kong AFP in English 1324 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Wellington, 14 Jun (AFP) -- New Zealand's minister of works, Derek Quigley, was today forced to resign after speaking out against the national development policies of Prime Minister Robert Muldoon's government.

Mr. Quigley was told by the prime minister either to apologise for his actions or resign. His decision to quit his Cabinet post is the most open breach in a New Zealand cabinet since the 1930's.

Mr. Muldoon said his ultimatum to Mr. Quigley followed the minister's attacks on the government's growth policy. "I told him his statements went beyond what is acceptable from a Cabinet minister unless accompanied by his resignation," said Mr. Muldoon. The Prime Minister said Mr. Quigley had "offended, angered and embarrassed his Cabinet colleagues."

Mr. Quigley revealed the prime minister had threatened to sack him at the weekend if he appeared on television to explain his attack on government policy. Mr Quigley went ahead with the television appearance and Mr. Muldoon labelled the explanations he offered as "inadequate."

Mr. Quigley was also threatened with sacking during a 1980 leadership row. A lawyer and farmer, he is a leading advocate for the free enterprise lobby inside the ruling National Party. Mr. Quigley's electorate applauded the TV speech in which he warned the government's development policy could endanger the economy, and would starve traditional areas like farming and industry of vital investment cash.

It is not known when Mr. Muldoon will replace his rebel Cabinet minister, but he is expected to bring two under-secretaries into the Cabinet ranks.

AFP CITES KOMPAS COMMENT ON KHMER COALITION

[Text] Jakarta, 14 Jun (AFP) -- The leading Indonesian daily newspaper, KOMPAS, today said the formation of an anti-Vietnamese coalition of Cambodian resistance groups would be a major issue at the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) Foreign Ministers' Conference in Singapore. It said the formation of such a coalition was still the best way of ousting the Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin regime in Phnom Penh.

The paper blamed the Khmer Rouge for the deadlock over forming a front with the non-communist movements headed by former Cambodian head of state Prince Sihanouk, and that of Premier Son Sann. "As long as the Khmer Rouge insists on a leading role in a coalition, such a coalition would be difficult to forge," KOMPAS said.

Vietnam, aware of the support the Khmer Rouge gets from its arch foe China, would throw even stronger opposition in the way of a Khmer Rouge-led coalition, the paper said. The best way would be for the Khmer Rouge to disassociate itself from China and not to force itself as the number one component of the coalition. Likewise, China should not associate itself with the coalition plan, and refrain from posing as the Khmer Rouge sponsor. On the other hand, ASEAN should stand united in seeking a Cambodian solution, and no ASEAN country should be partial to China over Vietnam.

ASEAN, which groups Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines, has adopted the principle that both China and Vietnam should honour Cambodia's sovereignty, and it should stick to this principle, the paper said.

If China persists in its role (of having a say in the matter), it would take the ground away from the projected visit next July of Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr, in his capacity as chairman of the International Commission on Cambodia. If China freed the Khmer Rouge of its patronage, and the Khmer Rouge was willing to stand on an equal footing with its intended partners, the way would be open for a coalition, according to the paper. Vietnam would then be asked to pull out on a guarantee that Cambodia would not instead fall into China's grip -- a guarantee Beijing should be prepared to endorse, the paper said.

'Petition 50' on Election

[Text] Jakarta, 9 Jun (AFP) -- The "Petition 50" opposition group has called for an extraordinary session of the People's Consultative Assembly (MPR) to ask President Suharto for an account of last month's general elections.

Before the elections the gorup had said it would not participate because, it claimed, the elections were unconstitutional.

In a widely circulated underground leaflet, the group, which consists of 50 leading figures opposed to President Suharto's regime, complained about alleged irregularities in the May 4 poll.

The elections resulted in a 64 percent landslide victory for the ruling Golkar party.

"Petition 50" claimed that official witnesses were prevented from carrying out their poll functions and that irregularities occurred in the distribution of voting cards and in vote counting. Moreover, the group added, there were no formal institutions through which voters could channel their protests.

The group expressed condolences to the families of dozens of people who died in the violence that marred the 45-day political campaign that preceded the elections.

The statement, addressed to Parliament and the Assembly, was signed by former Jakarta Governor Ali Sadikin on behalf of the "Petition 50" working group.

The numerous underground petitions issued by the group have often been described as a "moral force," an investment for the young generation, but the ban on any publicity has limited direct impact.

BATAN, FRG'S INTERATOM SIGN REACTOR CONTRACT

BK120947 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0906 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] Jakarta, 12 Jun (ANTARA) -- The Republic of Indonesia represented by the Indochinese Atomic energy Agency, BATAN (badan tenaga atom nasional) and Interatom GmbH of West Germany signed a contract for the construction of a research reactor in Jakarta on June 5, 1982.

The reactor forms part of the new research establishment Puspitek at Serpong, West Java. Start of nuclear operation is scheduled end of 1986.

According to a BATAN press release, the reactor has a thermal output of 30 mW and achieves neutron flux densities of more than 2,1014 up to 5,1014 per square centimeter per second. With such neutron flux densities it can either be used as a material test and/or as a bean tube reactor.

The reactor concept is based on a swimming poll reactor system with MTR-plate type fuel elements with U308-AL fuel using less than 20 percent U235 enrichment. In order to optimize the neutron flux, the reactor is partially surrounded by beryllium reflector blocks, penetrated by several tangential and radial beam tubes. Space for irradation facilities large enough to allow the irradiation of full scale fuel elements from power reactors is provided at the centre of the core. Further irradiation positions, some of which are connected to a rabbit system, are situated in different core and reflector positions.

With the chosen design features the Indonesian reactor represents a highly advanced facility in the field of nuclear research.

For this a contribution of DM30 million was granted by the German Federal Ministry for Research and technology.

ASEAN MINISTERS: KHMER COALITION NOT CONFIRMED

BK161000 Hong Kong AFP in English 0923 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Singapore, 16 Jun (AFP) -- Foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) today said they had received no official confirmation of Bangkok reports that the ousted Khmer Rouge government had reached agreement with ex-Premier Son Sann on power-sharing formula within a proposed anti-Vietnamese Cambodian coalition.

But Singapore's Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan said: "If this is true, we certainly welcome such a development".

The Bangkok reports quoting diplomatic sources said the agreement came last weekend at a high-level meeting between the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge and Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie said there was nothing official, but added that he was optimistic about the formation of a coalition of the three Cambodian resistance groups. "I feel it in my bones," he said.

Thai Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila for his part said: "We have heard about it, but we cannot comment until the three factions officially inform us."

The ASEAN foreign ministers were speaking at a press conference at the end of their three-day annual meeting here.

"This is the first time I heard about it," commented Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja.

Under the agreement, former Cambodian Head of State Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who heads the third faction in the ASEAN-sponsored alliance, would become president of Democratic Kampuchea, the official name of the deposed but United Nations-recognized Khmer Rouge government, the Bangkok reports said quoting two well-informed diplomats. Khmer Rouge Premier Khieu Samphan would reportedly become vice president in charge of foreign affairs while Son Sann would be premier. The Khmer Rouge and the KPNLF also reportedly agreed to set up four "coordination committees" to handle day-to-day affairs in the future alliance.

Throughout the three-day meeting, the ASEAN chief diplomats stressed that while they supported the coalition bid, they felt it was up to the Cambodians themselves to work out the mechanics of the alliance.

A joint communique capping the ASEAN ministerial meeting said the foreign ministers "expressed their continued support for the efforts toward the formation of a Kampuchean (Cambodian) coalition government".

"They recognized that the establishment of a truly representative government in Kampuchea remained a matter for the Kampuchean people themselves to decide," it added.

Under repeated questioning from newsmen, chief diplomats of Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand refused to be drawn into discussion of the Cambodian coalition beyond saying they were playing a supportive role.

The ministers instead played up and welcomed the heightened U.N. profile in the search for a political solution in Cambodia. Yesterday and today, they discussed Cambodia with U.N. special representative for humanitarian affairs, Raffeuddin Ahmad, who recently toured ASEAN countries, Vietnam, Laos, China and Japan to discuss "the process of negotiations toward a comprehensive political settlement in Kampuchea."

ASEAN FOREIGN MINISTERS ISSUE PRESS COMMUNIQUE

[Text] ASEAN foreign ministers have expressed satisfaction that there has been accelerated progress in ASEAN cooperation in various fields.

In a press communique issued this afternoon at the end of their 3-day meeting in Singapore, the foreign ministers note that ASEAN has grown in stature and that it is recognized as an important regional organization in international affairs. The intensification of ASEAN's collective efforts and commitments to promote the well-being of the region and its peoples has strengthened ASEAN solidarity. It has also enhanced ASEAN's stature as a viable, dynamic and credible regional organization.

The foreign ministers, however, expressed concern over the existing international political and economic situation, which they said was fast moving into a state of crisis. In their view, the continuing conflict around the world, the growing protectionist tendencies, high inflation and interest rates and unemployment bear testimony to these trends. If such developments were allowed to continue, they would not only stifle the further growth of the ASEAN economies and its cooperation, retard the chances of world economic recovery but more fundamentally would erode the resilience of the system which supports independent nations.

The ASEAN foreign ministers said the social system of a number of newly independent states have been undermined. Noting this dangerous escalating trend, they called for an urgent and total reexamination of the entire international system. They urged the developed industrialized countries to ensure that all measures undertaken by them transcend their national interests and work for the emergence of a new more just and rational international system.

The foreign ministers also noted that cooperation with dialogue countries on market access had, in general, not been up to expactation. In their recent review of ASEAN's relations with third world countries and international organizations, it was agreed that cooperation was needed in such areas as market access, shipping, energy, transfer of technology, commodities and international economic issues and social and cultural matters within the framework of intra-ASEAN cooperation.

The foreign ministers called upon the dialogue countries to make these dialogues more meaningful.

On Kampuchea, the foregin ministers reiterated their full commitment through the UN resolutions calling for the immediate and total withdrawal of Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea. They urged Vietnam, as the party of the conflict, to join the rest of the international community to seek a lasting and peaceful settlement of the problem through negotiations based on the UN resolutions.

The foreign ministers also expressed their continued support for the efforts toward the formation of a Kampuchean coalition government. They recognized that the establishment of a truly representative government in Kampuchea remains a matter for the Kampuchean people themselves to decide.

The foreign ministers, deeply concerned by the parallel situation of continued foreign intervention in Afghanistan, called for the early implementation of the UN resolution which seeks the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Afghanistan.

The foreign ministers again condemned Israel's aggression against Lebanon and reaffirmed their support for the UN resolution calling for a cease-fire and the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon.

The next ASEAN ministerial meeting will be held in Thailand next June.

In his closing statement at the ASEAN ministerial meeting, Thai Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, said his government and the private sector in Thailand were eager to join in the search for new directions for ASEAN economic cooperation. Air Chief Marshal Sitthi asserted that ASEAN is actually a vehicle for economic, social and cultural cooperation. Its proccupation with political and security issues has been forced upon the organization.

Indonesian Foreign Minister Dr. Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja in his statement said the decision to expand ASEAN's cooperation to other similar regional groupings would be of tremendous benefit to the association. On the Kampuchean issue Dr Mokhtar reiterated that ASEAN strongly believes that the resolutions of the United Nations and the international conference on Kampuchea remained the only viable solution to the problem. He said ASEAN looks forward to a positive response from Vietnam.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie in his address also touched on the Kampuchean problem. He said ASEAN must continue to support and encourage the current efforts of the Kampuchean resistance groups to form a coalition government. This was because a comprehensive political solution in Kampuchea would enable ASEAN to give fuller attention to other pressing problems. Tan Sri Ghazali also felt that there was a need for a thorough examination of the free enterprise system to protect the interest of all nations which subscribe to the system. He was particularly concerned about the position of small nations in the South Pacific region. He noted that the claim for common heritage of the seabed by certain powers was depriving island nations of the wealth from their natural resources.

In his statement Philippine Foreign Minister Gen Carlos Romulo said ASEAN must concentrate its resources and energy on economic and social development. He said if the threat to ASEAN security was from subversion, real defense must rest on the strong will and unity of the people. This would be enhanced by economic development. General Romulo stressed ASEAN's capacity to interrelate effectively with the industrialized countries and the developing nations depends on its internal cohesion. He believes that this cohesion was already widely perceived by the rest of the world.

In summing up, Mr Dhanabalan said the efforts of the 3-day meeting to consider matters of mutual interest of the five ASEAN countries were productive. The ASEAN foreign ministers were also able to reach decisions easily as their discussions and deliberations were conducted in the traditional spirit of ASEAN warmth and candor.

Further Remarks

(By K.S.C. Pillai)

[Excerpts] Singapore, 16 June (AFP) -- The search for a new opening in the stalemated Cambodian problem appeared to have an impetus with the announcement today that Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach would soon be visiting at least four of the five ASEAN countries.

Only Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila, who was addressing a joint news conference with his ASEAN colleagues at the end of their three-day conference, said that Mr Thach had made "no approach".

Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said Mr Thach had wanted to come in July, but he (Dr Mokhtar) would prefer a later date because of the forthcoming Moslem fasting month.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie disclosed that his ambassador in Hanoi had extended an invitation to Mr Thach, but no dates have been fixed. The Foreign Ministry is working our the details. He said the talks with Mr Thach would touch on "our endeavor to seek a political solution to the Cambodian conflict within the framework of the United Nations resolutions".

Foreign Minister Carlos Romulo of the Philippines said a request had been made to the Filipino ambassador in Hanoi, but a formal request is still awaited. Mr. Romulo indicated that Mr. Thach would be welcome in Manila, possibly after July.

Today's ministerial statements, coupled with the absence of anti-Vietnamese rhetoric in the joint communique issued earlier today, gave observers the impression that ASEAN's efforts to bring Vietnam into the process of consultation of the Cambodian problem were bearing fruit.

In a parallel effort, ASEAN foreign ministers had two rounds of discussios here with the U.N. special representative, Raffeuddin Ahmad, on the Cambodian situation.

Mr. Ahmad, who had earlier visited Hanoi, in the course of the world body's efforts to work out a political solution, briefed ASEAN leaders on Vietnam's thinking on the issue. His reading of the situation is understood to have given some causes for optimism that Hanoi may, after all, be willing to talk about the Cambodian problem.

This could signal a change from Hanoi's earlier criticism of the United Nations and ASEAN for their alleged "interference" in Cambodia's internal affairs.

Asked to comment whether China was cooperating with ASEAN in its efforts to find a political solution in Cambodia, Mr. Dhanabalan said all countries, including China, wanted a solution.

But when the question was pressed further, Tan Sri Ghazali said: "Let me put it this way. We have no reason to believe they (Beijing) are obstructing."

All the five ministers denied any intention on the part of ASEAN to forge a military alliance among themselves or with a superpower.

Mr Romulo said: "We have no intention to militarise this peaceful organisation, which can only lead to Balkanisation".

He defended the American military bases in the Philippines saying they were "not for aggressive purposes, but only to maintain peace and balance of power in the area".

Asked whether the Philippines was prepared to liquidate these bases as a quid pro quo for Vietnam's pullout from Cambodia, Mr. Romulo said there was no question of equating the two situations. "The (American) bases in the Philippines are to maintain peace in the region, but Vietnam invaded Cambodia and occupied it".

On the question as to how Malaysia and Singapore justified their presence in the five-power defence pact with Australia, New Zealand and Britain, Tan Sri Ghazali side-stepped the issue, and said the zone of peace advocated by ASEAN was intended to exclude big power rivalry in the region.

Mr. Dhanabalan said ASEAN as a group did not believe in military pacts or alliances, but member countries were free to pursue independent policies to safegaurd their security.

Mr. Romulo told newsmen that he did not revive the proposal for an ASEAN summit, originally raised by President Marcos last month "to give a political boost to ASEAN's efforts towards economic progress".

SUZUKI URGES COOPERATION IN 'ERA OF PACIFIC'

OW170312 Tokyo KYODO in English 0226 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Honolulu, Hawaii, June 16 KYODO -- Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Wednesday called for cooperation and solidarity among nations surrounding the Pacific to cope with the "era of the Pacific."

He made the call in his speech delivered at the East-West Center in Honolulu where he is visiting on the last leg of his four-nation tour which started on June 3.

The Japanese prime minister said that the Pacific region, rich in human and natural resources, is attaining the most dynamic development in the world. Therefore, Suzuki said, the nations in this region have to make efforts to turn the trend of cooperation into solidarity in order to exploit the big potentials in the Pacific region.

Suzuki set forth five principles for materializing the solidarity. They are:

-- The Pacific should be a sea of peace,
-- The Pacific should be a sea of freedom,
-- The Pacific has to be a sea of mutual benefits and
-- The Pacific should be an open sea.

Explaining the principles, Suzuki stressed the great role the United States as a Pacific state is playing for political and economic stability and security.

Suzuki also said that Japan represents an important stabilizing power in this region.

He said cooperation between Japan and the United States as well as among other industrial democracies in the region such as Canada, Australia and New Zealand, strengthening of solidarity of member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), steady development of South Korea and China's moderate foreign policy were playing a big role in the promotion of peace and prosperity in the region.

He also emphasized the need to guarantee a free exchange of persons and goods and voiced opposition against protectionist trends affecting the regional economic relations.

SAKURAUCHI MEETS INDONESIAN, AUSTRALIAN LEADERS

[Text] Singapore, June 16 KYODO -- Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and his Indonesian counterpart Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja agreed in principle Wednesday to conclude a governmental arrangement for developing Indonesia fishery and other marine resources with the help of Japanese technologies. Talks on the accord will start after domestic coordination work in the two countries, Japanese sources said.

The accord came when the two ministers met here Wednesday. Sakurauchi is here to take part in an enlarged foreign ministers' conference of the five-member ASEAN group and five other nations plus the European Community (EC) scheduled here for Thursday and Friday.

During the meeting, Sakurauchi asked for Indonesia's due consideration for Japanese investors regarding the Jakarta Government's two decisions on a total ban on shrimp trawling in Indonesian waters effective from next January and a total prohibition of timber exports from January 1986, the sources said.

Sakurauchi said such actions would deal a heavy blow to Japanese investers and sought some transitional measures before actual implementation of the bans, they said.

The Indonesian Minister replied there could be no change in the already decided policies, though he said his country takes note of the Japanese requests.

Sakurauchi also took up the Indonesian adoption of the so-called counter-purchase formula under which foreign enterprises winning Indonesian government project deals must in return purchase non-petrochemical products from Indonesia, the Japanese sources said.

Sakurauchi hoped for Jakarta's due consideration on the matter, suggesting that such a formula might constitute a protectionist action, he said.

But Mokhtar did not reply to the question, they said.

The two ministers agreed that Japan would send an economic delegation to Indonesia for a wide-ranging study to expand Japanese economic assistance, the sources added.

Sakurauchi presented Mokhtar with a dollar 20,000 cheque as a token of sympathy for some 35,000 Indonesians who suffered losses in the eruptions of the 2,180-meter Galunggung volcano in West Java in early April.

The Japanese foreign minister met with Australian Foreign Minister Anthony Austin Street Wednesday and shared a favorable view of the ASEAN group's support for the efforts of three Kampuchean resistance groups to form an anti-Vietnam coalition government.

Street, however, strongly opposed the restoration of the Pol Pot regime in Kampuchea, the sources said.

Sakurauchi informed the Australian minister of China's firm support of the Pol Pot government, referring to the talks between Japanese Premier Zenko Suzuki and Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang who visited Tokyo late last month through early this month.

Touching on Suzuki's pet plan for forming regional cooperative groups of the nations facing the Pacific, Sakurauchi and Steet agreed to study the idea through governmental and private-level talks in the future. Suzuki is expected to spell out the plan in Honolulu where he arrived Wednesday (Japan time).

OFFICIAL: NO PLAN NOW TO PREVENT YEN'S DECLINE

[Text] Tokyo June 17 KYODO -- Japan has no comprehensive plan at the moment to prevent the yen's further decline on foreign exchange markets, a senior government official said Thursday.

Ichiro Fujiwara, administrative vice minister of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, said virtually none of Japanese industrial sectors can benefit from the yen's drop against the U.S. dollar.

"Hardest hit is the oil industry. Energy-related industrial sectors will also be hurt," he told reporters. "We are annoyed by the yen's depreciation but see no way to prevent it for now."

Fujiwara said International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe expressed concern over the issue in a speech before a meeting of business leaders earlier in the day. But Abe offered no specific measures to keep the damage caused by the currency fluctuations to Japanese industry to a minimum, the vice minister added.

Geng Biao Address

[Speech by PRC Defense Minister Geng Biao at 16 June Kaesong banquet hosted by Kaesong Municipal KWP Committee and a KPA unit -- read by announcer]

[Text] Esteemed Comrade O Chin-u; esteemed Comrade Chu To-il; esteemed Comrade Kim Ki-song; and dear comrades and comrades-in-arms: With great pleasure, our military delegation has visited the heoric Korean city of Kaesong and received warm and cordial hospitality from the soldiers and people here. Representing all Chinese comrades here, I extend sincere gratitude for the warm speech which Comrade Chu To-il has just made.

Availing myself of this opportunity, I convey the warm greetings and lofty respect of the Chinese people and CPLA to the people of Kaesong city and the Korean comrades-in-arms defending the forward area on the front line.

During the fatherland liberation war, the heroic people of Kaesong city made a significant contribution. Since the cease-fire, under the wise leadership of President Kim Il-song, the great leader of the Korean people, the time-honored city of Kaesong, glorifying itself, has won great achievements in the industrial, agricultural, scientific, cultural and other fields. As a result, it has turned into a new industrial city.

The KPA soldiers stationed in the Kaesong area have won a remarkable achievement in defending the security of the northern half of the republic and in accomplishing the duties of military and political training through the joint efforts of the men and officers.

Kaesong, a city with a vital and magnificent appearance which sits on the north of the military demarcation line, is a symbol of the daily development of the northern half of the republic. The Chinese military delegation extends warm congratulations on all your achievements and hopes that the people of the Kaesong city and KPA units in the city, encouraged by the programmatic political speech which President Kim Il-song recently delivered, will win new achievements in carrying out the cause to accelerate socialist construction and to achieve the reunification of the country.

Today, we toured your units and places where the comrades-in-arms of China and Korea fought shoulder to shoulder. At this moment, we recall the battles where the numerous excellent sons and daughters of Korea fought shoulder to shoulder with us in the land of China during difficult days. Comrade Chu To-il, who arranged the banquet today, is a veteran fighter who fought shoulder to shoulder with us against the aggression of the imperialists.

As shown by the history of more than half century as the comrades-in-arms of China and Korea have always done, we help you in case of emergency and you help us in case of emergency. The relations between our two countries are lips-and-teeth relations and relations of sharing life-and-death destinies. The lips and teeth are interdependent. Without lips, the teeth are cold.

Sharing life-and-death destinies, we must support and help each other. As we did in the past, we will continue to do so. No matter what may happen, the Chinese people and CPLA, as they did in the past, will continue the mutual support and close cooperation with the Korean comrade-in-arms and will fight shoulder to shoulder until the final victory has been won.

We resolutely support the Korean people's sacred cause to achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland and resolutely support President Kim Il-song's reunification proposal for the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and his 10-point political program. The United States must withdraw all of its troops and equipment from South Korea.

We have a firm belief that the cause of the reunification which the entire Korean people have carried on for a prolonged period of time will certainly be achieved, and that a unified single Korea will certainly be established in the East of the world.

In conclusion, I propose a toast to the great friendship and militant unity sealed in blood between the peoples and armies of China and Korea; to the good health and longevity of Comrade President Kim Il-song -- the great leader of the Korean people and the intimate friend of the Chinese people; to the good health and longevity of the Comrade Secretary Kim Chong-il; to the good health of Comrade O Chin-u; to the good health of Comrade Chu To-il; to the good health of Comrade Kim Ki-son; and to the good health of other comrades and comrades-in-arms here.

MORE PROFESSIONALISM SOUGHT IN ECONOMIC OFFICIALS

[NODONG SINMUN 14 June special article: "Raising the Professional Level of Economic Guidance Functionaries Is an Important Requirement in the Development of the Situation"]

[Text] Today our people, armed with the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance, are vigorously marching forward to implement the decisions of the sixth party congress under the loftily raised militant lines of the party. One of the important problems in leading this huge struggle to victory is to constantly raise the professional level of the functionaries.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: All the functionaries at the state economic organs should gain a background in economic theory and technological knowledge by establishing a revolutionary study atmosphere and work earnestly to fulfill their tasks.

For the economic guidance functionaries, a high professional level is one of the important qualifications they are required to maintain as the commanding members of the revolution. The economic guidance functionaries are the commanding members of the revolution who directly organize and provide guidance in executing the party's lines and policies. For them to carry out the party's policies with the spirit of absoluteness and unconditionality, they should have a high professional level and endless loyalty to the party and the leader.

Socialist economic construction is a difficult and complicated struggle aimed at remodelling nature and society according to the demand of the chuche idea. For this reason, it is an important task to give correct answers to all difficult and complicated problems that arise and to solve them smoothly.

For the economic guidance functionaries to correctly solve all difficult and complicated problems, they should have the ability to analyze the situation in a correct manner and to carry out economic and organizational work.

The professional level of the economic guidance functionaries is to be reflected in the activities of unconditionally implementing the party's economic policy. The more knowledge an economic functionary has, the better he can analyze problems through the eye of the party's policy planning. Thus, he can apply correct methodology in solving all problems.

What is more, if an economic guidance functionary has a high professional level, he makes bold decisions to tackle the tasks -- no matter how difficult they may be -- by himself and push ahead with them. The economic guidance functionaries are the commanding members of the revolution who are assigned the task of letting the producing masses know the goals of their struggle and the means to implement them and encourage them to implement the party's policies. Because they are to work with the masses and lead them, they must be well versed in the party's policies and have a good understanding of the economic work and scientific technology to provide guidance to the masses and to have their guidance understood by the masses.

Today the scope of our economy has expanded, and the production ties between sectors are complicated. Modern scientific and technological successes are broadly applied to production and the level of technology and equipment of the national economy is rapidly being enhanced. Under such circumstances, if the functionaries fail to endlessly raise their professional level, they will lag far behind and eventually fail to defend the revolutionary guardposts assigned by the party. This being the case, high political and working qualifications are some of the important qualifications our functionaries should possess.

Raising the level of the economic guidance functionaries is an indispensable condition for upholding the party's leadership in a more superb manner and for rapidly accelerating socialist construction.

Our party is an invincible and powerful party which is leading the revolution and construction victory by its extraordinary leadership. All of the goals of struggle and policies put forth by our party are high and grand -- beyond imagination -- and are expected to develop at an extraordinary speed. When the 10 major prospective targets of socialist economic construction put forth by our party are realized, the gross industrial production at the end of 1980's will be increased by 3.2 times compared to that of 1980 and 1,000 times more than in 1940. This is, indeed, a surprising development speed.

Trusting our people's strength and the economic guidance functionaries, our party has put forth a bold and large-scale program for economic construction -- unprecedented in our history. The economic guidance functionaries are the core force which are to operate in a bold way and deftly command the struggle to implement this great program put forth by our party.

To correctly uphold and brilliantly implement the plans and intentions of our party with mellowed and tested leadership, the functionaries should possess the organizationsl skill and commanding ability to cope with them. Such organizational skill and commanding ability do not come naturally. This can be experienced only when the functionaries steadily study and endlessly raise their level.

The economic guidance functionaries learned about science and technology and have grown as commanding staffs of the revolution through our party's scrupulous care. Only when the economic guidance functionaries energetically strive to enhance their own level in accord with the party's lofty demand and the development of reality can they unconditionally accomplish the party's lines and policy.

Today our party demands that the economic guidance functionaries substantively guide the lower units based on reality in accord with the demand of the new industrial guidance system. In order to faithfully embody the party's demand, economic guidance functionaries should fully know about the party's policy and economic knowledge, as well as science and technology. They can manage and operate enterprises in a most scientific and reasonable way and advance production and construction in a speedy manner. They can also correctly mobilize and utilize all reserves, factors and potentials required for the growth of production.

Our nation's economic potential provided under the wise leadership of the party is great and powerful. We have inexhaustible scientific and technological foundations. We have all conditions to accelerate economic construction. Our people's enthusiasm and resolution to uphold and carry out the party's ideas and intention are very high.

This is an excellent fleet steed enabling us to make new upsurges. The men who should ride this fleet steed are none other than our guidance functionaries.

For the economic guidance functionaries to push ahead with the socialist construction, they should steadily strive to upgrade their professional level. It is a glorious task for the economic guidance functionaries in repaying the party's lofty political trust with technology and loyalty to upgrade their professional level.

The party's political trust is the glory and happiness given to the functionaries who uphold and carry out the party's leadership with loyalty devoting everything and entrusting their destiny to the party. The functionaries can have political life through the party's political trust and glorify their political life only through the party's trust.

In order for the economic guidance functionaries to glorify their political life, they should prepare themselves to repay the party's trust with technology and loyalty. It is an endlessly glorious and rewarding task for the economic guidance functionaries to satisfactorily enact work assigned by the party.

Our party strongly demanded that the functionaries raise their political and ideological levels and the level of their capability of handling economic work. This is a demonstration of the love and great trust of the party, encouraging them to glorify their political life in the bosom of the party forever and to fulfill a glorious mission as commanding staffs of the revolution.

All the economic guidance functionaries should strive to raise their own levels, fully realizing the party's demand and intention. As taught by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, it is the primary task of the people who carry out the revolution to study. Only when they study can they raise the level of their political work, continuously advance and enhance their loyalty to the party.

Our experience shows that when the functionaries neglect study and fail to reach a sound professional level, they can neither fulfill their primary mission as the commanding staff of the revolution nor complete the revolution.

The party organizations at all levels should direct attention to the work of arming the economic guidance functionaries with party policy and scientific and technological knowledge and of familiarizing themselves with the economic work so they thoroughly establish the revolutionary traits for study. They should correctly organize and guide the study in accord with the characteristics in the work fields of the individual functionary.

All the economic functionaries should strenuously study and substantively carry out the study by linking this with practical activities and eliminating formalism in study so they can utilize the study for implementation of the revolution.

They should become capable functionaries and reliable commanding staffs of the revolution who have a thorough knowledge of the party's policy and who have mastered science and technology, as well as the work in their field, and who can lead today's all-out advance.

NODONG SINMUN STRESSES IMPORTANCE OF FARMING

[NODONG SINMUN 9 June editorial: "Let Us Continuously Exert Great Efforts Toward Farming"]

[Text] This year's rice transplanting and corn sowing have now been successfully completed. The rural economy faces an important task of ensuring a bumper crop by superbly carrying out farming work.

With a deep understanding of the progress in overall farming this year, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has recently stressed the need to make sustained efforts in farming.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Today we face an honorable task to completely solve the question of feeding the people by producing more rice.

It is an important task for the entire party, nation and all the people to make a great sustained effort toward farming in order to smoothly solve the grain problem in conformity with the rapid progress of socialist construction by implementing our party's guideline giving priority to farming.

As has been taught by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the most urgent matter in the material life of society is the food problem. Producing more rice is the key to the solution of the peasant's problem.

Only when rice is easily available as a result of a good harvest can the nation thrive and socialist construction be well carried out. The nation's granary must be full in order to hasten the nation's reunification -- the long-standing desire of the nation -- at an early date, and to maintain the nation's independence as well.

Only when we keep increasing the production of grains by making efforts toward farming can we hasten production of 15 million tons of grain and further hasten the grand plan of the great leader for communist distribution of rice supply. For this reason, our party has always given priority to farming and made the entire party, nation and all the people engage in farming.

Despite the unfavorable conditions influenced by the cold front, we have been able to solve the food problem by harvesting good crops in past years. This should be attributed to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song who established a scientific farming method and to the entire party, nation and all the people who vigorously waged a struggle to implement the farming method.

Also, in order to successfully produce this year's grain production target, we must continuously concentrate on farming. Under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and under the guidance of the party, we have completed rice transplanting and corn sowing by growing strong seedlings and by overcoming unfavorable weather conditions. This is the initial proud success in our farming for this year.

Whether our success continues in this year's farming depends on how superbly we maintain the field and rice paddies which have so far been good from the start. [passage indistinct] All party members and working people, upholding the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's teachings on giving priority to farming, should see to it that the people produce the grain production target as assigned by the party.

The most important things is that all party members and working people in all sectors of the national economy, including the agriculture sector, should continue to make great efforts toward farming with a deep understanding of the party's demand for sustained efforts directed toward farming.

When it demands sustained efforts for farming, the party means that party members and working people should not be content with victory in the rice transplanting struggle but continue to direct all available strength in the rural community to urgent farming tasks and supply labor and material assistance to help solve problems arising in farming.

All functionaries and working people in all sectors, including the agriculture sector, should fulfill the assigned tasks unconditionally and without fail by deeply understanding the party's intention in urging them to make sustained efforts toward farming. First of all, it is important for them to make great efforts at weeding and cultivating the crops. Now that we have completed rice transplanting and corn sowing, such things as weeding, preventing diseases and measures to protect the crops from damage by rain and winds are needed to cultivate the crop and are the most important tasks facing the rural economy sector at this juncture.

Only when we take proper care of the crops can we achieve victory in farming this significant year by thoroughly implementing the party's guidelines giving priority to farming.

The rural economy sector should conduct weeding in a timely manner by mobilizing all available labor and machines and other means, never being satisfied with the initial success won in rice transplanting and corn sowing.

Functionaires at the rural economy sector should set a detailed schedule for weeding and lay groundwork for organizational progress in conformity with changing conditions on the spot. Agricultural workers and assistants should meticulously carry out weeding work with sincerity, maintaining the attitude of the masters of the nation's granary. At the same time, the rural economy sector should take thorough measures to prevent damage by rain and winds and protect the crops from diseases.

To carry out the party's demand for giving priority to farming, we should produce and supply items needed for farming, including fertilizer and pesticides in a timely manner so as not to cause trouble to farming.

For the industrial sectors to produce and guarantee chemical fertilizer and pesticides in a timely manner is the most important task facing the industry in assisting agriculture. Enterprises and plants of the concerned sectors such as the chemical fertilizer industry should wage a vigorous struggle to fulfill the target of fertilizer production, item by item, without fail, for this year.

It is also important to supply and transport the items needed for farming such as chemical fertilizer to rural communities as priority items as is done during the rice transplanting period. No matter how much of the items needed for farming such as chemical fertilizer the enterprises and plants may produce, unless they are transported to the rural communities, a failure will result with irrevocable consequences.

Functionaries and working people at the railway sector and land and marine transportation sectors should see to it that they transport such farming items as fertilizer and pesticides to the rural communities in a timely manner so as not to cause problems in cultivating the field crops and rice paddies by planning well the transportation organizational works. In particular, they should see to it that the farming items not stay at production sites or railway stations by giving priority to transporting them.

To thoroughly implement the party's guidelines giving priority to farming, it is important that the functionaries in the rural economy sector and other concerned sectors be alert in performing guidance work to guarantee the farming work.

Only when the guidance functionaries maintain alertness as shown during the rice transplanting period and lead the struggle can the masses properly cultivate the crops in the fields and rice paddies with sustained revolutionary enthusiasm and battle spirit and make renovations in the struggle to produce farming items.

All functionaries in the rural economy sector should set a battle plan for farming processes, energetically organize and mobilize the masses to carry out the plans and should stay in the field to work with the masses so that they can weed and cultivate the crops in a timely manner. In addition, the functionaries in the chemical industry and other concerned sectors should come down to the production sites to solve pending problems by acquainting themselves with the situation and energetically encourage the masses in the battle for the production of fertilizer and pesticides.

Assisting the rural community with labor is our party's consistent policy and it is an important demand needed to carry out the vast works facing the rural economy in a timely manner.

All party members and working people helping the rural community should continue to help in the rural community's urgent battle as is done during the rice transplanting period, maintaining the air of the masters and with responsibility, upholding the party's policy of helping the rural community.

All the assistants, with masters' determination to take full responsibility for this year's farming along with the agricultural workers, should sincerely attend to the cultivation of even each single crop plant.

The party organizations should continue to enhance their roles in farming works. All party organizations and three revolutions work team members in the rural community should perform political deeds and engage in tasks concerning relations between men and, in particular, wage vigorous economic agitation among agricultural workers and assistants so that they continue to cultivate the field crops and rice paddies with vigorous and high morale.

At the same time, party organizations of all strata should lead the economic guidance functionaries in carrying out their guidance work by maintaining the air of masters.

Let us all uphold the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's recent teachings on sustained efforts toward farming and attain the target of this year's grain production as assigned by the party.

TIMES RECONSTRUCTS 'POLITICAL SUMMIT' DIALOGUE

["Gist" of dialogue between President Chon Tu-hwan, who also heads the majority Democratic Justice Party, Rep. Yu Chi-song, president of the Democratic Korea Party, Rep. Yi Chae-hyong, chairman of the DJP, and Kim Chong-chol, president of the Korea National Party, during luncheon talks at Chongwadae on 16 June]

[Text] Yu: It seems that the public mind has become uneasy as a result of the scandal perpetrated by Mme. Chang Yong-cha. Our party's position is both the majority and minority parties should make efforts to solve the current situation through the National Assembly without driving the political situation into a catastrophe.

I think that Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun and the ministers concerned should be held accountable for the incident.

I hope that the President will urge the pertinent authorities to investigate thoroughly the behind-the-scene figures in the scandal and the whereabouts of the money.

I hope that the government will free politicians, students and religious men now under arrest.

It is also our hope that you will help make the National Assembly more active, amending the assembly law and the basic press law.

I recommend that the local autonomy system be implemented on a gradual basis to enable each city and provincial government to solve its own problems for itself.

The government is required to continue to be generous about campus problems, persuading the students.

I suggest that the president issue a special statement expressing the government policy direction based on the opinions of the minority parties to help settle the current situation the country is faced with.

I hope that a foundation for the realization of a peaceful change of power will be created during the incumbent president's term of office.

Our party believes that the present political system should not be changed. If it is changed, we will lose ground as participants in the present system.

Kim: Additional measures to call the ministers concerned to account must be taken. Both the rival parties and the president should pool wisdom together to achieve national reconciliation at this moment.

I suggest the that a special committee for political development be set up in the National Assembly, simultaneously with the formation of a special emergency economic committee in the parliament.

I hope that the president will do away with the present bad social trend of trying to make a big fortune at one stroke.

Yi: Due counterplans are necessary to help enterprises, which are running into big debts because of their surplus investment. The government is required to foster small and medium enterprises to help them prepare for a business perk-up after two or three years.

The supervision and examination of banks, security companies and insurance firms whose function has been diversified must be strengthened.

I recommend that the government adopt a policy to ensure the production costs of agricultural products for increased incomes of farmers.

I also recommend that the government establish fundamental measures for the reform of the supply structure of agricultural products.

President Chon: I will fully examine your recommendations to reflect them to the maximum possible extent in the execution of state policies within my authority as president.

I promised a peaceful transfer of political power to the people when I made my political debut.

It may not be awkward for some citizens to be suspicious whether a peaceful transfer of power will be realized because there is a precedent that leaders in the past have reneged on what they have pledged to the people in the last stage by mobilizing all means available.

It is really unfortunate and regrettable to see this trend of mistrust still surviving. There is no change at all in my firm resolution to create a new political climate by establishing a tradition of peaceful transfer of power during my tenure of office.

For a man who enjoys power, holding power in his whole life will be regarded as insufficient. But for a man who is determined to serve and sacrifice himself in the interests of the people and the country, a seven-year term of office will be a weary period. I think I could not serve for a longer period of time even if I were requested to do so.

All political leaders who will lead this country in the days ahead should be prepared to leave their seats in a clean manner after rendering service and sacrificing for the cause of the people without thinking of engaging in politics for a long time.

In case of the recent huge fraudulent loan-bill scandal, it could have been dealt with quietly and simply. Nevertheless, I ordered a thorough investigation as I regarded it as rightful to unveil clearly and openly any type of irregularity irrespective of social positions and ranks of the people involved in them or whether they were my relatives. I believe that a tradition of punishing sternly even my relatives if they violated pertinent law should be set following the scandal. It also provided a good turning point to improve basically the financial system.

I am going to grant freedom to those now under arrest after reinvestigation when they show sincere repentance. I also plan to remove the political ban on former politicians when I am convinced that they repent sincerely as I disclosed in my press conference at Chinhae last year. But I will consider lifting the ban at an appropriate time on a gradual basis because it is still premature to do so now.

I reserved change of the concerned ministers in the last cabinet reshuffle as I believed that solution of the post-scandal issues would bring benefits to both the country and the people while a shift of persons was not so urgent.

Matter-of-factly, retaining them was the equivalent of punishment. As the scandal-related problems are almost settled, I will consider shuffling the concerned ministers at a proper time.

Yu: I think that the president is at the center of politics, he should not be damaged in any circumstances. I hope that well-qualified persons who are widely known to the public will be given posts in the government, although views of the nation and faithfulness are significant.

President Chon: When we push ahead with our projects in five to six years, our goals of the achievement of more than $2,000 in per capita GNP and $100 billion in GNP will be realized with economic conditions incomparable with those of North Korea.

During my tenure of office I am going to consolidate the security system. We must build military strength not only to cope with the never-ending North Korean threats but with any other state as clashes or disputes are unpredictable.

I am going to solidify the foundation for early realization of unification. I can predict prospects for clues to unification during the coming five years. However, there are signs of hardships in North Korea and there is no possibility that such difficult problems will be solved in the near future.

DKP SEES 'PROGRESS' FROM CHONGWADAE TALKS

[Text] Yu Chi-song, president of the opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP), predicted yesterday that a Cabinet shakeup would be carried out soon.

After attending the meeting between President Chon Tu-hwan and leaders of the three major political parties, the DKP leader also said, "I think that the meeting was a step towards the solution of the difficult situation facing the nation."

Meeting with reporters at the party headquarters, Yu said that the promise made by President Chon to lift the political ban on hundreds of former politicians on a gradual basis as "progress" in the politics of the nation.

Meanwhile, ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) spokesman Kim Yong-Tae described the Chongwadae meeting as "helpful" to solving the overall state issues. In a statement, the spokesman also said that the political summitry will be a turning point to further strengthen cooperation between the ruling and opposition camps and to solidify the spirit of unity among the people.

"Our party will fully reflect the opinions expressed by the political leaders at the meeting in a comprehensive package to be mapped out soon," he said.

Yi Song-il, spokesman of the opposition Korea National Party (KNP), said that "the meeting was profitable, in that our party president Kim Chong-chol directly conveyed the party's present stance toward major national issues and the demands of the people to the president."

In a statement, the spokesman said it was regrettable that President Chon could not answer the KNP leader's questions squarely.

HERALD VIEWS 16 JUNE CHON-PARTY LEADERS TALKS

[By Kim Ki-sok]

[Text] The "political summitry" at Chongwadae yesterday was meaningful simply because the head of state sat with leaders of major political parties to exchange frank views on how to tackle national issues of immediate public concern.

In addition to the recent curb loan scandal, the chief executive put forth his political philosophy and views on domestic politics and democracy, and his determination to terminate irregular practices. Chon reiterated his call for the establishment of a tradition of peaceful change of political power during his tenure as presidency. "There has not been any change in my mind that I will establish, by all means, a new political atmosphere by setting up a tradition of peaceful transfer of government power," the president noted.

This speaks for Chon's firm determination to develop democracy in Korea by doing away with the vicious cycle prevalent in the past, according to political observers.

In his talks with party leaders, the president hinted to remove gradually the political ban on those former politicians who "show signs of repentance." However, he said it is a little premature to do so now. "The gradual removal of political ban on former politicians will serve as another significant momentum for the promotion of "national reconciliation," the observers view.

The Chongwadae talks are a fine example of "politics of dialogue" designed to pool national wisdom for effective and prompt weathering of the difficulties facing the country today, the observers commented.

They recalled that Chon has frequenlty engaged in dialogue with people from various walks of life, including leaders of opposition political camps and from the grass roots, in an effort to gather opinions from all segments of society, to effectively administer state affairs.

The summitry, the third of its kind since President Chon's inauguration, was a suggestion of Yu Chi-song, leader of the opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP). Yu proposed in a news conference June 2 that he would like to have an "exclusive" meeting with President Chon to discuss the after-effects of the recent loan shark scandal, but he later gave in to growing assertions that it should also be participated in by leaders of other parties.

During the lengthy meeting, which began over a luncheon, Chon and party leaders took up political, economic and social issues.

The opposition party leaders gave the president a set of separate proposals to revitalize the nation. The first consideration is the public sentiments disturbed by the loan scandal and to clear the air for political and economic rejuvenation.

Another political observer insists that it would be unproductive for the nation to be "continuously" haunted by the scandal. "Let the court take care of the case," he asserts, suggesting now is the time for the nation to devote its energies toward productive goals.

One of the opposition party demands in connection with the scandal has been the resignation of certain Cabinet members whose jobs are related to financial matters. Even lawmakers of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) have asked for their resignation. What action the president will make remains to be seen, but he strongly hinted at their replacement eventually in the Chongwadae talks. "I will consider replacing the ministers concerned... at an opportune time," he said. Chon then asked the party leaders to leave it to him to determine when the shakeup will come.

The upcoming reshuffle will be the third to be made in connection with the loan scandal. The first one was made on May 21 and the second one on June 2. He replaced more than half of the Cabinet ministers and the leadership of the ruling DJP.

Other proposals made by opposition party leaders included a political revitalization and implementation of the local autonomy system.

It is to be noted that the president, for the first time, mentioned the change of recent developments inside North Korea which were reported by several noted foreign news medias. On this, the president remarked, "Recently there have been signs that some difficult changes are taking place in North Korea. If those difficult problems are not settled in the near future and I believe they will grow worse."

[Text] It appears likelv that a supplementary Cabinet shakeup in the wake of the Blue House meeting will be made this weekend, if not, at the latest, in the middle of next week.

A political source said on 16 June: Though he asked those present at the Blue House meeting to leave it to him to determine when the reshuffle will come, referring to the question on the responsibility assumed by the Cabinet, President Chon reviewed the question of additionally replacing those Cabinet members responsible for the loan scandal a long time ago. If two or so ministers are replaced, the shakeup will be made around this week.

The political source went on to say: Should the Cabinet reshuffle be made on a large scale, the date would seem to fall at the end of next week in consideration of the schedule of Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun, who will return on 24 June from his visit to Saudi Arabia as a condolence envoy.

He added: I understand that a small-scale reshuffle will be more possible than a large-scale one at this moment.

'MASTERMIND' QUESTIONED IN PUSAN ARSON TRIAL

SK170039 Seoul KYONGHYANG SINMUN in Korean 15 Jun 82 p 7

[Text] Pusan -- by reporter Kim Il -- At the afternoon session of first-day trials of those who were involved in the act of arson at the U.S. cultural center in Pusan, which was resumed at 1500 on 14 June, the questioning of defendant Kim Hyon-chang, 32, who was indicted on the charge of masterminding the Pusan arson, was completed.

Answering the prosecution's questions, which continued till 1650, Kim admitted the prosecution charges that he, "in the conscious-raising education given to Mun Pu-sik and others, at the education center of the Wonju Diocese of the Catholic Church during the period of 16-22 December 1981, told them not to fail to include a passage about 'completion of the preparations for northward invasion' when disseminating leaflets." However, on the contents of the conscious-raising education and his ideological background, he denied the prosecution charges.

At the first-day session of the trials, the prosecution undertook intensive questioning on the conscious-raising education which the defendant had given to 27 college students in seven groups during the past 2 years in such places as Pusan, Wonju and North Cholla Province.

To a question of the prosecution, Kim answered that "I did not call for U.S. troops to withdraw from Korea, but told Mun Pu-sik and others that the significance of the presence of the U.S. troops in Korea was being tarnished."

When the prosecution questioned why he urged inclusion of a passage about "completion of the preparations for northward invasion" in leaflets, the defendant Kim answered: "Because I thought that the continued import of weapons by the present regime may eventually precipitate a northward invasion."

When he was questioned about the schemes "to establish a socialist/communist state through a mass revolution and nationalization of production means," Kim told the prosecution: "I gave an objective explanation of the nature of socialism and capitalism but never called for overthrow of the capitalist system and a shift to the socialist system."

On the conscious-raising education, Kim stated that, in mid-Decmeber 1980, in the room of Father Choe Ki-sik, then director of the Catholic Education Center of Wonju Diocese, "I sympathized when Father Choe told me that he undertook various activities against the Yusin system, and showed me the appeals of various kinds and a diary written in prison, and, thenceforth, I launched the conscious-raising education because I thought it was necessary to organize the youths and students of the nation."

On those who were given the conscious-raising education, Kim stated: "The education was given to those college students who were against the present regime, and defendent Ho Chin-su in Pusan area, defendant Kim Yong-ae in the Wonju area and Yi Kwang-chol in North Cholla Province functioned as liaison to select 27 of those representing the seven groups, including Mun Pu-sik, and 7-day education sessions were given to them at the retreat of the Presbyterian church in Maepo, North Chungchong Province, and at the education center of the Wonju Diocese of the Catholic Church." On the method of the conscious-raising education, Kim told the prosecution that "'An Idol and Reason' and 'Logic at the Time of Change' were discussed as textbooks and, about difficult concepts, I read my notes and the students took dictacion." When the prosecution questioned why he prohibited the students from going out during the education sessions, defendant Kim answered that he "only put up a sign saying 'retreat' outside the door to prevent others from entering the room."

When the prosecution questioned "who would, in his thinking, have to lead the new regime to be established after the overthrow of the present regime," Kim stated: "As was the case with the Ho Chong Cabinet established following the 19 April uprising, it was planned to first establish a transitional government participated in by personages of all strata and, then, to turn power over to a democratic regime."

Meanwhile, at the first-day session of the trials, the court decided that, at the continuation of the trials, the prosecution would question all the defendants and the defense would conduct a cross examination.

The questioning sessions of the trials will reportedly be held every Monday, sometimes on Saturdays, till around late July, and the court sentences are expected to be announced early August. The next court session is scheduled for 1000, 21 June.

FOREIGN MINISTER, JAPAN ENVOY MAEDA HOLD TALKS

[Text] Seoul, June 16 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok and Japan's Ambassador to Seoul Toshikazu Maeda had a 40-minute meeting apparently concerning bilateral economic issues Wednesday afternoon.

Details of the meeting were not officially announced, but the two were believed to have discussed resuming the deadlocked negotiations on Seoul's request for six billion U.S. dollars in Japanese Government loans.

This was the first official contact between Japan and Korea in nearly 20 days since Maeda visited Yi's immediate predecessor, No Sin-yong, May 24. Yi assumed his present post June 2.

SLOW BUSINESS RECOVERY EXPECTED IN THIRD QUARTER

SK170151 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 17 Jun 82 p 7

[Text] Domestic business conditions during the third quarter of this year are expected to remain at the same level as the second quarter, despite seasonal increases in demand for foodstuffs, cement, footwear and machinery.

According to a report on the business movements of major industries released by the Federation of Korean Industries (FKI) yesterday, the composite business index in the third quarter of this year is forecast to mark 92.5 points, up 0.1 percentage point over the second quarter.

Such a slow tone in business recovery is mainly attributable to sluggish exports caused by declining L/C arrivals, decreasing domestic demand and inactive sales by domestic businesses.

NEED TO DEVELOP COOPERATIVE SECTOR STRESSED

BK111145 Rangoon WORKING PEOPLE'S DAILY in English 5 Jun 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Small-Scale Co-op Industries"]

[Text] The cooperative sector is second pillar of the socialist economy. The sector is to contribute significantly towards raising the standard of living by two-fold by 1993-94, the last year of the 20-year long-term plan. By then the sector's share of national production is targeted to reach 33 percent. The sector still has a long way to go to meet the deadline of these targets.

One way of meeting these targets is increasing the productive capability of the cooperative sector through expansion of producers' cooperatives [Procos]. According to the report to the Pyithu Hluttaw [People's Assembly] of 1982, the total output of Procos amounted to K 1,627.3 million in 1981-82. The total volume of business handled by the entire sector (including the value of goods purchased from the state and cooperative enterprises and distributed to the public) amounted to K 6,867.9 million for the same year. These figures leave a wide gap between the value of goods produced by cooperative enterprises and the value of goods distributed by the sector, thus underscoring the need for expanding the producers' cooperatives as far as possible.

Among the producers' cooperatives, industrial Procos, the number of which increased from 552 in 1978-79 to 706 in 1981-82, are the largest group in terms of production. Out of the total value of production turned out by the Procos amounting to K 1,627.3 million in 1981-82, the industrial Procos accounted for K 905.4 million (against K 279.9 million by the agricultural Procos). It is encouraging to learn that the Cooperative Department and the Cottage Industries Department are jointly sponsoring a seminar on feasibility survey and planning for the establishment of small scale cooperative industries. Participants of the seminar will exchange ideas on modern business management methods to be adopted in the running of cooperative enterprises, analyse their commercial accountability and work out principles for planning. As expansion of Procos is urgently needed, questions relating to their feasibility study and systematic planning deserve special attention. We believe that highly useful facts will emerge from the seminar that can be effectively applied in the establishment of small-scale cooperative industries along systematic lines.

VOPB DISCUSSES DRAFT CITIZENSHIP BILL

BK141430 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Burma in Burmese to Burma 1200 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Unattributed article: "The Military Government's Draft Citizenship Bill or the Military Clique's Manifesto Declaring its Bourgeois, Racial Bigotry"]

[Text] Chapter I, Section 1: "This law shall be called the Burmese Citizenship Law" -- so says the draft citizenship bill or the bourgeois and racially bigoted manifesto of the Burma Socialist Program [BSP] military clique published in the Burmese press.

Will this draft bill, in preparation for 6 years starting from 1976, contribute to strengthening national unity among the people of various nationalities living in the country, or will it disrupt and divide them? Will it contribute to unity among naturalized citizens of foreign descent and national citizens, or will it divide them?

This so-called draft citizenship bill, prepared in accordance with the state constitution which legalizes and safeguards the BSP one-party dictatorship, is full of legal terms, yet many loopholes remain enabling the military clique to carry out its arbitrary, bourgeois and racially bigoted policies.

All the world's reactionary rulers try to create racial or religious conflicts under different guises whenever they encounter political or economic difficulties. If they believe themselves to be strong, they tend to stir up trouble directed at another race from a different country. But if they are weak, they prey on an ethnic minority group inside the country. It has become their custom to gain breathing space through such tactics. They are in fact diverting attention from the existing class antagonisms to racial and religious antagonisms. When they become politically bankrupt and can find no way out, they resort to singling out a political organization or individuals and to conducting smear campaigns on racial grounds. The Ne Win-San Yu military clique is no exception to this rule.

The BSP government's draft bill, which replaces the 1948 act, contains sections which can be interpreted as the government deems suitable. For instance, the concluding part -- Section 41 of Chapter XV of the draft bill -- says: The State Council may decide whether a race is a national race or not. This attitude definitely contradicts the laws of social science. How can this be deemed a scientific approach when, at the moment, there are no yardsticks to classify what constitutes a race or a language? Giving such power arbitrarily to the State Council is sheer madness.

Moreover, in Section 42B of the same chapter, the bill says: The Council of Ministers and the central body may decide as appropriate in the interest of the state. No reason shall be given for such a decision.

This shows that the bill in fact endows the military clique with more power. Through the monopoly of power, people, living in a country with unstable and uncertain conditions, can then be humbled into accepting the BSP government as their master.

The draft bill may be lengthy and full of flowery legal phrases, but the concluding part winds up with big clout for the military clique. Thus, the bill drafted by the [illegible] Law Commission explicitly exposes the military dictatorship character of [illegible]ers.

Section 2 of Chapter I of the bill defines "national" as follows: "National" means persons belonging to races settled in any of the territories now included within the state as their permanent home from a period anterior to 1823 A.D.

To study this point, it is necessary to view the conditions objectively instead of from one's own point of view.

1. Is the territorial boundary of feudal Burma in 1823 A.D. the same as the current one?

2. Can we definitely discern which nationals resided in Burma more than 100 years ago?

3. Can we definitely say that people who lived in the frontier areas at that time knew in which country they lived?

4. Is the military government ignorant of the fact that people living in frontier areas, which were then yet to be demarcated, moved from place to place to hunt and farm?

We doubt it. Why, then, the stipulated conditions?

The answer is: Reactionary rulers never desire a sincere solution to problems concerning frontiers and borders. They always keep an ace up their sleeve so that, when settling problems, they can reap political and economic benefits from it.

It has been the practice of this government and its employees to bully ethnic minority groups and foreigners living in border areas. Similarly, previous, successive reactionary governments in Burma also persecuted naturalized citizens and foreigners. The so-called draft citizenship bill of the reactionaries, who have no qualms about causing even racial and religious-centered riots, is in fact designed to create conditions in which they can do whatever they please.

For instance, Chapter IX of that bill [concerning revocation of citizenship or naturalized citizenship] in its entirety is an overt political threat to and restraint upon people who are naturalized citizens or who have acquired citizenship or who intend to apply for citizenship. Subsections under Section 31, labelled B, C, D and so forth, of Chapter IX, are rules which can be applied arbitrarily by the government to carry out political persecution.

The phrase used in Subsection B: [Trading or communicating with] "an organization hostile to the state" covers a lot of ground. It means do not get involved in any other politics except for that under the BSP one-party dictatorship. Also, the phrase under Subsection C which says "reason to believe that any act likely to endanger the sovereignty and security of the state or public peace and tranquility has been, or is being or will be committed," is to grant arbitrary powers to the military government and its mercenaries.

The glaring discrimination against naturalized citizens can be seen in Section 27 of Chapter VI. The section says: No naturalized citizen shall have the following rights: 1) the right to be elected as a people's representative; 2) the right to serve as head of public services bodies; 3) rights restricted by any law; and, 4) rights restricted by the Council of Ministers from time to time with the approval of the State Council.

Today, in this jet-age world, every country -- capitalist or socialist -- grants the right for naturalized citizens to become members of Parliament or of any body equivalent to Parliament. Some naturalized citizens have even become ministers. The military government, however, is very outdated and pursues a narrow racial outlook. It persistently sows discord on racial grounds.

Also in Section 16 of Chapter V, the bill states: A naturalized citizen shall not be permitted to leave the state within 5 years of naturalization.

This is a violation of the basic human right of freedom to travel. According to their citizenship bill, naturalized citizens are no different from criminals under house arrest.

From the points mentioned earlier, it is clear that while the military clique grants citizenship only because it has no other choice, it still mistrusts, looks down on and wants to persecute citizens. The military clique's true feelings were exposed because it was forced to move the bill through the legal process.

Throughout their lifetimes -- from colonial times and up until now -- members of the military clique, who were once groomed by Japanese fascists and later became loyalists of the British expansionists, have always practiced racial bigotry toward citizens as well as foreigners. They oppress people of all nationalities through civil war, create racial riots to persecute people and preserve their power by various means of racial oppression. Such a citizenship bill, drafted by the military clique and soon to be passed, is merely the military clique's manifesto declaring its bourgeois, racial bigotry.

HENG SAMRIN ON KEY TASKS, RELATIONS WITH ASEAN

LD140832 Budapest MTI in English 1723 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Text] Budapest, Jun 13 (MTI) -- "Now and in the future the cooperation of the three Indochinese countries and the socialist community is the principal guarantee of the socialism-bound Kampuchean revolution. The extremely important solidarity covers the reconstruction of the country and action against the common enemies, the Chinese leadership, the United States and other hostile forces," stated in his inteview with NEPSZABADSAG in Phnom Penh Heng Samrin, general secretary of the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea and president of the Council of State. The interview is carried in the June 12 issue of the daily. Heng Samrin outlined the key tasks of the Kampuchean party and state as follows [excerpts):

"After routing the Pol Potists genocidal regime, the key task is to form a new, a people's system. We are pursuing two strategic goals: to enrich the country and society and to strengthen our defence to counter outside pressure and threat.

"We concentrate our efforts on establishing the organs of people's power, especially on local levels. To be able to solve our tasks, we need apt leaders in all spheres: the military, the security forces, public administration, economic management and other areas of social life. Many of the cadres and leaders committed to the people's cause were murdered by the Pol Potists; therefore, we have to train new leaders and activists because man is the most important factor in any organization or board."

Of the economic tasks Heng Samrin said:

"Of paramount importance is the effective organization of agriculture. Our aim is to collective [as received] agriculture, to strengthen the socialist sector. These efforts are led by the government, the leadership, the state agencies. Solidarity work groups (farming cooperatives) have emerged in many parts of the country, signalling the beginning of collectivization. The members are paid according to their performance.

"No small difficulties had to be surmounted in these areas. In this context let me remind you of the 'agricultural policy' of the Pol Pot era, which included forced labour, starvation, concentration camps, the murder of the weak and of those violating the absurd regulations. The perpetrators used some 'socialist' doctrine for their acts. In fact, they had nothing to do with socialism."

Heng Samrin said that after 1979, the liberation, in starting the agricultural works, the urgent assistance of Vietnam, the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries, the support of international organizations "were liberally life-saving, it assured the basis for restarting life for the Kampucheans."

Heng Samrin described this year's crop as mediocre according to the estimates. In terms of the area shown and the yields, the plan calls for achieving 1980's level, the highest one so far. In other words, irrigated rice is grown in 1.3 million hectares and dry rice is grown in 100,000 hectares. Now at the end of the dry season it can be said that the plan for the area sown by unirrigated rice will be fulfilled. "Yet in 1982 there will be a shortage of food in the inter-harvest period, to be remedied from the aid supplies."

Of the industrial policy, Heng Samrin said: "In the short run we plan a moderate, not-too-fast rate of growth, with concentration on reconstruction in the first period. We shall rebuild or build those plants and enterprises that satisfy basic needs, first of all, those of agriculture."

Of the work of the elected organs of people's representation Heng Samrin said that in 1981 the people of Kampuchea elected the members of the local people's revolutionary committees (councils), the new National Assembly and the legislature.

The new National Assembly has held two sessions. It passed the new constitution and the plan for 1982. The Council of State has been formed. It is an important achievement that throughout the country the elected provincial, district, town and communal councils, the organs of people's representation, operate.

Important results have been scored in the reorganization of health and education. There is a health station in all settlements, while there is a hospital in each town. Efforts are made to combat malaria, TB, cholera. In the 1981-82 academic year some form of education, mostly the basic one, is assured for one million people. Sixteen thousand persons receive secondary education and one thousand higher education.

"After the untold vicissitudes, our people have started the building of new society with pleasure and optimism. Now the citizens may exercise their rights, can move without restrictions and may again enjoy the fruits of their work with their families. The people support the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party's policy and express agreement with the goals and activities of the People's Republic of Kampuchea -- the sole legitimate representative of the Kampuchean people. The people assist the efforts to strengthen social order, law and order. Inspired by heartfelt patriotic emotions, they are firmly on the side of the new system," Heng Samrin said.

Speaking of the activities of the Beijing leaders and the U.S.-backed reactionary Khmer groups, the manoeuvres aimed at setting up a so-called coalition government, Heng Samrin said: "The foundations of our system are sound. The Khmer reactionaries and their abettors can in no way prevent our people from realizing their goals. To failure are doomed the attempts to reverse the trend of the events and to rob the Kampuchean people of their revolutionary accomplishments. The groups backed by the Americans, the Chinese, the ASEAN countries and other reactionary forces, Sihanouk and the followers of Son Sann do not serve the interests of the Khmer people; instead, their egoist and power-thirsty efforts serve alien interests. They do not represent the Kampucheans in any way."

Of the relation of Kampuchea to ASEAN, he said: "Our people and government strive to have good relations with ASEAN, including one of its members, our western neighbour, Thailand. This view was on several occasions voiced. In the Vientiane and Phnom Penh conferences of the foreign ministers of Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea, constructive proposals were submitted to normalize the relations. But these bona fide initiatives were turned down by ASEAN and Thailand. In connection with the latter, let me remark that, with the participation of Bangkok, the leaders of the U.S. and China do all in their power to break the impetus of our people in building the new society."

About the mopping up operations carried out by Kampuchea government troops and Vietnamese units in the region of Kampuchea's western border in recent months against the reactionary groups, Heng Samrin said:

"As a result of the operations of the Kampuchean and Vietnamese military units, the armed groups were dispersed, the remainder went back to Thailand or the border zone. They do not represent considerable military force. However, with the support of the Thai military, the reactionary groups repeatedly attempt to make incursions in our country. Recently the number of provocations by Thai military planes that deeply penetrate our airspace has grown alarmingly."

BK140748 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0408 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 14 Jun (SPK) -- According to military sources, during the week ending 10 June Thai L-19's and C-47's flew 6 times over Poipet, Dangkum, Kamrieng, the region southwest of Sap [as received] and Anlung Veng, which are located 2-3 kilometers from the border.

LAWYER CALLS ASIAN LAWYER INQUIRY 'ENCROACHMENT'

BK161040 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1431 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 14 June (SPK) -- Uk Sari, representative of the Kampuchean lawyers, stated that the PRK will not be responsible for the activities of an anonymous group of Asian lawyers encroaching upon the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Kampuchea.

The lawyer granted an interview to SPL on the intention of a group of lawyers to hold an inquiry -- at the initiative of the ASEAN countries -- into the "violations of human rights", "use of chemical weapons" and "diversion of foreign aid" in Kampuchea.

Did these lawyers, he asked, look into the fate of the Kampuchean people when the latter were suffering under the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime, lackey of Chinese expansionism and of imperialism? Is it possible they regarded the acts of extermination by the Pol Pot hangmen as conforming to human rights? Wouldn't it be reasonable to investigate the human rights violations of these monsters now that they have been kicked out of the country and the people are beginning to live again, are engaging in economic rehabilitation and are intensifying the cultural life of the country? The enemies of Kampuchea pretend that they are not aware of these realities which they regard as obstacles to the expansionist and colonialist policy of Beijing and Washington.

Regarding the use of chemical weapons, Uk Sari stressed that it is a pure invention aimed at hiding the shameful failure of the United States in their efforts to "find evidence on the use of chemical weapons in Kampuchea, Laos and Afghanistan" whereas the consequences of the use of chemical products by the Americans in their war of aggression in Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos remain irrefutable.

On the question of humanitarian aid, he said that all humanitarian aid donated to the Kampuchean people has been distributed to the population since 1979 in the presence of representatives from international humanitarian organisations.

Uk Sari thinks that this so-called inquiry represents a lack of good will, an encroachment on justice and an act of giving a helping hand to the U.S. imperialists, Beijing hegemonists and other reactionaries in their plan to undermine the Kampuchean revolution.

On behalf of the Kampuchean lawyers, he appeals for justice to be given to the people of Kampuchea who are fighting against the threat of the Chinese expansionists and other reactionaries through the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan gang.

SIANG PASASON PROTESTS ASIAN LAWYERS' MEETING

BK161127 Vientiane KPL in English 0908 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Vientiane, 16 Jun (KPL) -- SIANG PASASON, organ of the party CC, today publishes a commentary protesting the outcome of the investigation of Asian lawyers team recently meeting in Bangkok.

The recent Bangkok meeting on a chemical warfare investigation in Indochina sponsored by Thai lawyers was yet another act of stooges who blindly served the Beijing bloody hegemonistic policy against the three Indochina countries, the commentary noted.

The commentary further emphasized that this act of investigation is aimed at concealing their similar criminal schemes in interfering in the domestic affairs of the three Indochinese countries following the failure of their effort in setting up a coalition government of the three reactionary groups in Democratic Kampuchea.

It is extremely bias, the paper noted, that the lawyer group which claimed to be human right defenders only concentrated on the investigation of the so-called "Vietnamese troops implementing chemical warfare in Indochina", and didn't mention one word about the U.S. aggressor's implementation of biological warfare in Indochina and the killing of 3 million Kampucheans by Beijing hegemonists and the U.S. supplying of arms to Israeli Zionists to kill thousands of Palestinians and the Lebanese people.

Concerning this matter, SIANG PASASON recapitulated the firm denial of the Lao Foreign Ministry on this affair and asked this "human right protectionist group" to open their eyes and not letting others to pull their legs and to discriminate the right from wrong. If this is not done, accordingly the world public will ridicule the human rights protectionist group's childish efforts, the paper concluded.

NATION REVIEW: ASEAN COMMUNIQUE 'WISHY-WASHY'

[Editorial: "ASEAN Foreign Ministers Decide To Mark Time"]

[Text] It is in the nature of joint communiques to be wishy-washy and the one issued by the ASEAN foreign ministers in Singapore is no different. But reading between the lines and, taking into account what was not mentioned, we have to come to the conclusion that nothing new was agreed upon and that there were no departures from the traditional way of ASEAN thinking. The question of Kampuchea seems to have been the most important topic that the foreign ministers discussed from the regional point of view and though several new ideas must have been put forward, yet the consensus was to fall back on the old line.

During the past year ASEAN members, especially Thailand and Singapore, tried extremely hard to bring about a Khmer coalition government that would unify its political and military efforts against the Vietnamese. While Prince Norodom Sihanouk agreed to almost all of the formulae put forward, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan objected to one or the other. It does not take much political acumen to predict that ASEAN's case in the UN General Assembly has been weakened. Further, several countries, like Australia and Britain, have ended their recognition of Democratic Kampuchea which now holds the UN seat.

The lack of new ideas from the ASEAN foreign ministers conference might also be due to a neat ploy by Hanoi, which is sending Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach to all ASEAN capitals except Bangkok. Thach is the architect of the proposal that a conference on Kampuchea should be held between the five ASEAN members and the three Indochinese states. He may have some new proposals to make and it might have been a good ASEAN decision to mark time until he concludes his visit. Whatever argument he may use, Thach cannot deviate from the two strong positions which Vietnam has continually stuck to. If one can follow the obtuse logic of the communists, then first, the Vietnamese troops are in Kampuchea because of the Chinese threat and, second, the situation in Kampuchea is irreversible.

On the other hand, Beijing also refuses to shift her original intention of "bleeding Vietnam white." This became quite evident in the half-hearted attempt recently made there to form a Khmer coalition government. Caught between these two recalcitrant stands, ASEAN has very little elbow room to maneuvre. If the petty problems posed by the so-called Khmer factions are also thrown into the cauldron, then one can appreciate the problems faced by the ASEAN foreign ministers.

However, we do wish they had come to grips with the suggestion put forward a long time ago by the Philippines -- the holding of an ASEAN summit. It is five years since ASEAN heads of government held a meeting. Everybody understands that there must be a proper agenda and careful preparation if some success has to come out of it. But the situation in the region is fluid and an ASEAN summit may be helpful. Or perhaps ASEAN should try another format -- a sort of "shirt-sleeve summit" which the industrialized countries held in Versailles earlier this month.

THAIS REPATRIATE LAO REFUGEES: UNHCR PROTESTS

[Text] Chiang Rai -- Thailand recently pushed 321 Lao seeking refuge here back over the border under the protest of the UNHCR, a high-ranking Interior Ministry official told the POST yesterday. The source said that the Lao were mostly Yao tribespeople who had crossed over the border into Chiang Khong district, some of them had also crossed into Chiang Yuen and Chiang Kan districts of Loei.

The Thai authorities pushed them back over the Mekong River to Ban Huai Sai in Laos early this month, the source said. The source also claimed that the UNHCR protested to the Thai Government that the Lao were forcibly and not voluntarily repatriated.

But he said that the Lao are considered by Thailand as illegal immigrants and not as refugees and thus can be unilaterally repatriated. None of those pushed back have ever been known to be harmed, he added.

The UNHCR would not make any comment on the matter, other than to issue a short statement saying that: "The UNHCR is aware of the incident and we are discussing the matter with the Thai Government."

The Thai Government, since mid-1980, has announced that it will not accept any more refugees from Indochina and that new arrivals would be considered as illegal immigrants. The Interior Ministry official said that the UNHCR has previously asked the government to interview any new arrivals before they are pushed back over the border or kept temporarily in a holding centre. However, other sources said that the authorities unilateral repatriation of the Lao signify an even tougher stance.

POST REPORTS SHOOTING ACROSS MEKONG RIVER

Police said at least 200 AK-47 and more than 100 M-60 bullets were fired in the attack, causing slight damage to 20 houses. A team of provincial and district police went to inspect the village, but it was not immediately clear what action Thai authorities would take.

POST REPORTS COMMUNIST DEFECTIONS IN NORTH

About 2,000 insurgents and communist sympathisers surrendered to the government forces in the north last month as a result of the Phamuang Kriangkrai operation, he said. Lt-Col Somching attributed the mass defection to the successful operation at Phu Miang and Phu Khat, the strategic gateway linking the northern and northeastern communists. He also disclosed that a military officer died last Saturday during a mopping-up in Mae Sot and Umphang districts, Tak Province.

Two companies of zone six border partrol police, provincial police and army units, backed by helicopter gunships, took part in Saturday's drive, codenamed "Operation Phetmongkhon," he said. A follow-up drive, codenamed "Chan Hon" was held at Berng Kloeng village in Umphang district near the Thai-Burmese border on Sunday.

No clashes were reported as troops movement at Poeng Kloeng was hindered by heavy rain, he said. Lt-Col Somching said about 80 insurgents remained in the area.

HANOI COMMENTARY SCORES ASEAN CONFERENCE

BK161636 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Station commentary: "In Siding With Beijing, They Are Again Swimming Against the Currents of History"]

[Text] On 14 June in Singapore, the 15th annual conference of foreign ministers of the ASEAN countries was opened. One of the main topics of discussion at this 3-day conference was the Kampuchean issue. As advertised earlier, the foreign ministers of the ASEAN countries hoped that through this conference they would reach the goal set by Beijing -- that is, to establish a loose tripartite coalition government for Kampuchea -- on which they had spent a lot of effort to achieve at the previous conferences in Kuala Lumpur, Phatthaya and then Bangkok. All of them were in vain. The real design behind this loose tripartite coalition government is to help Beijing renew the bloodstained face of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and continue to oppose the revival of Kampuchea in a gamble undertaken to reverse the Kampuchean situation by Beijing and other reactionary forces.

Prior to the opening of that conference, a number of members of this ASEAN contracting firm were observed to be quite busy exerting pressure on the varous Kampuchean factions to force these ferocious beasts -- as they are called by the Kampuchean people -- to enter docilely the still empty cage of the loose Kampuchean tripartite coalition government designed by Beijing. Upon orders from Beijing, the Khmer Rouge has temporarily concealed some of its fangs and appeared to be kind-hearted and more presentable in an effort to create an apparent coalition which will, in reality, be controlled by the genocidal Khmer Rouge to oppose the Kampuchean people. Even if Beijing can succeed with its scheme -- through the ASEAN countries -- the world public, however, will not give it any concern; and this will not in the least reverse the situation in Kampuchea. What the progressive world public is really concerned about is the fact that, with this new move, the foreign ministers of the ASEAN countries are continuing to serve as a tool for Beijing expansionism to oppose the Kampuchean people as well as the peoples of the three Indochinese countries.

Singapore and Thailand still show themselves to be the most eager in this foolhardy game. While the Thai foreign minsister was hailing the loose Kampuchean tripartite coalition government as a contribution by ASEAN to the settlement of the Kampuchean issue, Lee, the prime minister of Singapore, openly said that China is the natural ally of ASEAN. Is China the natural ally or the natural enemy of and a long-term dangerous threat to the ASEAN countries? This question, we think, should be left to be answered by the peoples of the ASEAN countries and the actual situations there.

Who has made public the map of modern China with a new boundary that encompasses the territories of almost all of the ASEAN countries? And who has bluntly said: I want to lead an army consisting of 500 million poor Chinese peasants to conquer the neighboring countries which include the ASEAN countries.

Mr Lee Kuan Yew, how could you forget so quickly that the leaders of the Beijing administration, while on a tour of the ASEAN countries, ignored the pleas of the host countries and arrogantly said that they would continue to support various Maoist groups in opposition to the administration in these countries?

The leaders of Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines must still remember the troubles caused by the people of Chinese descent who, according to world public opinion, have been incited and employed as a fifth-column to oppose the laws of and the administrations in their countries of residence.

Beijing's plots and actions against the ASEAN countries are evident. They have pretended, however, to be friendly with the ASEAN bloc, trying to woo and pressure the ASEAN countries so that they can use these countries as a stone to pave the way for the great-Han expansionist cart and firmly tie the ASEAN countries to their dark schemes and policies against the Indochinese peoples and other countries in the region. With this objective, Beijing has sought ways to drive the ASEAN countries into a confrontation with the Indochinese countries. The ASEAN countries should have realized that the stability and peace of the Indochinese countries as well as of other Southeast Asian countries are being endangered by the Beijing threat.

It is not that all of the ASEAN countries have failed to realize this fact. Through the actual actions of Beijing in the past as well as at present, a number of ASEAN countries have pointed out that the longstanding danger facing the ASEAN countries stems from China and not from Vietnam as Beijing's distorting propaganda claims.

The differences between Vietnam and between the Indochinese peoples and the ASEAN bloc are just temporary. By temporarily setting aside the differences between the two, we can hold a dialogue to settle step by step problems of mutual concern. This is the way to bring about peace and stability for various countries in the region.

Beijing is trying to convince the ASEAN countries that they are ASEAN's natural ally. Beijing is also trying to aggrandize an imaginary threat from Vietnam in order to direct the ASEAN countries' attacks toward Vietnam and other Indochinese countries. This diabolical theory by Beijing has been strenuously supported and embellished by the Singaporean powerholders in order to enlist the sympathy and support of other ASEAN countries for Beijing's reactionary policies against the region.

Though still to varying degrees, a number of the ASEAN countries have gradually become aware of the truth that Beijing itself and not Vietnam is a dangerous threat to the ASEAN countries. It is regrettable that those words are not echoed by everyone. Therefore, to certain degrees, a number of the ASEAN countries have not been vigilant enough to fully realize all of Beijing's cunning schemes which are driving them to the brink of an abyss. After suppressing the spirit of independence and freedom of the Indochinese peoples, Beijing will gobble up the ASEAN countries exactly as outlined formerly by the great Han doctrine which called for the annexation of the prosperous region of Southeast Asia at all costs.

The fact that the ASEAN countries continue to support and act as Beijing's contractor to revive the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan political corpse and give it the name of the loose Kampuchean tripartite coalition government is indicative of the absence of mind displayed by the ASEAN countries in helping Beijing carry out its great Han expansionist designs and undermining the age-old friendship between the ASEAN and Indochinese peoples to the detriment of the interests and aspirations of their own peoples.

Obviously, they are swimming against the currents of history.

BAKER PRC VISIT, GOLDWATER TAIWAN VISIT VIEWED

OW170508 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1230 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Radio talk: "It Is 'Two Chinas' After All"]

[Text] The issue of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan is comparable to periodic attacks of malaria, sporadic attacks of fever and chills. The Sino-American relations at times look as if they are about to rupture and at other times the tension eases off. At a time when both Beijing and Taipei were simultaneously taking the United States to task, President Reagan sent Baker to Beijing to deliver his letter to the Chinese leaders in Zhongnanhai. He also sent Goldwater to Taipei to deliver another letter to the Taiwan authorities.

While in Beijing, Baker announced that the issue of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan did not affect the development of American-Chinese relations because the foundation of these relations rested on the coordination of Sino-American global strategy. In this connection, reasoning and patience are essential. In his letter to Taipei, Reagan reiterated that the United States would continue to sell arms to Taiwan. Goldwater on the other hand commented that the statement made by Baker in Beijing concerning U.S.-Taiwan relations was wrong. He joked that Baker was preparing himself for presidential election and public opinion.

Deng Xiaoping and Zhao Ziyang also staged repeat performances on the issue of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan. On the surface, they raised a hue and cry against the issue and issued protest notes and statements denouncing it. But in fact, they were greatly satisfied with the further development of the Sino-American relations. Surprising, Reagan has once again pushed the two-Chinas policy in spite of Beijing's condemnation and intimidation. Reagan sets off a smokescreen every now and again, not to achieve stability and unity, but, in the main, to decieve the Chinese people. The Chinese people, however, have seen through the American President's sinister scheme all along. No matter what the United States claimed, there is only one China; the U.S. relations with Taiwan are nonofficial. All this cannot conceal the U.S. scheme of attempting to carve up Chinese territories and to use Taiwan as a military base for controlling Southeast Asia and the entire Chinese mainland.

The Beijing leaders, Deng Xiaoping above all, once said that the Taiwan issue could be pushed back 100 years for the coming generations to settle. In January 1979, while visiting the United States, he said that Taiwan was no longer an issue and the key lay in securing the full confidence of the United States in Beijing. The Beijing authorities' reaction to U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, therefore, is nothing but a sham act aimed at pacifying public anger. The Beijing authorities will never let the Taiwan issue affect the Sino-American alliance [lianhe] for pushing the counterrevolutionary global strategy in opposition to the Soviet Union and the implementation of the policies of the socialist community. In short, the two-Chinas policy remains the consistent national policy of the United States.

SRV TO JOIN NUCLEAR NONPROLIFERATION TREATY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 16 -- Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has sent a note to his Soviet counterpart, A. Gromyko, informing him of Vietnam's decision to subscribe to treaty of nonproliferation of nuclear arms. The decision, the note says, stems from the S.R.V. Government's policy of protecting world peace and security from the danger of a nuclear war posed by imperialism and international reaction, and proceeds from the desire to use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes.

The note points out: "The Socialist Republic of Vietnam welcomes and highly values all effective international measures to gradually eliminate the danger of a nuclear war, including steps to protect nonnuclear countries from aggression with nuclear weapons and threat of such aggression. "The S.R.V. holds that in conformity of the objectives and principles propounded in the preamble of the treaty and the United Nations Charter, all nations are equals in the research on and the development and use of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes and in exercising their legitimate right to self-defence."

NHAN DAN on Treaty

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 17 -- For the sake of peace and common security of nations, the Socialist Republic of Vietnam has joined the treaty of non-proliferation of nuclear weapons, NHAN DAN says in an article today.

The paper goes on: "This significant event has once more spoken out the consistent external policy of peace of the Vietnamese party and state. Prohibition against the proliferation of nuclear weapons is a question of great importance in reducing the danger of nuclear war, especially in the present situation when the United States is speeding up its arms race, seriously threatening peace and security of nations. The treaty of non-proliferation of nuclear weapons is a significant contribution to reducing the nuclear arms race, creating favourable conditions for nuclear disarmament and ensuring international peace and security. Therefore, it has received warm welcome and support from progressive public opinion throughout the world. The Soviet Union and other countries in the social unity have made important contributions to this treaty... Meanwhile, the United States, though a party to the treaty, has not implemented some of the most important clauses of the treaty. The Reagan administration is stepping up the nuclear arms race to an unprecedented level, intensively producing new types of nuclear weapons and deploying them on the territories of its allies."

The paper continues: "Proceeding from the external policy of peace of the communist party, Vietnam has adhered to the treaty of non-proliferation of nuclear weapons. This spells out our good will for peace, our strong support for and active contribution to the common struggle of nations to check the arms race, avert the danger of nuclear war, for peace, security and international cooperation, against the bellicose and aggressive policy of imperialism headed by the United States in collusion with international reactionaries. On joining this treaty, the Vietnamese Government laid stress on the need to ensure the security of the non-nuclear countries against aggression with nuclear weapons and against the threat of such aggression, and to ensure their legitimate right to self-defence.

"After adhering to this treaty, Vietnam, together with the Soviet Union and other countries in the socialist community and peace-loving forces in the world, will make active contributions to the common struggle to reduce international tension, and ultimately realize general disarmament. With regard to Vietnam in particular, this will open new prospects for further strengthening its cooperation with the Soviet Union and the other countries in the research on nuclear energy for peaceful purposes and for socialist construction," the paper notes.

PHAM VAN DONG GREETS AFRICAN NATIONAL CONGRESS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 16 -- Pham Van Dong, chairman of the council of ministers of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, has sent his "warmest greetings" to the South African people and the African National Congress (ANC) on the international day of solidarity with the South African people (June 16).

In a message daged June 15 to UN Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, and Alhaji Yusuf Maitama Sule, president of the special committee on the elimination of racial discrimination, Pham Van Dong said: "Over the past decades, the South African authorities, supported and assisted by the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionaries, have pursued a policy of racial discrimination and repressed the struggle of the South African people led by the ANC for basic national rights, the right to self-determination and human rights. They arbitrarily put in jail many patriots and leaders of the ANC, invaded neighbouring countries such as Angola and Mozambique and continued their colonialist domination in Namibia. This policy which violates international law is condemned by the UN and world opinion as a crime toward mankind.

"The people and Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietname affirm their unswerving stand of resolutely supporting the just and legal struggle of the South African people in all forms for their fundamental national rights, demand that the South African authorities give up their policy of racial discrimination and their brutal treatment of South African patriots, and release all persons who are illegally imprisoned.

"We are convinced that with the strong support of the peoples and governments, throughout the world, the struggle for independence and freedom of the South African people under the leadership of the ANC will win victory."

NHAN DAN: CAT HAI POST ENSURES SEA SECURITY

[NHAN DAN June 14 article by (Huu Hanh): "Guarding a Sea Area"]

[Summary] We had the opportunity to visit Post No. 30 of the Border Defense Forces while accompanying a team of cadres from Haiphong Municipality on a trip to survey the island district of Cat Hai for building a tourist center there. Earlier, we had been thoroughly briefed by the comrade head of the Haiphong Municipal Military Command's political section about the achievements recorded by Post No. 30 in ensuring order and security on the sea.

Upon our arrival at the post, we were welcomed by Comrade (Luong Trac Diep), the post political officer, who explained to us about the operation of the post personnel over a sand table and showed us an exhibition of the articles seized from illegal traders and counterrevolutionary elements.

Post No. 30 is situated next to the jetty of Cat Hai Island and commands a view of the Eastern Sea. Everyday in this busy sea area, hundreds of fishing boats cast their nets; dozens of foreign ships drop their anchors to await their turn to enter Haiphong port; and dozens of barges and motor boats pass by along the sea lanes linking Haiphong with Quang Ninh, Cat Ba and the southern provinces.

"The life of the innocent people here is disrupted by bad elements who pose a threat to public order and security with their illegal and dishonest trade, theft and fraud. They have set up an open market on the sea and resorted to bribery and threats to resist control and educational efforts by the local security and militia and self-defense forces."

Fully aware of their heavy responsibilities, the post combatants have developed a strict operational system and devised various patrol plans to guard the area under their control around the clock. Whenever a boat is sailing seawards or a barge is passing by, our combatants always monitor its position and stand ready to protect it and prevent bad elements from stealing property of the state and the people.

"A floating market has mushroomed over recent years in the Cat Hai Bay area where coal, gas, oil and grain are bought and sold illegally. Every time a barge laden with goods passes through, dozens of sampans appear and draw alongside; and once an agreement is reached, tons of coal and canisters of fuel are transferred. In some cases where the sailors refused to sell the goods under their charge, the boatmen would turn robbers, boarding the ship and manhandling its crewmen. In the Quang Yen area, which lies furthest from the post and is poorly lit at night and where the river goes through many twists and turns, a host of sampans is always lurking to await the passing of goods-laden barges and to pull their tricks. The combatants of Post No. 30 have shown up in time and coordinated with the local security combatants to check these illegal activities."

While walking in the post barracks to learn about the life of the combatants, we saw a lot of boat masts and sails piled in a corner and someone remarked that they must be used by the post personnel for their fishing trips. The post deputy commander corrected this by noting this was incriminating evidence seized from those who had attempted to flee abroad.

"In this bay area, the bad elements often, under the cover of darkness, row their boats to foreign vessels anchored off shore to buy and sell things and swindle foreign sailors of their money. Many groups of persons also use this area as a rendezvous for their sea escape attempts. Members of the Border Defense Forces have discovered many sea escape attempts and dozens of cases involving theft of and illegal trading in state supplies in the Cat Hai Bay area, and arrested all the lawbreakers."

Post No. 30 of the Border Defense Forces on Cat Hai Island has been decorated by the state with three Combat Exploit Orders, second and third classes; and it has been visited by Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong who showered the post personnel with commendations.

EDITORIAL URGES IMPROVED FOOD PRODUCTION

[NHAN DAN 15 June editorial: "A Well-Coordinated Grain Production Program"]

[Text] The food problem confronting the whole of our society must be solved through a uniform approach which encompasses its various component aspects, including such areas as production, improving food rations and the economical consumption of grain. It is most imporatnt that we step up the cultivation of grain crops, legumes, fruit trees and sugarcane and link crop cultivation with animal husbandry.

Achieving a radical solution to the grain problem has become a pressing and essential task that must be fulfilled in order to stabilize and improve the people's lives, develop the economy and strengthen our national defense. As an immediate task, we must meet the national requirements for grain and must try at all costs to bring some basic amount of grain under state control.

Stepping up grain production requires a combined socioeconomic program that requires close coordination among the various economic sectors themselves and between the agricultural sector and various mass organizations. This coordination is essential in order to fulfill the planned targets for grain production successfully. These targets have already been set forth in the Third 5-Year State Plan as well as in other state plans for the 1980's.

A resolution of the Fifth VCP Congress notes that it is strategically important for us to motivate and organize the masses to do revolutionary work under all circumstances. The agricultural sector and the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union have worked out a program of coordinated activities to motivate youths throughout the nation to step up grain production during the period from 1982-85. This represents an initiative aimed at generating a momentous revolutionary movement among the masses -- especially the members of the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union and the force of young laborers -- to achieve the most important objectives in agricultural production. This also constitutes an opportunity to educate youths and teenagers with regard to agricultural development, thus providing an opportunity for young laborers and those with a high sense of collective mastery to become attached to the cause of socialist construction and skilled in technology and management. In addition, through this movement, we must consolidate the various organizations of the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union and the Vietnam Youth Association and must make certain that the substance and forms of all activities of the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union in the rural areas are consistent with the system of management over the economy and the new society.

In order to develop and carry out a mass movement in a widespread and practical manner, we must work out specific programs and working methods suitable to each area and consonant with the knowledge of the production forces concerned and the different degrees of their production relations. Therefore, led by the various party organizations, the cooperation between agricultural organs and the youth union organizations in many provinces, districts, villages, cooperatives and production collectives will be of decisive importance.

The program of activities for each Youth Union organization must be based on the specific struggle objectives of each locality and low-level unit. The contents of such programs and the working methods to be used in implementing it must be flexible.

These programs must take into account the differences between localities with cooperatives and localities without cooperatives and between localities with good material and technical bases and localities with poor material and technical bases. This must be done in order to rally a large number of young laborers in various localities and production establishments in a struggle to achieve common objectives under different conditions.

Good grain production results can be achieved only with the participation of the working class, peasantry and socialist intelligentsia and with the harmonious cooperation between the various agricultural and agricultural service sectors. The operation of each agricultural production establishment cannot be distinct from the operations of the various organs involved in agricultural supply, electricity, water conservancy, agricultural machinery, communications, transportation, banking and finance as well as various technical agencies.

We must formulate good activity programs and working methods so that the Youth Union organizations at various production establishments and other agricultural service agencies can cooperate with each other closely and can create a great combined strength.

By correctly determining the position of the young generation on the grain production front, by adopting appropriate working methods and by formulating an appropriate incentive policy, it is certain that we will be able to develop the talents and the creativity of youths throughout the nation on the agricultural front, thus duly contributing to solving the basic and urgent problem of stepping up the production of grain and food.

The minister said Puspati's nuclear reactor would be commissioned next month. It would be used for research in nuclear science and technology. He said the setting up of an isotope department would provide inexpensive supply of radioisotope for medical and research purposes. SAUDI LEADER SEES IMPROVED TIES WITH PHILIPPINES

HK170113 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] King Fahd, the new monarch of Saudi Arabia, has pledged to enhance Saudi relations with the Philippines. The King made the assurance during a meeting with the first lady, Madam Imelda Marcos, when she called on him in Riyadh early yesterday morning. The first lady expressed to the king the Filipino people's condolences on the death of King Khalid, who succumbed to a heart attack Sunday. Madam Marcos flew back to Manila yesterday afternoon following her meeting with the new king.

[Begin Mrs Marcos recording] His Majesty King Fahd is full of appreciation for the Filipino people for sending a delegation to Saudi Arabia, and also at the same time he was so generous with his time and so full of appreciation and reception for the Filipino people and the president for sending us over. And he was also very very grateful for the [words indistinct]. [end recording]

King Fahd gave the first lady the assurance that he would pursue closer Saudi relations with the Philippines. Details of that story from (Bert Asuke):

[Begin recording] His Majesty gave the assurance that he would work for the enhancement of Saudi-Philippine relations. Mrs Marcos also reiterated the president's invitation to King Fahd to visit the Philippines. In response, the king said he would seriously consider and accept at the earliest possible time. The king likewise informed the first lady that despite the remoteness of the Philippines from Saudi Arabia, his kingdom highly appreciated and valued the friendship of the Philippines.

In reply, Mrs Marcos said, our geographical distance is compensated by the warmness in our hearts.

Palace observers said the fact that King Fahd received Mrs Marcos and her party ahead of U.S. Vice President George Bush and Spanish King Juan Carlos was an indication that the Philippines was ranked highly by the king.

The first lady's trip included an overnight stop in Jeddah. The following morning they journeyed to Taiz to condole with King Khalid's wife. Immediately after her call on King Fahd in Riyadh, the first lady and her party emplaned directly back to Manila.

IMELDA MARCOS COMMENTS ON VISIT TO PRC

[Excerpts] The first lady is back with the good news that China will be buying more raw materials from the Philippines. Madam Marcos planed in late last night after her extended 5-day visit to China. At the VIP kiosk, she announced that a Chinese trade mission will soon arrive in the country to work out a more dynamic trade relation between China and the Philippines. The first lady said Chinese officials have assured her that they would give the Philippines priority as a source of raw materials that China will need in its industrialization program.

Madam Marcos said that right now China is interested in buying four traditional export products from the Philippines at friendship prices. This means that the Philippines will be getting more from the products to make up for low prices of these raw materials on the world market. The four items are copper, copra, iron ore and sugar.

Mrs Marcos said that she also held security and political discussions with Chinese officials, but declined to give any details.

MARCOS DESCRIBES FAILURE OF REBEL MOVEMENTS

HK150059 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] President Marcos assured the people yesterday that no rebel movement can hope to flourish and topple the government at present. The chief executive made the assurance in a speech commemorating the battle of [words indistinct]. The president said that no rebel movement can prosper in this country at this time because the people have remained vigilant and dedicated to the duly constituted government. In an interview with newsmen, the president also gave credit to the military for apprehending subversive leaders before they could organize in full force. He said these rebel forces have been constantly on the run since the initial movement was smashed in 1954.

The chief executive cited military records from the Politburo in 1954 to the organization of the Kabatan Makabayan in 1968 by Jose Maria Sison. All of them got caught, the president said. After these organizations, came the New People's Army, and the leaders of this group also fell into the hands of the military, he added.

Mr Marcos pointed out that the big difference between the Philippines and other countries which have the same problem is that the rebel leaders, most at least, have never been caught there. The president also clarified the recent incident in Samar where 12 people were killed in the aftermath of a grenade-throwing incident. He said no ideology was involved in the incident because one of the suspected grenade-throwers apparently got slighted during a town dance. It was a matter of revenge and nothing to do with ideology, he said. At the same time, the president withheld the identities of some top-ranking rebel leaders now in the custody of the military. He said he would release their names as soon as he received the official military report.

EC PRESIDENT ARRIVES FOR ASEAN MINISTERS MEETING

[Text] Singapore, 16 Jun (AFP) -- President of the Council of European Community Leo Tindemans hopes to discuss the possibility of stabilising commodity prices when he meets the ASEAN foreign ministers here on Friday [18 June].

Mr Tindemans, who arrived here late this evening, said that besides commodity prices he also hoped to discuss aid to the five members of ASEAN -- Singapore, Malaysia, Thailand, the Philippines and Indonesia. The foreign ministers of the five nations concluded their 15th annual conference here today.

On his earlier decision not to attend the ASEAN-EEC dialogue session, Mr Tindemans, who is Belgian's foreign minister, said, "It does not mean that the EEC countries do not attach importance to the organisation (ASEAN). "At first I decided to send my deputy as there were the Lebanon and Falklands issues. But when the ASEAN countries appeared upset about it, I decided to come myself."

The two-day dialogue session of the ASEAN foreign ministers with the other partners -- Japan, Australia, New Zealand, the United States and Canada -- is to begin tomorrow.

SAKURAUCHI ADDRESSES ASEAN FOREIGN MINISTERS

OW180550 Tokyo KYODO in English 0533 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] Singapore June 18 KYODO -- Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said here Friday Japan will continue to provide economic assistance to five non-communi Southeast Asian countries which form the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN)

Sakurauchi told foreign ministers of Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines Japan will give positive support to the five nations' self-reliant efforts for their economic and social development. "The ASEAN is the highest priority region in Japan's economic cooperation," he said.

The Japanese foreign minister delivered the speech in an hour-long meeting with his counterparts Suppiah Dhanabalan of Singapore, Sitthi Sawetsila of Thailand, Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja of Indonesia, Mohamed Ghazali of Malaysia and Carlos Romulo of the Philippines. The ASEAN foreign ministers discussed with foreign ministers of Japan, the United States (represented by deputy secretary of state), Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the European Community on Thursday, following a three-day meeting Monday through Wednesday between themselves only.

In Friday's Japan-ASEAN meeting, Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar delivered a keynote speech and called on Japan to open up its market wider to ASEAN countries. Mokhtar strongly asked Japan to increase imports of tropical products and industrial goods, noting that Japan's imports from ASEAN countries are raw materials and oil at present. Japan should contribute to development of medium and small business corporations in the ASEAN countries, he said.

Japanese Foreign Minister Sakurauchi told the ASEAN ministers that Japan and the ASEAN have worked together to further their mature partnership, which will mean a great deal for stability and development of Asia.

"The ASEAN countries have been attaining the most dynamic economic development of any region in the world and the five nations place yet more emphasis on maintaining and strengthening the free trade system" Sakurauchi said. "In the world today, Japan and ASEAN share a common interest in preserving the free trade system and attaining expansion of world trade," he said.

Sakurauchi added "...Japan and ASEAN are in a position to contribute not only to their own development and well-being, but...to the peace and stability of Asia and the world..."

The meeting went into closed-door session after Sakurauchi's speech. Sakurauchi explained Japan's efforts to stem mounting trade protectionism and to open its market wider to imports, Japanese officials said.

The Japanese foreign minister, who flew into Singapore Tuesday, is scheduled to visit Malaysia Saturday and return home next Tuesday.

ASEAN, DIALOGUE PARTNERS MEET, DISCUSS ECONOMICS

[Text] ASEAN and its dialogue partners have agreed to ensure that the international trading system remained liberal and free. This was disclosed by the foreign minister and chairman of the ASEAN Standing Committee, Mr Dhanabalan, at the end of a 2 and 1/2 hour meeting between ASEAN ministers and their counterparts from Australia, Canada, the EEC, Japan, New Zealand and the United States. He said they would go to the GATT meeting in November with a positive frame of mind.

On the international, global economic and political problems, Mr Dhanabalan said it was very interesting and gratifying to note that all the dialogue partners shared ASEAN's concern about protectionism. All of them were very keen that such a trend should be checked and agreed that resistance has so far been quite successful. Earlier when he opened the meeting, Mr Dhanabalan called on developed countries to check present trends toward protectionism. He also urged them to find ways to accommodate the more reasonable and legitimate demands of developing countries in the North-South dialogue.

Mr Dhanabalan pointed out that developed countries could adjust to the higher prices of scarce and vital commodities and not hope to depress commodity prices to unrealistically low levels to support wasteful consumption patterns. They could meet the industrial challenge from competitive developing countries by restructuring their economies and redeploying their economic resources to high technology industry.

Mr Dhanabalan said ASEAN valued its meeting with its dialogue partners. They were meeting not as antagonists, but as partners in cooperation. He said ASEAN approaches its dialogue partners as equals and does not regard the discussions as a platform for asking the industrial (?world) for handouts.

Opening the dialogue between ASEAN and Australia, the Malaysian Foreign Minister, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, said while ASEAN was extremely satisfied with the economic cooperation with Australia so far, it would like to see an expansion of this cooperation into other areas. These are the areas which have been identified not only as being of priority interest, but also of continuing interest to ASEAN, such as, access to markets, shipping, energy and the transfer of technology.

Referring of the danger encroaching on the free enterprise system, Tan Sri Ghazali suggested that since ASEAN and Australia were committed to the system, they could in their modest ways seek to preserve the system while simultaneously urging leading countries to wake up to the problem.

The Australian Foreign Minister, Mr Anthony Street, said Australia was already making a determined effort to have its proposal to curb protectionism taken up as a priority item at the next GATT ministerial meeting in November. He said ASEAN and Australia shared a common region and a common future and that the annual dialogue sessions with their frankness and informality helped to ensure that both sides' perception and preferred strategies were in accord.

He said ASEAN was now Australia's fourth largest export market and fourth largest source of imports. The imbalance in two-way trade was continuing to narrow. Australia supports ASEAN's move to find a political solution to the Kampuchean problem. Australia also said it would review its position of the recognition of Democratic Kampuchea if and when a coalition government is formed.

Speaking at the postministerial meeting between ASEAN and Canada, the Philippine Foreign Minister, Gen Carlos Romulo, said the ASEAN-Canada economic cooperation agreement signed in New York last September would pave the way for the consolidation, deepening and diversification of ASEAN-Canada economic relations. This was particularly so in the areas of industrial, technical, financial, commercial and development cooperation.

General Romulo said ASEAN places serious importance on the joint cooperation committee which was instrumental in fostering closer ASEAN-Canada cooperation. General Romulo also said ASEAN would be most happy to work closely with Canada on the launching of global negotiations for a new international economic order.

ASEAN foreign ministers and representatives of the six dialogue countries are now attending a dinner at the Istana [palace] hosted by President Devan Nair.

'EXCERPTS' OF ASEAN MINISTERS' JOINT COMMUNIQUE

BK161012 Hong Kong AFP in English 0950 GMT 16 Jun 82

Cambodia:

"The foreign ministers expressed their grave concern over the situation in Kampuchea. They stressed that the continued Vietnamese military occupation of Kampuchea constitutes a serious threat to peace and stability in the whole Southeast Asian region. They reaffirmed their strong conviction that the continued occupation of Kampuchea by Vietnam represents a serious violation of international law and the principles of the United Nations Charter.

"The foreign ministers deplored the intransigence of Vietnam in refusing to withdraw its military forces from Kampuchea in defiance of international opinion... The foreign ministers reiterated their full commitment to the United Nations resolutions, which called for the immediate and total withdrawal of Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea.

"They reaffirmed that a comprehensive political settlement of the conflict in Kampuchea could only be achieved within the framework established by these resolutions and on the basis of the principles laid down in the declaration of the international conference on Kampuchea, which, inter alia, reaffirmed the right of the Kampuchean people to self-determination and to elect a government of their own choice in free elections carried out under United Nations supervision without any intimidation or coercion.

"...The foreign ministers reaffirmed their continued recognition of Democratic Kampuchea and their support for its representation at the United Nations. They emphasized that the grounds for their support for the credentials of Democratic Kampuchea were based on the fundamental principles of respect for the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of states, non-interference in the internal affairs of states and non-use of force in international relations.

"...The foreign ministers expressed their continued support for the efforts towards the formation of a Kampuchean coalition government in the spirit and according to the intent of the joint statement issued in Singapore on 4 September 1981, which would be conducive to the achievement of the objectives of the delaration and resolution of the international conference on Kampuchea. They recognised that the establishment of a truly representative government in Kampuchea remained a matter for the Kampuchean people themselves to decide.

"...The foreign ministers, deeply concerned by the parallel situations of continued foreign intervention in both Kampuchea and Afghanistan, emphasised their firm support for United Nations General Assembly Resolution 36/34, the relevant resolutions adopted by the organisation of Islamic conference, and the final political declaration of the ministerial meeting of the non-aligned countries adopted in New Delhi on 13 February 1981.

Refugees:

"(The foreign ministers) saw a continuing necessity to assist the needy Kampucheans at the Thai/Kampuchean borders and in the holding centres in Thailand, and the affected Thai villagers. In the case of the situation inside Kampuchea, the foreign ministers would support the continuation of humanitarian assistance in the event of a recurrence of an emergency situation.

"The foreign ministers expressed concern that humanitarian assistance provided inside Kampuchea had, in some instances, been diverted to other purposes. They also expressed concern that some of the assistance provided had been used for developmental and infrastructural proposes which clearly exceeded the mandate of providing emergency relief and assistance. They therefore urged the United Nations and other international and voluntary agencies to adhere to their mandate and to monitor the proper distribution of such assistance in a more effective manner.

"The foreign ministers of Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines and Singapore reiterated their full support for the programme of voluntary repatriation of Kampuchean illegal immigrants/displaced persons/refugees carried out by the Government of Thailand in cooperation with the UNHCR.

"The foreign ministers noted with concern that the problem of Vietnamese illegal immigrants still persists with continuing fresh arrivals in substantial numbers. Nevertheless, out of humanitarian considerations, ASEAN countries continue to provide shelter and transitfacilities to these illegal immigrants. The foreign ministers emphasise that the granting of first refuge by ASEAN countries depends on commitment of resettlement in third countries and the avoidance of residual problems in the area. They expressed the hope that resettlement countries would continue (to) expedite their intake of Vietnamese illegal immigrants. They reiterated their conviction that the problem should be tackled at its source and urged Vietnam to continue to cooperate by preventing further illegal departures. They also urged Vietnam, the UNHCR and resettlement countries to exert concerted efforts to enable a full and effective implementation of the orderly departure programme.

Trade:

"The foreign ministers welcomed the intiative of the ASEAN economic ministers in expanding and liberalising intra-ASEAN trade. They were encouraged by the significant progress achieved in increasing substantially the tariff preferences exchanged among ASEAN member countries under the ASEAN preferential trading arrangement which now totals 8,563 items.

"...The foreign ministers expressed the view that the existing international political and economic situation is fast moving into a state of crisis.

The continuing conflicts around the world, the growing protectionist tendencies, high inflation and interest rates and unemployment bear testimony to this trend. They expressed deep concern that such developments, if allowed to continue, will not only stifle the further growth of the ASEAN economies and its cooperation, retard the chances of world economic recovery, but more fundamentally will erode the resilence of the system which supports independent nations.

"The foreign ministers observed that, while all ASEAN member countries experienced reasonable economic growth, they were nevertheless concerned with the worsening international economic situation, especially the continuing recession in the industrialized countries with no prospect for immediate solution.

"The foreign ministers expressed deep disappointment in the continued impasse in the North-South dialogue: The foreign ministers called on the developed countries to exercise the necessary political will to immediately launch global negotiations in order to expedite international economic recovery and the establishment of the new international economic order.

"The foreign ministers viewed with dismay the continuing trend towards protectionism. They expressed the hope that the forthcoming GATT ministerial would restore the basic task of GATT in ensuring that the principles of free trade are consistently practised in the world market.

"The foreign ministers reaffirmed ASEAN's determination to cooperate fully in their efforts to overcome the difficulties brought about by the adverse international economic conditions. They also reiterated ASEAN's readiness to strengthen their collective effort in all international fora."

Lebanon:

"The foreign ministers reiterated their condemnation of Israel's aggression against Lebanon. They also reaffirmed their full support for the resolutions of the United Nations Security Council calling for a ceasefire and for the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon."

ABE: U.S. DECISION ON SAKHALIN PROJECT DUE SOON

[Text] Tokyo June 17 KYODO -- The United States is expected to formally inform Japan within the next few days whether it would give Japan a chance to resume work on the Soviet-Japanese joint development of oil and natural gas deposits on the continental shelf off Sakhalin, the Japanese international trade and industry minister said Thursday.

"It is up to the descretion of U.S. President Ronald Reagan, but we are hopeful," said Shintaro Abe at a monthly executive board meeting of the Japan Foreign Trade Council, made up of 13 major general trading houses.

He said Japan stated that the U.S. restrictions regarding the project are tantamount to "sanctions against Japan rather than sanctions against the Soviet Union" at the recent Versailles summit of seven industrial democracies.

The project began in 1976, but the current U.S. ban on shipment of U.S.-built drilling equipment necessary for the project has been delaying the work. If the present situation continues, it is feared that the whole project may not survive. The United States has banned the equipment supply in connection with U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union over the Polish problem.

Leaders of the world's industrial powers at the summit agreed to take a more cautious approach to economic relations with the Soviet Union and use "commercial prudence" in granting export credits to the Soviet Union and its allies.

About yen 60 billion (dollar 240 million) have been spent so far in the yen 700 billion (dollar 2.8 billion) project for development of Sakhalin oil.

Sakhalin Oil Development Cooperation Co., a state-policy concern based in Tokyo, has sunk 30 test wells so far in the area and confirmed the existence of a large volume of oil and natural gas. Commercial production is expected to begin in 1988.

Referring to Japanese defeat in bidding for a yen 300 billion (dollar 1.2 billion) steel plant in Mexico to Britain, which under-bid about 30 percent, the council executives told Abe that Japan should take active measures such as offering mixed loans in the form of combination of yen credits and economic cooperation in future biddings.

Abe, Mansfield Discuss Project

OW180413 Tokyo KYODO in English 0328 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo June 18 KYODO -- Japan called on the United States Friday to lift its ban on shipment of U.S.-built drilling equipment needed for a giant Russo-Japanese oil and natural gas development program. The request was made by Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry to American Ambassador Mike Mansfield.

Abe said the Japanese request was "final" and indicated a U.S. failure to lift the ban may strain Japan-U.S. relations.

The Russo-Japanese joint project on the continental shelf off Sakhalin began in 1976 but has halted at present as a result of U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union over the Afghan invasion and Polish crisis.

"We are on the deadline, and I came here to make a final request," Abe said he told Mansfield. "It is a national project for Japan and the Japanese people have a keen interest in it."

One of Abe's aides said that the deadline for lifting the ban expired last Tuesday and that the Tokyo government was unsure whether or not the project could be continued.

The Japanese Government has already spent some $260 million for the project, which is considered crucial for the future of the resource-poor country.

Abe said Mansfield expressed understanding of the urgency of the issue and promised to convey the Japanese request to Washington immediately.

The U.S. National Security Council is expected to take up the issue in a Friday morning session, the Japanese Cabinet minister added.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman later said Ambassador Mansfield indicated he "would support their (Japanese) request and forward it to Washington."

Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki made a similar request in a meeting with President Ronald Reagan prior to the Versailles summit, saying the U.S. ban has represented "sanctions against Japan rather than against the Soviet Union."

During the summit meeting, Reagan won a reluctant pledge from leaders of the U.S. allies to exercise "commercial prudence" in extending export credits to the Soviet Union and its satellite states.

Abe told an impromptu news conference after meeting Mansfield Japan had concluded an agreement with the Soviet Union on the project well before the Kremlin sent Soviet troops to Afghanistan and the Polish situation deteriorated.

Sakhalin Oil Development Cooperation Co., the Tokyo-based state policy concern, has sunk 30 test wells in the shelf and confirmed the existence of a large amount of oil and natural gas, MITI officials said.

OFFICIALS REACT 'CALMLY' TO U.S. TRADE BILL

OW171225 Tokyo KYODO in English 1215 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jun 17 KYODO -- Officials of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry have reacted calmly to Wednesday's passage of a trade reciprocity bill by the Finance Committee of the U.S. Senate.

But they said the so-called "local content" bill now before the U.S. Congress requires a close watch, because it is obviously aimed at curbing foreign car imports.

The officials said the reciprocity bill, approved overwhelmingly by the Senate committee Wednesday, is a much watered-down version of one proposed by Republican Senator John Danforth of Missouri in February.

The original version of the Danforth bill was directed against Japan but the bill has since lost much of its retaliatory nature as a result of a compromise reached between the senator and the U.S. Government, they noted.

The officials said they cannot but regard the local content bill, which is said to be supported by a number of members of the U.S. House of Representatives, as "dangerous" in nature.

The bill, requiring all automakers selling more than 500,000 cars annually in the American market to procure more than 90 percent of all car parts in the United States, is tantamount to import control, the officials said.

The MITI officials said the U.S. Government and even Senator Danforth are opposed to the bill as it now stands. But the bill may be ultimately approved by the U.S. Congress in connection with the off-year election in November, they said. They agreed that the bill apparently violates provisions of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

PROTEST OF AUSTRALIA CURBS ON STEEL IMPORTS LODGED

[Text] Tokyo June 16 KYODO -- Japan has lodged a protest with Australia against its plan to curtail imports of Japanese steel, a government official said Wednesday.

The official at the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said the protest note, sent last week conveyed Japan's "grave concern."

The note also gave the Japanese version of the controversy stemming from an increase of 200,000 tons of Japanese steel shipments over a year before to 570,000 tons in 1981, he added.

Japanese steel industry executives said that of total exports, some 160,000 tons were seamless (oil well) pipes and welded and butt-welded steel pipes which have been in big demand in Australia for pipeline projects.

The Japanese steel exports also included cold-rolled steel sheets for automobiles, whose production has risen sharply in Australia, according to those industry leaders.

An advisory body to the Canberra government's Commerce and Industry Ministry will open a hearing Wednesday on the steel imports which local steel manufacturers say are threatening their industry to see if a temporary relief measure is necessary.

The Japanese steel industry is sending its representatives to the hearing.

WANTANABE RULES OUT CURBS ON CAPITAL OUTFLOW

OW180432 Tokyo KYODO in English 0335 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo June 18 KYODO -- Finance Minister Michio Watanabe Friday ruled out the possibility of immediately placing emergency curbs on the outflow of capital to prevent excessive depreciation of the yen.

Watanabe reasoned that such curbs, based on the foreign exchange control law, would only result in reducing confidence in the Japanese currency.

He was commenting in a news conference on the sustained strong advance of the U.S. dollar against the yen, the West German mark and other major currencies.

Watanabe blamed the high U.S. interest rates and the escalating international tensions for the dollar's continued rise.

On a proposal to raise the interest on government bonds to check an excessive depreciation of the yen and step up the sale of bonds, he said the proposed measure could be taken to defend the value of the yen.

However, under present business conditions, it would be extremely difficult for the government to raise the interest on government bonds for the present, Watanabe indicated.

SPACE DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM TO BE REVIEWED

OW170104 Tokyo KYODO in English 0010 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo June 17 KYODO -- The Space Activities Commission has decided to conduct a review of the space development program outline decided by the government in 1978 because of changes in the situation in the past four years.

The commission, chaired by Ichiro Nakagawa, director general of the Science and Technology Agency, decided Wednesday to make a restudy of the outline since demand for satellites for practical use has increased and since the situation concerning space development has undergone a change after the outline was drafted in 1978.

The present outline sets the guideline for Japan's space development to be carried out over a period extending around 15 years.

Based on the outline, the National Space Development Agency is now engaged in the development of an H-1 rocket capable of placing a satellite of the 500-kilogram class into staionary orbit. But communication and other satellites for practical use have become larger in size and launching of such satellites will not be possible until the H-1 rocket is developed and completed.

Therefore, Japan may have to rely on space shuttles of the U.S. and rockets of the European Space Agency (ESA) to place such satellites into orbit.

Tokyo June 17 KYODO -- Reflecting an overnight jump in New York, the U.S. dollar opened sharply higher at yen 253.70 on the Tokyo foreign exchange market Thursday. It was the highest since April 14, 1980 when the dollar reached yen 254.30.

In view of this, the Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Public Corporation, Japan's biggest user of satellites, has asked the government to develop a large rocket as early as possible.

The Liberal-Democratic Party's ad hoc committee on space development also drafted a proposal recently in which it called for advancing the schedule for development of the H-1 rocket and boosting the capacity of the rocket.

Under present plans, the government plans to complete development of the H-1 rocket so that it can be used from the latter half of the 1980.

Comrade O Kuk-yol spoke first. Declaring that, though Korea and Cuba are geographically far away from each other, their peoples are class brothers who are waging a common struggle for the victory of the cause of socialism, standing directly opposed to the U.S. imperialists, he stressed. The friendly and cooperative relations between the two countries are developing favorably with each passing day on the basis of the intimacy which was formed long ago between the great leader of our people Comrade Kim Il-song and Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, the supreme leader of the Cuban revolution.

Noting that today the fraternal Cuban people under the correct leadership of Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, the supreme leader of the Cuban revolution, are registering big successes in the efforts for fulfilling the Second Five-Year Plan and increasing the country's defense capabilities, upholding the decisions of the 2nd Congress of the Communist Party of Cuba, he sincerely wished them greater success in their future struggle.

By winning victory in the struggle against the imperialist aggression the Korean people demonstrated to the whole world by their practical example that, if a people fought in unity, defying sacrifices, they could defeat the enemy.

As our party and government have clarified on several occasions, we call for the withdrawal of the U.S. troops from South Korea and actively support the Korean people's struggle for national reunification.

Allow me, concluding my speech, to propose a toast to the good health and long life of the great leader of the Korean people Comrade Kim Il-song, to the good health and long life of Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, and to the good health and long life of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il. The party proceeded in a friendly atmosphere.

VRPR DENOUNCES CHONGWADAE POLITICAL MEETING

SK180023 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] On 16 June, Chon Tu-hwan held a meeting of the representatives of three parties -- the Democratic Justice Party [DJP], the Democratic Korea Party [DKP] and the Korea National Party [KNP]. The authorities have announced that this meeting, which lasted for more than 3 hours, comprehensively discussed state affairs -- that is, pending economic issues and the present domestic situation including the true aspect of the large curb loan scandal, the investigation of the background of this scandal and the accusations against ministers concerned -- and that the participants shared common views on jointly overcoming national difficulties.

The meeting of the representatives of three parties held at the Blue House was a political drama designed to fabricate a national consensus and deceive public opinion; it was a criminal conference which exposed the true color of opposition parties as government-sponsored parties; and it confirmed a will to maintain the present military rule. This was revealed by the fact that the participants attempted to shroud with the fog of mystery the incidents and the wicked plots denounced at home and abroad such as the curb loan scandal involving the Chang Yong-cha couple, which had been labelled as an irregularity involving the Blue House, the Cabinet reshuffle and the reorganization of DJP executive members.

As is widely known to the world, the DJP and the government-sponsored opposition parties the DKP and the KNP held a meeting of the executive members of three parties in wake of the curb loan scandal and said that they would help convene the summit talks of three parties at the earliest possible date to review and adopt measures for overcoming the present situation.

They pretended as if they were making efforts to probe into the background of the curb loan scandal and additionally charge ministers concerned with this scandal. As is shown by the entire course of the talks, however, instead of probing into the background of the scandal, they tried to prove that the Blue House was not involved in this scandal.

The "review" and "confirmation" clamored about by the ruling DJP and by the opposition DKP and the KNP prior to the meeting of the representatives of three parties was a drama designed to deceive the people. Frankly, no one believed that the true aspect of the curb loan scandal could be probed at the meeting attended by Chon Tu-hwan -- ringleader of this scandal involving the woman Chang -- in the capacity of the president of the DJP. This is because this meeting resembled a case in which a thief told his confidants that he would capture the true culprit.

Referring at the meeting to the curb loan scandal involving Chang, Chon Tu-hwan clamored that, though he could have quietly and easily disposed of this incident, he had thrown it open to the public because he wanted to resolutely punish those who violated the law, no matter how important the posts they held and no matter whether they were his relatives. This is a brazen act which could only be committed by a swindler who says black is white and who is accustomed to concealing his criminal nature.

Referring to the matter of charging ministers concerned with the loan scandal involving Chang, Chon Tu-hwan said that he had allowed these ministers to remain in office because he wanted not to protect them but to punish them. This is an act which could only be committed by a brazen fellow who says black is white.

The Blue House meeting of the representatives of three parties has publicly reconfirmed a will to maintain the present fascist military ruling system and revealed a hidden intention to further strengthen this system. This has been revealed by the fact that, while defining the crisis, which the Chon Tu-hwan regime was facing, as a national difficulty, the participants clamored that they would concentrate on overcoming it.

Referring to the matter of lifting the ban on political activities, Chon Tu-hwan advocated a step-by-step theory, saying that it is too early to lift the ban. He opposed point-blank the release of detainees and the matter of revitalizing the National Assembly. Thus he publicly revealed a wicked intention of continuously maintaining and strengthening the present military rule.

In conclusion, the Blue House meeting of the representatives of three parties was confab among three stooges who are following the United States and was a political drama designed to suppress the anti-U.S. and anti-Chon Tu-hwan struggle, which is being intensified, and to placate public sentiment. The entire course of the meeting has revealed that the DKP and the KNP, holding signboard of opposition parties are pro-Chon Tu-hwan parties and are antipopular, antidemocratic and government-sponsored opposition parties.

At the meeting of the representatives of three parties, Chon Tu-hwan attempted to shroud with a black curtain the true aspect and background of the curb loan scandal involving the Chang Yong-Cha couple, to escape responsibility for this scandal and to divert public opinion at home and abroad. However, this attempt will be futile. Our people will never be deceived by this immature, petty guile. They will never forgive the crime of the treacherous Chon Tu-hwan group.

In accordance with the unanimous desire of the people at home and abroad, the Chon Tu-hwan ring must disclose the true aspect of the large curb loan scandal to the people, apologize for it and immediately step down from power, taking responsibility as the true culprit.

SOUTH DEMANDS PRISON TERMS FOR KWANGJU ARSONISTS

ANTI-U.S. LEAFLETS SCATTERED AROUND UN COMMAND

SK180646 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] According to reports, anti-U.S. leaflets entitled "The Withdrawal of U.S. troops Is the Demand of the Times and Our Masses" were recently found scattered near the UN Forces Command. This was welcomed by the citizens.

The leaflets said as follows: The forcible occupation of South Korea by the U.S. troops has blocked the nation's reunification and exacerbated the tense situation and is a source of danger of a new war. The forcible occupation of South Korea by U.S. troops is an act of aggression which violates the principle of territorial integirty, respect of sovereignty and noninterference as stipulated in international law.

The United States should leave South Korea without delay, taking along all the weapons of mass destruction and nuclear weapons, as demanded by the UN resolutions.

This is the unanimous demand of the times and our masses. The United States should withdraw its troops stationed in South Korea without delay.

NODONG SINMUN HAILS PEOPLE'S GOVERNMENT RULE

SK141100 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1014 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Pyongyang, June 14 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Sunday carried an article headlined "People's Government Is Superior Revolutionary Government Conforming to Period of Building Socialism and Communism."

The article notes that one of the important points of "tasks of the people's government in modelling the whole of society on the chuche idea," the policy speech made by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on April 14, 1982, is that he clearly defined the form of power in the period of building socialism and communism. By discovering the form of people's government for the first time in history the great leader made a shining contribution to the solution of the question of power in our era, it stresses, and continues: The people's government is a power which is based on the worker-peasant alliance led by the working class and relies upon the united front of the popular masses. Its important feature is that it draws into it the masses of the working people of broadest strata as its master.

The people's government made its first appearance in the guerrilla bases in the early period of the anti-Japanese armed struggle and its invincible vitality and superiority were proved under the most arduous circumstances. After liberation the Workers Party of Korea successfully carried out the democratic revolution and the socialist revolution by this power and today is building socialism and communism by it.

The people's government is a power conforming to the period of building socialism and communism, because it is, in a nutshell, a revolutionary government of chuche type.

In our era not only the working class but also many other classes and segments including peasants and working intellectuals are participating in the revolutionary struggle for defending independence as masters of the revolution.

Only a government which enables broad classes and strata to hold their position as masters of the revolution and construction and discharge their role as masters can be a form of government meeting the requirements of our times.

From its inception the people's government has taken the chuche idea as its only guiding principle and regarded it as its historic mission to build communism by thoroughly embodying the chuche idea.

The people's government is a power conforming to the period of building socialism and communism, above all, because it is a power making it possible to successfully carry out the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, declares the article.

The people's government, it goes on, which staunchly struggles to steadfastly defend the independence of the popular masses and realize it can correctly carry out the three revolutions which are aimed at guaranteeing the masses of the people complete social equality and a happy life by remoulding man and transforming society and nature.

The article says that the people's government is a power conforming to the period of building socialism and communism also because it is a power suited to the basis of social relationship in the period of building socialism and communism.

Noting that the unity and cooperation between the working class, cooperative farmers and working intellectuals constitute the basis of social relationship in socialist society, the article states:

The people's government has such advantage as representing the common social interests and strictly performing the function of a means of realizing it.

The article underlines the great theoretical and practical significance of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's definition of the form of power in the period of building socialism and communism.

With the clarification of the people's government being a form of power suited to the period of building socialism and communism, a correct way has been indicated for correctly shaping policies under the socialist system and a firm guarantee provided for further strengthening the people's government.

PARTY LEADERS PLAN MEETING ON SUMMITRY RESULTS

[Text] The leaders of three major political parties are expected to meet next week to realize the contents of Wednesday's "political summit." President Chon Tu-hwan discussed a broad range of national issues with political leaders over lunch at Chongwadae Wednesday.

Yu Chi-song, president of the opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP), said yesterday he plans to meet the leaders of the other two major parties next week to talk about ways to establish a foundation for the peaceful change of power and for animating the functions of the National Assembly. The two other major party leaders are Yi Chae-hyong, chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), and Kim Chong-chol, president of the opposition Korea National Party (KNP).

Commenting on Yu's offer to arrange for a meeting among the leaders of three major political parties, the DJP leader said he is willing to attend the meeting. He said the meeting was originally stated for late last month but was postponed on account of the curb loan scandal.

Political observers said, in the meantime, that the proposed meeting is likely to take up a series of outstanding political issues including the removal of the political ban on former politicians. As it will take time to settle the pending political issues, the leaders of major political parties are expected to meet as often as possible, the observers said.

In a related development, the DJP, DKP and KNP are working on separate plans to realize the contents of Wednesday's Chongwadae meeting. The DKP and the KNP held a series of meetings yesterday to evaluate the outcome of the political summit, and the DJP plans to convene the Central Executive Council tomorrow.

CHON CONSIDERS GRADUAL LIFTING OF POLITICAL BAN

[Excerpt] Returning to party headquarters in Yoido from the Chongwadae meeting, Yu Chi-song, president of the Democratic Korean Party [DKP], with some excitement said: "I think the talks with President Chon today will lead to a way to bring the situation under control." He summed up the talks at Chongwadae in a positive manner.

Even before President Yu returned to party headquarters, DKP Vice President Yi Tae-ku, vice speaker of the National Assembly Kim Un-ha and DKP Secretary General Yu Han-yol were in a reception room. When President Yu appeared, these men gave their seats to reporters and listened to what they and President Yu were talking about. Yu said: "I expressed my opinion about the present situation in the wake of the Mrs Chang Yong-cha incident and such issues as improving the system for a peaceful transfer of power." He said he had told the president that "those banned from participating in political activities, imprisoned politicians, clerics and students should be released to eradicate social unrest."

Answering such suggestions, President Chon said, according to Yu: "I plan to remove political ostracism on a gradual basis. It is not possible to make a special case of those imprisoned. Nevertheless, since President Yu brought it up, I will consider those who show signs of repentance after having reviewed their cases." Yu said President Chon, unlike in the past, showed interest in lifting the ban imposed on old politicians.

President Yu continued that at the Chongwadae talks he proposed a conference of senior politicians within the National Assembly to discuss measures to bring the situation under control and for democratic development. President Yu said: "President Chon said it is not necessary. You can meet with me whenever the need arises." Meanwhile, Yi Chae-hyong, leader of the Democratic Justice Party [DJP], said, "Let us, the leaders of three political parties, meet often to discuss the situation." Thus, President Yu said, his proposal for a conference of senior politicians failed.

When asked what he felt was President Chon's understanding of the present situation, President Yu said: "First, President Chon thanked the leaders of the political parties for expressing their opinion on state affairs. He said he would do whatever is possible for a president."

The Chongwadae talks appeared to have been tense at first. President Yu said he had asked President Chon's opinion on whether he should start talking before or during the luncheon. The president wanted to hear what President Yu had to say while eating lunch. President Yu said he talked to President Chon for about 35 minutes.

President Yu said he told president Chon: "The public believes that the Mrs Chang Yong-cha incident is directly linked to the political slush funds of the DJP." The president is said to have nodded, as if to say he already knew of such an accusation.

Touching on the issue of replacing ministers directly responsible for the loan scandal, President Yu said he told President Chon that "he hoped well-qualified persons who are widely known to the public will be given posts as ministers. Instantly recognizing that Yu meant the naming of ex-military men to the Cabinet, President Chon said: "I understand what you are talking about. If you leave this problem to me, I will do what I think is right."

After a short press conference, President Yu presided over a meeting of the party executive members to let the party members know what was discussed at the Chongwadae meeting. President Yu said: "The participants of the Chongwadae meeting agreed not to make public one of the issues." The party members could only guess what that was.

The DKP is scheduled to hold a plenary meeting at 1000 on the morning of 17 June to discuss party strategy based on the results of the Chongwadae talks and measures to restore the present situation.

After the meeting, Kim Chong-chol, president of the Korean National Party [KNP], went straight to party headquarters, where he briefed the party leaders, including nonparliamentarians.

President Kim gave a detailed briefing on the four-point demand put forth by the KNP. However, as some impatient lawmakers wanted to know more about the outcome of the meeting, Kim said: "I didn't go there expecting too much," thus implying that the meeting was not very successful.

While Representative Yim Tok-kyu was asking him "What was the president's reaction to the demands put forth by our party," Representative Yi Song-su asked: "Did the president talk a lot?"

President Kim said: "No reactions, positive or negative, were showed to our demands and, in the latter part of the meeting, the president was just listening. However, he showed confidence over the operation of the government."

Sensing in Kim's answers the outcome of the meeting, Representative Yim asked: "What was the reaction to the curb loan scandal?" On this, Kim briefly said: "The feeling there seemed to be different from popular opinion." When Representative Kim Yong-saeng, expressing disappointment, said: "Since the people are not convinced on the curb loan scandal, some measures should have been worked out," President Kim answered: "The president asked to leave the matter to him. Therefore, I think there will be an additional Cabinet shake-up."

As Representative Yi Song-su also showed disappointment, Kim said: "It was not such an atmosphere as to expect concrete answers on the spot." "We can wait. However, it is true that we have achieved nothing that we expected."

On President Kim's assessment of the meeting, Cho Hyon-sang, chairman of the Executive Committee of the central party, said: "The meeting, which was held in the midst of great expectations, has ended without a substantial outcome. Do we have any choice other than following the government?" Representatives Yim Tok-kyu and Cho Pyong-kyu said that "the problem is fundamental differences of views."

At the gathering, Representative Kim Ki-su said: "I expected a decision by the president. Since we have nothing, the problems are unsettled." President Kim said: "From the beginning, I didn't expect much. However, we have presented our card. Now we just wait and see."

Sin Chol-kyun, secretary general of the KNP, asked: "What kind of positive reaction has the president showed?" Representative Kim Han-son asked: "Has no mention been made of the campus situation?" KNP President Kim disheartened them by saying: "It seemed the president felt it was not the time to change the system for political development." Kim added: "He was very resolute over the campus issue and emphasized his negative attitude toward student power."

HERALD EDITORIAL APPRAISES SUMMIT RESULTS

[Editorial: "Converging Political Views"]

[Text] The meeting of President Chon Tu-hwan with the leaders of three major political parties to address the disconcerting political and economic aftermath of the latest curb loan scandal answered the expectations of the people for national rapport and social stability resting on politics of dialogue and resurgent economy.

The high-level political parley served to clear and widen the channel of communication among competing parties. More significantly, it may well be taken as a timely step to bridge the gap between the ruling majority party and its minority counterparts in the legislature. The three major groups sufficiently represent a cross section of Korean opinion.

In the capacity not so much of the head of the government party as of the chief executive, President Chon lent a willing ear to what the leaders of the three parties had to say. For their part, the latter gave voice to their beliefs and stands without reservation. The candidness and openness which characterized this week's interparty summitry bodes well for the future of our political system.

Skepticism entertained by some about the possibility of one person holding the reins of government for too long was dispelled as President Chon again told the Chongwadae (presidential mansion) conferees that he is determined to effect a peaceful transfer of power at the end of his seven-year term as had been promised. It definitely heralds a tradition of orderly and democratic political changes to come.

Those political leaders present at the meeting shared the view that the nation faces many thorny problems both at home and abroad, agreeing that the entire nation should pool its wisdom and resources to overcome the difficulties with public servants taking the initiative. Toward that end they saw the need for meeting as often as possible for exchange of views.

Appeal from the opposition camp for removal of the ban on certain discredited former politicians received a basically favorable, though qualified, response from the president who said it is a little premature to do so now, but he will consider phasing out the ban on those who show signs of repentance. This speaks for President Chon's concern for generating political harmony by gradually lifting such restriction.

The demand for replacing a few Cabinet ministers by way of taking responsibility for the bank scandal and related economic plight was also accepted in principle, leaving only the question of timing that appears imminent. Now that the debris of the money market collapse has been nearly cleared it may be time for those politically accountable to go so that the administration can start anew with a clean slate.

The political summit covered, besides these overall issues, such specific policy matters as reviving local self-government and increasing farm income. They await to be thrashed out on a technical level in months ahead. What is more important is to further invigorate the processes of parliamentary and party politics as the main instrument of resolving conflict and building a national consensus.

President Chon's talks with top leaders of the major parties marked a step forward in nurturing a fresh tradition of politics through dialogue that will strengthen the viability and maturity of our style of political performance.

DKP SEEKS MEETING TO STUDY ELECTION REFORM

[Text] Yu Chi-song, president of the opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP), said yesterday the DKP plans to form an intraparty body to study the reforming of the election system.

Speaking in a meeting of DKP lawmakers, Yu also said he will seek a meeting with the leaders of the three major political parties to translate the contents of Wednesday's political summit into reality. He explained he had raised the issue of the election mechanism at the Chongwadae meeting to stress that the mechanism should be reformed by democratic means. However he is not advocating all immediate reform of the present political system.

Many lawmakers shared a view that the DKP's position was not well reflected in the political summit, Vice-Spokesman So Chong-won said. The vice spokesman also said that many lawmakers pointed out that there was a wide difference in the way the government and the people evaluate the situation.

FINANCE MINISTER CLARIFIES ECONOMIC POLICIES

[Text] The government is considering lifting regulations on foreign capital repatriation and easing restrictions on land acquisition by foreigners in order to promote foreign investment here.

The government also plans to expan business areas open to foreign investors, from the present 427 to 600 during the second half of this year.

The government plans were emphasized by Finance Minister Na Ung-pae last evening when he invited some 300 leading foreigners to the Lotte Hotel to brief them on the government's fiscal and monetary policies.

In a speech, Na said: "We will continue to depreciate the foreign exchange rate gradually, taking care to remain within the target of single-digit inflation and to prevent the reemergence of inflationary psychology." Accenting foreign banks' dynamic role here, Na said: "Our basic principle is to avoid any form of discrimination between foreign and domestic banks."

The meeting with foreign investors and businessmen took place to clarify the basic government economic policy and to explain measures against the biggest-ever lending frauds engineered by Mrs. Chang Yong-cha and her husband.

Participating foreigners residing in Korea came from foreign embassies, banking institutions, insurance companies, securities firms, invested companies and branch offices. Accompanying Na were nearly all high-ranking Finance Ministry officials and Ha Yong-ki, governor of the Bank of Korea.

In the meeting, Na said the government had partially changed its economic targets for this year in order to achieve 6-7 percent real GNP growth, restrict inflation to 10 percent and limit the current account deficit to about $3 billion. The foreign exchange rate, a crucial factor influencing the balance of payments and inflation, is required to be maintained at a stable level this year on a trade weighted basis, Na said.

Na went on: "I really hope that the U.S. dollar will stabilize on the world market -- even better depreciate -- thereby helping me solve some of my problems." Turning to the Chang Yong-cha loan case Na said features of the incident were severe cash flow problems, shortages of funds from the established financial systems and structural rigidities in the organized sector. In order to attract as much money as possible from the so-called curb market into institutional markets, Na said the government was making efforts to enlarge the activities of commercial banks.

For this purpose, discounting bills of exchange will be promoted, Na said. The planned acceleration of exchangebill discounting will help small companies ease their heavy dependence on the curb market. At present small firms manage to discount their "genuine trade bills" only on the curb market. Na said, "Also we plan to vitalize the call money market by inviting the participation of non-rank financial institutions in efforts to integrate the financial markets and to attract funds from underground to established markets."

COMMENTATOR SCORES HUANG HUA'S UN SPEECH

OW180511 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1712 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 17 June (MONTSAME) -- A MONTSAME commentator writes: Huang Hua, China's minister of foreign affairs, addressed the second UN special session on disarmament. The minister began his speech by brushing aside all of the known proposals on disarmament made by the Soviet Union and other peace-loving countries, saying they merely served as a disguise to escalate the arms race. He waved aside these proposals without even referring to their essence. This is understandable, otherwise he would have had to take upon himself the ungrateful task of explaining to the world why the Chinese leadership opposed the initiatives, the realisation of which would have led to the lessening tension and to practical steps in disarmament. And that is when he would have had to say that China opposed disarmament and detente.

Surely Huang Hua could not dare to say that. Covering up the true designs of Peking, he sharply attacked the Soviet Union alleging, in part, as though no progress had been made in the last four years in controlling of armaments owing to the USSR. This is not merely a misinterpretation of facts but a malicious slander. It is general knowledge that at the initiative of precisely the Soviet Union and thanks to its tremendous efforts the Soviet-American SALT-II was signed in 1979 in Vienna. This treaty has been hailed by all of humanity as an effective barrier in the way of the nuclear-missile race. It is also general knowledge, to the Peking leaders as well, that the ratification of the SALT-II and its coming into effect (?was) frustrated by the Washington administration, which has never spared efforts to gain military superiority over the Soviet Union, thus evoking warm emotions on the part of Peking.

Similar unfairness was rife in many other theses of Huang Hua's speech. For example, he demanded that the Soviet Union commit itself not to use nuclear weapons against non-nuclear states. Why the Soviet Union could not make such a pledge? he exclaimed pathetically. But it is well (?known) that already several years ago the Soviet Union solemnly proclaimed that it would never use nuclear weapons against those states which refrained from the manufacture and acquisition of nuclear weapons and did not have them in their territores. Moreover, at the 35th UN session in 1980 the words of the Soviet-proposed resolution on some measures on lessening military danger were heard in the same hall. That proposal envisaged, in part, the earliest elaboration and conclusion of an international convention which would guarantee that nuclear arms would not be used or threatened to be used against them. Huang Hua should remember this proposal as well as the futile efforts made by the Chinese delegation in order to frustrate the adoption of the corresponding resolution.

Speaking on the whole about the speech made by the Chinese minister it can be noted that it did not carry anything new as well as anything constructive that would be of help to the participants of the special session to achieve practical steps in disarmament. On the eve of the second special session on disarmament many of its participants were saying that the session could come out successful in that case only if the attempts of the enemies of disarmament to turn it into a talking-shop would be stopped. The (?speech) by the Chinese foreign minister has exactly been one of the above-mentioned attempts.

LEADERS TO MEET 21 JUNE TO FINALIZE COALITION

[Excerpt] Singapore, Jun 18 (AFP) -- Leaders of the three anti-Vietnamese factions in Cambodia will meet in Kuala Lumpur on Monday [21 June] to finalize the formation of a coalition government, it was authoritatively learnt here today.

A top ASEAN official told AFP that Prince Sihanouk of the Moulinaka faction, Son Sann, leader of the Khmer Peoples Liberation Front (KPLNF), and Khieu Samphan, head of the ousted Khmer Route regime, are expected to attend the 3-day meeting.

The breakthrough was achieved last week at a meeting in Thailand between the representatives of the Khmer Rouge and KPLNF.

Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie is expected to make the announcement on the Kuala Lumpur meeting at the end of the five ASEAN ministers' session with their six dialogue partners here this evening. Mr Ghazali had recently offered to host the tripartite meeting and had indicated that he was confident that the coalition government would be formed soon.

Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila had briefed his ASEAN colleagues on Monday on the details of the coalition agreement, based on an ASEAN plan initiated last year.

PRC Proposal to Sihanouk

[By Jim Wolf]

[Text] Bangkok, Jun 18 (AFP) -- China has forwarded to ex-Cambodian Head of State Prince Norodom Sihanouk a breakthrough proposal that could lead to the quick formation of an anti-Vietnamese coalition in his homeland, diplomats said here today.

The diplomats, who asked not to be identified but who have been reliable in the past, said the tripartite power-sharing proposal was sent this week through the Chinese Embassy in Bangkok to the prince, now in exile in Pyongyang, North Korea.

The Chinese became involved after the deposed Khmer Rouge government and former Premier Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) finally reached a deal, the sources said.

Prince Sihanouk, who heads a small faction of his own, reiterated Wednesday that he had set no conditions for entering the proposed tripartite coalition, which is aimed at boosting the diplomatic and military struggle against the 150,000-200,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

Under the new proposal, Prince Sihanouk would be president, or head of state, of the deposed but United Nations recognized Khmer Rouge government known as Democratic Kampuchea. The current Khmer Rouge head of state and Prime Minister, Khieu Samphan, would become vice-president in charge of foreign affairs and Son Sann would be premier, according to several sources.

The breakthrough agreement is closely modeled on the "loose coalition" formula first put forward by Singapore last November when ad hoc talks among the three factions broke down after nine meetings in Bangkok.

Under the arrangement, each party would retain its own organization, political identity and freedom of action, diplomats familiar with the latest agreement said.

One source said the pact had been worked out through a senior Thai military officer, who acted as go-between during sensitive negotiations in the past week or two.

The agreement came shortly after Son Sann dropped his long-standing demand to control the majority of posts in a coalition he was entering highly reluctantly. He did so under pressure from a host of anti-Soviet states, including the United States, China, and the members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN -- Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines.

Last week, the KPNLF disclosed it had accepted four key "principles" laid down by the Khmer Rouge as a pre-condition to setting up an alliance. These were tripartism, non-predominance of any of the factions, consensus in decision-making and retention of the "legitimacy and framework" of the deposed Khmer Rouge state.

The final stumbling block was apparently overcome when the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge settled on having Khieu Samphan in charge of foreign affairs.

Earlier, the Khmer Rouge had reportedly sought the creation of a separate foreign affairs portfolio for Ieng Sary, their current foreign minister. The KPNLF, the largest non-communist resistance group, has long opposed Ieng Sary on grounds he was closely associated with the ousted government's brutal rule from April 1975 until the Vietnamese invaded and set up a client government in Phnom Penh in January 1979.

On China's attitude toward the proposed coalition, one well-placed Western diplomat said, "My impression is they're not being unhelpful".

China has steadfastly rejected any moves that would undercut its proteges, the Khmer Rouge, who account for the bulk of resistance on the ground to the Soviet-backed Vietnamese.

Another diplomat cautioned that it remained to be seen whether Prince Sihanouk, known for his frequent political about-faces, remains true to form and flip-flops now. "Sihanouk may relish the chance to keep everyone on tinderhooks", he said.

Reports reaching here from Singapore today said ASEAN foreign ministers had been fully briefed by Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetasila on the power-sharing agreement during their current annual meeting.

Analysts note that any future coalition is unlikely to have an early effect on the battlefield, where the war-hardened Vietnamese far outnumber the combined resistance force.

The coalition would not include a unified military command, though there would be a tripartite defense "coordinating committee", one of four such cabinet-like portfolios.

The initial goal is to limit the expected erosion of support for the continued seating of Democratic Kampuchea at the UN, where a Soviet-backed move to give Cambodia's seat to the rival Phnom Penh government is due again this autumn.

SPK COMMENTARY SCORES ASEAN EFFORTS ON COALITION

[SPK commentary: "A Blatant Maneuver"]

[Text] Phnom Penh, 16 Jun (SPK) -- It has been learned from Western sources that the three reactionary Khmer gangs will meet in Geneva in order to form a so-called coalition government to oppose the legal and legitimate government of the PRK.

Conceived in Singapore nearly a year ago, this coalition project aborted successively in Bangkok and then in Beijing, the capitals of its principal creators. By choosing Geneva, the directors of this comedy want to make public opinion believe that this is a personal initiative of the leading actors, that is Pol Pot, Son Sann and Sihanouk themselves. In fact, only a blind supporter could swallow such a hard, bitter pill.

Since the fall in January 1979 of the bloody Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime -- spit upon the whole Kampuchean people -- Beijing has made intensive efforts to maintain the remnants of the Pol Pot army and other reactionary Khmers with the hope of returning the hangmen back to power in Phnom Penh.

Having fallen into the political orbit of Beijing, the Thai leaders and those of a certain number of ASEAN countries have pitched in their contribution by organizing meetings between Sihanouk, Son Sann and Pol Pot in order to set up a "coalition" which would legitimize their support for "Democratic Kampuchea," a regime under which 3 million Kampucheans were massacred or had perished in labor camps.

This idea of a meeting in Geneva comes after intensive diplomatic activity by Thailand, from Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon's European tour to Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila's recent visit to Beijing where he had more than 10 hours of talks with his Chinese counterpart and "detailed discussions with Chinese leaders on the formation of this coalition" (AFP, 12 June)

The goal is therefore obvious: To form at all costs a presentable "government" in order to hide the blood stains with which the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan government has covered itself so as to keep the UN seat for it.

This policy is gross interference in Kampuchea's internal affairs. It is part of the plan pursued by Beijing in collusion with Washington to choke off the rebirth of Kampuchea and scuttle the labor of the Indochinese peoples who only want to live with independence and freedom, in peace and stability in order to rebuild their countries devastated by the U.S. imperialists and Chinese expansionists.

The leading circles of ASEAN must be aware that by working in this direction they bring to their own peoples the consequences of Chinese expansionism and hegemonism.

Freed from the blind followers of Maoism, the Kampuchean people have over the past more than 3 years demonstrated their will to defend their new life. Closely allied with Vietnam and Laos and enjoying the aid and support of the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries as well as the progressive circles in the world, they have achieved many successes in the restoration of a country which was bled white under former regimes. The people's power is gaining strength all over the country. The Kampuchean people are firmly advancing on the road of socialism under the leadership of the KPRP. They will fiercely defend their dearly acquired independence and sovereignty.

This situation is irreversible. Any attempt by Beijing, Washington and other reactionaries to reverse the course of history is a vain effort. Any "loose" or "tight" coalition of the traitors is, to the eyes of the Kampuchean people, merely a gathering if hangmen and adventurers manipulated by Beijing and Washington and already expelled from the land of Angkor. The sole and authentic government born from the will of the people is the government of the RPK.

The leading circles in Thailand and other ASEAN countries must recognize this reality and stop working for the benefit of the imperialists and expansionists so that the Southeast Asian peoples can live together as good neighbors in peace and stability.

KHIEU SAMPHAN GREETS ASIAN LAWYERS CONFERENCE

[Text] The Asian lawyers legal inquiry committee held a splendid conference in Bangkok -- royal capital city of Thailand -- from 4 to 11 June. Members of this committee are lawyers from Thailand, Indonesia, Japan, Malaysia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Singapore, Australia, India, Sri Lanka and Bangladesh. The goal of the conference was to investigate violations of human rights in Kampuchea and Laos especially by the Vietnamese aggressors' use of toxic chemicals and biological weapons in these two countries.

At the end of its investigations, the Asian lawyers legal inquiry committee declared that it had found concrete evidence on the use of toxic chemicals and biological weapons by the Vietnamese aggressors in Kampuchea and Laos.

At the opening of this important conference, Khieu Samphan, chairman of the Democratic Kampuchean state presidium, sent a message of greetings to His Excellency Chana Samutwanit, chairman of the organizing committee, wishing complete success for the conference.

The essential parts of the message are as follows:

I would like to highly praise the noble initiatives of the organizing committee, with Your Excellency as chairman, aimed at efforts to relieve the suffering of the Kampuchean and Lao peoples who are victims of the violation of human rights by the Hanoi Vietnamese clique which has used all manner of crimes such as massacre, imprisonment, torture and even the use of famine and toxic chemical weapons.

I would like to acclaim the timing of this conference which is being held when the Hanoi clique is being bogged down and is at a complete impasse on the Kampuchean battlefield. The Vietnamese aggressors are making every effort to extricate themselves from this impasse and are attempting to change their desperate situation to their own advantage by engaging in political and diplomatic maneuvers aimed at inciting other countries to cease their assistance and support to Democratic Kampuchea, which is the sole force capable of pushing them to final defeat.

It is true that only such investigations as yours can attract world opinion and perhaps set in motion concrete activities to bring pressure to bear on the Vietnamese until they withdraw their 300,000 aggressor troops and their agents from Kampuchea in conformity with demands restated for years -- demands in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the declaration of the international conference on Kampuchea. The Kampuchean problem will not be solved and the uncountable barbarous violations of human rights by the Hanoi Vietnamese clique will not cease unless the Vietnamese withdraw all their troops from Kampuchea.

DIKE IN KOH SOTIN -- Phnom Penh, 6 Jun (SPK) -- Mat Ly, member of the KPRP Central Committee, vice chairman of the National Assembly and deputy minister of agriculture, and Sim Ka, member of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the committee for the control of state affairs, were present at the opening of a new dike in Koh Sotin District, Kompong Cham Province, on 4 June. The construction work began in February with the participation of the inhabitants of Koh Sotin and O Reang Euv districts of Kompong Cham Province and Prey Veng, Kanhchriech, Kamchay Mea, Sithor Kandal and Peareang districts of Prey VEng Province. The Ministries of Agriculture and Communications and the provincial authorities of Kompong Cham supplied trucks and bulldozers for the construction. Thanks to this dike more than 24,000 hectares of ricefields and orchards will be watered during the dry season. [Phnom Penh SPK in French 1433 GMT 6 Jun 82 BK]

KAMPUCHEAN GROUPS 'AGREE' ON COALITION FORMULA

[Excerpt] Having told a Bangkok-based Western ambassador a few days ago: "I have no other choice but to agree to the new formula proposed by the Khmer Rouge," Khmer resistance leader Son Sann has informed Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan that he would go along with the new structure of the coalition which would place foreign policy under the direct charge of the Khmer Rouge.

"But Son Sann was talked into accepting it after he was convinced that one of the four principles agreed upon -- tripartite consensus on all major issues -- would still give him the right to veto against any important foreign policy matters he did not approve of," said well-informed diplomatic sources.

The Khmer Rouge's new coalition formula would make Prince Norodom Sihanouk president; Khieu Samphan vice president and foreign minister and Son Sann prime minister in the coalition government to fight against the Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin regime in Phnom Penh.

Under the three leaders, the structure calls for four committees equally represented by the three factions to handle defence, economy and finance; social welfare and health; education and culture.

Four "principles" have been agreed upon by sides in the formation of the coalition. They are: non-predominance of any faction; a tripartite structure; decision-making by consensus and respect for democratic Kampuchea's institutions.

One source said that Khieu Samphan and Son Sann had been negotiating in the past weeks through "letters carried by mediators." The source said that Son Sann's agreement in principle to sign a document to form the coalition under the new formula was made in a letter to Khieu Samphan.

The draft coalition agreement is being conveyed to Prince Sihanouk who is now in Pyongyang. Sihanouk has said that he was ready to go along with the formula agreed upon by the Khmer Rouge and Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front [KPNLF]. He has also said that he may appoint his top aide, In Tam, to represent him in any signing of an accord.

Son Sann has been demanding the foreign affairs portfolio on the grounds that he should be able to speak for the coalition government since the Khmer Rouge's history of brutality remains a black spot in their image.

Sources said that no date of the signing of the three-party accord for the formation of the coalition government nor the venue for such a ceremony has been fixed.

Intense pressure had reportedly been applied on Son Sann to accept a new formula to bring about a coalition so that ASEAN could discuss assistance for the coalition with the "dialogue partners" in Singapore this week. They included the U.S., Japan, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the European Community.

ASEAN also had tried to get a coalition formed to ensure the retention of Democratic Kampuchea's seat in the upcoming United Nations General Assembly in September. Without a coalition government, ASEAN could face an uphill task in keeping a credible majority for DK's seat in the world body.

Both Singapore and Malaysia have made it clear that they want to give the Khmer nationalists (KPNLF and Sihanouk's National Sihanoukist Army) the means to put pressure on the Vietnamese while offering assurances for them against Khmer Rouge's domination.

The urgency for a coalition appeared even more obvious to ASEAN this year since several European countries have expressed reluctance to vote for the DK's seat in the UN unless an acceptable anti-Vietnamese Khmer coalition government was formed.

UN OFFICIAL ADMITS SRV 'ABUSE' OF KAMPUCHEAN AID

[Text] Singapore -- United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees representative Sir Robert Jackson has admitted to top ASEAN ambassadors to the UN that some international assistance for Kampuchea was used for nonhumanitarian purposes.

Revealing the above, diplomatic sources said yesterday that the admission was made after evidence was given about a shipment of aid goods arriving at Kompong Som port in May last year being loaded aboard Vietnamese military trucks.

Some aid officials infuriated over the use of aid for political or military purposes reported the matter to ASEAN envoys. The UNHCR later claimed that Vietnam had paid compensation for the goods taken away.

The above was only one instance of abuse of aid.

TOXIC CHEMICALS REPORTEDLY DROPPED BY SRV PLANES

BK171248 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 17 Jun 82

These toxic materials could stop the division of body cells, causing the following symptoms: In the early stage, sores will develop on the tongue, palate and throat and victims will vomit and suffer stomachaches and headaches; in the second stage, victims may feel weak and suffer spells of dizziness; and in the third stage, victims may suffer bleeding of the digestive tract and on the skin and he may die from other complications.

The cyanide found in the white crystal will cause acute blood poisoning and consumption of fish killed by cyanide could kill the consumer.

SUPREME COMMAND ON KAMPUCHEAN BORDER SITUATION

BK171240 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Supreme Command Information Office Director Lt Gen Som Khattaphan reported at the Supreme Command headquarters today that there were no significant border incidents during the past month. There were minor incidents of fighting between different Kampuchean groups near the Thai border but they did not affect the Thai border. General Som said the Heng Samrin side regularly rotated its units and launched patrols to locate the Khmer Rouge and conducted suppression drives against them. In short, there were no significant incidents during the past month.

Meanwhile, Army Secretary Col Narudon Detpatiyut said that during the past month Vietnam's media regularly charged that Thailand violated Kampuchean air, sea and land boundaries. It also scored the joint Thai-U.S. naval exercise. He reported that fighting took place in Kampuchea opposite Nam Yun district of Ubon Ratchathani, and Kap Chong district of Surin. These clashes resulted in some shells landing in Thai territory. He also noted that the Thai-Lao border situation was relatively quiet during the past month.

SRV TROOPS 'INFILTRATED' EASTERN PROVINCES

[Text] About 300 Vietnamese have taken Thai lessons from Thais in Battambang, Kampuchea, a Royal Thai Navy spokesman, Captain Thanatchai Bamrungthian, claimed yesterday.

At a news conference at the Supreme Command, he said that some of the Vietnamese who had completed the Thai-language course were believed to have infiltrated into the eastern provinces of Trat and Chanthaburi. He added that the navy was trying to find out what the Vietnamese infiltrators were up to in Thailand.

The spokesman also reported clashes between Khmer Rouge guerrillas and Vietnamese-led Heng Samrin forces near the Thai border from Pong Nam Ron District of Chanthaburi down to Khlong Yai District of Trat during the last 15 days.

Two skirmishes were reported on June 2 and 3 between marine-trained rangers and unidentified foreign troops in Khlong Yai district. There were no casualties on the thai side. A small Thai fishing vessel was captured by Kampuchean armed boats in the sea off Ban Hat Lek on June 10. The fate of the crewmen was still unknown.

POST REPORTS PATROL BOAT ATTACKED ON MEKONG

[Text] Nong Khai -- Vietnamese-led Laotian troops yesterday shot at a Thai patrol boat in the Mekong River wounding two naval officers and shelled two Thai villages killing two civilians, informed sources said last night. About 400 families of villagers of Ban Mai and Ban Kut Bong, Phon Phisai District, were yesterday afternoon evacuated to safe ground at Ban Non Sombun school. The border flare-up occurred at about 3:15 P.M. when a Thai Mekong River patrol unit's patrol boat No. 137, commanded by Lt Phonthep Thepkamhaeng, was passing the Don Sangkhi Islet of Laos, opposite Phon Phisai, while on a routine patrol.

The craft was suddenly fired at with rocket-propelled grenades, mortar shells and automatic rifles by Vietnamese-led soldiers on the islet. Sources said one of the RPGS hit the patrol craft amidship causing extensive damage. Two naval officers, P/O Wirat Phungban and P/O Napa Salikhup, were seriously wounded with grenade shrapnel. All the crew, including the wounded, however, managed to swim ashore. Artillery fire from the Laotain side also landed in the vicinity of Ban Mai and Ban Kut Bong villages, killing two villagers.

After the shooting of the Thai vessel, more patrol boats rushed to the scene and engaged the Vietnamese-led troops on the islet. Reinforcements led by Deputy Governor Ukrit Hansombun were also despatched to Phon Phisai which is about 60 kilometres from the provincial town. Informed sources said [sentence as published].

Further Report

[Text] Commenting on the attack on the two Thai patrol boats from Laos' Don Sangkhi Islet in the Mekong River at about 1500 yesterday, Navy Chief of Staff Admiral Samak Saiwong told newsmen at the National Assembly building this morning that it seemed that the incident had been planned in advance because the boats were fired at from all directions. The two vessels were the Thai Mekong River patrol boats No. Lo-173 and Lo-370. One of them was sunk while the other went aground.

One Thai official was seriously wounded and three others slightly wounded. The navy chief of staff said the sunken boat probably could not be salvaged. However, it was not an expensive boat because it was built by the navy. He noted that the incident should not have happened because the two patrol boats were sailing inside our waters.

Asked what further action would be taken in this regard, he said: We will have to take retaliatory measures, according to the government's policy, while a protest would be made by the Foreign Ministry.

Meanwhile, Navy Commander Admiral Phibun Chuaphibun said it is difficult to state which party is responsible for the incident. However, it is believed that this might be the work of those who were trying to smuggle contraband goods or narcotics across the border or of insurgents who were returning from weaponry training courses abroad, of which the navy has also received some information previously.

GOVERNMENT TO COMBAT PIRATES IN THAI GULF

BK180733 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] The Thai Government is expected to announce next Wednesday [23 June] a program to combat pirates who prey on Vietnamese boat refugees in the Gulf of Thailand. The campaign will be launched immediately and carried out by the Thai navy, marine, harbour and land police forces. The program will be covered by a $3.68 million fund from the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, or UNHCR.

It is evident that the Thai Government's effort to combat the pirates has been hampered by lack of facilities and equipment. The offered fund is believed to put the government to a better position to commit itself strongly against the piracy.

CPT DOCUMENT ON MILITARY PROPOSALS CAPTURED

BK180302 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 18 Jun 82 p 6

[Text] Northeastern communist insurgents recently asked the leadership of the Communist Party of Thailand (CPT) to adopt their package proposals which include "actions to stir unrest in the rear line of the enemies" in their struggle to thwart military offensive against their jungle strongholds.

The proposals are contained in a document seized last month in a communist-infested area bordering Sakhon Nakhon and Kalasin by the Second Army Region.

The document, entitled "Proposals About Military Operations of CPT in 1982-1983," said actions to the effect would make the government unable to concentrate its military forces against communist insurgents.

The northeastern communists also called on the party to pay more attention to attack on rangers to "shatter the enemies' plan to build up reserved forces and divert the attention of the ruling class from attacking the party."

The document also calls for efforts to strengthen the party's guerrilla warfare and the deviation from its former line to strengthen large-scale "liberated zones."

"Our former line of thinking to build up large-scale strongholds is not realistic and practical in the present situation," the document says.

Referring to military sieges against Communist strongholds, the northeastern communists said in the document that armed communist insurgents should concentrate their forces to attack government forces when the party was confident of a victory.

However, it also states that the outlawed fighters must also be ready to disperse into guerrilla units in the face of stronger forces. The paper also calls on the party to frequently train its armed fighters over tactics and strategies to shatter military sieges against their strongholds to enhance the readiness among the rank and file in the outlawed party.

Touching on tactics to undermine ranger forces, the document proposes that the party should employ every possible way to estrange rangers from the government organization.

The means include killing certain figures in the government force to intimidate other rangers into deserting their garrisons, according to the document.

The paper says it is imperative for the party to bring about unity of thoughts over military tactics and strategies in dealing with military offensives within the rank and file of party members.

The result of the fighting in these two years would decide whether our party would reverse the current trend and gain a military edge over the government once again, the document adds.

THAILAND POSTPONES MINISTERIAL MEETING ON TIN

BK171227 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Thailand has postponed a ministerial meeting of three Southeast Asian tin-producing countries next week following a call by Malaysia to host a similar talk in Kuala Lumpur on Saturday.

According to a senior Industry Ministry official, the meeting of mining ministers from Malaysia, Thailand and Indonesia, originally scheduled to take place here on June 24-25, had been postponed indefinitely pending the outcome of their talks in the Malaysian capital.

Thailand and Indonesia have announced their plans to join the 6th international tin agreement, due to be in force from July 1. Malaysia, the world's biggest tin producer, is expected to make known its decision on Saturday.

The Kuala Lumpur meeting would set the positions of the three countries to be presented to a UN-sponsored meeting on tin in Geneva which would resume on June 23.

The tin producers are expected to discuss measures of minimizing effects resulting from the disposal of U.S. tin stockpiles, which has depressed tin prices.

They also would consider reducing tin production, joint effort at checking tin ore smuggling out of Thailand and Malaysia and a Malaysian proposal to set up an OPEC-type tin producers' association.

CORN TO INDONESIA -- Indonesia has placed orders with three local exporters for Thai corn totalling 35,000 tons worth about 140 million baht late last week. A few months ago Indonesia bought 50,000 tons of Thai corn. Indonesia has suffered a shortfall of corn this season and wanted to buy more Thai corn. Unfortunately, the local supply is very limited. Indonesia has been the largest buyer of Thai rice, buying some 600,000 tons in 1980. This year its total purchase of Thai rice drops to 70,000 tons. HANOI ON U.S. CHARGES OF TOXIC CHEMICALS USE

[Nguyen Chi Vu commentary]

[Text] Dear friends: In recent days U.S. ruling circles, with the fervent support of the Chinese expansionists and some other reactionary forces, have again whipped up a slanderous, distorting propaganda campaign about Vietnam's so-called use of toxic chemicals in Kampuchea and Laos.

According to Western propaganda agencies, a group of lawyers from a number of Asian countries recently assembled in Bangkok and issued a statement parroting the U.S. propaganda campaign.

Following are some pertinent remarks by Nguyen Chi Vu, commentator of the Voice of Vietnam:

[Begin Nguyen Chi Vu recording] Friends: Judging from recent diplomatic and propaganda activities of the United States, China and some other reactionary forces, we can see clearly that the clique is colluding and coordinating more closely in preparing for a campaign to slander and vilify Vietnam, the Soviet Union and other socialist countries at the 37th UN General Assembly to be held in September. The recent gathering in Bangkok of lawyers from certain Asian countries and their statement that they had found proof of what they called use of chemical weapons in Kampuchea and Laos certainly are inseparable from this scheme of the U.S. imperialists and the Chinese expansionists against the Indochinese countries.

It should be recalled that at his 13 September 1981 press conference in West Berlin, the U.S. Secretary of State, for the first time, said that U.S. scientists had ascertained the kind of poison found in samples of objects taken from Kampuchea. To give more weight to his statement, he added that the chemical poison content in those samples was surprisingly high and that the poison was very powerful. It was expected that, following his denunication, the head of the U.S. State Department would produce convincing scientific proof to support it. However, scientific data cannot be made up to deceive people. Therefore, since then, the U.S. Government has been unable to find any tangible proof to convince the world public.

More and more people are indignant because of the U.S. State Department's fabrication. Conscientious U.S. scientists felt they were hurt by that fabrication. Some of them said they were very much worried about U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig's toying with science. Dr (Chest Minnocha) of the University of Minnesota said the two samples of leaves he was asked to scrutinize were in fact, two broken pieces of the same leaf, not of two different leaves taken from two different places as the U.S. State Department claimed.

The Washington Post said that the little water and a piece of tree bark that the U.S. State Department gave U.S. scientists for analysis might have been gathered by the U.S. State Secretary's henchmen somehwere in the United States because, the paper claimed, the toxic chemicals found in these samples could be bought freely at many U.S. stores. U.S. scientists also observed that if the toxic chemicals were shot from guns, as the U.S. State Department claimed, why was it that no spent cartridges tainted with the toxic chemicals that they claimed had been used could be retrieved?

The U.S. secretary of state also said that toxic chemicals had been dropped on some sources of water, that some of the investigators got sick as a result of the splashes of the contaminated water on them. However, U.S. scientists at Wisconsin University held that a person has to drink scores of liters of that kind of water at a time so that some effect may result.

After its failure in using those incompatible samples to prove its case, the U.S. State Department sought proof from among refugees. However, according to the magazine INDOCHINESE ISSUES, in its January 1982 issue, the refugees' statements contained too many ambiguous, contradictory, exaggerated and even fabricated details.

After releasing a canard about the so-called Vietnam's use of toxic chemicals in Kampuchea and Laos, the U.S. State Department brought up the issue to the United Nations and, under pressure of the United States and other international reactionary forces, a team of so-called UN specialists went to Thailand for an on-the-spot investigation. The White house predicted that it would take the team a few days at the most to complete a dossier on the case to be presented to the UN General Assembly for examination. However, it took the team nearly a month to do its job and it was only on 24 November 1981 that it sorrowfully issued in New York a statement about the failure of its investigation. The team also said that the proof provided it by the U.S. State Department was insufficient to support the U.S. denunciation. The U.S. State Department then pressured the United Nations into holding the issue for discussion at the 37th UN General Assembly. Over the past 6 months, it has feverishly engaged in a frenzied, revengeful propaganda campaign.

In February and March, U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig personally and repeatedly told lies on television, but failed to produce any further proof. In early April, the U.S. State Department sent a team of so-called specialists on chemical warfare carefully selected by Mr Haig himself to Thailand for a so-called on-the-spot investigation. After 6 days of investigation, this team, like its predecessor, for all its strenuous efforts, failed to turn up any convincing proof to support the U.S. State Department's denunciation.

The fact that so far the U.S. imperialists have suffered -- and will certainly do so in the future -- one setback after another is understandable because the truth is always the truth, it cannot be easily distorted to suit one's purpose. This is a scientific matter which requires convincing arguments, and no fabrication is acceptable.

The British paper THE OBSERVER, in its 25 October 1981 issue, carried a photo of a Vietnamese mother holding in her arms her eyeless 3-year-old child with this caption, "This Baby Was Born Eyeless Because His Father Was a Victim of the Agent Orange Dropped on Southern Vietnam by the Americans."

The paper said that before arriving at this conclusion, scientists had made surveys on more than 300 relatives of the child but could not find anyone having such a congenital defect. That is the way scientific research should be conducted. Yet, the U.S. psywar apparatus brazenly advanced a very unconvincing conclusion based on the research on some samples of leaves and water and some refugees' rambling talk. Such a subjective imposition of U.S. will on other people has aroused the indignation of Western public opinion, which called the U.S. State Department's accusation against its opponent ridiculous.

It may be said that in this deceitful propaganda campaign, the Americans have found no supporters other than the Chinese expansionists and some of their vile followers. This is no surprise because "birds of a feather flock together," as the saying goes. Their mutual support is likened to a frantic dance of devils before a painted cake. Doubtlessly, the U.S. ruling circles had no qualms when bringing up the above issue to the United Nations and world public opinion. Their chief aim is to take advantage of the world public's reaction to this sensitive issue to vilify and take political revenge on Vietnam.

If the U.S. ruling circles consider the bitter U.S. setback in the Vietnam war a national dishonor, Mr Alexander Haig, the U.S. secretary of state, besides bearing that national disgrace, certainly suffered a personal insult of being a defeated general. Therefore, he schemed to avenge his shame. That explains why Haig is the masterminder-promoter of this vile slander campaign which he has carried out frenziedly, passionately and persistently.

Do they want to find the proof to accuse the user of toxic chemicals of his attempt to exterminate human existence? It is easy. They need not go far. Right in the United States there exist more than 40,000 children of U.S. Vietnam veterans leading miserable lives because of the congenital defects resulting from their fathers' exposure to the Agent Orange that the Americans massively used during the Vietnam war. According to the international alliance of Agent Orange victims, up to 2 million U.S. soldiers have been affected by that toxic chemical and every day 20 Americans die of dangerous diseases resulting from their exposure to the toxic chemicals that the Americans used in Vietnam. That is living and convincing proof.

U.S. psywar propagandists now want to blame other people for their own crimes. Unfortunately, the more they slander us, the more people will talk about their monstrous crimes. During the time the Americans have whipped up a slander campaign against us, people in Japan, Western Europe and the United States have repeatedly issued communiques with convincing conclusions, based on solid scientific studies, on the U.S. genocidal, biocidal and ecocidal crimes in Vietnam.

We are not a bit bothered by the U.S. ruling circles' groundless slander. World public opinion is speaking out the truth. In Great Britain, people say that the more the Americans tell lies, the further ridiculous they become. Righteous U.S. scientific circles are exposing the politically opportunistic nature of their country's rulers. Biochemistry Professor (Mercelson) of Harvard University has even challenged the U.S. State Department to produce convincing details on the issue.

Obviously, the toxic chemicals issue is now like a bone in the throat of those who have brought it up. They are like a bull in a china shop. They are inflating an already deflated ball. That does not bother us at all. It has been said that under developed capitalism, the limit between honesty and deceit is unclear, but here, in this slander campaign, there is only deceit, deceit right from the beginning.

SRV MARKS BULGARIAN LEADER'S 100TH BIRTHDAY

Defense Ministry Ceremony

[Text] The General Technical Department of the Ministry of National Defense, on behalf of the armed forces throughout our country, organized a solemn ceremony in Hanoi on the afternoon of 16 June to mark Georgi Dimitrov's 100th birthday, 18 June.

After an inaugural speech by Maj Gen Le Van Tri, head of the General Technical Department, Maj Gen [Thieeus Tuwowngs] Hoang Van Thai, deputy head of the department, took the floor to talk about the revolutionary life of Georgi Dimitrov, the great son of the Bulgarian people, the great leader of the Bulgarian working class, the outstanding leader of the international communist movement and the comrade and great close friend of President Ho Chi Minh and the Vietnamese people.

Speaking on the occasion, Bulgarian Military Attache Col (Bossey Petar Yanov) dealt with Georgi Dimitrov's great services to the socialist construction cause in Bulgaria, and with his many creative measures for building a new type of people's army for the Bulgarian proletariat.

The comrade Bulgarian military attache wished the VPA even greater achievements in building and defending Socialist Vietnam. He hoped that the militant solidarity and all-sided cooperation between the peoples and armed forces of Bulgaria and Vietnam, which had been cultivated by Georgi Dimitrov and Ho Chi Minh, the venerated and beloved leaders of the two nations, will last forever.

Nguyen Duc Tam Speech

OW171735 Hanoi VNA in English 1642 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 18 -- A meeting to mark Georgi Dimitrov's birth centenary (June 18) was jointly held here by the Fatherland Front Central Committee, the Hanoi Committee of the Communist Party, the Nguyen Ai Quoc Higher Party School and the Institute of Marxism-Leninism.

Bulgarian Ambassador Philip Markov was present at the event.

Opening the meeting, Nguyen Duc Tam, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee, pointed out the valuable ideological lessons of the great thoughts of the Bulgarian leader for the world people's present struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

Nguyen Duc Binh, member of the party Central Committee and director of the party school, delivered the commemorative speech, highlighting Dimitrov's great contributions to the Bulgarian revolution and to the internationalcommunist workers' and national liberation movements throughout the world.

After criticizing the U.S. imperialists's intensification of the arms race and their threats to world peace, Nguyen Duc Binh condemned the Beijing reactionary clique-self-styled Marxists-Leninists for their opposition to socialism, revolution and peace in the world.

He expressed his firm conviction that the militant solidarity and all-sided cooperation between the two parties and the two peoples of Vietnam and Bulgaria and other members of the socialist community with the Soviet Union as its mainstay would constantly consolidate and develop in the interest of the two nations, and for the sake of peace, national independence and socialism throughout the world.

NHAN DAN Editorial

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 18 -- The national newspaper NHAN DAN today runs an editorial entitled "Immortal Cause of Georgi Dimitrov" in celebration of his 100th birthday. The paper says:

"Together with the communists and the entire people of Bulgaria and progressive mankind as a whole, the communists and the entire people of Vietnam celebrate the 100th birth anniversary today of Georgi Dimitrov -- a prominent son of the Bulgarian working class and nation, a great communist, and an outstanding leader of the international communist and workers' movement.

"Georgi Dimitrov's revolutionary life is a perfect expression of communist qualities, most typically his firm attitude at the Leipzig court, his life is a bright example for all of us, especially his scientifically grounded belief in the communist ideology, his revolutionary optimism, and his staunch and unshakable will to live up to his idelogy."

The paper goes on: "His desire to set up a world-wide front against fascism and war still bears a great significance at present-day world when the biggest political task of all nations is to unite together in a common struggle to defend world peace and do away with the danger of a nuclear war posed by U.S.-led imperialism."

"Georgi Dimitrov made remarkable contributions to proletarian internationalism both in theory and practice," the paper says. It notes: "He always combined patriotism with proletarian internationalism. He resolutely opposed bourgeois nationalism while cultivating in the Bulgarian working class the determination to defend their legitimate national rights and enhance internationalism. He regarded friendship with the Soviet Union as the nucleus of proletarian solidarity. His affirmation that friend or foe could be judged through their attitude toward the Soviet Union still remains valid today."

"The rapid growth of the three revolutionary currents in our time has made Georgi Dimitrov's noble and beautiful dream come true," NHAN DAN says.

TRUONG CHINH REPLIES TO CASTRO NOTE ON LEBANON

OW171613 Hanoi VNA in English 1549 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 17 -- Vietnam sternly condemns the Israeli Zionists for their brazen aggression and genocide, and strongly demands that they cease their aggression and unconditionally withdraw their troops from Lebanon and respects the fundamental national rights of the Palestinian and other Arab peoples.

These demands are made in a letter today from President of the Council of State Truong Chinh in reply to a message dated June 12 Fidel Castro Ruz [as received], president of the Non-Aligned Movement, on the critical situation in Lebanon caused by the Israeli aggression.

President Truong Chinh said: "The aggression on the greatest scale ever launched against Lebanon by the Israeli Zionists, who are aided and abetted by the United States, has not only impudently violated the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Lebanon, a member of the Non-Aligned Movement, committing many genocidal crimes against the Palestinian people, but also seriously threatens peace and security of countries in the region and elsewhere in the world.

"Israel's predatory actions have aroused indignation among the Vietnamese and other peoples. Obviously this is a deliberate move taken within the framework of the strategic alliance between the United States and Israel aimed at opposing the Palestinian people's war of resistance and violating the sacred national rights of the Lebanese people."

Truong Chinh reaffirmed Vietnam's "militant solidarity with and strong support for the heroic and bound-to-be victorious struggle of the Palestinian, Lebanese and other peoples of Arab countries against the U.S. imperialists and the Israeli Zionist aggressors, for the inviolable national rights of the Palestinians and for the preservation of the independence, national sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Arab states."

NHAN DAN URGES STRENGTHENING GRASSROOTS CADRES

[NHAN DAN 16 June editorial: "Foster Grassroots Administrative Cadres"]

[Text] In the organizational system of the state administration, the people's committees of city wards, villages and towns are the grassroots administrative level where the people's right to mastery is guaranteed. Members of the people's councils and the people's committees are persons directly responsible for organizing the people and motivating them to carry out party lines and policies and the various systems, policies and the law of the state. At the same time, they are responsible for collecting all the people's opinions and aspirations and presenting them to the party and state so as to help the party and state promptly correct their viewpoints and policies in furtherance of the interests of the country and the legitimate interests of the people.

The requirements and scope of local administrative work are constantly expanding, and the people's life is also posing many pressing problems that require a prompt settlement. Many village, city ward and town administrative cadres have worked selflessly and upheld honesty, justice and impartiality to serve the people wholeheartedly.

A number of people's councils, however, are still lagging behind in their activities and a number of people's committees have failed to create favorable conditions for the people's councils to perform their functions. Many people's committees and people's councils have failed to grasp firmly their own functions, authorities and tasks. In certain localities, the party committee has undertaken a number of tasks which should have been performed by the people's committee; and even the managerial board of the agricultural cooperative has taken over some functions of the administration.

An urgent standing requirment is that we must constantly consolidate and strengthen the local administration at various levels, pay appropriate attention to building and strengthening the administrative apparatus at the village or city ward level, and systematically training and fostering key leading cadres for villages and city wards.

In the current 1981-83 term of tenure of the people's council of city wards, villages and towns, almost one-half of the number of councillors are newly elected, and more than 24 percent of them are fresh members of the people's committees.

The majority of these persons -- despite their meritorious achievements in their work, production and combat, their enthusiasm and zeal for work, and the confidence placed in them by the people -- do not have a firm grasp of the law; nor are they proficient in administrative work. Therefore, these cadres need training to improve their knowledge of lines and policies and their capabilities for state management.

In every province, municipality or special zone, the number of members of the people's councils and people's committees is fairly large; and all of them cannot attend a training course at the same time. Furthermore, the actual situation concerning production and social life is constantly changing. Even though members of the people's councils and people's committees have gone through formal and extensive trainig courses, they must continue to be trained in practical experience so as to be fully capable of promptly and correctly coping with fresh developments in their localities. There are diverse forms of training such as opening short-term courses locally or organizing meetings to discuss the experience gained by progressive models. All such enrichment or training activities are aimed at making administrative cadres at the grassroots level thoroughly aware of their functions, capable of smoothly supervising the activities of the grassroots administration, and knowledgeable in socioeconomic management.

Grassroots administrative cadres must also learn to motivate the laboring people to engage in the construction and defense of the fatherland, participate in state and social management, and develop the right to collective mastery. They must develop close contact with the masses in all spheres of activities at the grassroots level.

It is regrettable that at present a number of grassroots administrative cadres do not fully understand the relations between the party and state and the laboring people; and they have displayed shortcomings which are derived from bureaucratism, commandism, oppression of the masses and the pursuit of self-interests, thus weakening the administration at the grassroots level.

It is very important that we enhance the party's leadership and control over the grassroots-level administration while training grassroots administrative cadres in political awareness, supervisory ability, managerial skills and revolutionary ethics and quality.

EDITORIAL REVIEWS PROGRESS OF GRAIN PRODUCTION

SK161126 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 10 Jun 82

[NHAN DAN 11 June editorial: "Make the Greatest Efforts To Implement the 1982 Grain Production Plan"]

[Text] In only a few days the north will reach the peak of the winter-spring rice harvest. The rice crop is growing fairly well and developing full grains. If the weather does not take an unexpected bad turn, the rice output may be greater than that of last year, though still short of the plan norm. Meanwhile, the harvest of the winter-spring rice in the south has been completed, with the rice yield being fairly high and above the plan norm. Due to a serious shortfall in area, however, the total rice output was only some tens of thousands of tons more than last year and thus, still short of the targeted figure. Thus, the results of the winter-spring crop have been poor throughout the country as a whole. The national winter-spring grain output this year may be somewhat higher than that of last year, but it will still be short of the plan norm. All localities must make the greatest efforts to practice intensive cultivation, increase rice yield and enlarge the areas planted to the summer-fall and 10-month rice crops with the aim of fulfilling the grain production plan for the entire year.

A striking feature of the summer-fall and 10th-month crops in the north this year is that they have been planted after the 5th-month-spring rice crop was reaped 15 to 20 days late. All localities must provide concentrated guidance to ensure that the 5th-month-spring rice crop is planted according to schedule and the seed allocation pattern so as to increase rice yield and prepare good conditions for planting the winter crop toward the end of the year. The progress of the harvesting and plowing work is the primary factor that decides the crop-cultivating schedule and the production pattern for the next crop. Coupled with the shortage in draft power, the shortened time available for soil preparation this year requires that every locality and production establishment take the initiative in calculating and balancing the use of draft power -- which comes from draft cattle and various types of tractors -- on the area to be put under each rice planting and make appropriate plans to ensure its availability.

Under the new contract system, every production unit must devise measures for organizing, managing, utilizing and caring for draft cattle in order to increase their working capacity and, at the same time, ensure the availability of draft power when needed. We must create the necessary conditions for all types of tractors to operate satisfactorily in support of the plans for soil preparation. In localities where cattle are scarce, it is necessary to make plans for conservation so as to meet the crop-cultivating schedule. Also, we must strengthen ricefield embankments to contain water and preserve the moisture of the soil in order to ensure that plowing work will be carried out according to the crop-cultivating schedule.

Every locality must check the quantity, quality and variety of seeds; balance seeds with the area and seed allocation pattern for each 10th-month rice planting; promptly reveal real shortages; set up a seed reserve in flood-prone and flood-diversion areas; and resolutely avoid area shortfalls due to seed shortage.

The 10th-month crop is planted in the rainy and hot season when natural calamities -- drought early in the crop season, waterlogging, floods, harmful insects and diseases — often strike. Concerning irrigation work, efforts must be concentrated on preventing and controlling waterlogging while preventing drought. While combatting drought, it is necessary to stay prepared to control waterlogging. The water conservancy, electricity and agricultural sectors from the central to the local level must closely coordinate with one another to control promptly drought, waterlogging, flash floods and floods with the use of both mechanical and manual means, and with advance plans to control natural calamities totally by manual means.

Efforts to prevent and control harmful insects and diseases must be efficiently planned early in the crop season, with biological measures closely combined with chemical measures. When harmful insects and diseases appear, forces and means must be mobilized to eradicate them out as soon as possible and prevent them from spreading and developing into epidemics.

Along with improving the quality of the product contract system, we must consolidate the cooperatives' vegetation protection teams. Through their preparation of forecasts for the provinces and districts, the cooperatives' vegetation protection teams and every worker will enhance their knowledge with regard to the prevention and control of harmful insects and diseases; and together, they will create a combined strength for protecting production.

The result of grain production in the entire year is the sum of the results of all the crops planted. In agricultural production, specific guidance must be given concerning each type of crop and each crop season to each locality and basic unit. While our production activities are still largely dependent on natural conditions, we must, in every crop season, concentrate efforts on carrying out all the main tasks most satisfactorily in order to meet the production plan.

With all sectors at the central level wholeheartedly serving agricultural production and with all the localities and basic units actively bringing into play their initiative and creativity, we will create a strength with which to overcome all difficulties and ensure the fulfillment of the grain production plan for the entire year.

KUALA LUMPUR COMMENTS ON ASEAN COMMUNIQUE

BK171441 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The foreign ministers of the ASEAN nations, who are now meeting in Singapore, yesterday issued a communique that condemned Vietnam for being the main cause of the Kampuchean problem and which refusing to cooperate with international organizations to bring about a speedy resolution of the conflict. The international community has expressed the view to the UN General Assembly that the Kampuchean problem was created when Vietnam invaded Kampuchea in January 1979, installed the puppet Heng Samrin regime and its 200,000-man army had perpetuated its military occupation through sheer terror and overwhelming military force.

What is really tragic about the whole thing is that Hanoi refuses to acknowledge that it has reaped only the bitter fruits of sorry and international rejection by its continued military occupation of that country. The ASEAN foreign ministers meeting in Singapore has condemned Vietnam for its continued intransigence in rejecting all attempts to bring about peace to Kampuchea, thereby reducing the tension, fears and strains caused by the Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea. This action has made Vietnam the principal threat to peace in Southeast Asia and has also enhanced the opportunities for superpower intervention in the area.

Vietnam's military occupation of Kampuchea was responsible for China launching its own invasion of the northern provinces of Vietnam. The Soviet Union is today firmly ensconced in Hanoi and Phnom Penh having gained access to vital military bases like Cam Ranh Bay. It is indeed an irony that Vietnam which was the nation that had suffered the most because of superpower conflicts, was today providing the pretext for a continuation of such actions.

The ASEAN foreign ministers stated in the communique that Vietnam must accept the reality that a lasting solution for Kampuchea can only be found through negotiations and on the basis of resolutions passed by the General Assembly on this issue. Hanoi has to accept the fact that no major power or the Third World has recognized the Heng Samrin regime which is a Vietnamese creation and imposition on the people of Kampuchea. The Vietnamese aggression against Kampuchea and its continued military occupation of that nation has not solved any problem, but has instead brought forth stronger resistance to Vietnamese rule resulting in death and destruction.

Vietnam today is an isolated nation internationally. Its alliance with Russia and other Comecon countries has only demonstrated that Moscow is more prepared to dispense guns and destruction than butter and prosperity. The Vietnamese economy is in a shambles and Vietnam must accept and play by the rules of international conduct if it is to get the respect of and assistance from the international community.

The ASEAN nations have rejected and will continue to reject all attempts to justify the unlawful occupation of Kampuchea and give legitimacy to the Heng Samrin regime. The ASEAN ministers also reiterated their support for Democratic Kampuchea's representation at the United Nations, stressing that it was based on the fundamental principles of respect for the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of states, noninterference in the internal affairs of states and nonuse of force in international relations. It is to be hoped that the visit of the Vietnamese foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, to ASEAN nations and Burma next month will resolve some of the issues raised at Singapore and at previous forums.

SINGAPORE PAPER INTERVIEWS GEN ROMULO

BK161011 Singapore THE STRAITS TIMES in English 15 Jun 82 p 16

[By Peter Hazelhurst and Liak Teng Kiat]

[Text] During an hour-long interview with the STRAITS TIMES last week, General Carlos P. Romulo reminisced over his past and provided some candid views on ASEAN, its strengths and weaknesses, its neighbours and what he believes to be some of the pitfalls of the future.

On ASEAN

Stretching out an open hand in front of his face and bending each finger in turn, Gen Romulo declares: "The Philippines, individually, doesn't mean much. Indonesia, individually, does not mean much. Or Singapore, or Malaysia or Thailand. Individually, they are just isolated fingers."

Then clenching his hand into a fist, he goes on: "But like this, they have power. They are 250 million people together who can exert a political clout that each nation, separately, would not have."

In the past, western pundits had predicted that ASEAN would not last, he recalls. They had said the member countries had different cultures and had different orientations. Also their products competed with each other.

"But we showed them they were wrong. We showed them that we could, not only exist, but prosper and become stronger," he says emphatically.

ASEAN had also proved proponents of the domino theory wrong too, he reminded. Instead of falling, the ASEAN countries are thriving while the communist countries have falled out among themselves.

The reason for this, Gen Romulo says, is that the ASEAN countries have followed the "free way of life and the free enterprise system," in the same way as West Germany and Japan.

But he also believes that ASEAN still has some way to go, especially in integrating its resources and economic efforts. He is particularly unhappy with what he regards as the slow movement on ASEAN's industrial complementation projects.

After five or six years, he says, they are still only projections. As far as he is concerned, this is not good enough. "It is not enough that we have the projects. What is more important is that we have the political will to carry them out," he stresses.

Hence, he believes that ASEAN should concentrate on consolidation rather than think of expansion in the immediate future.

He is not adverse to ASEAN admitting countries like Brunei and Papua New Guinea (who are attending the present meeting as observers). He says that these countries have shared ideas with ASEAN and their admission would therefore not undermine efforts to consolidate the organisation.

But he obviously believes that it is also important for ASEAN to remain a compact group that can work in a united manner.

On the Soviet Union, Vietnam and Cambodia

Asked whether he sees Vietnam's alliance with the Soviet Union as a permanent pact, he retorted without hesitation: "Of course. Some people think we can wean Vietnam from Russia. I say no. Russia is here to stay."

He was equally pessimistic over the prospect of Vietnam withdrawing its troops from Cambodia in the foreseeable future.

"I see the possibility that the Vietnamese might eventually be forced to withdraw their troops from Cambodia if we continue to drive them and make them realise they are the pariahs of the world. They will be isolated and they will have to listen to the world." But as a realist he believes the Soviet Union will attempt to use Cambodia as a springboard in Moscow's long-term plans for the Balkanisation of Southeast Asia.

Spelling out the consequences of Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia for the first time, the outspoken general says the action would establish a precedent which could be used against ASEAN members in future.

"Why is ASEAN fighting the invasion of Cambodia by Vietnamese troops? Because the same thing could happen to any of us. It can be duplicated in any of our countries here.

"The Vietnamese claim the people of Cambodia asked Vietnam to invade the country to save them from the Pol Pot regime. Well, it's easy to concoct something like that in any of our countries. There are dissidents and malcontents in any country. Any group can go to Moscow and plead for an invasion," he explains.

He is even more gloomy when he examines Cambodia's future in the light of the Soviet Union's record in Europe.

"The Soviet Union sees Cambodia as the springboard for the Balkanisation of Asia, a process which they engineered successfully in Europe. Remember what happened to Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland. When they invaded Hungary I remember I made some vigorous speeches on the floor of the UN Assembly. Nothing happened. They are still there.

"They present the world with a fait accompli. They stick to the place. They don't mind what the world says," he says.

He went on to warn non-communist nations of Asia that the Soviet Union is using its proxy, Vietnam, to present the invasion of Cambodia as a fait accompli.

"The Vietnamese are still there. If there is passivity on our side, if we cross our arms and let them get away with it, they will do the same thing to us at anytime. That's the danger. In the long perspective unless we present a united front against the invasion of Cambodia we might be the next victim," he declared.

At the same time the diminuitive soldier-statesman called on the non-communist nations of Asia to close ranks against what he described as the Soviet Union's dangerous activities in Asia.

"Our air-space has been violated 200 times by the Russians. More Russian ships have come to the Philippines than ever before and both Indonesia and Singapore expelled a number of Soviet diplomats recently," he added.

On Japan

The old soldier believes ASEAN is vulnerable on another front: Japan. "I think we are depending too much on Japan. Unless we are careful we will be tied hand and foot by Japan."

In essence, Gen Romulo harbours fears that Japan's growing economic ties with ASEAN could provide Tokyo with political leverage in the region in future.

"So far the Japanese have been our good friends. They have lived up to all their commitments on reparations and they have given us substantial aid. But you cannot only look at the present. You have to look at the long-term future. And it would be dangerous if we were bound hand and foot to Japan. I am afraid of a new sphere of co-prosperity," the outspoken diplomat says.

He concedes that the Japanese have already created a "sphere of co-prosperity" in Southeast Asia in an economic sense.

But they do not have political power. If they build up their navy and air force they would have political power. They might have second thoughts and revive the concept of a sphere of co-prosperity. That would be dangerous and it is one of our weaknesses," he claims.

Like many American leaders Gen Romulo believes Japan should take on a greater responsibility for its own security. "I do not want to see Japan remain a weak link in this chain of defence. It is important that Japan build up its home guard to protect its shores," the foreign minister says.

On the United States

Gen Romulo is also firmly convinced that the United States will have to keep a military presence in North and Southeast Asia to maintain the balance of power in the region.

"I see a continuing American presence here. For their own national interest; not so much for Asia's interest but for America's national interest. It is essential to their national interest."

Asked specifically whether he really believes an American president would commit his troops to a war in Asia in the wake of the trauma of Vietnam, the general leans forward over his desk and stabs a finger in the air to emphasise his point:

"I do not want to see American troops fighting our wars. We must fight our own wars. But it is important that an American military presence is retained in Asia to maintain the balance of power.

"America should not send troops here to fight but the United States should keep a naval force in the area to maintain the balance of power," he says.

He says America wants South Korea, China and Japan to do more to maintain the security of the Pacific and North and Southeast Asia.

"But there is a danger in that. We do not want a repetition of the Second World War. If you give the Japanese arms, like a powerful navy and air force, that would be dangerous to us. But they should be allowed to strengthen their defence forces so they cannot be overpowered," the dapper ex-soldier claims.

At the same time ASEAN should oppose any plan to withdraw American troops from South Korea.

BRIEFS

NEW FUEL PROCESS -- Coco-diesel fuel will be sold to Manila motorists beginning the second week of July. The fuel is 97 percent diesel and 3 percent coconut oil. Refineries will start blending the fuel on 1 July. Coco-diesel will eventually be used nationwide to cut down on diesel consumption and to help the coconut industry. The use of this fuel is embodied in the national automotive fuel policy. Energy Minister Geronimo Velasco is assuring motorists that the mixture has been tested well and has been found efficient. He added the country also had the chance to use it during the war, so it is not exactly new. [Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 10 Jun 82 HK]

ASEAN-EEC DIALOGUE SESSION OPENING SPEECHES

[Text] Singapore, 18 Jun (AFP) -- The A sociation of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) today called on the European Economic Community (EEC) to play "a very important role" in international commodity issues, which are of vital concern to ASEAN.

Opening the ASEAN-EEC dialogue session, attended by EEC Council of Ministers President Leo Tindemans and Vice-President Wilhelm Haferkamp, Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila stressed the importance of North-South interdependency as "fundamental to the world's economy and well-being".

"The South's call for a more equitable international economic order is just and reasonable. It is aimed at creating North-South balance", he said, adding that its successful implementation would result in greater harmony, which was essential to world peace.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi said: "The community's recognition of the importance of the stabilisation of the international market for sugar, of the signing of the international rubber agreement and of the international tin agreement, are warmly appreciated by ASEAN".

They are examples for other developed countries to follow, he said, in an obvious reference to the negative attitude of the United States to the sixth international tin agreement, which Washington had decided not to sign.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi said ASEAN was the fastest growing region in the world today, with its abundant natural resources and a market of more than 250 million people.

"ASEAN and the European Community are therefore natural partners in the world economy", he said. ASEAN provided a large market for European goods and opportunities for investment.

"But the full potential of our relationship can be realized only if you open your market wider to our goods. We must be able to sell you in order to buy from you, and your investments should be accompanied by a bigger transfer of technology", the Thai foreign minister said.

Mr Tindemans said that the EEC-ASEAN collaboration constituted a "remarkable example" of work in support of peace and international security between two groupings in different continents. He noted that the cooperation was growing more natural and deeper every year.

ASEAN, he said, had become a most important factor of stability and progress in the world in general and in Asia in particular. "It is for this reason that the EEC wishes to develop cooperation with it in international fora, based on common ideals and interests."

Referring to the Cambodian problem, Mr Tindemans said that Vietnam had not yet shown the least evidence of a willingness to contribute towards a political settlement of this crisis.

He reiterated the EEC's support for settlement of the problem within the framework of the United Nations resolutions calling for the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia as a prerequisite for the Cambodian people to decide their own future.

ASEAN, DIALOGUE PARTNERS END MEETING

[Text] ASEAN foreign ministers have ended their fourth ministerial dialogue with Australia, Canada, the EEC, Japan, New Zealand and the United States. All of them have pledged to work with ASEAN in international forums with a view to lowering protectionist barriers and improving access to markets in industrialized countries.

In this regard they looked forward to the forthcoming GATT ministerial meeting because it aimed to extend the multilateral system for a free flow of trade, services, investment and technology.

The Australian Foreign Minister, Mr Anthony Street, has said that without international economic revival there would be limited prospects for progress in the North-South dialogue, including the launching of global negotiations. He said this would be of concern to ASEAN and Australia as their approach on the issues was to try to achieve consensus between the developed and the developing nations. He said both parties believed that a real opportunity besides global negotiations had emerged from the Versailles economic summit and that failure to grasp this opportunity now would represent a serious setback for early progress for the North-South issue. Mr Street was speaking at a luncheon organized by the Foreign Correspondents Association of Southeast Asia at the (Tangling) Club this afternoon.

On future relations between ASEAN and Australia, Mr Street said economic cooperation would become increasingly important. He said there would be growing opportunities for the greater cooperation between the ASEAN and the Australian business communities.

ASEAN MINISTERS COMMENT ON KHMER COALITION

[Excerpt] The Malaysian Foreign Minister, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, has confirmed that the three anti-Vietnamese Kampuchean factions will meet in Kuala Lumpur next week to sign an agreement to form a coalition government. However, he said, the Malaysian Government was only providing facilities for the meeting. Whether it will succeed or not would depend on the leaders themselves. But Tan Sri Ghazali was optimistic of the outcome of the meeting. He was speaking to Singapore Broadcasting Corporation before leaving for home after attending the 15th ASEAN ministerial meeting and the post-ministerial conference with dialogue partners.

At a news conference in Kuala Lumpur, he said Prince Norodom Sihanouk would attend the meeting. Tan Sri Ghazali said he received word last night from North Korea, where the prince mostly stayed, confirming that he would attend.

The Philippine Foreign Minister, Gen Carlos Romulo, who also left for home this morning, described the coming meeting of the Kampuchean factions as a landmark for ASEAN in its efforts to seek a political solution to the Kampuchean issue.

The Indonesian Foreign Minister, Dr Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja, said the meeting was very timely. He said the support at the United Nations for Democratic Kampuchea was starting to get tenuous because of the reputation of Pol Pot. Dr Mokhtar said the continued support for democratic Kampuchea should not also mean continued for the Pol Pot government. Unless we could change the composition of the Democratic Kampuchean government, there was a danger that support forthwith would decease at the next UN General Assembly session. With the formation of the coalition, Dr Mokhtar hoped this would not happen.

The Thai Foreign Minister, Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, the Canadian Secretary of State for external affairs, Dr Mark MacGuigan and the U.S. Deputy Secretary of State, Dr Walter Stoessel, have also left the republic. They were seen off by the Foreign Minister, Mr Dhanabalan.

Dr Stoessel said the dialogue with ASEAN had been extremely useful. He pointed out that ASEAN was a cornerstone of U.S. policy in Southeast Asia and the United States would continue to work closely with the regional group on a broad range of economic and political issues.

As regard commodity arrangements, Dr Stoessel said the United States certainly understood ASEAN sensitivities about proposals by the U.S. Government to release quantities of tin from its stockpile.

U.S. SANCTIONS TO DELAY JAPAN-USSR OIL PROJECTS

OW190220 Tokyo KYODO in English 0212 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jun 19, KYODO -- Japan-Soviet joint development of oil and natural gas resources off Sakhalin is most likely to be delayed due to U.S. Government's continued economic sanctions against the Soviet Union, officials here said.

The Sakhalin Oil Development Cooperation Co., Japanese partner in the project, said it will have to scale down test drillings scheduled from next month because of inability to buy a special electric geological tester from the Schlumberger Ltd. of the U.S. which monopolizes equipment, due to Washington's embargo.

Test drillings off Sakhalin can only be conducted between July and early October because of severe weather at other times.

'GREAT DISAPPOINTMENT' OVER U.S. OIL EQUIPMENT BAN

OW190320 Tokyo KYODO in English 0313 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jun 19, KYODO -- Foreign Ministry officials Saturday expressed great disappointment at the U.S. decision to strengthen its ban on sales of oil and natural gas development equipment to the Soviet Union, but vowed to put renewed pressure on the U.S. to continue the joint Sakhalin oil and gas development projects.

The officials regarded the U.S. action as a reflection of the tense East-West relations following the Soviet aggression of Afghanistan and the turmoil in Poland and feared U.S. relations with Western Europe will worsen.

'Strong Protest' To Be Lodged

OW210654 Tokyo KYODO in English 0632 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jun 21, KYODO -- Japan will lodge a "strong protest" with the United States for its decision to bar the shipment of U.S.-built drilling equipment for a Russo-Japanese oil and natural gas development project, a senior government official said Monday.

Ichiro Fujiwara, vice minister of international trade and industry, said his ministry will consult with government leaders on the protest's form and timing. "You may call it a strong protest," he told a news conference.

The government of Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki was stunned by the Reagan administration's announcement last Friday on expansion of economic and technological sanctions against the Soviet Union. Japanese officials said this could seriously delay or even cancel the Russo-Japanese joint project on the continental shelf off Sakhalin, on which Japan has already spent about yen 50 billion.

President Reagan's renewed tough stance toward the Kremlin is also likely to delay the completion of the Soviet natural gas pipeline to Western Europe.

The U.S. Government made the decision to tighten its grip on economic and technological transfer to the Soviet Union despite Japan's last-minute effort to gain exemption for the Russo-Japanese project from the sanctions.

International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe had pleaded to U.S. envoy Mike Mansfield prior to the U.S. announcement that the project had been underway since 1976 irrespective of the Soviet Union's military implications in Afghanistan and Poland.

Further on Proposed Protest

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Jun 21, KYODO -- Japan reacted swiftly and angrily to the U.S. decision to keep the ban on the shipment of U.S.-built electric logging equipment for a Russo-Japanese oil and natural gas development project and said it will strongly protest it.

"It was totally unexpected," a high-ranking government official said of the White House announcement on expansion of ecomomic and technological sanctions against the Soviet Union. "We were quite displeased."

The official said Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki will discuss the issue with his cabinet ministers at a Tuesday morning cabinet session. The official made the remarks on the ground that his name not be used. One of Japan's key energy policy planners, the unnamed government official said the Tokyo government will ask the Reagan administration to reverse its decision.

The unnamed high-ranking official said the Japanese Government will officially convey its displeasure over the U.S. action through a top-level Tokyo-Washington hotline or normal official channels.

MITI Vice Minister Fujiwara declined to speculate on what form the Japanese protest will take and when it will be delivered to the U.S. Government.

The unnamed government leader stressed, however, that Tokyo still considers its ties with Washington important despite the ban on the shipment of U.S.-built drilling equipment which may lead to the project's "complete cancellation" under the worst scenario.

Request To Be Renewed

[Text] Tokyo, Jun 21, KYODO -- Japan will ask the United States to reconsider its announced decision to keep the ban on the shipment of U.S.-made electric logging equipment for a Russo-Japanese oil and natural gas development project off Sakhalin north of Japan, Foreign Ministry sources said Monday. They said Tokyo would renew its demand to Washington to exempt the shipment from the U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union.

However, judging from Washington's tough stance toward the Soviet Union as revealed at the recent Versailles summit of Western industrialized nations, general belief here is that the U.S. could hardly be expected to accede to Japan's request so long as the Polish situation does not improve markedly.

Miyazawa Comments

OW191111 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 1000 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Commenting on this U.S. Government decision, Chief Cabinet Secretary Miyazawa has made the following statement:

Unlike the Yamburg gas pipeline plan, which is to be undertaken jointly by West Germany, France and the Soviet Union, the Sakhalin oil development project, if miscarried, will put Japan -- not the Soviet Union -- in distress. We have explained this situation over and again to the U.S. side. However, the U.S. side regards the two projects as being of the same nature in that they both involve the issuance of licenses. Therefore, I think that Japan has got mixed up in a quarrel, so to speak. For its part, the Japanese Government will continue in the future to seek the understanding of the U.S. side whenever there is an occasion for it. Meanwhile, the Japanese side wants to ask the Soviet Union to hold consultations on a readjustment of the oil development plan. The Japanese side's main contact with the Soviet Union, the Sakhalin Oil Development Cooperation Co, is expected to try to sound out the Soviet side on the possibility of continuing the project by scaling it down or by boring for oil using Soviet-made equipment.

O Chin-u Addresses Rally

[Speech by O Chin-u, minister of the DPRK people's armed forces, at 20 June Pyongyang indoor stadium rally to welcome PRC military delegation -- recorded]

[Text] Esteemed Defense Minister Comrade Geng Biao, dear members of the PRC military delegation and comrades:

Today, citizens of our capital, Pyongyang, and the soldiers of the Korean People's Army [KPA] in the areas surrounding Pyongyang are here for the great pleasure of meeting with the friendship envoy of the fraternal Chinese people and Chinese People's Liberation Army.

At a time when all our people and the men and officers of the KPA are waging a vigorous and serious struggle to accelerate socialist construction and the nation's reunification under the historic policy speech by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the joint session of the KWP Central Committee and the DPRK Supreme People's Asembly, the friendly Chinese comrades-in-arms visited them and they are touched. [applause]

With authorization, I, first of all, in the name of the Military Commission of the KWP Central Committee, party members and working people of Pyongyang and the men and officers of the KPA in Pyongyang, warmly welcome the Chinese military delegation headed by Minister of Defense Comrade Geng Biao, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the CPC, member of the Standing Committee of the Military Commission of the CPC Central Committee and member of the State Council. [applause]

I also convey warm fraternal greetings to the Chinese people and the men and officers of the Chinese People's Liberation Army from the Korean people and the soldiers of the KPA at this pleasant and moving meeting place. [applause]

The visit to our country by a high Chinese military delegation is a strong demonstration of the invincible friendship between the parties, peoples and armies of the KPRK and the PRC which is growing stronger and developing daily and a great encouragement to our people and soldiers of the KPA who are struggling for socialist construction and peaceful reunification of the fatherland. [applause]

As they greet the PRC military delegation led by esteemed Comrade Geng Biao, our people, men and officers of the KPA feel more friendly toward the fraternal Chinese people and the People's Liberation Army who shared life and death and weal and woe with our people and men and officers of the KPA in the protracted and arduous struggle against the common enemy.

The warm and passionate welcome accorded you by our people and the soldiers of the People's Army are a vivid demonstration of the beautiful tradition of the great Korea-China friendship and a clear evidence of the firm determination of the Korean people and soldiers of the People's Army to fight forever shoulder to shoulder with the Chinese people and the Chinese People's Liberation Army on the revolutionary road to achieving the same goal and common ideals. [applause]

The two countries of the DPRK and PRC are the closest of neighbors linked by the same mountain and the same river and the peoples and soldiers of the two countries are class brothers and revolutionary comrades-in-arms who are as closely related as teeth and lips. [applause] The Korea-China friendship is sealed in blood with deep roots which has been endlessly consolidated and developed together through history. [applause] Hand in hand, communists and peoples of the two countries earlier embarked on a common struggle for the victory of the socialist cause in opposition to imperialist aggression and in this course they realized that their fate is linked as one. [applause]

In the mountains and rivers of the DPRK and the PRC is the blood shed by peoples of the two countries. When the Chinese people were suffering from imperialist bondage, the Korean communists fought along with the Chinese people in various areas in China such as the Jangbai area. [applause]

The Chinese people, too, have positively backed and supported our people whenever they were in trouble. [applause]

Although the People's Republic of China was founded just one year before and not a small number of obstacles and difficulties lay on the road of the revolution and construction, the Chinese people sent their sons and daughters to the Korean front, holding high the banner of resisting America and aiding Korea, safeguarding the home and defending the motherland. [applause]

In the days of arduous war, the brave men and soldiers of the Chinese People's Volunteers Army wonderfully displayed the massive heroism and noble spirit of proletarian internationalism. [applause]

The Chinese People's Volunteers defended every inch of our land with blood, saying the lovely Korea was not at all different from their hometown and motherland and that though they fell under enemy fire, they would not be deprived of the motherland and Korean brothers. [applause]

We cannot forget that tens of thousands of Chinese people's volunteer-fighters sacrificed their invaluable youth and lives in the land of Korea, including hero (Hwang Chaekwang) who helped open the way for the advance of his unit by laying down his life to deter the enemy's fire; hero (Son Chonwon) who rushed into the enemy's camp with grenades in his hands when he had run out of ammunition; and hero (Na Sungcho), an internationalist fighter. [applause]

The immortal exploits that the fighters of the Chinese People's Volunteers registered in the Korean war and their achievements will abide in our people's memory forever. [applause]

The fraternal Chinese people and fighters of the Chinese People's Volunteers also helped our people with might and main in the struggle for the postwar rehabilitation and construction and for socialist construction. In particular, the Chinese people regard as their own the sufferings of our people caused by division and actively support and encourage the struggle of the Korean people for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country and expressed the firm determination to fight always shoulder to shoulder with our people in the same trench no matter what storm may arise in the world. [applause]

Therefore, out party and people greatly value the friendship and unity with the Chinese party and people and deem it great pride to have as their neighbor such comrades-in-arms who are as faithful to their revolutionary obligation as the Chinese people. [applause] Indeed, the history of Korea-China friendship shines with a long-standing tradtion and numerous unforgettable and moving facts and it is a living example of proletarian internationalism. [applause]

The Korea-China friendship is not an ordinary relationship between parties, states and peoples but the particularly excellent and genuine relationship of truly trusting, depending and helping like members of one family regardless of any practice or formality. [applause] The Korea-China friendship has already proved its invincible vitality and is displaying greater might with each passing day. [applause] Further consolidation and development of Korean-Chinese friendship is an urgent demand of the great revolutions our two peoples are carrying out and will be an important contribution toward strengthening the anti-imperialist revolutionary forces of the world. [applause]

Our people will make all their efforts to further consolidate and develop the militant friendship and revolutionary unity between the parties, peoples and armies of Korea and China and always remain a faithful comrade-in-arms of Chinese comrades. [applause]

Comrades: The Korean people, who cherish the feelings of fraternal friendship and internationalist solidarity toward the Chinese people, always watching changes taking place in China, our near ally, with keen interests and have positively supported all the measures taken by the Chinese party. [applause]

Under the wise leadership of their great leader Comrade Mao Zedong and the Communist Party of China, the diligent and courageous Chinese people have won victory in the people's revolution by waging an arduous struggle for a long time and converted a backward China into a new China in a short historical period. [applause]

The victory in the people's revolution and the strengthening and development of a new socalist China brought a drastic change to the history of the Chinese people's struggle and contributed to intensifying the peace forces of Asia and the world. [applause]

Today, the Chinese people, firmly united around the Communist Party of China headed by Comrade Chairman Hu Yaobang, are waging a grandiose struggle to realize the four modernizations and build China into a powerful socialist country, adhering to the four principles -- the road of socialism, the dictatorship of the proletariat, the leadership of the Communist party, and Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought. [applause]

The Chinese people, who are embarked upon the new long march, are bringing about a new upsurge on all fronts of socialist construction through a vigorous struggle, upholding the decision of the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th Central Committee of the Communist Party of China and the fourth Plenary Session of the fifth NCP. The Chinese People's Liberation Army is establishing socialist spiritual civilization by further strengthening the leadership of the party within the army and ideological indoctrination among soldiers.

All the men and officers of the Chinese People's Liberation Army are getting acquainted with modern combat technology and equipment by stepping up the modernization of national defense and vigorously staging combat and political training. As a result, the combat capabilities of units are matchlessly increasing.

The Korean people and soldiers of the Korean People's Army rejoice as if their own over all the successes attained by the Chinese people and the men and officers of the Chinese People's Liberation Army in the socialist construction and the work to strengthen the country's defense capacity. [applause]

Our people sincerely wish the fraternal Chinese people greater successes in the struggle to build a highly democratic, highly civilized and modern socialist power and in their future sacred cause of restoring Taiwan to the motherland and reunifying the whole country. [applause]

Today, our people and soldiers of the People's Army are vigorously struggling to expedite the complete victory of socialism and the independent, peaceful reunification of the fatherland under the wise leadership of the glorious party center, upholding the program of imbuing society with the chuche idea and the proposal to found the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the sixth KWP Congress. [applause]

Owing to the criminal two Koreas policy and provocative maneuvers to wage a new war by the U.S. imperialists, who have illegally occupied South Korea and imposed the sufferings of national division upon our people, and their lackeys, the situation of our country is still strained and grave difficulties are lying in the way of the reunification of the fatherland. No matter how desperately the United States and the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique may try, they cannot thwart the desire of all the Korean people and the world's progressive people for reunification. [applause] Our people and all the people's army soldiers will force the U.S. troops to withdraw from South Korea and reunify the divided country to realize complete national sovereignty throughout the country. [applause]

Availing myself of this opportunity, I extend deep thanks to the fraternal party and people of China for always extending positive support and solidarity to our people's struggle for the country's socialist construction and the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland. [applause]

Comrades, today, the international situation is very complex and tense due to the imperialists' aggressive and war maneuvers. Owing to the imperialists' maneuvers, a tragic situation, in which the sovereignty of newly emerged independent countries is infringed upon and people's destiny to toyed with, is successively created. Furthermore, peace and security in various regions of the world are being broken and the international situation is being more strained.

At present, Korea is a place where the imperialists' aggressive and splittist maneuvers are most undisguised in Asia. The U.S. incumbent rulers are entering a road of military adventurism on which they attempt to threaten and subdue another's country with armed force, clamoring about the reconstruction of a powerful America and the superiority in power. To carry out this aggressive world strategy, they adopt the Korean Peninsula as an important place to test the strategy.

The U.S. war maniacs never miss a chance to bable that, since the Korean Peninsula is a breeding ground of the next world war, the function of the U.S. troops present in South Korea should be strengthened, while laying stress on the strategic importance of the Korean Peninsula. In reality, the U.S. imperialists totally revoked even the formal plan to pull out their troops and are modernizing the technical equipment and combat material of their troops occupying South Korea and the puppet army for increasing their attacking capacity in an attempt to realize their aggressive design. At the same time, the U.S. imperialists continue to transfer up-to-date lethal weapons to the South Korean puppets and stage large-scale war exercises with them almost every day in parts of South Korea.

The present situation demands that all the peace-loving people of the world resolutely fight in firm unity, checking the imperialists' aggressive war maneuvers and defending peace and security. [applause]

Strengthening friendship and unity between the parties, peoples and armies of Korea and China is a powerful factor in removing the danger of war, defending peace in Korea and Asia and firmly consolidating the position of socialism there. [applause]

We will in the future, as in the past, vigorously fight for the final victory of the cause of anti-imperialism and independence, firmly uniting forever with the Chinese people and People's Liberation Army without wavering in the least in any trial. [applause]

Long live the imperishable militant friendship and unity between the peoples of Korea and China and the Korean People's Army and the Chinese People's Liberation Army! [applause]

Mayor Wang Daohan spoke next. He said: On behalf of the 11 million people of Shanghai, I extend lofty regards and cordial greetings to the leading personnel of the party, organs of power and people of Hamhung city, and warmly congratulate the establishment of friendly relations between Shanghai and Hamhung.

He said: In the war against U.S. imperialist aggression, under the wise leadership of the KWP headed by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song the people of Hamhung city, together with all of the Korean people, greatly contributed to defending the fatherland by gallantly demonstrating a revolutionary spirit.

In the postwar period, the Hamhung citizens rapidly eliminated the scars of war and built Hamhung city into one of the major industrial cities of the DPRK with a new chollima speed -- vinalon speed -- by surmounting all trials and difficulties with their extraordinary wisdom and zeal. Noting that today the people of South Hamgyong Province and Hamhung city and all the Korean people are vigorously struggling to implement the decisions of the Sixth KWP Congress and accelerate the second 7-year plan ahead of schedule by carrying out the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture, he said: We heartily rejoice over the success attained by the fraternal Hamhung citizens and wish the Hamhung citizens and the Korean people greater success in their struggle for socialist construction.

Noting that the reunification of the country, which has been divided over 37 years, is the desire of 50 million Korean people and an irresistible trend of history, he said that the KWP and the government of the republic have constantly made every possible effort to achieve this desire and have put forward many positive and reasonable proposals for national reunification.

The proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and its 10-point policy put forward by President Kim Il-song at the sixth KWP Congress vividly reflect the ardent desire of the Korean people for national reunification. This is the correct way for the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea, he said.

Noting that the Chon Tu-hwan clique in South Korea under the patronage of the United States is constantly heightening tension on the Korean Peninsula while pursuing a policy of national division, he said: The rascals' schemes confront the strong opposition of the Korean people and the world people.

He went on: The Chinese people are following with keen interest the Korean people's struggle for national reunification. Our people resolutely support the reasonable proposal of the KWP and the Government of Korea for the reunification of the country and the just stance of the Korean people in demanding the withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Korea and in opposing the two Koreas plot.

We believe that the intrigues to perpetuate the division of Korea will surely be frustrated, that the 50 million fellow countrymen of the North and the South will certainly be reunited in one land and that the just struggle of the Korean people for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country will certainly win victory.

Our Shanghai citizens and the entire Chinese people are always watching with keen interest the Korean people's efforts for world peace and the people's progress. We are pleased to note that the KWP and the Korean Government, in accordance with their foreign policy of independence, friendship and peace, are playing an ever greater role in the international arena in resolutely opposing imperialism, old and new colonialism and dominationism, strengthening solidarity with the Third World countries, defending the principle of the Nonaligned Movement and supporting the liberation cause of oppressed peoples.

The peoples of Korea and China desire to build their respective fatherlands amid peaceful international circumstances. We firmly believe that if the peoples of the world firmly unite and struggle they can make the international situation favorable for world peace and the peoples of the world's countries.

Victory is ours. Following the 3d and 6th plenary sessions of the 11th party Central Committee of our country, the domestic situation of stability and unity in our country is soundly developing.

The work of implementing the party's polices in our country has been smoothly carried out and the national economy of our country has entered a sound and solid road of development. Upholding the great banner of Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought while firmly rallying around the party Central Committee, the Chinese people are struggling to build our country into a highly democratic and civilized socialist power with a modern rural economy, modern industries, modern defense capability and modern sciences and technology by inheriting and upholding with one mind and one will the cause of our party created under the guidance of Comrade Mao Zedong, Comrade Zhou Enlai and other previous proletarian revolutionaries.

We will surely achieve national reunification by having Taiwan returned to the motherland. He said that in the recent years since the 3d Plenary Session and 6th Plenary Session of the 11th Chinese Communist Party Central Committee, Shanghai citizens have attained relatively good results in all fields, including industry, agriculture, production, culture, education, public health and urban construction, by correctly implementing the party's line and policies. Saying that though Hamhung and Shanghai are located far away from each other, the common interest, common ideal and traditional friendship of the two cities are firmly and closely linked, he continued: Chinese-Korean friendship, forged in blood, will shine forever because of its vitality, and it will be inherited generation after generation by the peoples of the two countries.

The establishment of friendly relations between Shanghai and Hamhung is a happy event between the peoples of the two cities. Hamhung is the famous city of Chinese-Korean friendship In this city there is an enterprise where premier Zhou Enlai, whom the Chinese people love and respect, visited during his lifetime. His statue is at this enterprise which the Korean people built. In the past, the leading personnel and many delegations of our country visited Hamhung city and looked at the statue of Premier Zhou Enlai. Hamhung city occupies a very important chapter in the history of Chinese-Korean friendship. We together with all of you comrades, will make joint efforts for the strengthening of friendship and solidarity between China and Korea.

Long live the invincible, great friendship and militant solidarity sealed in blood between the Chinese and Korean peoples.

Long live President Kim Il-song, the great leader of the Korean people and a close friend of the Chinese people.

May Comrade Secretary Kim Chong-il enjoy good health and longevity.

Concluding his speech, he handed a silk banner in the name of the delegation to the chairman of the Hamhung City People's Committee.

A letter to the Shanghai citizens was adopted at the meeting.

The rally ended with the playing of the national anthems of our country and the People's Republic of China.

'TEXT' OF COALITION GOVERNMENT AGREEMENT

BK191001 Hong Kong AFP in English 0929 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Bangkok, June 19 (AFP) -- The following is the text of the agreement on the formation of a coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea, scheduled to be signed in Kuala Lumpur next week:

His Royal Highness Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, His Excellency Mr Son Sann and His Excellency Mr Khieu Samphan, in pursuance of their joint statement made in Singapore on 4 September 1981, have agreed to form a coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea.

Purpose:

The purpose of the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea is:

1. To mobilise all efforts in the common struggle to liberate Kampuchea from the Vietnamese aggressors with the view to restoring the motherland as a sovereign and independent country.

2. To bring about the implementation of the declaration of the international conference on Kampuchea and other relevant United Nations General Assembly resolutions.

Operating Principles:

1. The coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea is under the legitimacy and framework of the State of Democratic Kampuchea which is a member state of the United Nations. To this end, the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea will strive to defend the Democratic Kampuchea seat in the United Nations.

Each participating party in the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea shall retain its own organisation, political identity and freedom of action, including the right to receive and dispose of international aids specifically granted it. The coalition government [of] Democratic Kampuchea shall have no right to take any decision infringing or restricting this autonomy.

3. The workings of the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea shall be guided by the principles of tripartism, equality and non-preponderance.

4. The operation of the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea shall be governed by the principle of consensus applicable to matters of importance and relating to:

4.1 The settlement of the Kampuchean problem.
4.2 International treaties or agreements.
4.3 The appointment of important delegations such as those in charge of discussing the settlement of the problem of Kampuchea.
4.4 The eventual modification of the structure of composition of the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea.
4.5 The appointment of ambassadors or representatives of Democratic Kampuchea to different countries or international organisations.

To ensure the order and the efficiency of the Democratic Kampuchea diplomatic affairs, no question of change of ambassadors or representatives of Democratic Kampuchea currently in office should be raised in the period of six months following the formation of the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea.

5. Any decision or activity of any party in violation of the above provisions is null and void.

Composition and operation of the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea:

The coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea will be administered by a Council of Ministers. In accordance with the principles of tripartism, equality and non-preponderance, the council will comprise an inner cabinet and a number of coordination committees.

1. The inner cabinet consists of...

1.1 President of Democratic Kampuchea: Samdech Norodom Sihanouk
1.2 Vice President of Democratic Kampuchea in charge of foreign affairs: H.E. Mr Khieu Samphan
1.3 Prime minister: H.E. Mr Son Sann

2. Coordination committees are established in the following areas:

2.1 Finance and economy
2.2 Defence
2.3 Culture and education
2.4 Health and social affairs

Each coordination committee will be chaired by three appointees of ministerial rank representing the three participating parties. These ministerial posts in the coordination committees, however, do not constitute any part of the inner cabinet, and are subordinated to it.

The Council of Ministers of the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea will convene regular meetings inside Kampuchea. Extraordinary meetings can also be convened when urgent problems present themselves.

Meetings are convened by the president, vice president, or prime minister of the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea, and presided over in the same order of precedence by the three members of the inner cabinet.

The inner cabinet Council of Ministers will be entrusted with the responsibility of preserving the existence of the coaltion government of Democratic Kampuchea, which includes the discussion and settlement of differences arising over the interpretation and/or implementation of the operating principles governing the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea.

In the event of failure, [word indistinct] of the three participating parties will be requested to meet to work out a solution.

In accordance with the above-mentioned operating principles, each of the three participating parties reserves the right to its freedom of action so as to ensure its own continuity, in the event that an impasse has developed which renders the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea inoperative.

In this case the current state of Democratic Kampuchea led by H.E. Mr Khieu Samphan will have the right to resume its activites as the sole legal and legitimate state of Kampuchea and as a member state of the United Nations in order to ensure the continuity of the state of Democratic Kampuchea.

In testimony whereof, H.R.H. Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, H.E. Mr Son Sann, and H.E. Mr. Khieu Samphan have affixed their signatures at the end of this declaration formalising the formation of the coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea.

RESISTANCE GROUPS TO MEET IN KUALA LUMPUR 21-23 JUNE

BK181141 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] The leaders of the three anti-Vietnamese Kampuchean resistance groups will meet in Kuala Lumpur next week to sign an agreement for the formation of a coalition government. This was announced by the Malaysian Foreign Minister, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, who is attending the ASEAN ministerial meeting in Singapore.

He said the meeting of the anti-Vietnamese factions would be held from Monday to Wednesday [21-23 June]. The Kampuchean leader, Prince Sihanouk, Mr Son Sann of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front and Mr Khieu Samphan of the Khmer Rouge are expected to attend the meeting.

At a joint news conference a short while ago, ASEAN foreign ministers and representatives of dialogue partners said they were pleased at the news that the three anti-Vietnamese factions would be meeting next week. Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie said in his latest information it was said one of the parties was not feeling well. It was not diplomatic illness but a genuine case of not being well. This may cause a delay. The fact remained however that the three anti-Vietnamese resistance groups have expressed their desire to meet in Kuala Lumpur.

The U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Mr Stoessel, who is leading his country's delegation to the fourth ministerial conference, congratulated ASEAN and said the agreement is the result of ASEAN's diplomatic efforts. In reply the questions on what aid the United States would give to the new Kampuchean coalition government, Mr Stoessel said the United STates would give political and moral support and humanitarian aid to the resistance groups. Anything beyond this would depend on what happened after this when an assessment would be made.

The Canadian Foreign Minister, Dr Mark MacGuigan, and the president of the EEC Council of Ministers, Mr Tindemans, also said they would give moral and political support and humanitarian aid. They would keep the situation under review and see what could be done. Dr MacGuigan also paid tribute on behalf of the world to the ASEAN governments. He said it was not by accident that the three anti-Vietnamese groups have decided to get together. It was the result of a great deal of ASEAN diplomacy, which he said, should not go unremarked.

Sihanouk Will Go 'If Invited'

[Text] Beijing, June 18 (AFP) -- Former Cambodian Head of State Prince Norodom Sihnouk today said he would go to Kuala Lumpur to sign an agreement on a coalition of the three anti-Vietnemase Cambodian resistance movements if he was invited.

This was announced today by a spokesman for (?the) prince in a phone call from the North Korean capital of Pyongyang, where the exiled prince is currently staying.

The spokesman stressed that Prince Sihanouk had not received any invitation as yet, but "if he is invited, he'll go."

(In Singapore today, Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie announced that the three anti-Vietnamese Cambodian factions will meet in Kuala Lumpur from June 21 to 23 to sign an agreement on the formation of a coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea.

(Mr Ghazali added that one of three parties, Khmer Rouge Leader Khieu Samphan, was not well, and that this might affect the holding of the meeting.

(The third group involved in the coalition is the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) led by former Premier Son Sann.)

Khieu Samphan Reported Ill

BK190713 Hong Kong AFP in English 0658 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 19 (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk, leader of Moulinaka, one of the three Khmer nationalist factions about to form a coalition government, confirmed last night he will be able to attend the proposed meeting of the three here on Monday. Yesterday, there were doubts as to whether Prince Sihanouk could come.

Foreign minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie told reporters on his return from Singapore today that he received word from Pyongyang last night confirming Prince Sihanouk's coming. He said "a senior lady diplomat" was sent as an emissary to Pyongyang, in an apparent effort to get the prince to come.

Doubts still remain, however, over whether Mr. Khieu Samphan, leader of one of the factions, Khmer Rouge, would be able to attend. Mr Khieu Samphan was reported yesterday to have contracted malaria, but Tan Sri Ghazali said "He has not said he would not come."

There have been no doubts over the attendance of Son Sann, who heads the other faction, the Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

Tan Sri Ghazali reiterated that Malaysia welcomed a meeting of the Khmer parties here and "every arrangement is being made" to facilitate their coming together again. However, he added that his "business is only to offer Kuala Lumpur as a venue."

The three Khmer anti-Vietnamese factions and officially agreed to form a coalition government and their leaders hope to sign the agreement when they meet here.

Following the signing ceremony here, the three leaders are expected to return to Kampuchea to formally announce the setting up of the Democratic Kampuchea coalition government in the areas of Kampuchea under their control across the Thai border.

AFP INTERVIEWS NORODOM SIHANOUK IN BEIJING

[By Charles-Antoine de Nerciat]

[Text] Beijing, June 20 (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk today ruled out the likelihood of a Vietnamese defeat in Cambodia but said he hoped that Vietnam will nonetheless be forced to withdraw its troops from the country.

Prince Sihanouk, 60, was speaking to AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE here, one day before he was to leave for Kuala Lumpur to sign an accord on Tuesday creating a three-member coalition of anti-Vietnamese Cambodian factions. Joining the prince in the pact will be Khieu Samphan, leader of the deposed Khmer Rouge regime, and former Prime Minister Son Sann who heads the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF).

"It is out of the question for us to arrogantly claim that we can defeat the Vietnamese militarily," the prince told AFP. "But, failing a powerful, stubborn and hardened anti-Vietnamese guerrilla resistance in Cambodia, there is no hope that the Socialist Republic of Vietnam will ever abide by the United Nations resolutions."

Some estimates put the number of Vietnamese troops defending the Phnom Penh government at 200,000.

Prince Sihanouk, who is expected to head the anti-Vietnam coalition, appealed for international military and material aid for the 5,000 troops he said were at his disposal. He called on "certain friendly countries" to provide not only arms but food for his partisans who he said were "tragically underfed and lacking medicine."

China has backed the estimated 20,000 Khmer Rouge guerrillas both militarily and diplomatically, but has also aided the 6,000 to 8,000 troops loyal to Son Sann as well as the forces of Prince Sihanouk.

The United States, while welcoming the formation of the non-communist front in Cambodia, has said it will not furnish the movement any military assistance.

Prince Sihanouk said the Cambodian people cannot "accept that their motherland will become a colony of Vietnam and a satellite of the USSR, placed under a totalitarian and backward regime."

The prince, one of the most durable Asian leaders became king of Cambodia in 1941 when the country was a French protectorate. He eventually became a head of state but was ousted in 1970 in a coup d'etat directed by Lon Nol with the support of the United States.

With the defeat of the Lon Nol regime by the Khmer Rouge, he once again became head of state but later resigned and went into seclusion with his family in Phnom Penh. The Khmer Rouge were overthrown by the Vietnamese in January 1979.

IENG SARY ADDRESSES UN DISARMAMENT SESSION

[Text] Ieng Sary, deputy prime minister for foreign affairs and head of the Democratic Kampuchean delegation, addressed the special session of the UN General Assembly on disarmament on the afternoon of 16 June. Our radio Voice of Democratic Kampuchea would like to present the important points of this address as follows:

After expressing his greetings to the president of the second special session of the UN General Assembly on disarmament and the UN secretary general, Deputy Prime Minister Ieng Sary referred to a passage in the fundamental communique of the first special session of the UN General Assembly on disarmament which says: The arms race is an obstacle to the realization of the goals of the UN Charter and does not conform with the principles of the UN Charter, particularly the principles concerning respect for sovereignty, the avoidance of threats, non-use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of all countries, settlement of all disputes through peaceful means, nonintervention and noninterference in the internal affairs of all countries, as well as the principle on the rights of all people to decide freely their own economic order and social system.

Deputy Prime Minister Ieng Sary then said: This second special session of the UN General Assembly on disarmamentis being held at a time when the international situation has become increasingly tense and international peace and security have been seriously threatened due to an unprecedentedly massive increase in armaments, the spread of aggressive wars and military occupation. Wars, old and new, have and are taking place in Third World countries. While ballyhooing about disarmament, detente and peace, the expansionists have increased their arsenals of both nuclear and conventional weapons and initiated wars to destroy the independence of other countries and usurp their people's right to self-dtermination.

Within less than 6 months after the first special session on disarmament issued its communique, the Hanoi Vietnamese, with massive military aid from the Soviet Union, sent their troops to wage a war of aggression and genocide against Democratic Kampuchea. A year later and 2 weeks after the UN General Assembly approved the Soviet-proposed draft resolution condemning hegemonistic policies in international relations, the Soviet Union began its war of aggression in Afghanistan.

Later, Deputy Prime Minister Ieng Sary condemned the Vietnamese crimes in massacring the Kampuchean people with conventional weapons, man-made famine and toxic chemical weapons. He stressed: Faced with a serious impasse in their war of aggression and genocide in Kampuchea, the Vietnamese expansionists have intensified the use of toxic chemical and biological weapons, both in the outlying forested and mountainous regions and in populated areas. Since 1979, their aggressive chemical war has killed thousands of Kampuchean people. During the last dry season -- from October 1981 to April 1982 -- over 1,200 Kampuchean people were killed, including 42 families totally exterminated, and 400 others have been seriously poisoned. These chemical weapons have not only killed many victims and caused the survivors to suffer physical deformity and psychological trauma, but they will also destroy many babies yet unborn. Moreover, these chemical weapons seriously affect the environment of human beings and animals.

Deputy Prime Minister Ieng Sary then called on the world community to take urgent and forceful measures to bring about a strict observation of the 1925 Geneva protocol and the 1972 treaty and to adopt a treaty totally banning the development, production and stockpiling of all chemical weapons and abolishing all chemical weapons. However, since such a treaty is not yet in existence, it is imperative for the world community to take effective measures to put an immediate end to the chemical warfare being perpetrated by the Vietnamese and Soviet expansionists against the Kampuchea, Lao and Afgan peoples. The Democratic Kampuchean Government is of the opinion that the most appropriate measure would be to convene an international meeting on chemical warfare at the earliest possible date.

Touching on the Hanoi-Soviet strategy of aggression and expansion in Southeast Asia, Deputy Prime Minister Ieng Sary said: "Taking into account the size of its population, Vietnam has more troops on foreign soil than any other country in the world. It has stationed 250,000 troops in Kampuchea and 60,000 others in Laos. In order to keep this huge war machine running, Vietnam has to expend a large quantity of resources — material, technological and manpower — which should be used in national development. In 1981, half of its annual budget of $11 billion, that is, $5.5 billion, was spent on the army. And it is obvious that Vietnam is not able to meet all its requirements in this area.

Thus Hanoi has to depend on Soviet aid to the tune of over $2 billion every year. It is general knowledge that Hanoi's policies of aggression and expansion have ruined Vietnam's economy. This problem has not been caused by a shortage of international aid. From 1975 to 1978, that is, before it launched its war of aggression against Democratic Kampuchea, Vietnam received $9 billion of aid from the world community. This included $3 billion of aid from West European and Third World countries and from international organizations. No Third World country has ever received such a large amount of foreign aid.

But, the Hanoi authorities have not used this aid to feed the Vietnamese people. They have used it to bolster their war machine and their propaganda warfare in the service of their expansionist policies. At present, due to the fact that they have become deeply bogged down in their war of aggression against Kampuchea despite massive amounts of Soviet aid, the Hanoi authorities are trying to deceive the world community by pretending that they want aid from the West in order to free themselves from the Soviet grasp. But in fact, Vietnam wants this aid to carry out its expansionist policy.

Each dollar of aid given to Vietnam has been transformed into weapons used to massacre the Kampuchean people and carry out Vietnam's policy of aggression and expansion in Southeast Asia. In fact, all of this aid has enabled the expansionists to poke their hands more deeply into Southeast Asia and elsewhere in the world. Since 1975, Moscow and Hanoi have repeatedly declared that Vietnam is a strong and highly reliable outpost of the socialist bloc in Souteast Asia.

In order to realize the strategy of annexing Kampuchea to its Indochina federation, a design that Vietnam has nurtured for half a century, the Hanoi authorities signed a treaty with Moscow on 3 November 1978. One of the five secret agreements attached to this treaty allows the Soviet Union to use Vietnamese military bases in Cam Ranh and Danang. In May 1979, that is 5 months following the Vietnamese invasion of Kampuchea, the Soviet Union sent warships and a nuclear submarine to Vietnam for the first time. With the facilities of these Vietnamese military bases, Soviet naval forces in the Pacific Ocean have increased massively since 1978. The USSR has expanded its naval activities thousands of kilometers south from its base in Vladivostok and now threatens the sea routes of the countries in Asia and the Pacific.

Deputy Prime Minister Ieng Sary said: Democratic Kampuchea always supports Asian efforts to establish of a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in Southeast Asia that will ensure peace, security and stability for the countries in this region. This in turn will enable them to mobilize their resources for national construction and improve the livelihood of their people. But the establishment of this zone of peace in accordance with the aspiration of all the people in this region was interrupted because a single country with an excessively large army -- Vietnam -- has regarded its attempt to dominate Southeast Asia as a more important goal than the well-being of its people or peaceful cooperation with the countries in this region.

The actual situation shows that Vietnam has become the source of war in Southeast Asia and the most important bridgehead for the implementation of global and regional expansion in Asia. At the Nguyen Ai Quoc Institute, which is the school for training cadres of the Vietnamese Communist Party in Hanoi, the Vietnamese have thoroughly discussed the procedures for the formation of a union of the Socialist Republic of Southeast Asia under Vietnamese control by 1990.

A zone of peace, freedom and neutrality can be established only if there is an atmosphere of mutual trust among all states in this region. It can be established only on a basis of strict respect for the princples of the UN Charter and international law; only if there is an end to military aggression and occupation of the neighboring countries; and only if the people in this region enjoy the sacred right of the self-determination with no outside interference.

Deputy Prime Minister Ieng Sary then condemned the Hanoi aggressors for their deceitful diplomatic maneuvers which they were carrying out in an effort to bury the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and legitimize their aggression against Kampuchea. He pointed out: In the past 3 and 1/2 years, the Vietnamese aggressors have suffered serious defeats in all fields -- military, political and diplomatic. But, as aggressors and expansionists, the Vietnamese have remained truculent, cunning and tricky. They have not only refused to implement the UN resolutions on Kampuchea and continued to trample upon the UN Charter but they have sought by all means to make their aggression and occupation of Kampuchea a fait accompli. That is, they have tried to force the world community to violate the UN Charter even as they have done. The thrust of Vietnam's maneuvers is to bury the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and subvert the peace and justice-loving forces in the world so that they can carry on their war of aggression and genocide against Kampuchea; regain the military advantage on the battlefield; and annex Kampuchea into Vietnam's Indochina federation through various Vietnamization measures, particularly the dispatch of Vietnamese nationals to settle in Kampuchea by killing any Kampuchean who opposes their Vietnamization policy.

Through their resolute struggle, the Kampuchean people and the national army and government of Democratic Kampuchea have shown that they will never accept Vietnam's yoke of domination and that they will resolutely struggle to the end in order to defend Kampuchea's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

The Kampuchean people and the national army and government of Democratic Kampuchea once again thank the United Nations and all peace and justice-loving peoples and countries throughout the world for supporting our just cause.

We call on them to give us more support and assistance and to put more pressure -- diplomatically, economically and financially -- on the Vietnamese expansionists in order to force them to abide by the resolutions 34/22, 35/6 and 36/5 of the UN General Assembly and the resolution of the International Conference on Kampuchea dated 17 July 1981. The Kampuchean problem can be solved only after Vietnam withdraws all of its aggressor troops from Kampuchea and the Kampuchean people exercise their sacred right to self-determination without any outside interference, subversion or pressure.

The war in Kampuchea and all other foreign wars of aggression and occupation have violated the UN Charter and international law, threatened international peace and security and will accelerate the arms race. These wars have caused great concern to the world community. The United Nations, which represents the will of the world community, has a major role in this area. Therefore, it is necessary for all countries that respect the role of the United Nations to respect the principles and goals of this organization, particularly those on the non-use of force, and strictly abide by the different resolutions adopted by the United Nations.

[Interview by Bangkok POST Editor in Chief The Chongkhadikit with Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila in Singapore -- date not given]

[Text] Question: What problems does the Vietnamese presence in Kampuchea pose for Thailand?

[Answer] It poses both short-term and long-term problems. On the short term it affects our security, creates a refugee problem, causes incidents along the border and also brings hardships to our people along the border. On the long term the continued Vietnamese stay there will upset the power balance.

I have been telling our friends that we cannot accept large-scale Vietnamese presence in Kampuchea, next to Thailand. It poses a threat not only to Thailand but also to other ASEAN countries. If the Vietnamese forces remain there too long, their presence will further aggravate the Sino-Soviet rivalry, which is not conducive to peace and stability in our area.

Concerning the spilling-over of the conflict, at present the Vietnamese may lack steam but we actually don't know the true intention of Vietnam. We have to watch out for Vietnam trying to change their border with Thailand or when they are going to start direct aggression against us. We don't know whether the Vietnamese will stay still or try to subvert us internally. Trying to divide our people will cause quite a problem for us. I have told friends that we cannot accept this.

[Question] Does Thailand view the long-term threat as coming from the Soviets or the Chinese or the Vietnamese?

[Answer] The threat can come from anywhere. A direct threat comes from the Vietnamese. This is the first time that the Soviet Union is in this area. You must have read about Vietnamese, Lao and Kampucheans having been sent to Moscow for training.

I told Nguyen Co Thach (Vietnamese foreign minister) that his trying to bring about solidarity of the Indochina states is quite wrong. I asked him about his country's natural resources: "For a poor country do you have enough resources of your own to bring them back to life again? Who will be there except a big power? It would not be to the benefit of the Vietnamese themselves in the end." But the Vietnamese are not convinced. They are preoccupied with their objectives, and it is very hard to change their minds.

[Question] You went to China about this Khmer coalition. How do the Chinese see the role of Prince Norodom Sihanouk in a coalition?

[Answer] Prince Sihanouk can play a very important role. As for us, we are supportive of a coalition government which will be contributory factor to a comprehensive political settlement.

[Question] China does not want a coalition to weaken the resistance to the Vietnamese. What are the differences between the Chinese view and the ASEAN view?

[Answer] To be frank, the Chinese fear that a coalition that has no guarantees, that is, a loose coalition, without any operational framework and principles, might hit the rocks. Such a loose coalition could be doomed to failure. All the factions should agree among themselves. No one else must get involved. If others try to force them to form a coalition government, we may be disappointed.

If there is no mutual trust among the leaders of the various factions, they might quarrel or demoralize the fighting forces. The Chinese have always mentioned we vote for the coalition government but whatever is set up should not upset the morale of resistance.

[Question] Will the Chinese abide by the agreement of the International Conference on Kampuchea (ICK) on the freedom of choice by the Kampucheans of their own government?

[Answer] That's what they told me.

[Question] Do they want the return of Pol Pot?

[Answer] They said they are not looking for anyone to return to power. They will accept self-determination for the Khmer people under the ICK.

[Question] What will happen if a government controlled by the Vietnamese is returned to power and Kampuchea falls into Vietnamese sphere of influence? China could step in again, and the whole thing would be jeopardized, right?

[Answer] In our study of a comprehensive peace proposal, we have looked into this thoroughly. Once it is formed no outsider should intervene. There should be guarantees from the major powers in the Security Council and others. There are other safeguards.

The Chinese said, we go for it. We reasoned at great length with China at the ICK in July last year on the validity of our proposal.

What we are looking for is a truly independent neutral Kampuchea that is not a threat to Vietnam and is also safe for us. With such a Kampuchea, we in Thailand can concentrate on developing our own country for the benefit of our people.

[Question] Some diplomatic circles have charged that Thailand was playing a double game with regard to a Khmer coalition. While desiring to have a coalition by the Khmers, Thailand is accused of playing the Chinese game. What do you say to this? Thailand would like an effective resistance to balance the Vietnamese power, right?

[Answer] It is correct that we would like to strike a balance there. That was why I spent so many hours in China. But I look after the interests of Thailand and ASEAN first. On this matter I speak for ASEAN.

You can listen to those criticisms against me but you must realize that those critics would not like me to succeed.

[Question] Son Sann has said that Thailand would not give him wholehearted support because Thailand does not want to upset China. That is why they cannot give press conferences in Bangkok, and foreign correspondents are finding it more difficult to get access across the border into Kampuchea. What substance is there to this?

[Answer] That also is untrue. If Son Sann did say that, then China must be correct. I have told Son Sann again and again that Thailand considers him a viable person to support. If he did say that, he would be telling a lie. The Chinese also consider Son Sann as being able to play an important role.

[Question] Assistance would be extended only when a coalition is formed. Is that right?

[Answer] A coalition under the Democratic Kampuchea name will give it legality. If you go out and support the resistance forces, then you get involved in the internal affairs of that country. So it's right that I will not support Son Sann now until he sacrifices his self-interests for his people's interests and his country's interests.

[Question] Why is it that Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach is going to other ASEAN countries but not to Thailand?

Answer: That's Co Thach's own initiative. I met him twice and he met my deputy once. But we talked along different lines. The last time I spoke to him was in New York 2 years ago. What we should do is find out through his dialogues with the other ASEAN foreign ministers if he has any new ideas or he has changed his mind.

A lot of people coming out of Vietnam have said that Co Thach is sincere in seeking peace. We are trying to get some clarification first. If we have a talk, it has to be meaningful not just for the sake of talking or for propaganda purposes.

Question: As long as Vietnam is not participating, the ICK cannot do much. Will ASEAN push ICK to get moving towards a comprehensive political settlement?

Answer: Unless Vietnam responds positively and comes to the negotiating table, I don't think we can reach any agreement. It takes two to tango.

Question: How do you go about bringing Vietnam to the negotiating table?

Answer: Vietnam has been fighting the war for three and a half years and is feeling the pinch and the people are suffering. That is a pressure. Vietnam is seeking economic aid from Western countries. It has met with little success so far. The Soviet Union can afford to do it still but will soon feel the pinch, too.

The pressure we want to bear upon Vietnam is political. As long as ASEAN is united and we can repeat our victory at the United Nations General Assembly this year, as far as Democratic Kampuchea credentials are concerned it will be helpful. If the coalition government becomes a reality, those countries which abstained last year may vote for DK. Vietnam is trying to come around to the ASEAN countries. If Vietnam realises that we in ASEAN are sincere in helping them solve the problem -- it's their problem, not ours -- Vietnam may come to the negotiating table, if we achieve our victory in the UN again.

We don't think Vietnam can achieve a military victory -- not in one or two or three years from now. The situation will get worse and it will be about time for Vietnam to do some rethinking. ASEAN will not condemn or put Vietnam into a corner. The door is always open for dialogue and understanding. We have good intentions towards Vietnam. I have told everyone that we don't regard Vietnam as our enemy. But we cannot condone the violation of United Nations principles. We don't want to talk about military pressure. We leave that to others.

Question: What cooperation are you offering the neighbouring states in Indochina?

Answer: Now we extend good neighbourly cooperation to Laos. We would like to expand trade and settle border problems. When I met Co Thach in New York, I told him, "If you follow our advice by pulling out your troops and letting the Kampucheans have free elections of their own, we, ASEAN, will help you. We will talk to our friends like the United States, the European Community and others to extend assistance. We ourselves will chip in."

Question: How was this received by Co Thach!

Answer: He just smiled. The offer from ASEAN still stands. We would like to develop good relations with Vietnam. Vietnam should concentrate their manpower on national development. They have a lot of resources. They are relying on the Russians to search for oil for them. We can trade. We have much to sell to, and buy from, them. We can use the example we have with Malaysia. We can have joint ventures on such projects as oil and fishery. If peace comes, there will be plenty of opportunities for Thailand, Vietnam and the other countries of the region to develop. But the Vietnamese come to our border during the dry season and then go back during the rainy season. This goes on now and again, causing suffering all around, year after year without end.

SIAM RAT VIEWS ASEAN MEETING, TALKS WITH SRV

[Editorial: "What Is Thailand Doing?"]

[Text] The annual ASEAN foreign ministers' meeting in Singapore was closed with a joint communique criticizing Vietnam for refusing to pull its troops out of Kampuchea, which is nothing new. Viewed from a different angle, the joint communique reflects the failure of both the United Nations and ASEAN in their bid to find an effective way to force Vietnam out of Kampuchea.

The ASEAN joint communique contains no message of any significance. However, it is important to note the statements by Singapore Foreign Minister Dhanabalan and Malaysian Foreign Minister Ghazali Shafie that SRV Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach has been invited to visit their countries to discuss the Kampuchean problem. Meanwhile, Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja quoted Nguyen Co Thach as saying that he would like to visit Jakarta. The Philippine and Thai foreign ministers said nothing about this issue. The officials of the Thai Foreign Ministry, when asked about Nguyen Co Thach's forthcoming trip to Southeast Asian countries, said they have to wait for the foreign minister to return to Bangkok before they can say anything. The Philippines does not feel that the Kampuchean problem is a hot issue. However, Thailand, the country which has been most affected by the Kampuchean problem, stands idle as if it has no plan to deal with the problem. This is very strange.

SIAM RAT has on several occasions suggested talks between Thailand and Vietnam to find a solution or relieve the problem. Thailand should not allow the other ASEAN partners to "lead" the role or take the initiative frequently in this matter because it creates a negative image for Thailand while other countries like Singapore harvest the crop.

Talks with Vietnam might produce no political results. However, we can gain something in other areas such as trade if we do not stick to the old belief that Vietnam is unsociable in all aspects. Let us hope that Thailand will not stand idle and only "tail after" the neighboring countries. The government should realize that our neighboring countries do not always strictly adhere to diplomatic etiquette or international law.

STATEMENT ISSUED ON LAO ATTACK ON MEKONG BOAT

[Text] The Supreme Command Information Office has made a statement in connection with the shooting of the Mekong River operations unit's boat as follows:

At 1517 on 17 June, while No. 137 boat of the Mekong River operations unit was patroling the Mekong River in Thai territory near the mouth of Ngum River in Phon Phisai district of Nong Khai Province, it was fired on by Lao soldiers at the instruction of the Vietnamese side with RPG's. Four soldiers -- one officer and three non-commissioned officers -- were injured. The boat No. 137 was damaged and ran aground in Thai territory opposite Don Sangkhi in Phon Phisai District, Nong Khai. Simultaneously with firing on the boat, Lao soldiers fired rounds of artillery and mortar shells into Ban Mai and Ban Kutbong, resulting in the death of two Thai citizens and the damage of homes and ricefields.

It is to be recalled that a Thai Mekong River operations unit boat was fired at on 26 April 1982, resulting in the death and injury of Thai officials. The Thai side lodged a protest with the Lao Government over that incident. A similar incident has reoccurred after only about 1 month. In both incidents, Thai boats were performing their duties in Thai territory and no satisfactory explanation was given by the Lao side for the incidents. These incidents show a deliberate attempt to create situations in order to provoke Thailand for a certain purpose. Thailand regards such incidents, regardless of whoever directed them, as very dangerous to face in this region.

If one is to look back to the incident in early February 1981 when Lao created tension at Don Sangkhi in an effort to create a situation to politically serve a desire of the meeting of the foreign ministers of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea, one cannot help believing that the two incidents committed by Laos were the result of plans of the country which currently dominates it. Importantly, the incident was probably intended as a reply to the ASEAN conference which has just concluded and which does not please the country in question.

In an event, the Thai Armed Forces will retaliate in an equal scale, and it warns that its severe retaliation measures can be implemented instantly as well.

MILITARY OFFICERS CONDUCT PRESS BRIEFING

BK181030 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Press briefing today by Army Secretary Col Narudon Detpatiyut, Navy representative Capt Wichai Nainanon and representative of the Chanthaburi-Trat Operational Force Capt Thawatchai Bamrungthian -- recorded]

[Text] [Arudon] During the past month the small Heng Samrin units which were scattered in the field were consolidated into company-level units in an attempt to hold important areas in the rainy season. There were no major operations due to poor weather. Bad weather impedes logistical activities and thus the military offensives were kept at a minimum.

The situation along the Lao border was not a cause for concern during the past month. There were only minor hostile incidents along that border. Thailand sent back 52 Lao refugees who volunteered to return. They were delivered through the Tha Sadet immigration checkpoint in the central district of Nong Khai on 25 May.

[Wichai] On 20 May two Vietnamese men and a woman fled from Ha Tien in Kien Giang Province by boat. They landed at Ban Opyam, from where they swam to Hat Lek. They are now being detained by Thai authorities.

On 5 June a Vietnamese-Heng Samrin soldier fled to Ban Huang Som, Khlong Yai district of Trat Province. According to a preliminary interogation, he identified himself as Corporal (Le Gia Phuoc) and being 22 years old.

On 10 June a Thai fishing boat was seized by Kampuchean authorities. We have information that the Kampuchean side wanted to seize Thai fishing boats which violated Kampuchean waters. Two or three Kampuchean boats would form a patrol for this purpose. The Thai mass media has been asked to help warn Thai fishermen to be especially careful not to violate Kampuchean waters particularly its 200-mile exclusive economic zone.

[Thanatchai] Fighting between the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin and Kampuchean opposition soldiers continued during the past month on a smaller scale. The fighting in Kampuchea opposite Trat was more intense than in the areas opposite Chanthaburi. In general, the Kampuchean soldiers took the initiative in the fighting.

Most of the Vietnamese soldiers were deployed in Kampuchea opposite Ban Nong Kok of Chanthaburi and northward. The small Vietnamese-Heng Samrin units south of the area opposite Ban Nong Kok were joined together to form company-level units to prepare for suppression campaigns against the Kampuchean soldiers. The Khieu Samphan groups and other Khmer Serei groups tried to move deeper into Kampuchea and launched harassment campaigns against the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin soldiers. They have received support from more local Kampuchean people.

The fighting in Kampuchea on 25 May resulted in seven artillery rounds falling into Thai territory near Ban Bung Chanang Lang.

NHAN DAN RAPS ASEAN STANCE AT SINGAPORE MEETING

OW190735 Hanoi VNA in English 0719 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 19 -- NHAN DAN today notes that at the recent Singapore ministerial conference, representatives of the ASEAN countries did not budge from their erroneous stand towards Kampuchea and the rest of Southeast Asia.

The paper says: "The Singapore communique does not conform to reality in the region; it runs counter to the Southeast Asian people's cherised aspiration for peace and stability. The communique distorts the situation and makes slanderous charges against Vietnam. It glosses over the fact that a serious threat to peace and stability in Southeast Asia is being posed by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists who are harbouring remnants of the Pol Pot-Khieu Samphan clique for their sinister designs on the region. By pledging to continue support for the defunct 'Democratic Kampuchea' and maintain its presence at the United Nations, the ASEAN countries are only doing harm to their organization, and their persistent effort to help rig up a 'tripartite Kampuchean coalition government' is unwise."

NHAN DAN, however, notes that some ASEAN representatives approved dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries in joint efforts to solve the outstanding regional problems, and agreed that the two groups should co-exist peacefully. "Many people in the ASEAN countries," NHAN DAN says, "have seen in Chinese expansionism and hegemonism a dangerous enemy and the main cause of tension and instability. The ASEAN governments, by backing the universally condemned genocidal clique and opposing the three Indochinese peoples, will only belittle the role of their organization."

The paper points out: "Vietnam's position is clear. The three Indochinese countries have expressed their wish to hold discussions with the ASEAN countries on solving differences and disputes through peaceful negotiations with equality, friendship and respect for each other's legitimate interests, thereby to help build a peaceful, stable and cooperative Southeast Asia. Dialogue is the correct course now. Southeast Asia's problems must be solved by Southeast Asian countries themselves without imposition by foreign forces.

"Three hundred and fifty million Southeast Asian people want to live in peace, friendship and cooperation. The ASEAN and Indochinese countries need peace and stability for economic development and better living standards. Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach's forthcoming visit to a number of Southeast Asian countries will be contributive to dialogue between Indochina and ASEAN, to mutual understanding and respect and to the settlement of remaining problems, in the interests of peace and stability."

VO DONG GIANG SPEAKS ON UN ROLE IN KAMPUCHEA

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 19 -- The recent ASEAN foreign ministerial conference in Singapore continued to go deeper into the impasse of the so-called "Kampuchean problem" along the line of the U.N. resolutions, declared Deputy Foreign Minister Vo Dong Giang in an interview with a KYODO correspondent in New York.

Vo Dong Giang, who heads the Vietnamese delegation to the second special session of the U.N. General Assembly on disarmament, pointed out: "The Indochinese countries have time and time again made it clear that the United Nations cannot play any active role in bringing about peace and stability in Southeast Asia so long as it retains the 'Democratic Kampuchea' genocidal corpse in its organisation."

He stressed that the way out of the deadlock lies in substantial dialogues between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries outside the framework of the erroneous U.N. resolutions or with U.N. assistance but without the genocidal clique.

"Recently", Vo Dong Giang said, "Vietnam repeatedly declared that Hanoi and Phnom Penh are prepared to take the first and unilateral step by withdrawing part of the Vietnamese armed forces in Kampuchea, if the ASEAN countries give positive signals."

NGUYEN CO THACH INTERVIEWED ON S.E. ASIAN TOUR

OW181555 Hanoi VNA in English 1536 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 18 -- Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach today gave the following interview to VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY:

Question 1: What countries in Southeast Asia will you visit?

Answer: I shall visit Burma to reciprocate the visit to Vietnam in early 1981 by the Burmese foreign minister. Since 1980 Singapore and the Philippines have many times extended invitations to me but not until now did I have the opporutnity to gratify them. Also on this occasion Indonesia and Malaysia have extended me their invitations which I have accepted with pleasure.

Question 2: May you tell us the aim of this trip?

Answer: Vietnam's policy toward the ASEAN countries is friendship and cooperation. My trip aims to increase mutual understanding and trust and actively contribute to the cause of peace and stability in the Southeast Asian region.

Question 3: Some news agencies and newspapers in the West and in the ASEAN countries said that you would discuss the "Kampuchean question" with the host countries. Is this true?

Answer: I shall discuss with them bilateral questions as well as questions concerning peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The questions which come under the sovereignty of Kampuchea must be solved by the Kampuchean people themselves. The presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea accords with the treaty of friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and Kampuchea and aims to counter the threat of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists. Once this threat is removed Vietnam and Kampuchea will agree on the withdrawal of Vietnamese forces from Kampuchea.

NHAN DAN Comment

[NHAN DAN 19 June commentary: "Dialogue Is Better Than Confrontation"]

[Text] The ASEAN foreign ministers met in Singapore from 15-16 June to discuss the so-called Kampuchean issue and other economic problems.

The closing communique of the ASEAN conference reiterates ASEAN's previous stand on the Southeast Asian region and on the Kampuchean situation, althrough these countries have failed to attain any success with this incorrect stand during the past 3 years.

The commentary notes: Vietnam's stand is always clear. Together with Laos and Kampuchea, our country is willing to talk with the ASEAN countries to solve all conflicts and differences through peaceful negotiations on the principles of equality and friendship and concern for each other's legitimate interests in order to contribute to building Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability and cooperation. At present, the correct way is to hold a dialogue. Southeast Asian problems must be solved by the Southeast Asian countries themselves without the imposition of the will of outside countries.

It is the desire of 350 million Southeast Asian people to live in peace, friendship and cooperation. The ASEAN as well as Indochinese countries badly need a peaceful and stable environment in order to develop their economies and improve their people's lives. The upcoming visit of Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach to several Southeast Asian countries will contribute to promoting a dialogue between the Indochinese countries and the ASEAN states in order to strengthen mutual understanding and trust and to discuss and solve outstanding problems for the sake of peace and stability in the region.

EDITORIAL LAUDS SOVIET PEACE INITIATIVE

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 19 -- "The Soviet pledge not to be the first to resort to nuclear weapons is a new peace initiative," says NHAN DAN in its editorial today.

The paper goes on: "At all the general meetings of the United Nations since its foundation the Soviet Union has acted as the spokesman of world peace and international security. It has done everything for the achievement of the most essential objective of the U.N. Charter: to prevent a new war. It is obvious that almost all progress in detente has been obtained with the effort of the Soviet Union.

"Over the recent years war maniacs in the West, with the United States at the head, have frenziedly pushed up the arms race, particularly nuclear armament while intensifying opposition to the Soviet Union and the socialist community as a whole, arrogantly violating the rights of other nations and staging provocations and aggression around the world. These have not only hampered the process of detente but also posed grave threats to peace.

"With its unilateral commitment," the paper says, "the Soviet Union has taken the first step in creating an atmosphere of understanding among the nations, an essential condition for successful dialogues on disarmament."

The paper exposes the hypocrisy of the U.S. President in his speech on June 17.

"In fact," it says, "the United States remains bent on intensifying the arms race. Under the pressure of the American people, the U.S. Government cannot help speaking about peace and disarmament, but it sticks to the aim of obtaining Soviet unilateral disarmament or a way to reduce armament that will result in American military supremacy. It is clear to all that the Pentagon not only does not exclude the possibility of being the first to use nuclear weapons, but in fact has based its war doctrine on this highly dangerous prospect. Reagan's peace rhetoric, therefore, was hypocritical to the extreme."

"President Leonid Brezhnev is right to say that the world's people are within their right to ask other nuclear countries to support the Soviet decision. We also demand that such countries realize their responsibility to peace. The world's people clearly see that what undermines stability is the U.S. military build-up and Reagan's war-like foreign policy," the paper adds.

BRIEFS

FRIENDSHIP GROUP TO USSR -- Hanoi, 2 Jun (VNA) -- A delegation of the Vietnam-USSR Friendship Association led by Tran Dang Khoa, vice chairman of the Vietnam National Assembly and vice president of the association, visited the Soviet Union from 23 May to 2 June. During its stay there, the delegation paid floral tributes at the Lenin Mausoleum and at the Monument to the Unknown Soldier. It also toured economic, cultural and historical establishments in various cities. Wherever they went, the Vietnamese visitors were hospitably received by local officials and inhabitants. U.S. BAN ON EQUIPMENT FOR USSR DISCUSSED

Suzuki Expresses 'Regrets'

[Text] Tokyo, June 22, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki expressed regrets Tuesday over the U.S. decision to ban the shipment of American-built electrical logging equipment for use in a Russo-Japanese offshore oil and gas development project. International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe told a semiweekly cabinet session he was sending a letter to U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige "in a day or two" to urge reconsideration of the decision, officials said. They said Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi also told the meeting he had sent a letter to U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig, expressing regrets and seeking reversal of the White House decision.

Speaking at the cabinet meeting, Suzuki said that "this important national project" had been discussed at the Versailles economic summit earlier this month. He was quoted as saying: "I thought the U.S. State Department understood (Japan's position on) the Sakhalin project. This is a matter for regret."

Suzuki told the Diet (parliament) later that Sakhalin Oil Development and Cooperation Co., a Tokyo-based concern involved in the project, will hold talks with Soviet officials on implications of the U.S. decision. "The government will take necessary steps to have the project continued," he said in reply to an opposition member.

Sakurauchi pointed out in his letter to Haig that Japanese involvement in the project on the continental shelf off Sakhalin dates back to 1976 well before the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the Polish crisis, against which the U.S. sanctions are specifically aimed, officials said. He said that Hiroki Imasato, chairman of Sakhalin Oil Development and Cooperation, is prepared to bring a legal action against the U.S. decision, they said.

Sakurauchi, meeting reporters later, indicated it would not be easy to have the U.S. decision reversed as it was taken by the National Security Council, the U.S. highest decision-making body. Saying that the Polish crisis and other conditions necessitating the U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union might turn for the better, he added: "We need to prepare" for such a possibility.

Abe To Write Baldrige

[Text] Tokyo, June 22, KYODO -- Japan will soon ask the United States to reconsider its decision to ban the shipment of U.S.-built drilling equipment for a Russo-Japanese oil and natural gas development project, a cabinet minister said Tuesday. International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe told a news conference after a cabinet meeting that he will send a letter to that effect to U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige "in a day or two."

During the morning cabinet session, Abe expressed "deep regret" about the U.S. decision which he said would delay completion of the project on the continental shelf off Sakhalin, north of Japan. He said that he is sending the letter to Baldrige to stress that the project will not damage "important relationship between Japan and the United States."

A high-ranking MITI official noted Monday night Baldridge and Secretary of State Alexander Haig supported the Japanese stance, but the Pentagon and possibly President Ronald Reagan apparently objected to the shipment. Government officials said Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi has already sent a letter to Haig seeking reversal of the decision. The government view is that Japanese involvement in the project dates back to 1976 well before the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the Polish crisis, against which the U.S. sanctions are specifically aimed.

Keidanren Leader's Views

[Text] Tokyo, June 21, KYODO -- Yoshihiro Inayama, president of the Federation of Economic Organizations (Keidanren), said Monday the Japanese Government should consult with the Reagan administration on its ban on the use of U.S. company-patented development equipment in the Sakhalin oil and gas project. The business leader was commenting in a regular news conference on a possible great delay in the project which the American ban is certain to cause.

Inayama said it is true that the Japanese parties involved are embarrassed by the ban imposed by Washington by way of economic sanctions against the Soviet Union. Inayama said: "Any delay in the Sakhalin project is unfavorable for Japan. The Japanese Government should consult with the U.S. before choosing between the unity of the Western powers and the business deals with the Soviet Union."

Inayama said the U.S. believed that unless the Soviet Union faces greater economic difficulties, it would not agree to sit down at the table for "detente" talks. Japan should attach importance to such U.S. view as a U.S. ally, he said.

SUZUKI INFORMS DIET OF REVENUE SHORTFALL

[Text] Tokyo, June 21, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Monday the government's tax revenue shortfall for fiscal 1981 ended last March will amount to yen 3.2 trillion (dollar 12.5 billion), or about 10 percent of last fiscal year's budget. Suzuki made the remark in replying to a series of interpellations by Dietmen of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party and opposition forces at a plenary session of the House of Representatives held for the first time since Suzuki's return home from his tour of France, the U.S., Brazil and Peru.

This was Suzuki's first admission on the huge tax revenue shortage. The exact amount of the tax revenue shortfall will be made clear at the beginning of next month, Suzuki said. The large budgetary deficit is a major political question facing the Suzuki cabinet. The government will take specific measures to resolve the issue by transferring funds from the debt consolidation special account and other measures, Suzuki said.

Expressing opposition to draft resolutions submitted earlier this month to the Diet calling for resignation of Takayuki Sato, Suzuki said that such an issue should not be decided under pressure of other Dietmen and other groups but by Sato himself. Sato, 54, former parliamentary vice transport minister, was sentenced by the Tokyo District Court to two years in prison with a three-year stay of execution for receiving a yen 2 million Lockheed bribe through All Nippon Airways (ANA). The resolutions, the first of their kind to be submitted to the House of Representatives in postwar Japan, were referred to the lower house Steering Committee under the cosponsorship of the Japan Socialist and Communist parties.

Pledges Economic Stimuli

[Text] Tokyo, June 22, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Tuesday Japan enjoys a relatively better economy than other advanced countries amid worldwide recession, despite achieving only 2.7 percent GNP growth in fiscal 1981 against the official target of 4.1 percent.

In an upper house plenary session Suzuki pledged further efforts to carry out economy-stimulating measures centered on the expansion of domestic demand. He pledged continued efforts to prop up housing construction and speed up the disbursement of public works funds in the first half of fiscal 1982.

Regarding a proposal for issuing additional public works bonds to help perk up business activity, Suzuki said it was necessary to study the proposal carefully with due consideration given to the quantity of bonds to be sold and the availability of private sector funds to buy them.

JAPAN RELEASES TRADE, INDUSTRY WHITE PAPER

[Text] Tokyo, June 22, KYODO -- Japan, owing much of its economic successes to exports, should promote industrial cooperation and technological development while stimulating domestic demand, the government said in a white paper released Tuesday. The annual report also called for Japan to contribute to a harmonious development of the world economy by maintaining free trade principles and expanding economic cooperation to developing countries. This outline of the country's future trade policy was approved by the cabinet Tuesday.

The report, prepared by the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, scrutinizes the stagnant world economy and Japan's trade and industrial structure and explores the country's roles in revitalizing the global economy.

As one of a few industrial states with a relatively low unemployment rate and high productivity, Japan advised the United States and Western Europe to expand technological development and plant and equipment investment to combat the nagging problems. The white paper also suggested Japan's Western allies take steps to keep labor costs from rising, streamline labor-management relations and revive a market environment which deters protectionist sentiments.

The white paper this year carries a subtitle "Japan's Role Toward the Revitalization of the World Economy" because a MITI official said trade frictions in the past year reemphasized interlocking relationship between the Japanese economy and the world's.

Japan barely managed to achieve a 2.7 percent real economic growth in fiscal 1981, ended March 31, with exports contributing 2.1 percent. The rate was far below an official target of 4.1 percent and was the lowest growth since 3.6 percent in 1975. "The Japanese economy in 1981 made a relatively favorable performance in the price and international balance of payment sectors as compared with other industrial countries," the white paper observed.

The country, backed by brisk exports and stagnant imports, posted a dollar 4.77 billion current account surplus last year against a dollar 10.7 billion deficit a year before. Japan's exports in 1981 grew by 17.1 percent to dollar 152.03 billion, reflecting strong competitive power of the country's processed and assembly industries. These successful industries, the white paper related, lowered production cost through aggressive equipment investment, developed products which met the consumer needs and conducted an ambitious overseas market campaign.

Imports on the other hand recorded a modest 2 percent gain to total dollar 143.29 billion due to stagnant demand for petroleum and other raw materials. Under such circumstances, the white paper suggested: "It is essential for Japan to formulate and execute a policy to maintain an economic growth centering on domestic demand and achieve an expansion of trade." Specifically, it proposed the Japanese upgrade their export structure, calling for (?larger) overseas shipments of high quality and high value-added products, diversification of markets and "prudent" activities to avoid the anger of their trade partners.

The report said the Japanese market is not as closed to imports as the Americans and Europeans say in light of the current tariff rates and residual import quotas. "Many of Japan's nontariff barriers cited by the United States and West European countries are based on misunderstanding on their parts," it declared. But the white paper was quick to point out that increased imports, particularly those of manufactured goods, would "contribute to the advancement of international division of labor and a stable growth of world trade." The report, however, was ambiguous about demands from America and Western Europe to buy more farm products and carefully avoided a direct response. "Japan should endeavour to seek harmony between free trade and domestic agriculture," it said, adding the country should make efforts to secure stable imports of necessary farm products.

Noting the Japanese Government's market-opening measures since last December, the white paper urged Japan's trading partners to make further efforts to sell their goods in the Japanese market which it predicted is capable of absorbing more manufactured products from abroad. In this respect, the white paper characterized import restrictions and other protective trade measures as a deterrent to further development of global commerce.

Such measures, the white paper warned, "may benefit domestic producers in the short run but will prevent in the long run realization of an efficient industrial structure at home and imports of inexpensive foreign products..."

Industrial countries, including Japan, are now confronted with the inescapable need to make industry adjustments in the face of a decline in international competitive power in relation to a surging might of developing countries and changes in demand and supply situations at home. The petrochemical and aluminium refining industries in Japan, battered by a recession, are studying ways to regain their once powerful positions in the Japanese economy, the white paper explained.

It blamed the economic malaise gripping the industrialized West on a decline in labor productivity caused by the absence of big plant and equipment investment and technological innovation. One solution put forward was industrial cooperation among highly advanced countries to create more jobs, revitalize local industry and promote a technological transfer. For Japan, this option would promote internationalization of industrial management, form a close sense of mutual dependence and help develop harmonious external trade ties. The white paper also stressed that Japan, an island country with a population of 116 million people, can contribute to the betterment of the world through promotion of technological development.

Signaling an end to the era of Japan's "copycat," it pointed out: "There is growing awareness within Japanese industry of the importance of research and development." It also vowed to assist developing countries in the development of agriculture, solution of energy problems and development and expansion of exports of manufactured goods. Although Japan's overall economic assistance to developing countries declined 10.5 percent to dollar 6.77 billion in 1981, the white paper said, official development aid went up 25.3 percent to dollar 3.3 billion last year. While meeting the diversified needs of such countries, the report said, "Japan should effectively utilize the experince and know-how it gained in the course of its economic development."

'Highlights' of Report

[Text] Tokyo, June 22, KYODO -- following are the highlights of the white paper on international trade:

-- Stagnant World Economy

The economies of developed countries remained in a stagnant phase in 1981 with unemployment assuming serious proportions in the United States and Western European nations. Behind such a phenomenon were (1) the deflationary effects of the second oil crisis and high interest rates worldwide, and (2) structural problems inherent in the economies of the Western countries, including the stagnation of labor productivity.

The economic stagnation and swelling unemployment developed into political and social problems in the U.S. and Western Europe, leading to stepped-up protectionist pressure. Economic gaps between developing countries widened, complicating the North-South problem. Newly-industrializing countries in Asia saw their relative advantage in labor-intensive industries diminish because of rising wages, while the economic development of non-oil-producing nations was hindered by the instability of primary products trade. The communist countries also remained confronted with economic difficulties as shown by the slow investment and production in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

-- World Energy Situation

The world's petroleum supply-demand situation tends to ease because of progress in energy conservation and a shift to alternative energy sources in developed countries, and the delayed recovery of the world economy as well as increased oil production by nonmembers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). Nevertheless, energy consumption is growing in developing countries and communist nations. This, coupled with the unstable Middle East situation, makes it likely that the oil supply situation will become tight cyclically and structurally in the future. Accordingly, all consuming nations are called upon to redouble their efforts for energy conservation and a switch to alternative energy while striving to secure stable oil supplies and build up oil stockpiles.

-- Yen's Depreciation Amid Payments Surplus

Japan's current account, deeply in deficit in 1980, markedly improved in 1981 thanks to a swelling surplus in merchandise trade resulting from brisk exports and slow imports.

In 1981, the value of the yen tended to be low against the dollar. The yen's depreciation amid the current account surplus was largely brought about by a massive capital outflow triggered by high interest rates in the U.S. The drop in the yen's value gave added impetus to the growth of exports and the contraction of imports, affecting the domestic economy and industrial structure. However, the growth of exports slowed down from quarter to quarter.

To forestall protectionist moves abroad, Japan should avoid the concentration of exports in particular markets and promote the diversification of its markets. Imports were sluggish due primarily to a drop in crude oil purchase. Japan was confronted with increasingly vociferous demands for stepped-up imports of manufactured goods and farm products from the U.S. and Western European nations.

Overseas demand for greater access to Japan's agricultural market should be dealt with in such a way as to ensure harmony between the principle of free trade and the development of domestic agriculture.

The domestic economy was marked by stagnant demand, which resulted in further widening production gaps between industries, between large and small businesses, and between regions. This being the case, it is important to carry out policies for maintaining economic growth chiefly through the expansion of domestic demand and achieving an equilibrium in foreign trade on an expanded basis.

-- Direction of Japan's Trade and Industrial Structure

The Japanese industry is faced with the growing need to develop technologies on its own. It should continue to invest briskly in research and development, as well as in plant and equipment in order to sophisticate the industrial fabric and increase the value added of products. This will enable Japan to cope appropriately with trade friction and mounting competition from newly-industrializing countries through the formation of a harmonious international division of labor and thereby to develop its own economy in harmony with the world economy.

-- Settlement of Trade Frictions

Protectionist pressure is mounting against the backdrop of the stagnant world economy. Nonetheless, to put the world economy on a track of stable growth, it is imperative to intensify efforts toward the settlement of various problems facing the world economy through mutual moderation and cooperation under the free trading system. In particular developed countries, which have a great bearing on the world economy, should cooperate in the strengthening of the free trading system and the revitalization of the world economy in the interests of ensuring the stable advance of the world economy.

-- Harmonious International Division of Labor Through Industrial Adjustment

Trade friction does not develop into a major political issue if the economy of the importing country is in an expansionary phase and the adjustment of its trade and industrial structure is in progress. Therefore, vigorous efforts should be exerted to establish a harmonious division of labor among nations. To that end, developed nations should carry out positive measures for industrial adjustment with a view to building up a reasonable industrial and trade structure under the free trading system. Japan on its part will tackle the task of industrial adjustment with vigor and promote the relationship of multilateral interdependence with other nations, including capital and technological tieup.

-- International Contribution to Technological Development

Technology is the motive power for social and economic development. In the past, Japan has relied on developed Western nations in the field of basic technologies and devoted main energies to the development of applied technologies. From now on, however, Japan should step up the independent and creative development of both basic and applied technologies, and make active use of the results of such development effort for the advancement of the world economy.

Japan should make a positive contribution to the revitalization of the world economy. In this context, it is essential to strive for the maintenance of the free trading system through the further opening of its markets to foreign products and the intensified internationalization of the Japanese economy and society.

It is also important to step up industrial cooperation with other nations in order to shape a harmonious division of labor among nations. Moreover, Japan should promote economic cooperation abroad. It should also step up the development of high technologies and make the development results available to the world.

Dear Chinese Comrades: It is of a great significance to strengthen Korea-China friendship at present both in view of the demand of the developing revolution in the two countries and the trend of the present situation. Connected by rivers and mountains, our two countries, as socialist and newly emerged countries, are struggling to step up socialist construction, reunify our divided fatherlands and strengthen the world's anti-imperialist forces.

CHON ANNOUNCES OFFICIAL VISIT TO CANADA, AFRICA

[Text] Seoul, June 17 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan and his wife will make official visits to Canada and the four African nations of Kenya, Nigeria, Gabon and Senegal from Aug. 17 to 31, presidential spokesman Hwang Son-pil said Thursday.

Chon, who will become the first Korean president to visit an African nation, will stay in Kenya Aug. 17-19, Nigeria Aug. 19-22, Gabon Aug. 22-24, and Senegal Aug. 24-26.

After a two-day stopover at Las Plamas, a Spanish province comprising the East Canary Islands, he will fly to Canada for a three day visit Aug. 28-31.

Chon has received formal invitations from Presidents Daniel Arap Moi of Kenya, Alhaji Shehu Shagari of Nigeria, El Hadj Omar Bongo of Gabon, and Abdou Diouf of Senegal.

Canadian Governor General Edward R. Schreyer has extended an invitation to Chon in return for Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's official visit to Korea in September last year. The spokesman said Chon's visits to Gabon and Senegal are in return for their presidents' official visits to Korea in 1975 and 1979, respectively.

Chon will have summit meetings with the foreign heads of state to discuss matters of mutual interest and ways to strengthen bilateral cooperation, Hwang said.

Chon's scheduled visits will be his third trip abroad since he took office two years ago. Early last year, he visited the United States at the invitation of President Ronald Reagan and was the guest of the five member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations from June to July the same year.

The four African nations have diplomatic relations with both South and North Korea. An estimated 50,000 Koreans live in Canada.

TIMES Commentary

[By Pak Chang-sok]

[Text] In a nutshell, President Chon Tu-hwan's two-week swing through four African states will be culmination and testimony to Korea's unswerving commitment to renewing beneficial ties of amity and cooperation with the nonaligned bloc, which plays an influential role in the international community based on complementary reciprocity.

It also attests to the importance Korea places on widening its diplomatic ties with resources-rich states in political and economic sectors.

In fact, Korea has so far kept a relatively low diplomatic profile with the African countries despite a strong diplomatic need for increased cooperative ties with them in view of their abundant natural resources and Korea's specific political situation.

The president's African tour will herald the opening of a new era in solidifying Korea's ties with the newly-rising power in the Sub-Saharan African continent in all fields for substantial mutual benefits.

The projected presidential trip has special significance as he will be the first head of state from Korea (ROK) to set foot on the continent. His African tour is deemed timely and meaningful in terms of broadening substantially Korea's base of political cooperation with the African Continent, especially a month before the seventh nonaligned summit conference scheduled for Baghdad in September.

Korea is actually in need of a solid footing on the African Continent, which has the largest voting bloc in both the United Nations and the 97-member Nonaligned Movement since most of the African states maintain a so-called "equi-distance" policy toward Seoul and Pyongyang.

North Korea is likely to mount a diplomatic offensive against the ROK in the international community, targeting on the upcoming nonaligned summit. Pyongyang's malicious propaganda activities may be more intense than before to undermine Seoul's diplomatic supremacy following North Korea's abortive attempt to put the Korean issue on its own terms before the recently-ended nonaligned coordination meeting in Havana.

In the Havana gathering, the nonaligned group showed a negative reaction to Pyongyang's reiteration of its rusty call for the pullout of foreign troops from the ROK.

This signals modification of their basic positions by an increasing number of nonaligned states on the Korean question, influenced by Seoul's positive approach to the nonaligned bloc, which is roughly a third of the 157-member United Nations.

The change in the position of the nonaligned force, the first of its kind in the 30 year history of nonaligned diplomacy, is construed as a result of cooperative efforts by about 20 member countries.

The 20 states which took up the cudgels for the ROK stance included Senegal and Gabon, which are among the four African countries President Chon will visit.

His African tour will no doubt deal a devastating blow to North Korea in its diplomatic strategy toward the nonaligned world, which has used nonaligned forums as vehicles for its deceptive political propaganda against the ROK. At present, North Korea has a numerically superior position over South Korea in its diplomacy toward the African Continent, maintaining diplomatic ties with 39 states on the continent, 11 more than the 28 states with which Seoul maintains relations.

In this regard, the president's African trip will provide an impetus for Seoul's endeavors to promote ties with African states in both quality and quantity.

It will also give a vital boost to South Korea's efforts to advance into the Third World in view of the fact that the four African nations President Chon will visit are all influential members of the nonaligned African group made up of 44 newly independent countries.

Meetings with leaders of the four African states will be devoted to finding avenues to common substantial benefits through increased economic cooperation.

The ROK is certainly in favorable position in its relations with African countries in comparison with North Korea as the newly independent nations there, mostly affiliated with the Nonaligned Movement, have begun to place more emphasis on economic development than on their ideological struggle for independence.

The newly-emerging states, initially obsessed with radical anti-colonialism and anti-imperialism, have learned that political independence alone is not a solution of the problems of hunger and poverty. In this view, Korea needs to strengthen its cooperative ties with them by sharing its experience and technical knowhow through expanded trade and economic cooperation in the private sector for mutual profits as equal partners diplomatic observers stressed. In particular, the abundant natural resources of the four African powers are indicative of rosy prospects for substantial economic cooperation between the ROK and them through such method as joint ventures. Although trade with Africa represented only 2.7 percent of Korea's global trade volume last year, Korea will have to depend upon it for much of her imports of raw materials in the years ahead, they predicted.

Korea exports to them such goods as textiles, electronic products, automobiles and other industrial products, while importing oil, ore, and other raw materials. In particular, Nigeria is one of major markets from which Korea imports crude oil.

Another important aspect of the president's tour will be his four-day state visit to Canada on his way back to Seoul, during which he will have talks with Canadian Premier Pierre Trudeau on increased cooperation in political and economic spheres.

His Ottawa trip, to be made in return for Trudeau's Seoul visit last September, will surely be devoted to placing binational relations on a solider and more constructive basis with special emphasis on the promotion of substantial economic cooperation, Foreign Ministry officials noted.

Main topics likely to be brought up in the high-level meetings between President Chon and Canadian Government leaders will include an expansion of cooperative ties between the two Pacific nations and Canada's supply of natural resources through joint exploitation on a long-term and stable basis.

FARMERS, OFFICIALS BATTLE AGAINST DROUGHT

[Text] Farmers in Cholla and Kyongsang Provinces are making desperate efforts to overcome the prolonged drought which has troubled the nation's major granaries, reports reaching here said yesterday. People in the drought-stricken areas were trying to look for sources of water which is needed for their rice paddies. Water pumps were being used to draw water from the sources to paddies where rice saplings have already been transplanted.

Many reservoirs and streams in southern districts have nearly dried up as drought conditions have continued since last winter.

Water restrictions have been imposed to cope with the shortage of piped water in Pusan, Taegu, Kwangju and other major cities as the water levels at water plants have been lowered due to the drought. Weathermen said this year's precipitation in the drought-ridden areas was less than half that recorded during the corresponding period last year.

According to the weathermen, Kyongsang Pukto has had an average of 185.3 mm of rain so far this year, compared with the 428.9 mm last year. Kyongsang Namdo received 356 mm, considerably less than last year's 630.7 mm. Cholla Namdo received 282.1 mm down from 366.9 mm.

Military Aid Urged

[Text] Minister of national defense yesterday ordered military unit leaders to provide a maximum of helping farmers in drought-stricken areas in the southern part of the country.

Minister Yun directed pertinent military unit commanders to extend voluntary assistance in supplying potable and agricultural water by mobilizing all military equipment and personnel available to aid the people who are suffering from the prolonged dry spell.

Chon Orders Measures

[By Kim Ko-sok]

[Text] Haenam, Cholla Namdo -- President Chon Tu-hwan has ordered the cabinet to work out long-term and fundamental antidrought measures to help reduce farm crop damages, including the development of underground water resources.

In addition, he said, all possible efforts should be made for the prevention of summer diseases in particularly drought-stricken areas.

The chief executive remarked that the government plans to finalize the drawing of a map of underground water resources throughout the country by the end of the 1980's. Until that time, he went on, efforts should be made for the construction of small-scale reservoirs.

Chon gave the directives while making an inspection tour of the drought-stricken Cholla Provinces Sunday, giving words of encouragement to farmers and civil officials engaged in antidrought works. He also directed the deployment of soldiers and military equipment, if necessary, to cope with the present long dry spell.

The president left Seoul Sunday morning for Hwangsan-myon, Haenam-gun, where he observed the antidrought measures being undertaken. He expressed concern over the multipurpose use of water pumps in fighting the drought. The president visited a nearby village where over 500 farmers, villagers and civil officials were busy watering dry paddy fields through water hoses connected to ponds or streams. He took lunch at a restaurant here, exchanging talks largely on antidrought measures with local people and officials.

The president then visited the Namwon County office in Cholla Pukto and was briefed on the drought situation in the county. Afterwards, Chon made an aerial inspection of the construction of the '88 Olympic expressway linking Kwangju and Taegu.

He returned to Seoul later in the day after visiting Taegu. President Chon was accompanied by Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries Pak Chong-mun.

PARTY LEADERS SEEK SUMMIT FOLLOWUP MEASURES

[Text] The leaders of three major political parties are likely to meet late this week to discuss followup measures to last week's "political summit."

President Chon Tu-hwan talked about a wide spectrum of state issues with the three political party leaders over lunch at Chongwadae Wednesday.

Yi Chae-hyong, chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), said yesterday it would be desirable to hold a meeting of the three major parties late this week following a shakeup in the Cabinet. President Chon promised last Wednesday to replace ministers concerned with the recent curb loan scandal "at an opportune time."

Yi said he expects a Cabinet reshuffle shortly after Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun returns from his visit to Saudi Arabia. The meeting, if held, will deal mainly with measures to resolve the repercussions of the loan scandal, he noted.

In the meantime, Yu Chi-song, president of the opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP), demanded that the proposed meeting handle outstanding "political issues" including the rewriting of a series of political laws and the removing of the political ban on hundreds of former politicians.

Yu, who originally came up with the idea of holding the meeting, said he is waiting for the DJP leader to arrange it. He said he will formally propose the holding of the meeting, if Yi does not arrange for it by the end of this week.

Kim Chong-chol, president of the opposition Korea National Party (KNP), said the leaders of the three parties have not yet agreed to meet but that he will present himself for the meeting, if held.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON COALITION AGREEMENT

Sihanouk Arrives

BK211415 Hong Kong AFP in English 1400 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 21 (AFP) -- Former Cambodian head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk arrived here from Beijing tonight to sign an accord on a coalition government with the two other anti-Vietnamese resistance leaders tomorrow.

The prince, who was accompanied by his wife, was met at the Kuala Lumpur International Airport by Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie and senior officials of the ministry.

Mr. In Tan, one of the top aides of the prince, who had flown in earlier from Bangkok, was also there to greet the former head of state.

The two other Cambodian resistance leaders, Mr. Son Sann and Mr. Khieu Samphan are already in the Malsysian capital for the signing of the coalition government accord tomorrow.

Favors New Geneva Conference

BK211705 Hong Kong AFP in English 1655 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 21 (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president-designate of the tripartite coalition government of the Cambodian resistance, today called for an international conference in Geneva to work out a political settlement in Cambodia.

Prince Sihanouk, who arrived here tonight with a 13-member delegation, including his wife Monique and ex-Premier In Tam, said the proposed conference should be similar to the one held in 1954 on Indochina and should be attended by all the parties to the Cambodian dispute and the five big powers.

He suggested that the conference appoint members of an International Control Commission (ICC) similar to the one set up at the Geneva Parley in 1954. He emphasized that India must be a member of the new ICC along with Poland and Canada.

He himself, however, described the proposal as "Sihanouk's own wishful thinking" but voiced hope it would be supported by friendly countries.

The proposed conference, he noted, should be attended, in addition to the five members of the United Nations Security Council, by all the Cambodian factions, including the Hanoi-installed Heng Samrin regime in Phnom Penh, Vietnam, Japan, the five members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations -- Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand -- Australia, New Zealand and Yugoslavia, which he described as a symbol of non-alignment.

Asked about the prospects of Hanoi and its allies joining such a conference since they had boycotted last July's U.N. conference on Cambodia, Prince Sihanouk said "Vietnam must be compelled to go". He did not say how this could be done.

Will Stay in Kampuchea

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 21 (AFP) -- Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk announced here today that he would return to Cambodia soon to proclaim the establishment of a new tripartite government of which he is the president-designate.

Prince Sihanouk, who arrived here today to sign tomorrow's historic coalition government accord with Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan and nationalist chief Son Sann, told a press conference that he planned to stay "on Cambodian soil, if not deep inside Cambodia because of the Vietnamese occupation, at least close to the Thai border."

The prince, his usual flamboyant and loquacious self, said his commander-in-chief, In Tam, had "already prepared a small headquarters in the Cambodian area" controlled by his 5,000 armed men. The Prince Sihanouk also recalled his dramatic departure from Phnom Penh "in a Chinese plane" as Vietnamese troops marched into the Cambodian capital in January 1979.

He said that after signing the coalition agreement, he would spend four or five days in Malaysia, including a visit to former Malaysian Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman whom he described as "my very close friend" in Penang.

He added that he would then proceed to Bangkok on his way to his homeland. Prince Sihanouk indicated that when he left Beijing this morning the Thai ambassador to China had told him that he would be welcome in the Thai capital.

The prince would not reveal the location of his future base in Cambodia due to security reasons, saying he would have to be always on the move to prevent a Vietnamese strike. He indicated that, although his headquarters would be somewhere near the Thai border, he planned to travel to Beijing frequently "because my best friends are in Beijing and Pyongyang."

Questioned on the viability of the coalition government, in which he is to become president, Mr Khieu Samphan vice-president in charge of foreign affairs and Son Sann premier, he candidly said he was "not optimistic." But he stressed that joining the coalition was only for the nationalist resistance to secure military and humanitarian aid for their struggle to drive the Vietnamese out of Cambodia.

He described the coalition as "a must to enhance the efficiency of our struggle" against the Vietnamese "occupant." "We should not arrogantly claim that we can defeat the Vietnamese Army. But a stubborn, hardened and increasingly powerful anti-Vietnamese guerrilla resistance in Cambodia can succeed one day in compelling the Vietnamese to abide by the UN resolution on the Kampuchean (Cambodia) issue", he added.

Asked whether he did not fear a loss of popular support inside Cambodia by allying himself with the Khmer Rouge -- tainted by an abhorrent human rights record during their four-year rule -- the prince explained there was now a changing mood among the Cambodian people. He noted that while they had welcomed the Vietnamese troops who booted out the Khmer Rouge in January 1979, the Cambodian people were now realizing that Hanoi's real aim was to "colonize" and "Vietnamize" Cambodian border areas with the aim of turning Cambodia into a "Vietnamese province."

He pointed out that even Son Sann, whom he described as "500 percent anti-Khmer Rouge," had had to agree to unite with the ousted government as this was the only way for the nationalist resistance to get arms and become a credible fighting force.

"I am compelled to sign the coalition agreement, otherwise I won't get any military aid from China nor humanitarian assistance from the United States, Malaysia and Singapore," he said. Prince Sihanouk also said he would be happy to speak for the new coalition government at the forthcoming United Nations session where Hanoi and its allies are expected to challenge the Khmer Rouge retention of the Democratic Kampuchean seat.

Prince Sihanouk was also asked why he and Mr Son Sann had accepted a clause in the accord stating that if an "impasse" develops "which renders the coalition inoperative," the current Khmer Rouge state of Democratic Kampuchea would have "the right to resume its activities as the sole legal and legitimate state of Kampuchea and as a member of the United Nations in order to ensure the continuity of the state of Democratic Kampuchea."

"If the Khmer Rouge reject the tripartite coalition, they will lose the Cambodian UN seat. I don't know why they want this clause. It's not in their interest... We must not attach too much importance to it," he said with a chuckle.

Asked about China's role in events leading to the agreement, he said the driving force behind the accord had been ASEAN, adding the Beijing had backed it to a lesser extent.

He said he had not been involved in the dispute between Son Sann and Khieu Samphan over the sharing of power in the coalition. "They made mutual concessions," he added.

After a marathon two-hour press conference, the beaming Prince Sihanouk was given a standing ovation by the entire press corps here. He was greeted by Chinese Ambassador to Malaysia Ye Chengzhang in the lobby of the Hilton Hotel where he is staying and chatted briefly with him before the press conference. After the news conference, Prince Sihanouk met Son Sann, who is in the same hotel as is Khieu Samphan.

Khieu Samphan on Agreement

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 21 (AFP) -- Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan said here today that his party would "abide by and implement the spirit and letter of the declaration of the formation of the coalition government" with the two other anti-Vietnamese resistance groups.

Mr Samphan, who flew in from Bangkok this evening to sign the coalition government accord, said in an arrival statement that the three Cambodian groups would "strive to well implement this declaration with a view to drive all Vietnamese aggressors from Cambodia and liberate our motherland."

The Khmer Rouge, will work together with other factions and "put an end to the immense suffering of the Kampuchean (Cambodian) people," he added. Mr Samphan's government still holds the Cambodian seat in the United Nations, more than three years after being ousted by Vietnamese troops.

Mr Samphan, who is suffering from malaria, appeared sick and tired. He said that since the Khmer Rouge Government was ousted from Phnom Penh three and a half years ago, the Democratic Kampuchean party had been striving continuously to bring about a "great national union against the Vietnamese aggressors."

He thanked the five members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and other friendly countries for their assistance in the establishment of the coalition government of Democratic Cambodia. The agreement contained principles and rules "in enough definite terms to enable all parties to abide by and to implement them," he said.

Mr Khieu Samphan will be vice-president in charge of foreign affairs, with Prince Sihanouk as president and Son Sann premier in the new government.

Son Sann Interview Cited

[By Gerry Aziakou]

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 21 (AFP) -- Cambodian nationalist leader Son Sann said here today that he did not oppose eventual negotiations with Hanoi and the Phnom Penh regime once Vietnam agreed in principle to pull out its troops from Cambodia.

In an interview with AFP, Mr. Son Sann, premier-designate in a tripartite coalition government of the Cambodian resistance, said Vietnam must first accept United Nations resolutions on Cambodia calling for a withdrawal of foreign forces and U.N.-monitored elections.

The 71-year-old Cambodian leader was commenting on Hanoi reports that Vietnam and its Indochinese allies would meet in Ho Chi Minh City (ex-Saigon) next month and were expected to make a gesture to end the fighting in Cambodia.

"First the Vietnamese must agree in principle to withdraw. The precise timetable can be worked out later, then we can negotiate and they can bring the Heng Samrin regime into the negotiations", he said.

Mr. Son Sann, who arrived here yesterday, is to sign an historic coalition government pact tomorrow with the two other resistance leaders: Khieu Samphan, who arrived here late this afternoon; and Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who is due to fly in later tonight.

Mr. Son Sann also emphasized that he was committed to a political solution, as long as it was based on U.N. resolutions. "We have never pretended that with our own armed forces we can drive the Vietnamese forces out of Cambodia", he said. "We strongly support economic pressure on Hanoi by Western countries such as the United States, West Germany and Japan. We strongly support the political pressure on Hanoi from the ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Countries). But we felt that we as Cambodians, must add to this pressure. This is why we agreed to join (?this) coalition government," he indicated.

Mr. Son Sann conceded that he had made major concessions to the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge, which in military terms, is the strongest of the three Cambodian factions.

Mr. Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLP) dropped its earlier insistence on a majority of power. The coalition agreement accords equal status to the three factions and ensures that none will enjoy a preponderance of power. "We are determined to have the agreement. And without our concessions, there would have been no agreement. We want the coalition to liberate our country. Our people told us that they could not live under Vietnamese rule. It is my duty to do something to end their suffering," Mr. Son Sann said. "We will do everything, even stepping up our guerrilla fighting, to force the Vietnamese to negotiate," he added.

But he also made clear that under the coalition accord, "We can retain our identity, our own organization and our liberty of action."

Under the accord to be signed here tomorrow in the presence of ASEAN observers and host Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, Prince Sihanouk is to become president, Mr. Khieu Samphan vice-president in charge of foreign affairs and Son Sann premier.

A source close to the KPNLF chief said Mr. Son Sann was in favor of holding a meeting of the three coalition government leaders inside "Cambodian territory" "as soon as possible" to proclaim the establishment of the new government.

But the source added that Prince Sihanouk and Mr. Khieu Samphan would have to agree since all decisions are to be reached by consensus.

AFP on Pact Signing

BK221101 Hong Kong AFP in English 0959 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, 22 Jun (AFP) -- Cambodia's three anti-Vietnamese leaders today signed an agreement formalizing a coalition government that will seek to restore their homeland's "independent and non-aligned" status.

At the solemn ceremony chaired by Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie at the stately Malaysia House guest home here, Prince Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan affixed their signatures on each of the three draft documents sealing their alliance in the long-sought coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea.

Under the glare of TV cameras, Tan Sri Ghazali embraced each of the three leaders in turn -- first Prince Sihanouk, the new president of the coalition government, then nationalist leader Son Sann, the new premier, and finally Khmer Rouge chief Khieu Samphan, the new vice-president in charge of foreign affairs.

A beaming Tan Sri Ghazali, the host of the Cambodian resistance summit then proudly watched as the three Cambodian leaders embraced each other, the last being Son Sann and Khieu Samphan, whose protracted squabbling over power sharing had until today frustrated ASEAN-sponsored efforts to spawn the anti-Vietnamese alliance. It was a momentous event rewarding months of tough bargaining and cajoling by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), the driving force behind the agreement.

Observers from the five ASEAN countries -- Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand -- and the respective delegations of the three Cambodian leaders witnessed the signing ceremony.

Prince Sihanouk, undoubtedly the star of the show, said his government hoped to achieve "great credibility" at the national and international level and to get "growing support both internally and externally."

Mr. Son Sann, head of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), described the coalition government as "an authentic and legal government representing the Cambodian state and Cambodian people before the world and within all international organizations and institutions."

Mr. Khieu Samphan meanwhile voiced hope that the coalition would be able to "exist a long time after a Vietnamese withdrawal," adding "it is our profound wish," he added. He said his faction "will abide by and implement the spirit and the letter of the declaration of the formation of the coalition government."

Tan Sri Ghazali said "Malaysia, and I think I can speak for the other members of ASEAN, hopes that your coalition government will get out [as received] wholehearted support."

Prince Sihanouk then made an impassioned plea for international military and humanitarian aid to resist the Vietnamese "colonization" of Cambodia.

The three Cambodian leaders emphasized that the key issue was the very "survival" of Cambodia as an "independent nation." Each of them stressed that they had agreed to join the coalition out of patriotism to save their homeland from "the Vietnamese cholera and the Soviet cancer" as Prince Sihanouk put it.

Repeatedly asked whether they did not fear a loss of popular support after allying himself with the deposed Khmer Rouge regime, tainted by the genocide carried out during its four-year rule in Phnom Penh, both Son Sann and Prince Sihanouk said it had been an agonizing decision. "We have no other choice," the two nationalist leaders said. Prince Sihanouk, apologizing to Mr Khieu Samphan, recalled the persecution suffered by members of his family and followers at the hands of the Khmer Rouge.

It was clear that the deep mistrust between the Khmer Rouge and the two non-communist leaders remain.

Speaking of the changing mood among Cambodians, Prince Sihanouk said that they now realized Hanoi's aim was to turn their homeland into a Vietnamese province, although they first welcomed Vietnamese troops putting an end to the Khmer Rouge tyranny.

Asked whether the new government would seek a political solution or a military option, Prince Sihanouk replied "first we must do something on the battlefield, because the Vietnamese understand only the language of force."

The three leaders added that with more external aid, particularly military assistance from China, they planned to step up their guerrilla war agianst the estimated 180,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

Mr Son Sann and Prince Sihanouk described the Khmer Rouge as "the lesser to two evils" and stressed that they would be able to retain their identity, their own organization.

Khieu Samphan, looking pale and weak as he is suffering from malaria, was clearly on the defensive in the face of a barrage of hostile questions from the press and biting jokes form Prince Sihanouk.

Speaking in Khmer through an interpreter, Mr Khieu admitted that the Khmer Rouge had "committed errors in the past. But we are mainly patriotic people fighting for the liberation of our homeland from the Vietnamese," he added.

He pledged that his faction would abide by the results of eventual free elections supervised by the United Nations once Vietnamese troops pulled out.

Prince Sihanouk also rejected negotiations with Hanoi and its client regime in Phnom Penh in view of their "intransigence". He said he had been appointed by the two other leaders to speak on behalf of Democratic Kampuchea at the UN General Assembly session next September. A key goal of the new government is to prevent any erosion of international support for Democratic Kampuchea in the world body.

Meanwhile, Prince Sihanouk's commander-in-chief, former Premier In Tam, told AFP that he expected the three government leaders to formally announce the establishment of the coalition government "somewhere on Cambodian soil" around July 1.

Prince Sihanouk said yesterday he planned to stay "on Cambodian soil, if not deep inside Cambodia because of the Vietnamese occupation, at least close to the Thai border."

[By Jim Wolf]

[Text] Bangkok, June 19 (AFP) -- Cambodia's three main anti-Vietnamese groups, preparing for a kind of shotgun wedding, have agreed to unite in a coalition riddled with loopholes, according to analysts here.

The tripartite Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK) is due to be proclaimed next week in Kuala Lumpur after more than a year of painstaking, often embittered, negotiations.

The three-page document that is to be signed, a copy of which was obtained by AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE, indicates that some of the major issues were diliberately fudged or skirted to break the long deadlock.

Chief among these is the fate of the coalition in the event, albeit highly unlikely, of any future withdrawal of the 150,000-200,000 Soviet-backed Vietnamese troops in Cambodia. The document does not specifically state what would happen to the CGDK in this case.

However, an earlier proposal put forward by Singapore and later endorsed by its partners in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) had urged that the coalition, following any Vietnamese pullout, "Be automatically dissolved to pave the way for the election of a government in Cambodia through free elections conducted by the United Nations."

The blurring on this point is critical for all three of the future coalition partners -- the ousted but United Nations-recognized Khmer Rouge Government and the non-communist groups led by former Premier Son Sann and ex-Head of State Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

The Khmer Rouge, armed and politically backed by China, rejected the Singapore proposal at least partly because of its self-destruction clause, the first such call ever put to a member state of the U.N.

The new agreement merely calls for implementation of repeated U.N. General Assembly resolutions on Cambodia, all of which urged free and fair elections to be held under U.N. supervision after a pullback of foreign force.

Non-communist Cambodian insiders are calling this sufficient to make it clear that the CGDK is a caretaker government, or interim administration pending nationwide polling.

The tripartite agreement is also subject to diametrically opposite interpretations in the event of a breakup of the three factions, whose documented deep suspicions of each other held up the formation of the alliance for so long.

A key clause refers to what transpires if an "impasse" developes "which renders the CGDK inoperative."

In this case, it says, the current Khmer Rouge state of Democratic Kampuchea led by Khieu Samphan will have "the right to resume its activities as the sole legal and legitimate state of Kampuchea and as a member of the United Nations in order to ensure the continuity of the state of Democratic Kampuchea."

That proviso, according to one well-placed Western diplomat, means that the Khmer Rouge "have property rights and get the kids, too" if the marriage does not hold.

But Cambodian nationalists stress the exact opposite on the basis of what they call careful analysis of international legal norms. They argue that once the CGDK is proclaimed the previous (Khmer Rouge) Government of Democratic Kampuchea "ceases to exist." Hence nations voting for continued seating of Democratic Kampuchea at the United Nations would be voting for the new coalition, which will become the legitimate voice of the Cambodians.

Since the mantle of legitimacy will have been transferred, the nationalists contend, any future Khmer Rouge withdrawal would leave them out in the cold without an internationally recognized claim to power.

The tripartite declaration steers clear of any mention of joint military action against the Vietnamese, who invaded in December 1978 and set up a client government in Phnom Penh a month later.

A further contradiction is the makeup of the bare bones CGDK "inner cabinet" which, contrary to precedent, includes the projected head of state, Prince Sihanouk, along with Khieu Samphan, who is to be vice president in charge of foreign affairs, and Son Sann, who will be prime minister.

Normally, heads of state, functioning as such, are not included in the Council of Ministers, or Cabinet, because they incarnate the continuity of the body politic, which is generally not called into question over day-to-day affairs.

The declaration says the CGDK Council of Ministers will convene regular meetings inside Cambodia -- something deemed highly unlikely by analysts familiar with the enduring enmity between the three groups.

Phnom Penh Commentary

[Station commentary: "The Shadow of a Ghost"]

[Text] According to the 18 June report from Singapore by AFP, the foreign ministers of the ASEAN member countries closed their annual conference by issuing a communique on the formation of a coalition government of all the reactionary Khmers to oppose Vietnam. Malaysian Foreign Minister Ghazali Shafie said that the three Kampuchean reactionary groups have agreed to meet in Kuala Lumpur, capital of Malaysia, on 21 June in order to sign an agreement on the coalition of the three Khmer traitorous groups of Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk and Son Sann.

AFP reported further that Walter Stoessel, U.S. deputy secretary of state, welcomed the formation of this coalition and said that the United States was considering supplying aid to this new government. For this reason, the so-called coalition government to be formed by the three Khmer reactionary groups -- Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan -- is the offspring of the United States, the Beijing Chinese and the ASEAN countries to oppose the interests and rebirth of the Kampuchean people. It is obvious that this coalition government that they are going to form does not represent the Kampuchean people and is of no use to the ASEAN countries. On the contrary, it will only destroy peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

In the past, the ASEAN countries had followed the instigation of Beijing and Washington and pursued a hostile policy toward the PRK by organizing an illegal conference to solve the so-called Kampuchean problem aimed at opposing the Vietnamese troops' legal presence on Kampuchean soil. These insane activities constituted a gross interference in the PRK internal affairs. We have announced repeatedly that the Vietnamese troops' presence on Kampuchean soil is the PRK's internal affair done pursuant to the treaty of all-round cooperation between the two countries and to the sacred request of the Kampuchean people. Therefore, the only and best way to solve the tension in Southeast Asia is negotiations between the group of the ASEAN countries and the three Indochinese countries based on the principles of peaceful coexistance. This is because tension in this region was not caused by the Vietnamese troops' presence on Kampuchean soil. On the contrary, it was caused by the hegemonist-expansionist policy of big-nation China.

The PRK Government is the sole legitimate and legal representative of the Kampuchean people because it is the government elected in a universal election by the Kampuchean people throughout the country. We clearly state that all conferences on the Kampuchean problem held without the participation of the legitimate representative of the Kampuchean people are all regarded as null and void. The situation in Kampuchea is irreversible. The perfidious maneuvers of the enemies of all categories aimed at destroying the achievements of the Kampuchean revolution are bound to fail.

Comrade Chairman Heng Samrin has clearly stressed that all efforts made by the three Khmer reactionary groups in an attempt to form a coalition government to oppose Vietnam will fail because they run totally counter to the interest of the Kampuchean people. Thus, the so-called coalition government to be formed by the ASEAN countries is only the shadow of a ghost to represent the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime. It does not represent the Kampuchean people.

VODK Urges National Union

[Station commentary: "Hold Aloft the Great Banner of National Union To Rally All National Forces in Order To Increase the Resistance Forces To Fight and Drive All the Vietnamese Aggressors, Expansionists, Annexationists and Race Exterminators From Our Beloved Kampuchea"]

[Text] For half a century now the Hanoi Vietnamese have nurtured an ambition to annex our Kampuchea into their Vietnamese Indochina federation. They have repeatedly and arduously attempted to realize this abject goal. However, they have suffered one failure after another. In the past 3 and 1/2 years, Vietnam has conducted a war of aggression against Kampuchea and massacred millions of Kampucheans in a most barbarous and cruel manner in an attempt to smash the Kampuchean people's desire for independence and their will to fight. The Vietnamese want to exterminate the Kampuchean race so they can occupy Kampuchea, realize their plan for an Indochinese federation and use Kampuchea as a springboard for launching the Vietnamese-Soviet strategy of aggression and expansion in Southeast Asia.

But Vietnam has suffered one defeat after another in this attempt. Vietnam has not only failed to annex Kampuchea but it has reached an impasse and has become totally bogged down on the Kampuchean battlefield because of the attacks by the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government. But as their true nature is that of the obstinate aggressors and expansionists and in their capacity as the outer post and cat's paw of the Soviet international expansionists in the Southeast Asian, Asian and Pacific region, the Hanoi Vietnamese have stubbornly carried on their military activities on the battlefield, intensified the massacre of the Kampuchean people in a more barbarous and cruel manner and continued their political and diplomatic maneuvers on the international arena in an attempt to make the world accept their aggression in Kampuchea as a fait accompli.

Realizing that Vietnam poses a permanent threat to the survival of the Kampuchean nation and race now and in the future, and desiring to rescue our Kampuchean people from the great suffering and slaughter perpetrated by the Vietnamese aggressors, the Democratic Kampuchean Government has made relentless efforts to rally all the Kampuchean forces to fight and quickly drive all the Vietnamese aggressors out of our Kampuchean territory. This is why, since 1979, although it has been busily engaged in leading the resistance against the Vietnamese aggressors on the battlefield, our Democratic Kampuchean Government has sought opportunities to meet other Kampuchean parties. This has resulted in the signing of the joint statement in Singapore, the meetings of the tripartite ad hoc committee in Bangkok and an agreement signed in Beijing with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk.

The unswerving stand of our Democratic Kampuchean Government is to seek a union of all national forces willing to fight against the Vietnamese aggressors, expansionists and annexationists in all forms available and according to their respective abilities in order to increase the anti-Vietnamese resistance forces in all fields -- military, political and diplomatic -- and to avoid doing anything that will affect the forces which are currently fighting against the Vietnamese aggressors on the battlefield.

The friendly ASEAN countries have provided support and assistance to these efforts to rally the Kampuchean forces to fight against the Vietnamese aggressors by providing meeting places and facilities for the talks of various parties. They have also given moral support and encouragement to these efforts. In a joint communique issued at the end of their recent 15th meeting in Singapore, the five ASEAN foreign ministers announced that the ASEAN countries would continue to support the efforts to form a Kampuchean coalition government and stressed that the formation of such a coaliton was an internal affairs that the Kampuchean people must decide by themselves.

We express sincere thanks to the ASEAN and other friendly countries which have given valuable support to the cause of the Kampuchean people's just struggle under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government. We appeal to them and to other peace and justice-loving countries in the world to give further support to the just struggle of the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea and jointly put greater pressure on the Vietnamese aggressors -- political, diplomatic and economic -- in order to force Vietnam to respect the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the international conference on Kampuchea by withdrawing its aggressor troops totally and unconditionally from Kampuchea in order to allow the Kampuchean people to decide their own destiny without any outside interference.

As in the past, now and in the future Democratic Kampuchea will always adhere to the stand of rallying the great national union of all national forces to fight against the Vietnamese aggressors, expansionists, annexationists and race exterminators at the present time and to defend and build the country in the future to come.

BANGKOK SCORES VIETNAM'S 'SLANDER' OF THAILAND

[Station commentary: "The Aggressor Is the One Who Incites"]

[Text] In early June a joint military exercise between Thailand and the United States was held in the Gulf of Thailand and codenamed "Cobra Gold 82." The joint military exercise is part of an ongoing program involving cooperation between Thailand and the United States -- both of whom are allies -- but the VIETNAMESE NEWS AGENCY has again baselessly accused Thailand by saying that the purpose of the joint military exercise is aimed at provoking Vietnam and the regime it established in Phnom Penh and creating political tension in the Southeast Asian region.

The Voice of Free Asia strongly denies the Vietnamese accusation as being illogical and totally groundless. The governments of the Kingdom of Thailand and the United States had announced before the Thai-U.S. joint military exercise was launched that the "Cobra Gold 82" was part of the annual military exercises aimed at improving cooperation between the two allied nations in transportaiton, defensive maneuvers, communications and planning so as to enable the military personnel of both countries to attain more practical skills and sufficient experience to increase the efficiency of their armed forces and to increase the capability to safeguard Thailand from aggression.

The annual Thai-U.S. joint military exercise was held within Thai coastal areas and in Thai territorial waters. The exercise did not infringe upon the territory or sovereignty of another nation. Besides, any nation with its own military forces has all the legitimate rights to conduct joint military exercises with its allied partners. The joint military exercise neither constitutes a provocation nor creates political tension in the region.

Therefore, the Vietnamese accusation only amounts to a propaganda campaign against Thailand and a gross interference in Thailand's internal affairs. In fact, it is Vietnam herself who has been creating tension and instability in the Southeast Asian region by its invasion and occupation of Kampuchea with its military forces, as well as by deploying a large number of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea close to the Thai border. The Vietnamese aggression in Kampuchea has adversely affected security in the region with far-reaching repercussions in the world as a whole.

The Vietnamese aggression and occupation of Kampuchea -- not to mention 40,000 Vietnamese troops in Laos -- certainly cannot be equated as simply military exercises. But it was military aggression, which has resulted in the death of many thousands of Kampucheans -- the legitimate owners of the country -- and which has involved the use of deadly chemical weapons as more and more evidence has recently been found to substantiate the reports that they are being used.

Vietnamese methods of aggression are cruel, inhuman and in clear violation of the UN Charter. It is beyond any doubt that Vietnam is the aggressor and the one responsible for instability and untold suffering in the region. Furthermore, Thailand has on many occasions been the victim of military intrusions into its territory by Vietnamese forces, resulting in the loss of lives and property of Thai citizens. Such tragedies caused by Vietnamese aggression are far too serious in magnitude and cannot be compared to the Thai-U.S. joint military exercise which has not violated any nation's sovereignty and is aimed at deterring aggression.

It should be realized, however, that the Vietnamese continued attempt to make indiscriminate accusations and incriminations against Thailand clearly reveals the insatiable thirst of Vietnam to slander Thailand, apart from its attempts to hoodwink the world and divert the world's attention from the genuine problem that is the invasion of and forcible occupation of Kampuchea by Vietnamese forces which is seriously undermining peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

The international community will never allow itself to fall into the Vietnamese trap but will collectively and conscientiously oppose Vietnamese aggression and deliberate provocations against Thailand and other peace-loving nations in the region.

POST URGES SUPPORT FOR KAMPUCHEA COALITION

[Editorial: "Getting To Work on Kampuchea"]

[Text] It seems that with the exception of a few crosses for the T's, a few dots for the I's and a formal signing session, that there will soon be a new Democratic Kampuchea regime. The three major resistance movements that grew out of the 1979 Vietnamese military seizure of Phnom Penh and other parts of Kampuchea appear to have finally come together in the realisation that only unity is going to defeat that occupation army from the East. Within a few days, there should be a new Kampuchean regime.

The period for congratulations and self-congratulation must be brief. There is serious and intensely important work to be done. It should, in fact, be started now, even before the agreement is signed in Kuala Lumpur this week. The diplomatic and information fields are screaming for action.

The Vietnamese propaganda effort on behalf of their client regime in Phnom Penh has been intense, and it has taken full advantage of the overly long period it took resistance leaders to get together. Support for the present -- that is to say, Khmer Rouge -- Democratic Kampuchea administration was starting to crumble, as governments found it more and more indefensible to raise a hand in support of the bloody-minded Pol Pot and his men. Europeans, Islamic nations and many of the Third World countries who formed the main international support for anti-Vietnamese diplomatic actions were beginning to question their votes.

These countries must be targets of intense informational and diplomatic effort by the new Democratic Kampuchea. And here, the emphasis should be on the positive. Diplomatic recognition should now be sought from countries of the world for the new regime. And the first to recognise it should be the Philippines, which had never formalised clearly its diplomatic relations with Khmer Rouge Kampuchea. Manila's recognition would mean that all of ASEAN would have official relations with Democratic Kampuchea, an example to the rest of the world.

Islamic nations need to be reminded again of the Soviet link to Vietnam's actions in Kampuchea, which is as real as the hated Soviet actions in Afghanistan. Third World nations far away from Southeast Asia must be reminded that Vietnam's actions are those of a large nation, supported by a superpower, against a smaller neighbour. Western Europe, it appears, needs to be reminded of its heavy and still-growing economic ties with ASEAN. In all of these areas, time has caused memories to dim of what was an outright invasion, as immoral today as it was three and a half years ago.

There is more. The new resistance government needs more than moral support. It needs diplomatic recognition and it needs actual aid. It will no longer be, when it is formally signed into reality, a bloodsoaked regime of communist killers. It will represent the greatest cross-section of Kampuchean opinion possible. Governments in the past have recognised exile regimes -- particulary during World War II -- and they should now recognise this one. Having recognised it, they should consider giving it aid as they would consider aid to any other government.

It has taken a long time to set up a coalition in Kampuchea. The task does not stop now. On the contrary, a long and hard road still lies ahead in returning the country to those who own it, the Kampuchean people themselves.

JAPANESE PROPOSAL ON KHMER REPATRIATION WELCOMED

[Text] Thai Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila welcomed a Japanese proposal that a transit center be set up in western Kampuchea to smooth the voluntary repatriation of Kampuchean refugees in Thailand. The suggestion was made by Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi during a closed session of talks between the ASEAN and its allies which began yesterday.

The Japanese Foreign Minister suggested the center be near an airport so the refugees could fly from Thailand then go to their homes by land. Japanese officials accompanying the Japanese foreign minister have also revealed that Japan was ready to finance the program. It would affect about 60,000 displaced Kampucheans in Thailand.

MALAYSIA'S DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER PAYS VISIT

Musa Hitam on Khmer Coalition

BK211431 Hong Kong AFP in English 1041 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] Bangkok, Jun 21 (AFP) -- The Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) would give economic aid and political support to the coalition of anti-Vietnamese Cambodian groups after it was installed, Malaysian Deputy Prime Minister Datuk Musa Hitam said today.

Speaking on the eve of the signing of the coalition agreement by Cambodia's three main anti-Vietnamese groups in Kuala Lumpur tomorrow, Mr. Hitam said the meeting would "bring to fruition" ASEAN's patient and consistent efforts to bring about a political solution to the Cambodian problem. He added it would mark a "step forward in finding a common political solution" to the Cambodian problem.

He told members of the Foreign Correspondents Club of Thailand that ASEAN, a grouping of Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia, the Philippines and Thailand, "and the rest of the world owe it to the suffering people of Kampuchea to try and end their misery, and to usher in an era of peace based on mutual respect and cooperation."

The tripartite coalition is to be made up of the Khmer Rouge, ousted from Kampuchea by the Vietnamese but still recognised by the United Nations and the non-communist groups led by former Premier Son Sann and ex-head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

"A continuation of the conflict in Kampuchea can only bring about more active and direct intervention by outside powers," Mr Hitam said. He added that the conflict in that country had added a new dimension to the Sino-Soviet rivalry in the region. Their struggle for influence in the region is "often at the expense of our well-being" and ASEAN must not be pawns in their game.

Touching on economic cooperation between Malaysia and Thailand, Mr. Hitam said "Our economies are relatively similar and are closely inter-linked." He charged that the increasing protectionism in trade by developed countries could "seriously hamper our efforts towards greater self-sufficiency" and he said that there was no adequate transfer of technology.

The uncertain future of the sixth International Tin Agreement has brought a bleak period for tin industry and has adversely affected Thailand, Indonesia and Malaysia which together contribute 75 per cent of the world's tin production. Mr. Hitam said all the three tin-producing countries are negotiating to find a common stand to effectively face the low prices and a joint announcement would be made tomorrow.

He also praised Thailand for the joint efforts to wipe out the banned Communist Party of Malaya and the Communist Party of Thailand.

Leading a 26-member delegation, Mr. Hitam arrived here yesterday for a two-day visit. He meets Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon and Interior Minister Sitthi Chirarot before flying home tonight.

Musa Hitam at Press Conference

BK211504 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] Visiting Malaysian Deputy Prime Minister Datuk Musa Hitam gave a press conference at the Erawan Hotel at 1800 today. He said he was happy to visit Thailand. Although it is a short visit, the visit is a good sign for the relations between Thailand and Malaysia and the relations among the ASEAN nations.

During his stay in Thailand, the Malaysian deputy prime minister called on Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon, Deputy Prime Minister Col Thanat Khoman and other Thai executive leaders. Topics discussed during their meetings included agreements on border cooperation between Thailand and Malaysia and the progress in economic cooperation projects, especially the joint natural gas exploration project.

Asked about the Kampuchean problem, the Malaysian deputy prime minister said he hoped Vietnam would agree to a gentleman-like consultation in order to find a solution to the problem through diplomatic channels. Asked about Malaysia's attitude towards Muslim movements in Thailand, the Malaysian deputy prime minister declined to comment, but said both governments would take joint action in case the movement tended to create difficulties.

Malaysian Deputy Prime Minister Datuk Musa Hitam and his delegation who visited Thailand on 20-21 June as guests of the Thai Government are scheduled to depart Thailand by a special plane which will leave Don Muang Airport at 2130 tonight.

CANADIAN FOREIGN MINISTER MACGUIGAN ENDS VISIT

BK220408 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Text] Canada has decided to provide 4.5 million baht in aid for Thai citizens displaced by the influx of refugees along the Thai-Kampuchean border. The aid provision was announced yesterday by Canadian Secretary of State for External Affairs, Mr Mark MacGuigan at the end of his 3-day visit to Thailand as guest of the foreign minister.

Mr MacGuigan said at a press conference prior to his departure that he was very impressed by the Thai development projects, especially the irrigation project in Lahan Sai district, Buriram Province, in the northeast. He said that the Canadian Government will increase its assistance by 3.7 million baht for this project, which has already been supported by Canada. Mr MacGuigan has also reportedly told the people of Lahan Sai upon his visit there that the Canadian Government will continue its assistance to their food processing plant by providing 800,000 baht to enable the canning and processing of fruits and vegetables as an income-generating feature of the Lahan Sai project.

On Thai-Canadian trade relations, Mr MacGuigan said that Canada is interested in expanding trade between the two countries. The Canadian foreign minister also expressed his satisfaction (?toward) the discussions held between himself and the prime minister as well as that between himself and his Thai counterpart.

Mr MacGuigan said that the formation of the tripartite coalition government in Kampuchea will benefit that country and its people as well as this region as a whole.

COMMUNIST 'STRONGHOLD' CAPTURED IN SOUTH

BK210348 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] Government troops captured a large communist stronghold in southern Thailand in a fierce battle over the weekend. The captured stronghold is Camp 842, which is believed to be the largest remaining Communist stronghold in the south. A military source says that the camp is in the Banthat Mountain area and adjoining Nakhon Si Thammarat, Phatthalung and Trang Provinces. It was captured by a combined government force of 800 troops participating in the Tai Rom Yen II suppression operation conducted by the 4th Army Region.

The source says that on seizing the camp, government troops found bunkers, a basketball court, living quarters, communist propaganda materials, weapons and food supplies. He adds that during the battle six government soldiers were seriously wounded and a number of insurgents were believed to be either killed or injured.

ISOC ON OPERATIONS AGAINST COMMUNIST TERRORISTS

[Excerpts] Internal Security Operations Command [ISOC] spokesman Col Somphan Phuanphiphop reported on suppression operations against communist terrorists and said that, as a result ofthe massive campaigns launched on Phukhat Range in Phetchabun Province under the Phamuang Kriangkrai plan, a large number of terrorists have gradually surrendered to authorities. Government forces also confiscated a record-high number of weapons and war materials from terrorists. The defectors were given training under the Karunyathep reform program. Military offensives and political operations by the authorities as well as the internal conflict within the Communist Party of Thailand have contributed to the weakening of CPT fronts. From October 1981 to March this year, a total of 808 communist terrorists have surrendered and 1,444 were captured.

The combined units of civilian, police and military forces conducted patrol and harassment operations. They mounted campaigns to capture terrorist camps. As a result, a large number of communist camps have been uncovered and captured. From 14 May to 10 June, 104 clashes were recorded -- 2 in the central area, 42 in the northeast, 11 in the north and 49 in the south. According to the official assessment, communist terrorists have lost all of their strongholds in the country. This has forced them to scatter into small units and operate under guerrilla tactics as they did in the past. In order to intimidate the people, the terrorists launched attacks on government offices, ambushed government officials and conducted sabotage attempts. However, their tactics only made the people turn against them.

Meanwhile, Central Security Command spokesman Col Sukhanan Prasoetsuk reported on the situation in the southern border provinces from 18 May to 16 June as follows: Activities of the terrorists were mainly collecting money and food supplies, holding public meetings for propaganda, gathering information on movements of the authorities and forcing the local people in Tambon Aiyaweng, Betong District, to quit being rangers. They also sent letters to the police offering friendship with Thai authorities while making accusations against the Malaysian government.

The Thai combined task forces continued suppression drives under the policy of political campaigns taking precedence over military suppression. The Task Force Units Nos. 53 and 55 were responsible for the area. They sent officials to meet with the people and to give lectures on the advantages of a democratic form of government with the king as head of state. They also sent medical teams to give medical care to the people. On 22 May the authorities inaugurated the 3d training course for the southern people. About 180 people joined the training program called Romklao Chao Tai.

The Task Force Units Nos. 53 and 55 also conducted military activities. They sent officials on patrol to gather information on terrorist movements, to patrol roads and to patrol and thwart terrorist activities along the Thai-Malaysian border. They also set up checkpoints to search suspect vehicles and persons.

HANOI COMMENTS ON KHMER COALITION GOVERNMENT

BK211153 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] At their recent Singapore meeting, the foreign ministers of the ASEAN countries announced the setting up of the so-called tripartite coalition government of Khmer reactionary groups in exile. Malaysian Foreign Minister Ghazali Shafie on 18 June said that the Khmer chief leaders will arrive in Kuala Lumpur this week to sign an official document on the setting up of their government. The following is our commentary:

Under growing pressure for discontinued support to the disgusting Pol Pot clique at the United Nations, the Chinese expansionists, the United States imperialists and the ASEAN countries had to reach a compromise on setting up such a three-way coalition government. This hasty act, however, has made them look ridiculous indeed.

On 14 June, one still remembers, Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila declared that the setting up of a tripartite Khmer coalition is an internal affair of Kampuchea [and] that Thailand and other ASEAN countries are not involved in this affair. Just 4 days later, it was Sitthi and his colleagues in the ASEAN countries who advertised this political farce. It is ironic that the exiled Khmer leaders did not say anything about their coalition government. Even Sihanouk, according to AFP, was not informed in advance, nor expected to go to Kuala Lumpur.

Early this month, China and some ASEAN countries dropped the hint that their henchmen liked to meet in Geneva. Now they say that the meeting will take place in Kuala Lumpur. Still, reports AFP, the three Khmer groups recently received a proposal for their portfolios in the new coalition government at the Chinese Embassy in Bangkok. It is now safe to say that China, the United States and the ASEAN countries have made arrangements for the Khmer reactionary groups to forge a coalition government in exile. Not surprisingly, U.S. Undersecretary of State [title as heard] Walter Stoessel had no time to declare material support for this undertaking.

On 19 June the Chinese Foreign Ministry voiced its own support. Japanese Foreign Minister Sakurauchi, for his part, pledged to give support too. Philippine Foreign Minister Romulo said the ASEAN countries will probably expand [as heard] military aid to the Khmer reactionary groups.

As advertised by the ASEAN countries, the first open, official document to be signed by the Khmer chief leaders is still within the framework of Democratic Kampuchea. In other words, the three-way government is apt to be dominated by the Pol Pot clique. Khieu Samphan would be vice president in charge of foreign affairs. Both Sihanouk and Son Sann, though offered higher posts, would seize no real power at all. As they have to group together under a forced circumstance and still remain suspicious of one another, it is stressed so many times in the document that they share equal power [and] that the coalition is based on keeping intact their own organizations, political status and freedom of action.

What is this kind of coalition? That China and the United States have to cling to these wretched Khmer henchmen to oppose the three Indochinese countries and cause tension in Southeast Asia is not difficult to understand. There is no reason whatsoever for the ASEAN countries to follow suit. Maybe they are being hoodwinked by China and the United States. By lending a hand to the Khmer reactionaries, ASEAN is creating a dangerous precedent for the Chinese gathering of Maoist rebels to carry out sabotage and subversion in Southeast Asia. In fact, the Governments of Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, the Philippines and Indonesia are coping with Maoist rebel groups. Can they guarantee that these rebel groups will not be rallied into this coalition or that government of opposition by China in the future.

Volte-face is the nature of the Beijing authorities. A question is raised: Who behaved better with China than Vietnam previously? Mao Zedong, Zhou Enlai and Deng Xiaoping had many times pledged to preserve their friendship with Vietnam. However, when failing to force Vietnam to follow their strategy, then they sought to oppose Vietnam.

Experience of the past 30 years in Southeast Asia clearly shows that it is very dangerous to fall into China's trap. The situation in Kampuchea is becoming more stable than ever and is irreversible. As a loose coalition, the so-called tripartite government of exile Khmer reactionary groups can in no way turn the revolutionary tide in Kampuchea.

NHAN DAN Article

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 22 -- NHAN DAN today says that the "official document" concerning the formation of a 'coalition government' to be signed in Kuala Lumpur by the three exile Kampuchean factions is only a farce.

In an article titled "A Corpse Is a Corpse" the paper says: "This surprises nobody. The play has been prepared by Beijing and Washington for more than a year, now, and had it not been for wrangles among the cast it could have made its debut earlier. Now that both the U.N. General Assembly and the non-aligned summit are going to meet and more governments are fed up with the presence of the genocidal gang at the United Nations, Beijing and Washington hurriedly pressured their henchmen into a 'coalition government.'

Anyone interested in the situation can see that this is a move by China and the United States to give a new mask to the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan genocidal clique in an attempt to occupying the seat of Kampuchea at the United Nations and other international bodies and to using them for continued interference in Kampuchea's internal affairs.

The description of this 'coalition government' by its authors as 'representative' is truly ridiculous. In the opinion of the world this is merely a monster conceived by Chinese expansionism and U.S. imperialism. It is evident of the expansionists' and imperialists' gross interference to force other peoples to act at their beck and call."

NHAN DAN goes on: "It is regrettable that the A.S.E.A.N. governments are helping to stage this play. They should be aware of the dangerous precedent this would create -- Beijing's manipulation of Maoist groups in their own countries. Beijing do to other Southeast Asian countries what it is doing to Kampuchea today. The A.S.E.A.N. countries should also be aware that they are being used by China to oppose Indochina and to create tension in the whole region so that it may fish in troubled waters.

"Even by rigging up a ghost government the expansionists and imperialists cannot hope to divert public opinion from reality in Kampuchea. For more than three years now under the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea, the Kampuchean people have recorded many achievements in all fields. The Fourth P.R.P.K. Congress and the democratic general elections last year were both a great success. With the rebirth of their country, the people's confidence in the new route and their attachment to it are growing. Facts in the last three years testified to the steady advance of the Kampuchean revolution and the ignominous failure of counterrevolutionary forces."

The paper says: "No perfidy can reverse the situation in Kampuchea. A corpse is a corpse, no matter how it is dolled up. The troika produced by Beijing and Washington will take its passengers to failure. Worse still, the horses will kick one another and upset the carriage. The Kampuchean people will advance steadily along the path they have chosen. This is a great truth which nothing can cover up or distort. The Kampuchean people allow no one to shape their destinies for them, Kampuchea's seat at United Nations and other international organizations belongs to the People's Republic of Kampuchea.

NHAN DAN CRITICIZES REAGAN'S UN ADDRESS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 21 -- NHAN DAN today describes U.S. President Reagan's address to the U.N. special session on disarmament as "absurd arguments of warmongers."

The paper says: "With the U.N. General Assembly in special session, world public opinion is looking forward to contributions by state leaders to easing international tension. Reagan, however, ran counter to this aspiration. His address smacked of crude anticommunism.... What was extremely serious was that the U.S. President took a direct part in pushing up the slander campaign charging the Soviet Union with using chemical weapons against Afghanistan and providing toxins to Vietnam for use in Laos and Kampuchea. He brazenly demanded that UN experts be allowed to make investigation in Afghanistan, Laos and Kampuchea, in a bid to cover up the crimes perpetrated by the U.S. aggressors in the three Indochinese countries, and to justify the U.S. production and stockpiling of mass destruction weapons including chemical and biological weapons."

NHAN DAN condemns Reagan's hypocritical statements that "America has no territorial ambitions" and "we occupy no countries."

It continues: "Pretending not to know who made war in Vietnam in the sixties, Reagan said, "We were never the aggressors, and while Israel was attacking Lebanon with U.S. weapons Reagan had the cheek to tell the U.N. that 'what a better world it would be if the guns were silent.'"

Noting that public opinion in many countries was indignant when Reagan introduced his "agenda for peace," the paper says: "Reagan's proposals were aimed at coaxing public opinion into believing that the United States was also a peace champion. In fact these proposals indicated no change in the Reagan administration's basic stand which evolves around the maintenance and expansion of military bases around the Soviet Union and other countries of the socialist community, a more hectic arms race on land, on the sea and in space, and the continuation of the U.S. counter-revolutionary global strategy."

The paper recalls that Reagan turned a deaf ear to President L.I. Brezhnev's letter to the second special session of the U.N. General Assembly with the Soviet Union's pledge not to be the first to resort to nuclear weapons.

"The Soviet Union's new peace initiative," NHAN DAN says, "reflects a noble desire for peace and a determination to make great, positive contributions to the struggle for disarmament and against the danger of a nuclear war. It is a new, practical step towards easing world tension. As such it the White House and the Pentagon in an awkward position". [sentence as received]

NHAN DAN, noting that the United States failed to make the same pledge as the Soviet Union had done, says: "Reagan's rationale showed that his administration was sticking to deceit and was more committed to war preparations, heedless of protests around the world."

PRISONER EXCHANGE BETWEEN SRV, PRC REPORTED

OW211610 Hanoi VNA in English 1450 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 21 -- According to schedule, at 09.00 hrs this morning, June 21, 1982, at the Huu Nghi gate in Lang Son Province, with the authorisation of the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, the Huu Nghi border post would have returned to the Chinese side 34 Chinese captured while illegally entering Vietnamese territory, so that they may rejoin their families.

It is regrettable, however, that on the way to the place of delivery, two among the 34 aforesaid Chinese who failed to observe the indications provided by Vietnamese guides, stepped on a mine and got wounded.

At the hand-over, the Vietnamese side clearly mentioned this accident to the Chinese side and handed it 32 Chinese. The Vietnamese side is giving medical attention to the two wounded and will return them to the Chinese side at a later date.

Before the Vietnamese authorities, the freed Chinese admitted that they had received indstruction from the Chinese authorities to infiltrate into Vietnamese territory for hostile activities against the Vietnamese people. They admitted their guilt and expressed their gratitude to the Vietnamese Government and people for the humanitarian treatment they had received during their detention and for the lenient policy in their favour.

At the same moment and the same place, the Lang Son branch of the Vietnam Red Cross, with the latter's authorisation, received 12 Vietnamese civilians including ten fishermen who were illegally caught by the Chinese side while they were going about their normal business in Vietnamese territorial waters.

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 19 -- General Van Tien Dung, minister of national defence, has sent his warmest greetings to his Kampuchean counterpart Bou Thang, over the 37st anniversary of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces. His message says: "Thirty one years ago when the Kampuchean people's glorious war of resistance against French colonialism for national salvation was in progress, the first Issarak army units were founded, opening new glorious pages in the history of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces."

After recalling the resounding exploits of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces and people in the fight to liberate the country from U.S. aggression and overthrow the genocidal regime of Pol Pot and Ieng Sary, stooge of Chinese expansionism, the message says: "Over the past three years, under the leadership of the People's Revolutionary Party, the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Army has quickly developed, and, together with the Kampuchean people, it has surmounted many difficulties and trials, made many exploits, thwarted all plots of sabotage by reactionary forces, henchmen of Chinese expansionism and hegemonism working hand in glove with U.S. imperialism, firmly defended their revolutionary gains, rebuilt a new happy life, and actively contributed to the struggle for peace and security in Southeast Asia and the world as a whole."

The message goes on: "As close comrades-in-arms of the Kampuchean people and their revolutionary armed forces through different stages of revolution, the Vietnam People's Army has always sided with its Kampuchean friends in the struggle against the common enemy of the two nations. On this occasion, we would like to express our sincere thanks to the fraternal Kampuchean people and their revolutionary armed forces for their support and assistance to the Vietnamese people in the fight for national liberation in the past as well as in socialist construction and national defence at present. Acting upon the teachings of esteemed President Ho Chi Minh and the Communist Party of Vietnam, the Vietnamese people and their armed forces are determined to do their best to fulfil their internationalist duty toward the Kampuchean people's revolutionary cause."

In conclusion, it wishes for further development of the unbreakable friendship, solidarity and militant alliance between Vietnam and Kampuchea as well as between the three fraternal Indochinese countries.

OW181643 Hanoi VNA in English 1552 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 18 -- A meeting in celebration of the 31st anniversary of the Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces was held today by the political officer's school of the Vietnam People's Army.

Speaking on the occasion, Major General Truong Cong Can, director of the political officers' school, said: "In the 31 years since their founding, the Kampuchean

Revolutionary Armed Forces together with the entire Kampuchean people have gone from one victory to another, defeating the U.S. imperialist aggressors and their henchmen, and finally liberating the country. In his reply, Ambassador Sieng Saran expressed his sincere thanks to the Vietnamese party, government, people, and army for their wholehearted and precious assistance to the Kampuchean revolution. PRK Envoy's Address

["Excerpt" of speech by PRK Ambassador to SRV Sieng Saran on the 31st founding anniversary of Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces -- date not given; recorded in Kampuchean fading into Vietnamese translation]

[Summary] Since its founding, the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Army has always proven itself to be absolutely loyal to its people in their struggle for the just cause. It has always maintained the fine revolutionary tradition of an army which was created by the people and has fought for the sake of the people's happiness, national independence and freedom, and socialism. That army has contributed significantly to the great achievements of the Kampuchean revolution in ending nearly 100 years of French colonialist rule, liberating the country from U.S. neocolonialism, and smashing the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique -- lackey of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists -- on 7 January 1979, thus ushering in a new era of independence and advancing the Kampuchean revolution to socialism.

"The successes of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Army over the past more than 30 years have actually stemmed from the correct leadership of the Khmer People's Revolutionary Party -- now the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party [KPRP] -- and the undaunted fighting tradition of the Kampuchean people, as well as from the close coordination and unity between the armies and peoples of Kampuchea and Vietnam and the militant solidarity and alliance among the armies and peoples of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos. These successes cannot be separated from the close solidarity of various fraternal socialist countries and the support and assistance of the progressive people throughout the world."

The history of more than 30 years of struggle of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Army is also the history of the close solidarity between the peoples of Kampuchea and Vietnam. In the wars of resistance against the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists as well as in the struggle against the Beijing expansionists, the Kampuchean people and armed forces have always fought shoulder to shoulder and united closely with the Vietnamese people and armed forces. The peoples and armed forces of the two countries have helped each other and have fought and won victories together.

"All cadres and combatants of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Army will always keep in mind the many fine images of sacrifice of that militant solidarity. The Kampuchean people and People's Revolutionary Army forces understand profoundly that the militant solidarity and the great and special friendship between the peoples of Kampuchea and Vietnam are most important factors that ensure the success of the struggle for their common interests as well as for cause of national construction and defense of each country.

"The Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Army will never forget the fine and noble gestures, fully imbued with a spirit of proletarian internationalism, of the Vietnamese Army and people who have cooperated closely with them in toppling the blood-thirsty Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique to save the Kampuchean people from the scourge of genocide, and who are now continuing to help our people in their struggle for national defense and reconstruction.

"On this occasion, on behalf of the KPRP and the government, army and people of Kampuchea, I would like to express my profound gratitude to the VCP and the government, army and people of Vietnam for the wholehearted assistance full of fraternal love given to the Kampuchean revolution during the past more than 30 years. I would also like to convey the most cordial regard and heartfelt gratitude of the Kampuchean people to the families of all cadres and male and female combatants of the VPA and other Vietnamese specialists currently performing their international duties in Kampuchea.

NHAN DAN ON IMPROVING PARTY CHAPTER ACTIVITIES

[NHAN DAN 21 June editorial: "Improve Activities of Party Chapters"]

[Text] A chapter is the party's basic organization where leadership is exercised to carry out all the party's lines and policies, where the party is linked with the masses, and where party members are educated, trained, and tested. Whether the chapter is strong or weak and whether its activities are good or bad, correct or erroneous will have a direct impact on the material and spiritual life of the people.

The weighty historic mission that is being carried out by our party in the light of the resolutions of the fifth party congress as well as the complex and difficult nature of the new struggle require that we further enhance the fighting strength of the party as a whole and of every party chapter in particular. Improving the activities of party chapters is one of the important, immediate tasks. The way in which party chapters carry out their activities must be changed to suit their specific functions and duties. Party chapters must not slacken or perform their activities perfunctorily; nor should their activities be considered as those of a mass organization or of a production or administrative unit.

Unanimity of will, ideology and action within the party is the factor that decides the successful implementation of party lines. The activities of party chapters must have a clear-cut, specific and rich political content. All party members have the responsibility to study and engage in discussions with a view to reaching an identity of view with the party's lines and policies, and to set forth tasks and programs for organizing their implementation within their own units. Through party chapter activities and by lively examples, it is necessary to make every party member fully understand the situation of the revolution in our country. They must be clearly aware of the great success recorded in the cause of national construction and defense as well as of the existing socioeconomic difficulties and their causes. They must clearly recognize the pressing requirements of the class struggle, the struggle between the two roads and the struggle against Chinese expansionism and hegemonism, and on this basis, develop for themselves a staunch socialist stand and a steadfast revolutionary spirit in these struggles.

The party must effect a well-defined division of labor to assign specific tasks to each party member and must inspect and review the implementation of tasks. The goal of educational and training activities conducted by party chapters is not to create individuals who attend meetings regularly but do not know how to work efficiently, but to create politically stable party members who possess good ethical qualities and are capable of resolving the actual problems facing the revolution, who are equipped with technical and professional knowledge, and who are proficient in production, management and economic administration -- or in short, who can fulfill their tasks as required within their area of responsibility.

Every party chapter meeting must be an opportunity for making criticisms and self-criticisms to enhance the party members' revolutionary quality, especially their fighting spirit, sense of responsibility, organization and discipline, and observance of a modest and healthy lifestyle. Through regular and strict activities, each party chapter must devise specific measures to ensure that no party member will make unwarranted statements at their own whim or engage in corrupt practices and oppress the people at variance with party lines and policies and in violation of the state law.

It is the primary duty of our party as a whole to infuse in every party chapter a strong fighting spirit with which to implement successfully the resolutions of the fifth party congress. The new struggle, the new tasks of the revolution and the greatly improved capability of the more than 1.7 million strong contingent of our party members call for a change in the way party chapters conduct their activities. In those places where party chapter activities are firmly planned and regularly conducted with specific and practical political and ideological purposes and with full manifestation of the fighting, revolutionary and scientific characters, party lines and policies will be implemented satisfactorily, the party members' exemplary vanguard role will be enhanced, and the relationship between the party and the masses will be further strengthened.

AUSTRALIA

ANZUS MEETING DISCUSSES VISITS BY U.S. SHIPS

Fraser Supports Treaty

[Text] Prime Minister Fraser said today that Australia would obviously want to support the United States by allowing any American naval ship to visit Australian ports. Fraser said that to do so would be to contribute to strategic deterrants and was an aspect of the relevance of the ANZUS treaty.

Referring to the treaty, he said it was the guarantor of the nation's security in any regional problem that Australia could not master. Fraser said the ANZUS had stood the test of time and was profoundly realistic for Australia's strategic situation in the 80's. It had a wide significance as part of a web of alliances and treaty arrangements, which constituted the Western alliance.

There is debate in Australia at present over whether ships powered or armed with nuclear material should be admitted to the country's ports. Hayden had said the Labor government would demand the right to know if nuclear armed vessels were operating in Australian waters. America's policy is to neither confirm nor deny that its warships are carrying nuclear weapons. The debate follows a recent announcement by Victoria's Labor government that it planned to ban all nuclear material from entering the state. However, since then it has indicated its acceptance that the federal government has final jurisdiction in matters of defense.

Victoria Ban Lifted

[Text] The Victorian premier, Mr Cain, has asked his public works minister, Mr (Simpson), to countermand an instruction to four Victorian seaports not to provide berthing facilities for nuclear-powered or nuclear-armed ships. The instruction was sent to the port authorities a week ago.

Mr Cain said the instruction was being reversed in view of the federal government's intention to pass a law to facilitate visits by nuclear vessels to any Australian port. The premier has said his government will push ahead with legislation declaring the state nuclear free, and if the federal government overrides Victoria's policy, it will have to accept full responsibility in the event of a nuclear accident.

Labor Supports Ban

BK191045 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 19 Jan 82

[Text] The Victorian state conference of the Australian Labor Party has unanimously supported the state government's opposition to nuclear powered or nuclear armed ships visiting Victorian ports. The conference pased unopposed a resolution supporting the Labor government's decision to oppose such visits within the limits of its powers.

Victorian Secretary of the ALP Bob Hong said the resolution made it clear that the state party did not intend to contravene federal responsibility for defense and was not declaring its own unilateral defense policy. Victorian Premier Cain claimed that Prime Minister Fraser had used the issue to distract attention from the federal government's shortcomings in economic management and in controlling tax evasion. Fraser has declared that the federal government will legislate to override any Victorian ban on such visits saying it could harm Australia's defense interest.

Labors' Commitment to ANZUS

[Text] Federal opposition leader Hayden has reaffirmed his party's commitment to the ANZUS defense treaty. Hayden said the Australian Labor Party [ALP] accepted the fundamental importance of the ANZUS alliance in Australia's relations as an equal and self-respecting partner with the United States and New Zealand. He said ANZUS remained as relevant and valid today as at any time in the last 30 years.

Hayden said that while being committed to doing nothing which would put the alliance with ANZUS at risk, the ALP was equally committed to developing Australia's own defense capability. He said that to place too much reliance on another nation for Australia's defense would be stupid, self-deluding and dangerous. Too often in the past Australians had been encouraged to think that no matter what happened the Americans would come instantly to the defense of Australia. However, Hayden said this had never been the case and the United States had made this very clear many times over the years.

The opposition leader said Australia should be developing a defense capability which would amount to look after itself in any regional conflict short of nuclear war. Hayden claimed that the present government had persistently scaled down Australia's defense capability.

Nuclear Ships Welcome

[Text] Australia has told the United States that its nuclear-powered and armed warships are welcome in its ports. The government declared it was willing to accept visits by nuclear ships in a communique issued at the end of the ANZUS Council of Ministers meeting in Canberra. The foreign ministers of Australia, New Zealand and the American deputy secretary of state, Walter Stoessel, met in Canberra for a day and a half to review the 31-year-old defense alliance.

The communique declares Australia's and New Zealand's willingness to accept visits by American naval vessels whether conventional or nuclear-powered. The communique says both countries noted and accepted that it is not the policy of the United States to reveal whether or not its vessels are armed with nuclear weapons.

DEBATE ON EAST TIMOR CRITICIZED BY MOKHTAR

[Text] Indonesia's Foreign Minister Dr Mokhtar has again criticized continuing debate in Australia over the future of East Timor. Speaking in Singapore where he is attending a meeting of ASEAN foreign ministers, Dr Mokhtar said the subject of East Timor had nothing to do with Australia. He was commenting on an Australian Senate enquiry into the situation in the former Portuguese colony which was taken over by Indonesia in late 1975.

Radio Australia's Singapore correspondent (Bob Wurth) says Dr Mokhtar was asked for his reaction to recent submissions before the Senate enquiry, including one from the Austrialian Council for Overseas Aid which spoke of continuing human rights violations in East Timor. He answered that it was no concern of Australia as East Timor was part of Indonesia.

MOKHTAR SAYS TALKS WITH SRV 'NECESSARY'

BK211423 Hong Kong AFP in English 1237 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] Jakarta, June 21 (AFP) -- Indonesia Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja today said it would be necessary to hold talks with Vietnam to sound out Hanoi's views on the Cambodian issue. He said the talks would be to "hear directly what Vietnam actually wanted", and stressed there were "no indications yet that Vietnam was willing to seek a political solution to the Cambodian problem".

Speaking to the press, he said "a meeting of minds" would be impossible if the two sides did not talk to each other about the problem, the official new agency ANTARA reported today. Mr. Mokhtar however emphasized that there would be no dialogue between the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) with the Indochinese states (Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos), and described such a dialogue as "premature" since "it should be preceded by bilateral meetings and talks between Vietnam and the respective ASEAN countries individually".

The foreign minister reported this morning to President Suharto on the ASEAN foreign ministers' conference and his trip to the Vatican, four West African countries and New York. He said Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach -- expected to visit Indonesia sometime in October instead of in July -- should also go to Malaysia and Singapore. "The latter in particular has so far adopted the strongest attitude towards Vietnam" he said.

MOKHTAR RETURNS FROM SINGAPORE, VIEWS KAMPUCHEA

[Text] Jakarta, June 19 (AFP) -- The formation of a new coalition of the three anti-Vietnamese Cambodian groups has "an essential place" in finding a solution to the Cambodian problem in accordance with ASEAN views, Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said on returning from Singapore today. Mr. Mokhtar however only stressed the diplomatic importance of the reported breakthrough, thus reflecting the lukewarm reaction prevailing in the Indonesian press about the agreement.

Asked by newsmen about the "chances of the new coalition" Mr. Mokhtar said "It is their concern. We don't need to interfere too much. We only help them form their government." Later questioned about the kind of support ASEAN would give to the coalition, the Indonesian foreign minister said it would be "mostly political." As for material support, he added, it will be "left to each ASEAN and non-ASEAN country." Pressed by newsmen about eventual military support, he said " It is clear we do not wish it. We look for a political solution. Giving arms on a half-hearted basis will not help solve the problem and will give Vietnam a pretext to stay there," he said. He told the press that the formation of the coalition was "very helpful" and that its timing was "very appropriate" in view of the fact that the support of the Khmer Rouge at the United Nations had weakened recently because of the Khmer Rouge regime's bad repuration."

"It was very urgent to improve the image of the Democratic Kampuchea Government." he said.

About the planned visit of Vietnamese foreign minister Nguyen Co Thach in Indonesia, Mr Mokhtar told the press that Mr Thach had expressed the desire to come to Indonesia.

Mr Mokhtar said he was "very satisfied" with this ASEAN foreign ministers meeting in Singapore and the talks with dialogue countries "which showed an expansion of the cooperation between these countries. He explained that the Cambodian problem had not dominated the meeting as in the former years but that stress had been given to economical and cultural cooperation in the ASEAN countries."

Reports on the Cambodian coalition government generally got a low key play in Jakarta newspapers while editorials published before the news of the breakthrough stressed they looked forward to a "positive response from Vietnam."

OFFICIALS REACT TO IBM COMPUTER ARRESTS IN U.S.

OW231055 Tokyo KYODO in English 0630 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo Jun 23 KYODO -- Japanese government officials said Wednesday the arrest of Japanese businessmen in California on charges of conspiring to transport stolen information on IBM computers would not greatly worsen the current bilateral trade strains.

The Japanese companies involved, meanwhile, denied at hastily arranged news conferences they engaged in organized illegal operations in the United States to obtain confidential material on the local computer industry.

The Foreign Ministry and the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) declined comment on the case pending an investigation into details. But a Foreign Ministry official, who declined to be identified, said the case is a question involving private business and will be dealt with accordingly. "I don't think it is directly connected with the strained Japan-U.S. economic relations," he added.

A senior MITI official said the incident is a judicial problem. "I don't believe it appropriate to link it directly to the trade friction."

Japan agreed with the United States and other industrial democracies at their summit in Versailles, France, early this month to cooperate in high technology development. With a working party to be set up soon under the agreement, some officials expressed concern the incident could adversely affect the work. But top MITI officials said Japan will go ahead as scheduled, including closer cooperation with the United States in the high-technology sphere.

Senior officials of Hitachi Ltd., four of whose employees were arrested by the U.S. FBI together with an affiliate employee, said it is the company's established rule to collect information "in a just and fair manner without illegal activities."

Yasukichi Hatano, head of Hitachi's computer division, told a news conference: "If the incident is true, it may be right to suppose that something went wrong in the course of information-gathering activities entrusted to a local consulting company." Investigative activities are conducted by individual experts visiting the United States, not by the company as a whole, he said. But he suggested possible company commitment to the case, saying the dollar 622,000 allegedly paid for confidential IBM information "is such a large sum that they (the employees concerned) must have consulted the parent firm."

The incident came at a time when Japanese computer manufacturers are threatening to erode the advantage of IBM and other U.S. competitors.

Collecting information related to IBM through staff staying in the "silicon valley" in California is of strategic importance to Japanese companies desperate for data which would help permit them to keep up with IBM's latest computers, industry sources said. IBM unveiled last December a new model based on a renewed software design system allowing sharply increased information storage.

Japanese companies, including Hitachi and Mitsubishi Electric Corp. involved in the case, can come up with models interchangeable with the new IBM machine but are lagging in developing software for them, the source said.

Pointing out the start last November of an undercover operation against Hitachi by the FBI generally coincided with the announcement of the new IBM model. The sources said there is no denying the Japanese manufacturers were impatient then for any information available on IBM.

Miyazawa Comments

[Text] Tokyo, Jun 23, KYODO -- Seniro Hitachi and Mitsubishi officials told separate MITI hearings that they could not confirm details of the incident other than the fact that the Japanese businessmen listed by the FBI as conspirators were their employees.

Hideo Ota, executive director of Mitsubishi, was quoted as telling MITI questioners that the company is taking a cautious attitude toward information gathering and that such an incident is "inconceivable."

Katsumi Fujiki, Hitachi executive director, said the company is trying to confirm how the dollar 622,000 allegedly paid to an FBI undercover was channeled, MITI officials said. MITI will decide how to handle the case after receiving reports from the companies on details of the incident, they added.

Mitsubishi later said in a statement the company is "convinced that there is no basis in law or fact" for the U.S. accusations its employees were involved in the alleged conspiracy. The company "has always maintained the highest standards of ethical business conduction in all of its dealings and requires all of its employees to follow the principle," it said.

"We will defend ourselves against such accusations whether they may relate to the company or any of its employees... These accusations appear to have arisen out of a terrible mistake by the U.S. Government authorities," it added.

A Japanese Government spokesman denied suggestions that the U.S. undercover operation was specifically aimed at Japanese business in connection with bilateral economic strains.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa told reporters such operations were previously directed against American congressmen, forcing some to resign. "You may feel that the operation was aimed at Japanese because such a scheme is banned in Japan, but this is not the case," he said.

He acknowledged industrial espionage is becoming a serious problem as competition for high technology grows keen, adding that the United States appears interested in how confidential data is stolen for possible passage to the communist bloc.

SUZUKI PREPARED TO CUT DEFENSE TO BALANCE BUDGET

[Text] Tokyo, Jun 23, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Wednesday he wants to restore the financial health "at any cost," even at the expense of defense spending. Speaking at a House of Representatives Budget Committee meeting, Suzuki said he is still committed to his promise to balance the budget without raising taxes.

Fiscal 1981, which ended in March, produced an estimated yen 3 trillion (dollar 12 billion) deficit because of an unexpectedly sharp decline in tax revenues due to the current business recession.

Suzuki earlier said his government will try to make a national budget free of deficit-covering bonds in fiscal 1984. "I want to achieve financial reconstruction at any cost," Suzuki told the committee meeting. Therefore, Suzuki said, the government will streamline expenditures and try to keep a 1983 budget before the level of the current fiscal year in real terms. Although the government said defense spending will be treated as an exception, Suzuki said he will keep an increase in defense spending "as low as possible."

The overall fiscal 1982 budget increased 6.2 percent, compared with a 7.75 percent hike for defense outlays. Japan has been urged by the United States to raise its defense budget by at least 10 percent.

NODONG SINMUN SCORES U.S. WORLD MILITARY STRATEGY

SK200622 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2309 GMT 19 Jun 82

[NODONG SINMUN 20 June commentary: "Adventuristic Rash Act Aimed at Provoking a New War"]

[Text] Schemes of the U.S. imperialists, who are trying to provoke a new large-scale war and ignite a new war, particularly in Korea, are being further exposed.

In testimony before the military affairs committee of the U.S. House of Representatives, Carlucci, under secretary of the U.S. Defense Department, said the immediate goal of the U.S. strategy against simultaneous occurrences of wars is to develop the ability to carry out three big wars in the Arab Gulf [as heard], Europe and the Far East.

Kelley, chief of staff of the U.S. Marines, also said that of the three big wars, one in the area of the Korean Peninsula is particularly important. This clearly reveals the wicked ambition of the U.S. imperialists who are trying to provoke wars of aggression in Korea and in various parts of the world.

The theory of simultaneous wars, and the theory of three big wars based on the theory of simultaneous wars, which the United States is advocating, are vicious war doctrines which clearly expose the U.S. imperialists' unchanged aggressive nature and their endless ambition for aggression.

The fact that the present U.S. administration has put forward the theory of three big wars is clear evidence that it is carrying out the most warlike policy of all U.S. administrations.

While running wild with an adventuristic military policy so as to find a way out of the serious political and economic crisis facing them, the U.S. imperialists are frantically accelerating preparations for provoking a new world war.

The U.S. imperialists have decided to disburse a huge sum for military expenditures in FY 83 -- a record-breaking one for peacetime -- and they are accelerating improvement of the existing military forces' combat capabilities.

They are continuously reinforcing the U.S. troops stationed overseas and increasing the number of aggressive military bases; they are consolidating aggressive military blocs and fabricating new military blocs.

That the U.S. imperialists are clamoring about development of the ability to conduct three big wars is an adventuristic rash act which shows that they will not hesistate to provoke a world war to dominate, above all, major areas abundant in resources and military points of strategic importance on the basis of such large increases in armaments and war preparations. Such a policy will only aggravate the tense international situation and aggravate the danger of war.

The remarks by the chief of staff of the U.S. Marines, to the effect that the United States attaches a special importance to the Korean Peninsula in carrying out the three big wars mean that the are pointing a spear of aggression at the Korean people.

It is an unchanged aggressive policy for the U.S. imperialists to dominate the whole of Korea by means of force by eternally holding onto South Korea as their colony and military base. This is one of the most important world strategies of the U.S. imperialists. The U.S. imperialists are scheming to make the Korean Peninsula the first test site for their power policy.

Here lies the reason why the U.S. imperialist war maniacs are running wild, while babbling that South Korea is more necessary than ever before to U.S. national interests and why the United States attaches the greatest importance to South Korea -- to prepare for provoking a new war in Korea.

Recently, U.S. Secretary of State Haig said that there are well-equipped puppet army and U.S. forces in South Korea that would be quickly mobilized in case of an emergency.

South Korea is further being turned into a powderkeg of a new war and a base for a nuclear war. The U.S. imperialists are endlessly augmenting the aggression forces in South Korea and the puppet army and continuously introducing modern war means. They have recently decided to hand to South Korea military supplies worth $2 billion in preparation for an emergency.

Several hundred nuclear arms are already stationed in South Korea and the U.S. imperialists are trying to introduce afresh neutron bombs and nuclear missiles to be used in war theaters.

After having worked out war plans, including one for a nuclear war, while babbling about a preemptive strike and about smashing the enemy at the initial stage of war, the U.S. imperialist war maniacs have been waging exercises for an all-out war, like "Team Spirit", almost every day in order to complete the war plans.

All facts show that the U.S. imperialists will provoke, with no hesitation, a brigandish war of aggression against the Korean people at any time. Due to the U.S. imperialists' schemes to provoke a new war, the tense situation on the Korean Peninsula has not been removed and an acute situation, in which a new war may break out at any moment, continues.

It is not by chance that the U.S. imperialists openly call the Korean Peninsula a strained threater of war. If a war should break out in Korea, it would easily spread to other areas and might bring about nuclear ravages.

The U.S. imperialists are the ringleaders of aggression and war who wantonly violate the national sovereignty of the Korean people and war maniacs who threaten the peace of the Korean Peninsula.

The issue of blocking and frustrating the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and war and defending the peace of Korea and of the world is an important one which is related to the destiny of mankind.

Vigorously waging struggles against the U.S. imperialists wherever they try to victimize others under their scheme of aggression is the most important guarantee for safeguarding peace.

The world's peace-loving peoples will never tolerate the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression ans war.

The U.S. imperialists should look squarely at the trend of the times, withdraw their aggression forces from all places, including South Korea, where they try to victimize others under their scheme of aggression, and should not pursue any longer the adventuristic policy of war.

If the U.S. imperialists continue pursuing the reckless policy of war, it will only bring about their own ruin.

DPRK GROUPS MARK 25 JUNE WAR ANNIVERSARY

CPRF Statement

SK200418 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Lorean 2300 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Statement issued 18 June by the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland on eve of "25 June, the day of struggle against U.S. imperialism"]

[Text] After causing harrowing disasters and misfortunes by lighting the flames of an aggressive war in Korea 23 years ago, the U.S. imperialists are still now traversing the road of disgraceful crimes against the Korean people. Continuously occupying half of our fatherland, the U.S. imperialists have forced the South Korean people to suffer the status of colonial slavery and imposed the unbearable hardship of national division on all our fellow countrymen.

The U.S. imperialists are ringleaders who have forced our fellow countrymen to suffer the tragedy of division -- the biggest national tragedy in history -- and are the arch-enemy of the Korean people.

Proceeding from an ardent desire to more vigorously pioneer the road of reunification and national salvation with the 50,000 fellow countrymen on the eve of 25 June, the day of struggle against U.S. imperialism, we sternly expose to the world the U.S. imperialists' wicked crimes of dividing our people and of opposing reunification. The U.S. imperialists are the ringleaders who have divided our fatherland.

The Korean people, who have lived harmoniously for a long time in a single country as a homogeneous people, did not want to be divided. Totally because of the U.S. imperialists' criminal policy of aggression, the Korean people have been divided in our era, suffering an unprecedented national misfortune and tragedy.

The U.S. imperialists sought to divide our country out of the heinous aggressive desire to swallow up half of Korea with the defeat of the Japanese imperialists in the 1940's. Initially, they tried to swallow the whole of Korea. The rascals, who had begun extending the tentacles of aggression more than 100 years ago, covetous of the favorable strategic position of our country, tried to fulfill their long-cherished wild desire for aggression and make Korea an advance base for aggression against the continent, taking advantage of their victory in World War II. Failing to arrive quickly in Korea because of the sudden defeat of the Japanese imperialists and because of the limits of their strength, however, the U.S. imperialists sought to formulate a criminal plan for division out of the piratic desire to occupy half of our country.

On 10 August 1945, the then U.S. President Truman, upon receiving a notice on the unconditional surrender of the Japanese imperialists, quickly called together the chiefs of the departments of state, army and navy and discussed with them the question of occupying Korea and instructed them to work out a detailed plan for a tri-departmental coordinating committee. In accordance with Truman's directives, former U.S. Secretary of State Rusk and former commander of the U.S. forces in South Korea, Bonesteel, who were serving at the Pentagon -- a den of aggression and war -- as staff officers of the U.S. Department of the Army, directly formulated a plan for the occupation of our country. Their aggressive confab on Korea ended with the sinister scheme to bisect our country along the 38th Parallel and grab South Korea. Later, this scheme was issued in the form of General Order No. 1. Thus, the 38th Parallel, the cursed demarcation line which has spelled such enormous calamities and misfortunes to our people, was drawn by the dark hand of U.S. imperialism. The Korean people, who ardently desired the road of independence when they shared the delight of liberation, faced the cursed situation in which the country was divided and in which half of the country was placed under the control of foreign forces.

The illegal, outrageous aggressive act of bisecting our national territory is a piratic act which could only be committed by the Yankee imperialists who have been accustomed to randomly invading and occupying others' territory, regarding the territory as their own if they needed it.

The U.S. imperialists divided our nation, which had shared the same blood and lived as an organic body. This is an indelible crime against our people. The criminal act of dividing our nation was committed more wickedly after they crept into South Korea. Having occupied South Korea by force of arms, the U.S. imperialists totally suppressed and dissolved the people's committees, which had been established at the initiative of the people, by resorting to the violence of a military government, thus blocking the road to a unified democratic government by the Korean people themselves. In addition, they blocked the 38th Parallel with bayonets as if it were a borderline and cut off the means of transportation and communications and the movements of the people between North and South, thus perpetrating the outrage of cutting off the vein of our nation.

Having crept into South Korea with the ostensible purpose of disarming the defeated Japanese Army, the rascals divided the territory and have been occupying half of it. This clearly reveals their nature as vicious aggressors.

Their criminal act of dividing Korea culminated in holding a separate election and faking up a puppet regime in South Korea. The establishment of a unified independent and sovereign state at an early date in the liberated fatherland was what the Korean people unanimously aspired for and what had already been assured internationally. This is why our people strongly opposed the U.S. imperialists' scheme to take advantage of the signboard of the United Nations and fake up a puppet regime in South Korea. In April 1948 they convened a joint meeting in Pyongyang of representatives of 56 political parties and public organizations that existed in North and South Korea. The meeting, reflecting the will of the nation, strongly opposed the U.S. imperialists' farce of holding a separate election and insisted on establishing a unified democratic government.

Violently trampling underfoot the will of the Korean people, the U.S. imperialists faked up a puppet regime by holding a separate election in South Korea in May 1948 at the point of bayonets, thereby fixing the division of our nation.

The rascals babbled that the election was a free election held under UN supervision and that the puppet regime was the sole legitimate government. This was a brazen ruse to conceal the illegitimacy and fictitiousness of the farce of faking up the puppet regime. How can the election -- which was held according to the election law enacted by the U.S. military administration and at the point of bayonets of U.S. troops -- be a free election conducted at the will of the South Korean people, and how can the regime which came into being through the illegal election be a legitimate government?

No matter what sophistry they may come up with, the U.S. imperialists cannot excuse themselves for the condemnable crime of having invented a neocolonial ruling system and fixing the division of our nation by faking up the puppet regime in South Korea.

The U.S. imperialists are the very ones who have not only divided our country but also viciously obstructed reunification.

Since the day their country was divided, the Korean people have struggled for the country's reunification. The days of national division lasting for 37 years are ones linked with the Korean campatriots' burning aspirations for national reunification and their unrelenting struggles for nationalreunification.

Despite our nation's burning aspiration and relentless struggles, the country has failed to be reunited. This is entirely due to the fact that the U.S. imperialist aggressors are stubbornly obstructing Korea's reunification. The U.S. imperialists, who divided Korea and lord it over as colonial rulers in South Korea, have viciously suffocated the South Korean people's movement for national reunification. They have not hesitated to do anything if it is conducive to obstructing our country's reunification.

Each time the movement for national reunification rose to a high water mark in South Korea and a favorable situation was created for national reunification, the U.S. imperialist aggressors kicked up a whirl of fascism to crush them and created violent scenes of soaking this land with our compatriots' blood.

The U.S. imperialists were the real criminals who cooked up a military coup by manipulating the military gangster Pak Chong-hui in the early 1960's and brutally suppressed and destroyed political parties, public organizations and personages of various circles who demanded reunification when the irresistible current of reunification was flowing in South Korea after the 19 April popular uprising.

With regard to this, Allen Dulles, then director of the U.S. CIA, admitted their criminal act against the reunification of Korea by saying: "The most successful of the U.S. CIA activities overseas during my term in office was the military revolution in South Korea. If the United States remained a passive onlooker, the people might have supported the mobs demanding unification of the North and South."

Also, early in the 1970's when the entire land of the country was filled with an ardent desire for reunification of the fatherland as the North-South dialogue was proceeding, the tricky and outrageous wretches instigated the puppets to frame up the so-called Yusin system, a system of North-South confrontation, a system of national division and a fascist system, thereby stifling the growing sentiment for the reunification of the fatherland in South Korea.

From the beginning, the U.S. imperialists had always been the most vicious disturber of North-South dialogue. It was the U.S. imperialists who said they welcomed the dialogue and yet poured cold water on the dialogue and created artificial obstacles by saying that the reunification of the Korean Peninsula should be accomplished by the United Nations. At the same time, it was the U.S. imperialist aggressors who, against the three-point principle of independence, peaceful reunification and great national unity which the North and the South noted in the joint statement, clamored that they would not withdraw the U.S. troops from South Korea and augmented the aggressive forces and went on a rampage in preparing for war.

In particular, at the start of the 1980's when the sentiment for democracy and reunification was rising to a new high in South Korea following the 26 October incident, the U.S. imperialists installed the military dictatorship of Chon Tu-hwan to commit a massacre in Kwangju and ruthlessly quell the South Korean people's movement for reunification.

Because of the fiendish atrocities of the U.S. imperialists -- who said that the Kwangju citizens who clamored for justice on behalf of the country should be brought under control by iron fists, and who moved their huge aggressive forces of the Pacific region to the vicinity of South Korea to threaten and blackmail the people and mobilized tens of thousand of puppet troops who were under their control to commit an indiscriminate massacre by turning Kwangju into a sea of blood -- our nation is still grinding its teeth with indignation and the conscience of the world is continuing to curse.

Because of the U.S. imperialists' atrocious oppression of the reunification movement of the South Korean people, many political parties and public organizations have been buried and many patriots and people died with burning animosity.

Under the guns and swords of the bloody suppression of the U.S. imperialists, Messrs Kim Ku, Yo Un-hyong and Cho Pong-am, who set out on the road of the reunification of the fatherland, and Comrades Kim Chong-tae and Choe Hyong-ku and numerous other patriots were sacrificed ruthlessly. Even today, Kim Tae-chung, many other politicians and democratic personages, youths and students and religious people are suffering in prison and being arrested and imprisoned just because of their demand for reunification of the fatherland.

The outrageous crimes of the U.S. imperialists, who carried on the rule of bestial suppression and atrocious massacres to quash the South Korean people's desire for reunification and stifle the reunification movement, show they are, indeed, fiendish murderers who do not hesitate to extinguish another nation so as to achieve their aggressive ambition.

To oppose the reunification of our country, the U.S. imperialists zealously egged the puppets on to antagonism and confrontation between fellow countrymen. It is a stereotyped method of aggression which the U.S. imperialists have continued to employ throughout history. They play others off against each other and fish in troubled waters.

In our country, too, with a wicked ambition to realize their aggressive plan by playing the Korean people off against each other, the U.S. imperialists, from the first day of their landing in South Korea, have continued to promote friction and distrust and to intensify confrontation among our people.

Every time we put forward fair and realistic reunification proposals for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country, they instigate the puppets to oppose them and let them launch a wholesale propaganda campaign against us.

In particular, under the slogan of anticommunism, the U.S. imperialists have viciously whipped up confrontation between fellow countrymen. Anticommunism is the slogan of antagonism and confrontation which the U.S. imperialists made the South Korean puppets uphold to realize their aggressive ambition. They instigated anticommunist confrontation by saying that they would render unlimited support for all parties and factions and governments which oppose communism. According to this, the past and present South Korean puppets have declared anticommunism as a policy of state and promoted friction and confrontation within the nation by staging all kinds of anticommunist farces.

Under the slogan of anticommunism, the U.S. imperialists are leading the antagonism and confrontation within the nation even to military confrontation. On the pretext of balance of strength between the North and the South, they have continued to introduce up-to-date lethal weapons and operational equipment into South Korea and viciously schemed to instigate the puppets to confrontation.

Even at a time when the 4 July North-South joint statement was announced and the North and South were continuing the dialogue for peaceful reunification, they supported the puppets with dollars and weapons and egged them on to confrontation with us, while raving that the South Korean puppets should be helped to adopt a stand of strength through the modernization of the puppets forces.

What desperate efforts they make for North-South military confrontation is well illustrated by the fact that they gave a fabulous amount of military aid to the tune of more then $12.25 billion to the South Korean puppets over the 1948-81 period and by the fact they have aggravated the situation in our country by war exercises and military provocations more frequently committed recently through the mobilization of the puppets.

Due to such criminal acts of the U.S. imperialists who have fostered division and confrontation among fellow countrymen, upwards of 700,000 young and middle-aged people suffer disgrace in South Korea as a buffer against communism for the United States and nearly 10 million fellow countrymen, men and women, young and old, are falling victim to the U.S. imperialists' policy of war by being bound to civilian military organizations.

Originally, there were neither mutual distrust nor antagonistic relations among the Korean people who maintained homogeneous bloodlines. The tragic state that the sentiment of distrust and confrontation has come to exist within our nation and the North and the South have come to confront each other with their huge armed forces with a military demarcation line between them is the product of the wicked maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists scheming to play the Korean people off against each other.

If it had not been for the U.S. imperialists' aggression and interference in internal affairs, our nation would never have been divided and there would never have been such a miserable situation where the people confront each other at gunpoint. All the internal problems of the nation could have been settled by the concentrated efforts of the people.

The history of the division of the nation clearly shows that as long as the U.S. imperialist aggressors stay in South Korea and as long as their colonial rule continues, the reunification question -- the cherished desire of the nation -- and the internal problems of the nation can never be resolved.

The U.S. imperialists are the sworn enemy of the Korean people and are making a desperate bid to create two Koreas for the permanent division of our country.

The disasters and misfortunes which our nation has suffered because of the nearly 40-year long division of the fatherland are beyond description. Because of the division of the country, it has been unable to achieve a unified development of the country, the people have been forced to live apart and are unaware of the whereabouts of their families and relatives, thus suffering indescribable agonies. The unified nature of the nation, which has a long history, is now withering away.

Should the nation's division, which has already caused unprecedented national tragedies, continue, how many great misfortunes and suffering this will bring!

The U.S. imperialists, however, are carrying out a wicked criminal scheme to create two Koreas with a view to dividing our nation once and for all. At the juncture of a momentous turn when a bright vista was opened for national reunification with the publication of the historic 4 July North-South joint statement, the U.S. imperialists challenged our nation's ardent desire for reunification by seeking two Koreas. In June 1973 they made the puppets publish the so-called 23 June special statement, the core of which was simultaneously entry into the United Nations, an open claim for two Koreas. As to their simultaneous entry into the United Nations, it was a criminal slogan to have two Koreas internationally legalized. To this wicked end, they babbled that legalizing the status of division on the Korean Peninsula is realistic and is an idea acceptable in the international political arena.

The U.S. imperialists have not only maneuvered to realize simultaneous entry into the United Nations and cross recognition on the international stage in a bid to have two Koreas legalized, but also committed the unpardonable crime of building a concrete wall along the middle part of the territory.

Underlying all criminal maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists against Korea's reunification are the U.S. troops in South Korea, the basic obstacle to national reunification. Having deployed tens of thousands of troops in South Korea, the U.S. imperialists are militarily supporting the puppets who are rejected by the nation, driving them to the road of treachery, intimidating the South Korean people and obstructing reunification.

No matter what excuse and sophistory they may come up with, the U.S. imperialists cannot justify an illegal military occupation. No Korean has ever asked for the presence of U.S. troops in South Korea. The South Korea-U.S. mutual defense pact cannot constitute grounds for the U.S. imperialist aggressors' occupation of South Korea.

South Korea is a U.S. colony. The so-called Republic of Korea Government is merely a shield covering up their colonial rule. The pact concluded with a puppet regime -- which cannot represent the South Korean people for it is a neocolonial ruling system invented and maintained by the U.S. imperialists -- is illegal and the military occupation based on it cannot be justified. This is obvious.

The withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces from South Korea is a problem envisaged in the Korean Armistice Agreement and is decided upon in the resolution of the UN General Assembly. Nonetheless, the U.S. imperialists have kept their forces in South Korea for nearly 40 years, refusing to withdraw them and even reinforcing them. This is a brazen aggressive act designed to occupy another's territory for an indefinite period.

The U.S. imperialists describe this arrogant act of aggression as something designed to ensure the suecurity of the Korean Peninsula and to protect someone. This shows the culmination of the brazenness and wickedness of Yankee imperialism. Have the U.S. imperialists -- for whom aggression and plunder is a part of life -- crept into another's territory, several thousand miles away across the ocean, to ensure the security of the Korean Peninsula and protect the South Korean people?

Their insidious intention is clearly revealed in their open claim that South Korea is strategically very important and the defense line for the interests of the United States can be protected only with U.S. ground forces in South Korea. Thus, the real purpose of the U.S. imperialists in talking so much about protection and security is to gratify their wild aggressive desire. Though they may put up different signboards -- ranging from ally to protection to security -- the U.S. imperialists have not changed their goal to hold onto South Korea indefinitely as a colonial military base of their own.

The distressing history of the division of our country which began in the 1940's, consequent upon the brigandish aggressive policy of the U.S. imperialists, has not come to an end in the 1980's. There exists the danger of permanent division.

The U.S. imperialist are, indeed, the Korean people's sworn enemy which has brought the tragic history of distress and disgrace of national division, previously unknown in the history of our nation spanning thousands of years, and the heinous enemy of national reunification which is running amok to obstruct the reunification of our country and create two Koreas.

Carrying the grievances and burning hatred of the Korean people suffering from tragic national division, we once again strongly denounce the condemnable crimes of the U.S. imperialists who have occupied half the fatherland and are viciously maneuvering to perpetuate our nation's division.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors who have taken the road of wicked crimes against the Korean people cannot go unscathed. They have already started to be humiliated by the South Korean people. Anti-U.S. sentiment is growing in South Korea. Angry voices demanding "Yankee, go home!" are louder. The Stars and Stripes that fluttered in the wind is being hauled down to the ground, trampled underfoot and burned.

The flames of anti-U.S. struggle which rose in Kwangju, Pusan, Seoul and elsewhere in South Korea are a manifestation of the South Korean people's protest against the aggressors and an expression of their surging indignation at the unpardonable crimes of the U.S. imperialists who have divided our country and have been obstructing its reunification for nearly 40 years.

To struggle to have the U.S. imperialist aggressors withdraw from the fatherland, fanning the flames of anti-U.S. struggle of national salvation that rose in South Korea, is the noble duty of Korean people in the North and South.

Driving the U.S. imperialists out of South Korea ensures the reunification of the fatherland which the compatriots have been looking forward to and points to the road to independence, sovereignty and democracy which the South Korean people are so ardently longing for.

Korean compatriots at home and abroad who love the nation and desire reunification should wage a more powerful anti-U.S. struggle wherever they are to get the U.S. imperialist aggression forces withdrawn and crush the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and manuevers for interference.

Another obstacle to reunification is the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan, who has become a faithful servant to the U.S. imperialists and a frontman for their colonial rule, is an ugly traitor and atrocious murderer who clamps down on the South Korean people's righteous anti-U.S. struggle of national salvation.

United under the banner of reunification and national salvation, the South Korean people should carry out a bolder struggle to bring down traitor Chon Tu-hwan.

Our nation's noble and patriotic cause against the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and division and for establishment of a new Korea, reunified and independent, is sure to win!

[Statement issued 22 June by 18 DPRK social organizations on anti-U.S. struggle month]

[Text] Each year, designating the period from 25 June, the day when the U.S. imperialists provoked the war of aggression in Korea, till 27 July, the day when the armistice agreement on the Korean war was concluded, as the month of the anti-U.S. struggle to force the U.S. imperialists aggressors to withdraw from South Korea, the world's peace-loving people have expressed their positive support and solidarity for the Korean people's just cause of realizing the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland, denouncing the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and war.

On the occasion of the month of the joint anti-U.S. struggle to force the U.S. imperialist aggressors to withdraw from South Korea, the entire Korean people extend deep thanks to governments, international democratic organizations, progressive political parties and social organizations and the world's peace-loving people for positively supporting their just struggle.

The month of the joint anti-U.S. struggle this year will be observed under circumstances in which the situation in Korea is reaching a higher pitch of strain than ever due to the U.S. imperialists' frenzied maneuvers to provoke a new war.

Thirty-two years have passed since the U.S. imperialists provoked the war of aggression in Korea; 29 years have elapsed since the cease-fire. However, Korean reunification, which all the Korean people and the world's peace-loving people seek, has not been realized and the truce has not been turned into a durable peace. This is totally attributable to the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers to perpetuate national division and provoke a new war.

Since the first days when the U.S. imperialists occupied South Korea, they have sought the aggressive purpose of conquering all of Korea and the whole world by adopting South Korea as their stepping stone and have converted the entire land of South Korea into a powder magazine for war and a military bridgehead.

The U.S. imperialists' frantic maneuvers to provoke a new war in Korea are reaching an extreme, particularly this year. Because of this, a grave situation reminiscent of the time when the U.S. imperialists waged the war of aggression in Korea is being created in our country.

Instead of learning a due lesson from their disgraceful defeat in the Korean war, the U.S. imperialists are running amok, provoking a new war of aggression in Korea.

Babbling that the Korean peninsula is a region vital to U.S. interests, the U.S. Reagan administration has made violent remarks that, to defend the peninsula, it will neither decline to use armed force nor exclude the use of nuclear arms.

By sending countless war bosses to South Korea, the U.S. imperialists have perfected tangible operational tactics to carry war plans into effect by holding South Korea-U.S. annual defense consultative meetings and South Korea-U.S. joint military councils with the puppets.

To further perfect preparations for provoking war, the U.S. imperialists have continuously staged large-scale military exercises. A good example is the Team Spirit '82 war exercise which was staged for 70 days from 13 February by mobilizing up-to-date combat equipment, including nuclear weapons, and large-scale armed forces numbering about 160,000. In terms of its content and nature, this vast war exercise staged by the U.S. imperialists was a test war and a preliminary war against the northern half of the republic.

From the outset of the new year, the U.S. imperialists worked out a new military buildup plan to introduce more forces of aggression into South Korea, and they are pushing ahead with it on a full scale. The U.S. imperialists deployed sophisticated F-16 fighter-bombers and A-10 close support fighters, instituted a strategic air control command, doubled naval forces and added innumerable warships, including frigates and guided missile destroyers, in South Korea. Along with this, the U.S. imperialists armed the U.S. imperialist aggressors occupying South Korea with 155-mm self-propelled howitzers and mobile missiles -- up-to-date lethal weapons -- which have never been provided to any unit stationed abroad. Moreover, they are continuously introducing modern equipment and weaponry, including various kinds of highly efficient artillery, sophisticated tanks and radar equipment into South Korea. In addition, they are scheming to drag neutron bombs and theater nuclear missiles into South Korea and to deploy cruise missiles with the 7th Fleet.

The U.S. imperialists are rallying the South Korean puppets to the road of new war maneuvers and conspiring to make the Japanese reactionaries join a Korean war. They decided to transfer up-to-date Hawk missiles to the South Korean puppets this year. And the U.S. imperialists announced their contingency plan for supplying weapons to South Korean puppets and transferring ammunition worth $2 billion and other war materials to South Korea in an emergency without the approval of the U.S. Congress.

The U.S. imperialists are hastening to form the U.S.-Japanese-South Korea military alliance system and plotting to drag the Japanese Self-Defense Forces into a Korean war under the pretext of studying a continuously triggered military provocation against the DPRK around the Military Demarcation Line, perpetrating espionage acts by more frequently than ever infiltrating the SR-71 high-speed, high-altitude reconnaisance plane deep into the territorial airspace of our republic.

Since the truce, cases of military provocation and of violation of the armistice agreement triggered by the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets, which have been officially protested by our side at the Military Armistice Commission, number no less than about 344,800; from January till May this year, they number about 10,000.

The development of the recent situation shows that the adventurous maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists to wage a new war in Korea are reaching a very grave stage and war may be triggered again in Korea at any moment by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges.

The U.S. imperialists have been engrossed in new war provocation maneuvers, dragging armed forces of aggression on a large scale into South Korea. This is aimed at realizing their wild desire to attack the northern half of the republic, occupying South Korea as their colonial military base forever. Nevertheless, the U.S. imperialists are trying to hide their crimes of aggression by clamoring about the hackneyed threat of southward invasion and the North's superiority in military power. The U.S. imperialists cannot hide their aggressive nature with any slanderous propaganda.

It is too clear that if a war breaks out in Korea again it will develop into a worldwide nuclear war and, accordingly, mankind will suffer the innumerable, terrible ravages of war.

We sternly condemn the schemes by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges for provoking a new war, recognizing them as a challenge to the entire Korean people and to the peace-loving people of the world who desire peace in Korea and its peaceful reunification and as a threat to peace in Asia and the world.

All facts clearly show that the U.S. imperialists occupying South Korea and accelerating a new war are the very ringleaders heightening tension in Korea, hindering peace in Korea and its peaceful reunification and forcing the tragedy of national division upon the Korean people over 37 long years.

To remove the danger of a new war in Korea and to achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country, the United Nations Command in South Korea should be dismantled and all foreign troops stationed under the UN flag should be withdrawn from South Korea as demanded by the resolution adopted at the 30th UN General Assembly. As long as the U.S. imperialist aggression forces stay in South Korea, the danger of war in Korea cannot be eliminated and the country cannot be reunified independently.

The attitude of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces occupying South Korea will be the touchstone determining the future of the reunification of Korea.

Seven years have already passed since the 30th UN General Assembly adopted a resolution calling for the withdrawal of all foreign troops from South Korea and the replacement of the present armistice agreement with a peace agreement. This resolution adopted by the 30th UN General Assembly was a just one reflecting the demands of the era of independence and the unanimous desire of the entire Korean people and the peace-loving people of the world. Nevertheless, far from implementing this just resolution, the U.S. imperialists are trying to justify their occupation of South Korea and are running wild to trigger a new war behind the scenes, while clamoring as if their presence in South Korea were contributing to peace on the Korean Peninsula.

That the U.S. imperialist aggression forces have tried to justify their occupation of South Korea, while still calling themselves UN forces today when a quarter of a century has already passed since the armistice agreement was signed, is indeed unpardonable and anachronistic. It is already known that the so-called UN forces in South Korea are just nominal and that they are U.S. forces wearing the hats of the UN forces.

The United Nations should block the U.S. imperialists' schemes to justify their aggression forces' occupation of South Korea under unwarranted pretexts and should take practical measures for making the U.S. imperialist aggression forces withdraw from South Korea.

No matter what reasons and pretexts they may use, the U.S. imperialists cannot justify their occupation of South Korea. The U.S. imperialists should take off the hat of the UN forces and withdraw from South Korea at the earliest possible date, taking along all of their aggression weapons, including nuclear weapons, as demanded by the resolution of the 30th UN General Assembly. At the same time, the Korean Armistice Agreement should be replaced with a peace agreement.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan should stop the treasonous act of begging for the permanent occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialist forces and of indiscreetly running wild to trigger a new war, keeping in step with the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and war.

Once the U.S. forces are withdrawn from South Korea, the Korean people can solve the question of national reunification independently and peacefuly.

The DPRK has constantly made all possible sincere efforts to eliminate the danger of war in Korea, to guarantee a durable peace there, to end the tragedy of national division and to achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country at the earliest possible date. The most reasonable and realistic way to achieve national reunification independently and peacefully is to reunify the country by founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo on the condition that the North and the South recognize and tolerate their existing ideas and systems.

The Korean people's struggle to drive the U.S. imperialist aggression forces out of South Korea and to reunify the fatherland by founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo has enjoyed absolute support from the peace-loving people of the world.

The entire Korean people will more vigorously struggle, firmly rallying around the great national united front under the banner of national reunification, and surely achieve the historic cause of national reunification by making the U.S. imperialist aggression forces withdraw from South Korea and realizing the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo.

The Korean people's struggle for making the U.S. imperialist aggression forces withdraw from South Korea and for achieving the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland is linked with the sacred struggle of the peoples of the world for opposing imperialism and colonialism and for achieving peace, national independence and social progress. This is also one of important problems closely related to our peace and stability.

We express our firm conviction that in this anti-U.S. joint struggle month from 25 June through 27 July the governments of all countries, international democratic organizations, political parties and public organizations of all countries and the peace-loving people of the world will express more active support and solidarity of the Korean people's sacred struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country by resolutely condemning the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their schemes for a new war through various forms and methods and by waging a broad anti-U.S. joint struggle in the international arena to make the U.S. imperialist aggression forces withdraw from South Korea.

DKP, KNP LEADERS DEMAND IMMEDIATE CABINET SHAKEUP

[Text] The floor leaders of three major political parties met at the National Assembly yesterday to discuss ways of realizing the contents of the recent "political summit."

Yi Chong-chang, floor leader of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), said his opposition counterparts called for "swift measures" to heal the trauma of the recent curb loan scandal as agreed at the political summit. Yi said he will relay the opposition demand to his party and the government.

Im Chong-ki, floor leader of the opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP), said the contents of the political summit should be translated into reality to settle "perturbed popular sentiments" and save the difficult situation facing the nation.

Im and Yi Tong-ching, floor leader of the opposition Korea National Party (KNP), demanded the immediate replacement of Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun, Deputy Prime Minister-Minister of Economic Planning Kim Chun-song, Minister of Finance Na Ung-Pea, Minister of Justice Chong Chi-kun and Ministers of Education Yi Kyu-Ho.

The DKP floor leader also said he is ready to meet his DJP counterpart as often as possible to achieve what he called political revitalization. The floor leaders agreed in the meantime to postpone the agriculture-fisheries committee session slated for today until late this week or early next week. The postponement is designed to enable committee members to make inspection tours of drought-hit areas in the country, the DJP floor leader said.

DKP TO SET UP PANELS ON LOAN SCANDAL, ELECTIONS

[Text] The Democratic Korea Party (DKP) decided yesterday in principle to establish two different special committees, which will be empowered to probe the real picture of the recent massive loan-bill scandal and to deal with the revision of election laws, respectively. The decision to do so was endorsed in the party's Executive Council meeting. At the same time, the council members strongly called upon party President Rep. Yu Chi-Song to take the initiative in realizing what was handled during the talks between President Chon Tu-hwan and party leaders at Chongwadae.

The council meeting entrusted Yu to deal with affairs concerning the establishment of the two DKP ad hoc panels. DKP spokesman Rep. Kim Chin-pae indicated, however, that the projected probe committee might be formed with lawmakers from the Korea National Party (KNP), and a parliamentary fraternal group of splinter party members and independents as its members, if the two concurred with the idea.

Referring to the necessity of setting up a select panel to deliberate the election system, he said that his party considered amending election laws, including the presidential election law as prerequisite to the so-called peaceful transfer of power.

MINISTER YI CHIN-HUI HITS PRESS 'ATTITUDE'

SK221032 Soul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 21 Jun 82 p 4

[Speech by Yi Chin-Hui, ROK culture, public information minister at opening session of mass communications seminar sponsored by the Korean Newspaper Editors' Association held in Kyongju on 19 June]

[Excerpts] Dear responsible personnel from editorial and information fields:

I am very pleased to have this opportunity of expressing my opinion about the current questions regarding the press.

We are very sorry to find that some sectors of our press blindly believe in the classic press role of negation and resistance and try to act in accordance with this belief.

It is difficult to deny that some of the local press maintain a subjective attitude in news coverage and editorials, which may damage the people's trust in the government and drive the government to a crisis. Such an attitude is extremely dangerous in light of national security. We cannot but call the press irresponsible and even blind of the fact that it has paid no heed to the horrible national misfortune which can be caused by such an attitude.

It has been less than a year since we launched the Fifth Republic after settling the period of confusion caused by the 26 October incident.

We are assigned important tasks to achieve a modern national state in the 1980's by overcoming the economic crisis which has prevailed since the late 1970's. In the event that another chaos is caused and the constitutional government is discontinued, it is as clear as day how terrible the national crisis would be.

I believe that our primary task is to stabilize the current government of the Fifth Republic. This is for the benefit of the nation, not just for the present regime.

The government and all the people should not neglect the cause of the crisis at any rate. I believe that the press also agrees with this.

Never before has there been such an urgency as today when the national unity, the stability of the government and our resolution to overcome the difficulties of the transitional period are required. I ask the press to sagaciously act by assuming such a demand of the times as its own mission.

Thank you.

BROADCASTING CENTER PLANNED FOR OLYMPICS

SK221020 Seoul YONHAP in English 0745 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, June 22 (YONHAP) -- The Korean Government plans to build a large state-of-the-art broadcasting center with international capabilities as part of its preparations for the 1988 summer Olympic games in Seoul.

An official at the state-run Korea Telecommunication Authority (KTA) said Tuesday that the projected center will control the country's existing broadcasting networks during the Olympic games.

Equipped with closed circuit and multiple sound TV facilities, the broadcasting center will be able to provide worldwide media organizations covering the games with the best possible services, including film editingand production and direct transmission to their home countries.

The closed circuit TV system, linking wired service lines between a control room and 43 sites throughout Korea, will make it possible to monitor other sports events while simultaneously viewing live competiion. The multiple sound TV system will enable spectators from different countries to watch televised sports events in languages they understand, the official explained.

The KTA has started a basic feasibility study of the plan by securing expanded channels, seeking changes in frequencies and purchasing modern telecasting facilities. Test operations are expected to begin next year. The official said the government is considering two plans for financing the center. One plan calls for constructing the center with private funds and placing it under private ownership after the Olympic games are completed. Under the second plan, the center would be paid for with government money and managed by a public broadcasting organization when the Olympiad is over.

The broadcasting center will be equipped with editing and production rooms, video tape recording rooms, coordination rooms and studios. It will telecast every sports event to the world through a telecommunication satellite.

The most likely location of the center will be Chamsil Sports Complex or Yoido Island, both in Seoul, the official said.

LONG-TERM STEPS URGED TO BOOST ECONOMY

[Text] The Federation of Korean Industries (FKI) says that a series of economy-invigorative measures such as reduction of interest rates carried out by the government recently were only temporary remedies and could not strengthen the business structure fundamentally.

In a private economic white paper released yesterday, the FKI said that the government should map out long-term measures to stimulate the national economy and to redress the distorted domestic economic structure to achieve a successful second economic takeoff.

The weakening business structures of domestic enterprises were mainly attributable to accumulated ill effects created by the government-led economic policy during the past years, the white paper pointed out.

The FKI said that the government should concert all its efforts to strengthen the competitiveness of enterprises through expanding exports improving profitability and developing new technology.

The government should expand effective investment, maintain a 10 percent commodity price increase rate and invigorate the market economy, the FKI added.

Emphasizing the need to remove the imbalance among business, the FKI remarked that the government should increase demand on the domestic market and establish a privately-led economic system which could maximize economic effectiveness to improve the distorted economic structure.

The white paper urged the government to reduce the deficit in the international balance of payments through positively bringing up domestic industries which could produce items that Korea had imported.

NEGOTIATIONS REDUCE CRUDE OIL RESERVES

SK230742 Seoul YONHAP in English 0733 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, June 23 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's crude oil glut will dry up shortly because Korean oil importers have cut their combined import volume from 616,000 barrels per day on a contract basis to 500,000 barrels, an Energy-Resources Ministry official said Wednesday.

The reductions came after months of negotiations between the country's five oil refining companies and Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Indonesia, Ecuador and the United Arab Emirates.

As the five companies' daily refining production declined to 400,000 barrels, a little more than half their capacity of 790,000 barrels, they opened negotiations with oil-producing countries in March to reduce their oil imports.

The official said that even though the new import levels are higher than the current refining production, the surplus will be fully consumed because oil demand rises considerably in the winter season and crude oil shipment dates can be readjusted at any time. Korea imports crude oil from 12 countries.

ROK SEEKS BREAK IN JAPANESE LOAN TALKS DEADLOCK

SK220339 Seoul YONHAP in English 0325 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, Jun 22 (YONHAP) -- Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok met with Japanese Ambassador to Korea, Toshikazu Maeda, Tuesday in Seoul apparently to discuss Seoul's request for six billion U.S. dollars in Japanese Government loans.

Details of their half-hour meeting were not announced, but sources at the Foreign Ministry said the Yi explained Seoul's new position to break the deadlock in the issue.

"The Korean side offered a new proposal to settle the issue, including an increase in Japan's official development assistance fund in the loan proposals," according to the sources.

The sources said that the Korean Government has been "working on more positive and flexible measures for the solution of the issue since Yi took over as foreign minister."

The Japanese Government sent Gensuke Yanagiya, deputy minister for foreign affairs, to Seoul in late April to offer a counter proposal to Korea's six billion dollar request.

Yanagiya offered a total of four billion dollars -- 1.5 billion in low interest ODA loans and the remainder in loans from the Japanese Export-Import Bank.

Negotiations have been at a standstill since the eruption of Korea's curb loan scandal in May.

7 COMMUNIST COUNTRIES GRANTED 'BENEFICIAL DUTIES'

SK230740 Seoul YONHAP in English 0726 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, Jun 23 (YONHAP) -- The government will grant beneficial duties on commodities from seven communist and 11 other countries effective Wednesday (June 23) in line with its diplomatic policy to keep its doors open to all countries on the globe.

"Beneficial duties" refer to the duty rates which are unilaterally lowered for countries other than the members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and the countries eligible for the "most-favored nation" treatment.

The Finance Ministry announced Wednesday that it has decided to levy less tariffs and lower basic duty rates on merchandise from those countries, including Mainland China and the Soviet Union.

The other countries which will be affected under the new measures are East Germany, Bulgaria, Albania, Mongolia, Vietnam, Syria, Yemen, Somalia, Iraq, Djibouti, Butan, Guinea, Comoros, West Samoa, Nauru, and Vanuatu. Until now, Korea has granted favorable duties to 26 countries, including Saudi Arabia and Libya.

Wednesday's additions brought up the number of the nations eligible for the beneficial duties to 44, covering 214 commodities.

A ministry official said the government's action is designed to show its willingness to expand trade with all communist bloc countries.

PRC MAP CLAIMS TERRITORY ON MT. PAEKTU

[Text] A map covering Mt. Paektu published by the Management Bureau of Environment Preservation of Mt. Changbaishan in Jilin Province of Communist China, in which the northern half of the crater lake of Mt. Paektu is indicated as Communist Chinese territory, was recently released to academic circles.

This fact, which strongly indicates that the North Korean puppets have lost a considerable part of the crater lake, is shocking news. This shocking fact was released in a treatise by Mr. Yang Tae-chin, researcher at the Research Institute on North Korean Affairs, under the tile "A study on the Sino-Soviet Border Dispute" published early this month as a booklet issued by the Research Institute on Unification of Yongnam University.

In the treatise, Mr. Yang Tae-chin introduces a map covering Mt. Paektu and the contents of a booklet titled "Environmental Preservation" published in Communist China in May 1975.

According to the treatise, the booklet covers the internal matters of Communist China and its release to foreign countries is prohibited.

In a map in the booklet, the border marker is clearly drawn in the middle of the crater lake.

CHOSON ILBO CRITICAL OF U.S. EMBASSY VISA PROCEDURES

SK230830 Seoul CHOSON ILBO in Korean 23 Jun 82 p 11

[Excerpts] It takes only a dozen hours to cross the Pacific. It takes only 2 to 3 days to get a passport from the government once all necessary documents are ready. However, it is not easy to get a visa for a trip to the United States.

The reason is not because of the strict and complicated procedures for examining the application for a visa at the American Embassy but because of the acceptance of limited numbers of applications for visas due to what the American Embassy says is a "shortage of manpower" to deal with visa applications:

From 0400, before dawn, a long line of people forms in front of the gate of the Consular Section of the American Embassy located in Susong-dong, Chongro-ku, Seoul. These are people who wait to apply for a visa for their trip to the United States. They stay up all night on the street in front of the gate to submit their applications for a visa to the Consular Section, which opens at 0830.

The line of people normally begins to form in the early evening. Around 2200, people start to gather in front of the gate of the consular section and the number of people increases normally to 20 to 25 by at midnight. Around 0400, taxis descend upon the gate, and the people who stayed for a brief sleep at nearby hotels or inns start to gather in front of the section. Thus, the gate of the consular section is crowded with a long line of 70 to 80 people.

However, approximately 20 to 30 out of these 70 to 80 people fail to submit their applications for a visa, and many people who come to the consular section in the morning also fail to submit their applications for a visa.

This is the first gateway which those people who want to make a trip to the United States have to confront. It is a desolate scene. Of course, the American Embassy has a difficult situation of its own. That is to say, it has a shortage of manpower to deal with the overflowing applications.

In April and October 1981, our Foreign Ministry revised the law on passports. As a result, the number of applications for passports has grown rapidly and at the same time the number of applications for visas at the American Embassy has doubled.

Believing that the number of those who entered the United States with tourist visas and who have stayed there illegally is on the increase, the American Embassy has decided to screen the visa applications more strictly. Due to NEWSWEEK's recent report on illegal issuance of visas at the American Embassy in Seoul and the recent moves by the U.S. government to alter the immigration policy, the examination of visa applications at the American Embassy has intensified.

Aside from the situation at the American Embassy, the present procedures for receiving the visa applications at the American Embassy cannot be regarded as reasonable for those people who have to stay up all night on the street to submit their applications.

Some people say that they feel insulted, disgraced and humiliated to stand in line and stay up all night. Many people wonder why the U.S. Government, which is known as a reasonable one, has not taken any measures to rectify such a situation.

In connection with the difficulties in getting a visa from the American Embassy, some people express discontent with our Ministry of Foreign Affairs, while urging it to engage in diplomatic negotiations.

To this, the Foreign Ministry authorities say: "The ministry has requested several times that the American Embassy establish a more rapid visa issuance system to meet the increasing numbers of passports at the ministry. The ministry expects the situation at the American Embassy to improve."

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS ALLOWED TO ISSUE PASSPORTS

SK230203 Seoul YONHAP in English 0152 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, June 23 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean cabinet Tuesday authorized six provincial governments to issue passports beginning Jun. 1, 1983.

For Seoul city, Inchon city and Kyonggi Province, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs will continue to issue passports until those provincial governments issue their own passports beginning Jan. 1, 1984.

UNEN CARRIES PELJEE ARTICLE ON CEMA COOPERATION

OW120137 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1714 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, June 7 (MONTSAME) -- Mongolia's active participants in the work of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (CMEA) has become an important factor of accelerating the rates of the socialist construction on the Mongolian soil, M. Peljee, deputy chairman of the MPR Council of Ministers, MPR permanent representative to the CMEA, writes in the Mongolian daily UNEN in an article dedicated to the 20th anniversary since the MPR has become a CMEA member.

Today there is not a branch in Mongolia's economy in which the fruits of co-operation of fraternal countries would not be felt, M. Peljee stresses.

The Soviet Union, Bulgaria, Hungary and the German Democratic Republic render significant assistance in promoting a steady growth in agricultural production, in strengthening its material and technical basis. In these 20 years large fodder enterprises, mechanized dairy farms, bloodstock farms, land-reclamation systems and virgin land state farms have been built with their help.

In the last 20 years more than 160 enterprises have been built and many of operating ones have been reconstructed and expanded with the help of fraternal countries. As a result, the fuel-power and mining industries, the industry of construction and construction materials are being developed at accelerated rates.

In the 20 years past the country's gross national product has trebled and the national income has risen 3.5 times.

further deepening of the co-operation with the socialist countries, M. Peljee stresses in conclusion, is of decisive significance in implementing the party tasks of building the material-technical basis of socialism in the MPR and turning the country into an industrial-agrarian state.

SIHANOUK APPEALS FOR ARMS TO FREE KAMPUCHEA

BK221206 Hong Kong AFP in English 1132 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, 22 Jun (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of the newly-formed coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea, today appealed to all peace-loving countries for arms to help liberate Cambodia from Vietnamese occupation troops.

He said Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua had personally assured him of more military aid once the coalition government was set up. "I do not talk of war, but all peace-loving countries should give us arms to free our country," he added.

The 60-year-old prince was speaking at a joint press conference, following the signing of the coalition accord, with Khieu Samphan and Son Sann, leaders of the other two factions in the coalition.

Prince Sihanouk said there are about 5,000 of his men inside Cambodia, of whom 3,000 were armed and equipped by the Chinese. "I can expect more military aid from China, but that won't do. The United States and other countries also should give us arms besides humanitarian aid," he said.

Prince Sihanouk stressed that the coalition leaders would rely on increased guerrilla activity, political and economic pressure to bring about a withdrawal of the estimated 180,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

He said Vietnam, which was trying to "colonise" the country, gave them no other choice. As patriots, they had formed the coalition and "our struggle is a question of life and death of the Cambodian people."

He denounced the Vietnamese, with whom he had cooperated at one time, as "most ungrateful and very immoral."

He recalled his futile efforts in recent years to solve the Cambodian problem, but Hanoi rejected all his approaches.

Prince Sihanouk said he wrote three letters to Vietnamese Prime Minister Pham Van Dong. The third one was returned to him, unopened.

VODK REPORTS KHIEU SAMPHAN STATEMENT ON COALITION

BK221316 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Statement issued 22 June by Khieu Samphan on formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea -- read by announcer]

[Text] Esteemed and beloved compatriots; dear comrades-in-arms, cadres and combatants in all localities, ministries, departments and battlefields:

As all compatriots and comrades-in-arms are well aware, since 1979 the Vietnamese aggressors and exterminators of our Kampuchean race have sowed untold destruction and great misery on our nation and people. Due, however, to the struggle waged by all the beloved compatriots and comrades-in-arms under the leadership of our Democratic Kampuchean Government -- which dares to make all kinds of sacrifices for the survival of our Kampuchean nation, people and race -- the situation we faced in 1979, which was very difficult, has improved gradually to the point of becoming favorable, as now the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors and race exterminators are facing a total and complete impasse. Strategically, they will lose in the end.

Following the efforts made by our Democratic Kampuchean side in the past more than 3 years in order to mobilize our people and national forces to fight and drive out the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors and race exterminators, the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea [CGDK] has now been formed.

That is, the joint declaration on the formation of CGDK was signed by our Democratic Kampuchean side. Samdech Norodom Sihanouk's side and His Excellency Son Sann's side in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, on 22 June 1982.

This is the great desire of our PDFGNUK, our Democratic Kampuchean Government, our people and our comrades-in-arms who want to see and have our entire Kampuchean nation and people unite in order to increase the forces for fighting and driving all the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors and race exterminators out of our beloved Kampuchean fatherland.

For this reason, our Democratic Kampuchean side will strive to implement this declaration on the formation of this Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea giving this declaration a concrete form in order to increase the forces for fighting and driving out the Vietnamese Le Duan enemy and liberating our Kampuchean nation, people and fatherland.

As for Democratic Kampuchea, we will still preserve our organization and continue to hold aloft the banner of struggle to fight against the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors and race exterminators with a firm spirit of patriotism and zeal. We will continue to fulfill our tasks in all localities, ministries, departments and battlefields, both in the front and in the rear, as we have done for the past more than 3 years and as we are currently doing.

On behalf of the Democratic Kampuchean government, I pay homage to the souls of our compatriots and comrades-in-arms who have sacrificed their lives on all battlefields for the survival of our nation, fatherland and race. The lofty heroism and outstanding feats of those compatriots and comrades who have sacrificed their lives will always remain in the history of Kampuchea and in our hearts as a model and an encouragement for all of us to fight more vigorously against the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors until all of them are driven out of Kampuchea.

On the same occasion, I wholeheartedly praise all the compatriots and comrades-in-arms who have struggled and are struggling valiantly and fulfilling tasks on each battlefield, launching all forms of struggle against the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors and winning victories every day, with firm confidence in the final and permanent victory over the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors.

COALITION LEADERS LEAVE KUALA LUMPUR

Sihanouk Leaves for Penang

BK230435 Hong Kong AFP in English 0421 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 23 (AFP) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of Cambodia's new anti-Vietnamese coalition government, left here today for the resort island of Penang, northwestern Malaysia, to visit former Malaysian Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman.

Prince Sihanouk, who yesterday signed an historic coalition government pact with Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan and nationalist chief Son Sann, will spend two days in Penang at the invitation of the tunku whom he described as a "very close friend."

The two men first met in the 1960's when Prince Sihanouk was head of state and the tunku prime minister.

After his stay in Penang, Prince Sihanouk said he would head for Bangkok before returning to his homeland which he has not seen since his hasty departure from Phnom Penh "in a Chinese plane" as Vietnamese troops marched into the Cambodian capital.

He said the commander-in-chief of his own faction, In Tam, had already prepared "a small headquarters" in the Cambodian zone controlled by his 5,000 armed men.

Mr In Tam said yesterday he expected Prince Sihanouk, Khieu Samphan, vice-president in charge of foreign affairs in the new Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, and Son Sann, the premier, to formally announce the establishment of the new government "somewhere on Cambodian soil" around July 1.

Sihanouk Travel Plans

BK230631 Hong Kong AFP in English 0609 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Kuala Lumpur, 23 Jun (AFP) -- Mr. In Tam told AFP that Prince Sihanouk would not, contrary to what he had earlier said, fly directly to Bangkok after his stay in Penang.

Mr. In Tam, commander-in-chief of forces loyal to the prince, said the new president would leave Penang on Friday for Beijing, possibly via Hong Kong. "There are some Cambodians in Hong Kong who want him to stay there for a while. I don't know if he will agree," he added.

Mr. In Tam said security and protocol had to be finalized before Prince Sihanouk could travel to Thailand, a country which he last visited over 30 years ago.

Mr. In Tam, a premier in the Lon Nol government which toppled Prince Sihanouk with U.S. backing, said the new president would first go to Beijing and may fly back to Pyongyang, his exile home, to brief North Korean President Kim Il-song on the just-ended Cambodian resistance summit here.

Mr. In Tam was leaving here later today for Bangkok.

SUPREME COMMAND ISSUES STATEMENT ON DUTY OF ARMY

BK221418 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 1200 GMT 22 Jun 82

["Statement of the Supreme Command of the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas on the Deputy of the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and Guerrillas To Unite With All of the Kampuchean People in Continuing To Attack the Vietnamese Le Duan Genocidal Aggressors Until Final Victory" -- dated 22 June; read by announcer]

[Text] Dear comrades-in-arms, respected and beloved compatriots:

For the past four dry seasons and nearly four rainy seasons, our comrades-in-arms of the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas -- closely united with the Kampuchean people throughout the country -- have fought most valiantly and overcome all kinds of difficulty under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government headed by His Excellency Khieu Samphan in the struggle against the extremely insolent and savage Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors.

Dear comrades and compatriots, from first-hand experience you know how endlessly painful, harrowing and heart-rending the devastation and ruination have been that the Vietnamese aggressors and exterminators of our Kampuchean race have wreaked on our Kampuchean nation and people since 1979. Thanks to the struggle of all comrades-in-arms and beloved compatriots -- daring to make all kinds of sacrifices for the survival of the Kampuchean race, nation and people -- the extremely desperate situation in 1979, however, has developed gradually to the point that it is excellent at present. In fact, on the battlefields throughout Kampuchea since the end of the 1980-81 dry season, the Vietnamese enemy Le Duan genocidal aggressors have found themselves in a complete and total impasse. Strategically speaking, the Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors are in a position of defeat.

This is a wonderful achievement made possible thanks to the high sense of heroism and patriotism of all of our comrades-in-arms in the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas, both at the front and in the rear, and of all of our Kampuchean people.

Therefore, on this occasion, the Supreme Command of the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas would like to pay tribute to the glorious memory of our comrades-in-arms and compatriots who sacrificed their lives for the survival and perpetuation of the Kampuchean nation, people and race.

The feats of arms of these comrades-in-arms and compatriots are inscribed forever in the history of Kampuchea, remain always in the hearts of those of our comrades-in-arms and compatriots who are fighting against the Vietnamese enemy Le Duan genocidal aggressors and will always be the model and encouragement for all of us to continue upholding the banner of struggle against the Le Duan Vietnamese genocidal aggressors until they are driven out of Kampuchea to the last man, until our country and people are liberated once and for all and until our Kampuchean race is saved forever.

Wholehearted respect and praise is due to all beloved combatants of the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas, both at the front and in the rear, and to all esteemed and beloved compatriots who have fought and are fighting valiantly to fulfill their duty on their respective battlefields, attacking the Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors in all forms, surmounting all kinds of difficulties and advancing toward seizing daily victories with firm confidence in the final and permanent victory over the Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors!

Under the current circumstances, a coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea has been established. Our Patriotic and Democratic Front of the Great National Union of Kampuchea [PDFGNUK] and our Democratic Kampuchean Government have had a political program and have conducted activities to rally the national forces and Kampuchean people from all social strata in order to increase forces every day, every month and every year to fight against the Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors.

It was because of this political program of the PDFGNUK and the policy of the Democratic Kampuchean Government that during the past more than 3 years we have been able to achieve the union of the national and people's forces throughout Kampuchea and to score one victory after another, turning the extremely desperate situation into an excellent situation at present.

At the same time, because of the efforts and perseverance of our Democratic Kampuchean Government in overcoming difficulties and endeavoring repeatedly to make contact with the party of Samdech Norodom Sihanouk and the party of His Excellency Son Sann since 1979, there is now a positive result. This is, the party of Democratic Kampuchea of His Excellency Khieu Samphan and the party of Samdech Norodom Sihanouk and the party of His Excellency Son Sann have agreed to unite with the aim of increasing the Kampuchean national forces to drive all of the Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors out of Kampuchea as explained in the joint declaration on the formation of the coalition government which was signed in Kuala Lumpur on 22 June 1982.

Our Democratic Kampuchean party -- always upholding our glorious traditional spirit of patriotism and adhering to the political program of the great union to mobilize all national forces and Kampuchean people to drive out all Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors from Kampuchea -- will resolutely abide by this declaration on the formation of the Democratic Kampuchean coalition government both in essence and in concrete action.

Our Democratic Kampuchean party considers the essence of the declaration on the formation of the Democratic Kampuchean coalition government as a sacred law and charter binding our Great National Union of Kampuchea in order to increase the forces to fight against the Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors in all forms until they are completely driven out of Kampuchea.

As for all of us in the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas, we continue to retain our organization, to maintain our traditions of valiant struggle forever and to keep and carry on our combat activities against the Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors even more vigorously through our guerrilla warfare and people's war lines. Also, we will continue to spare no efforts in holding aloft the combat banner to fight against the Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors even more effectively during the present rainy season, in the coming dry season and in the seasons to come by displaying a lively sense of independence, mastery, creativity and initiative until we achieve final victory over the Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors, liberating our nation and people, protecting our nation and people and perpetuating our Kampuchean race.

Our Kampuchean nation and people continue to assign this heavy duty to our Democratic Kampuchean National Army and people. The history of Kampuchea continues to assign this heavy duty to our Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas. This historic duty is extremely heavy, but it is also a very noble duty.

All beloved comrades of the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas, both at the front and in the rear, must continue to raise even higher the combat banner, stepping forward in attacking the Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors to carry out and achieve their duty for our beloved Kampuchean nation and people until final victory is won and all Vietnamese Le Duan genocidal aggressors are driven out of our beloved Kampuchean territory.

SPK COMMENTARY SCORES ASEAN MINISTERS' COMMUNIQUE

BK221119 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0413 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Commentary: "Supporting the Khmer Reactionaries Is To Implement Beijing's Policy"]

[Text] Phnom Penh, 21 Jun (SPK) -- During their 15th conference held in Singapore, the ASEAN foreign ministers discussed the so-called "Kampuchean problem" among other things and reasserted their support for the Khmer reactionaries to fight the Kampuchean people represented by the People's Republic of Kampuchea.

This is not the first time that the ruling circles of ASEAN countries have interfered in Kampuchea's internal affairs, thus favoring the policy of Beijing expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists. They have recently intensified their efforts to gather the Khmer criminals and traitors in a "tripartite coalition government." On 14 March, Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila stressed: "The establishment of a tripartite coalition government will contribute greatly to resolving the Kampuchean problem politically and ASEAN will continue to encourage such an establishment."

What the Thai minister did not say and it is well-known publicly is that Thailand has granted sanctuary to the Pol Pot remnants following the overthrow of these criminals. It is Thailand that has favored the transfer of arms and ammunitions provided by China, the U.S. and other reactionaries to the Pol Pot men and other Khmer reactionaries to intensify tension and insecurity in the Kampuchea-Thailand border area. Thailand has violated Kampuchean sovereignty and has fired chemical shells against the civilian population.

It must be added that Thai-U.S. military provocations, of which the most recent was the "Cobra Gold 82" exercise, have threatened peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

The ASEAN communique further shows a wrongful analysis of the situation and a denial to look truth in the face. Nevertheless, Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang's visit to the ASEAN countries at the end of 1981 revealed Beijing's expansionist designs in Southeast Asia. China rejected the ASEAN countries' demand that China stop its support for Maoists -- rebels who receive the same support as that given by Beijing to the Pol Pot men and other Khmer reactionaries -- who are still undermining order and security in their territory. Those who sow instability and insecurity in the ASEAN countries are those who are working for the destruction of the PRK. If the genocidal still continued to reign over Kampuchea at present, what would be the situation in the other Southeast Asian countries where the Maoists would have been encouraged by this success?

Far from considering this reality, the ASEAN foreign ministers' communique takes the presence of the Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea as the cause of tension in Southeast Asia, while such a presence responds to the aspiration of the Kampuchean people who are facing the Chinese expansionist threat.

This is a problem between the Chinese expansionists and the Indochinese countries and not between the ASEAN countries and Indochina. Some of the ASEAN ruling circles have realized this and have indicated that the latent threat to Southeast Asia stems from China's expansionist policy. However, the decisions taken at the Singapore conference have encouraged such a policy. In the interests of the Southeast Asian countries and of peace and stability in the region, the PRK, the LDPR and the SRV have expressed their will to establish good neighborly relations with the countries in the region. They always wish to live on good terms with Thailand and to build peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

The most realistic solution to the present situation is to look truth in the face, engage in dialogue to ease tensions caused by the Chinese expansionists and stop interfering in Kampuchea's internal affairs.

He is scheduled to have talks with Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja in Jakarta next month. ACM Sitthi said he is willing to discuss any matter that will bring peace, stability and security to Southeast Asia. By the time Thach comes to Bangkok, ACM Sitthi will have learned from his counterparts in Jakarta, Kuala Lumpur and Singapore what the Vietnamese foreign minister has in mind.

ACM Sitthi is approaching the dialogue in a positive mood in the hope of obtaining results beneficial to both the ASEAN countries and the Indochina states. The dialogue will be the first to be held by Sitthi and Thach in two years. After the last meeting between the two men in New York in 1980, ACM Sitthi rejected any further meetings unless Thach had "something new" to offer. Thailand has also rejected previous proposals by foreign ministers of the Inodchina states for meetings between them and ACM Sitthi.

Meanwhile Prince Norodom Sihanouk, designated as president in the new coalition being set up by the three Khmer resistance factions, will visit Thailand early next month. He also plans to cross the Thai border into western Kampuchea to personally take over as head of state in a reorganised Democratic Kampuchea Government.

Prince Sihanouk has previously expressed his wish to come to Thailand. Because he will be president of Democratic Kampuchea, an official invitation was extended to him on behalf of the Thai Government by the chief Thai observer at a ceremony in Kuala Lumpur yesterday afternoon marking the signing of the coalition agreement. The prince had intended to visit Thailand directly from the Malaysian capital but the visit is being postponed until the return of the ACM Sitthi from Europe at the end of this month.

The Thai observer at yesterday's ceremony was M.R. Kasem Samoson Kasemsi, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs.

ACM Sitthi leaves tomorrow for a dialogue between Western Europe and ASEAN in Albach, Tyrol, Austria. Attending the dialogue will be top statesmen from Southeast Asia and Europe and international figures such as former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

The establishment of the coalition government marks an important point which will lead to a political solution of the Kampuchean problem.

The Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman expresses the hope that Vietnam will have sympathy for the patriotic Kampuchean people and will come to accept a political solution of the Kampuchean problem.

Prem's Comments

BK221354 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Text] During a press interview at Government House this afternoon concerning the setting up of a coalition government of the three Kampuchean resistance factions close to the Thai border, Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon said it will be a government set up inside Kampuchea. It will be close to the Thai border simply because Thailand and Kampuchea share a common border. This is nothing unusual, he said.

Asked whether the move will bring Thailand into confrontation with Vietnam, the prime minister said the country next to Thailand's border is Kampuchea, and not Vietnam. It depends on how a person thinks about it. However, the prime minister asserted that the government is doing everything for the interests of Thailand.

POST Editorial

[Editorial: "Confounding the Doomsayers..."]

[Text] At long last the three major Khmer factions resisting the Vietnamese invasion forces have managed to sign an agreement to form a coalition government for Democratic Kampuchea [DK]. They have done it despite all the doomsaying that there would be last-minute hitches, that there would be basic differences which could not be papered over, that there would be demands for changes in what had been previously agreed upon, necessitating more meetings. In fact, it looked at one time as if the whole project would collapse. But it did not, and today the leaders of the three factions must be congratulated for letting their good sense get the better of partisan interests or individual ambitions.

It does not really matter much who really holds the "foreign affairs" portfolio, said to be the main bone of contention between the Khmer Rouge (KR) and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), for two reasons. First, there is the condition of consensus which has been agreed upon by all the leaders as the overriding rule on policy and action. Second, as prime minister, Son Sann, leader of the KPNLF, does not need to be foreign minister as well. Take Thailand for example. Our foreign minister cannot conduct international affairs without the consent and approval of our prime minister.

As for those who fear that the coalition is a "masquerade" for the detested Khmer Rouge, let it be emphasised that Prince Norodom Sihanouk, designated president of the DK coalition, is definitely not a person who, placed in the leadership, would allow himself to be a mere puppet or pawn. His family has personally experienced the brutalities of the KR, and there is no way in which he would allow the KR to revive extreme policies which would bring more suffering and death to this people. He wants to save his people and his country from Vietnamese domination and that is his sole purpose in joining with the Khmer Rouge and the KPNLF to try and regain independence and sovereignty for his nation.

The fact that the Khmer Rouge have agreed to play second fiddle, with its president, Khieu Samphan, as vice president of the DK coalition, should also demonstrate that not all the leadership deserve condemnation. The most cruel of the gang, Pol Pot and Ieng Sary, are left out of the cabinet. The tripartite committees in important fields where all must work together will ensure no one party could decide to take unilateral action. It is believed that this is the best way to attain a proper balance of power.

To those who are apprehensive that the formation of the coalition would attract Vietnamese aggression, it should be pointed out that the coalition is being set up as part of a United Nations peaceful solution and is only a means to an end -- to bring about an independent, neutral Kampuchea which does not pose a threat to anyone. Thailand and ASEAN have always kept the legitimate interests of Vietnam in mind and do not intend in any way to infringe on those interests.

The establishment of the coalition government will ensure the continued recognition by the United Nations of Democratic Kampuchea, especially now that it is agreed for Prince Sihanouk to be the spokesman at the General Assembly. Highly regarded by the Third World and non-aligned countries, he is even expected to swing more votes for the DK.

With the coalition, ASEAN now has an ace up its sleeve which it can deal in discussions with Vietnam for a peaceful settlement in accordance with the principles of the United Nations. Demonstrating its basic goodwill, this regional organisation has gone on record that it will persuade the United States, West European countries, Japan and other friends to come to the economic assistance of Vietnam if and when the UN resolution is fulfilled.

MALAYSIA'S MUSA HITAM SPEAKS AT BANGKOK LUNCHEON

[Text] While addressing the Foreign Correspondents' Club at a luncheon at the Oriental Hotel located in Bangkok, the Malaysian Deputy Premier and Minister of Home Affairs [Musa Hitam] delivered a speech covering a wide range of subjects including today's signing of the tripartite Khmer Coalition Declaration in Malaysia and the Thai-Malaysian border security cooperation.

He hailed the formation of a coalition of the three Khmer resistance groups, but confirmed that Kuala Lumpur would never provide them with military assistance. He said the Malaysian Government will give the new Khmer coalition government political and economic support. He said that an agreement to be signed today between leaders of the three Khmer resistance groups in Malaysia would bring peace to the region. According to the Malaysian deputy premier, the coalition would also provide an internationally recognised and legitimate Khmer government as an alternative to Phnom Penh's Vietnamese-installed regime and would be a step towards a political solution of the Kampuchean problem.

On the issue of Thai-Malaysian relations, the Malaysian deputy premier confirmed Malaysia's commitment to stand shoulder to shoulder with Thailand on security cooperation with priority being given to fighting communists operating along the common border of the two nations. The Malaysian deputy premier and minister of home affairs also referred to joint socio-economic developments along the border which include projects involving both the Kolok River basin, and oil and coal exploration. He said that Thailand and Malaysia faced a bleak economic outlook as prices for primary commodities plunged and imports from developed nations rose. Falling tin prices had adversely affected both countries as well as an ASEAN partner, Indonesia. The Malaysian deputy premier said an announcement was expected in Kuala Lumpur today on the outcome of talks on the issue between the three countries which together produce 75 percent of the world's tin.

[Text] During the period between the December 1981 Second Session of the Seventh National Assembly and this National Assembly session, various councils and standing committees of the National Assembly, deputies and delegations of deputies have carried out many concrete activities.

With the approval of the Council of Ministers, the Nationalities Council has set up two subcommittees to study the mountain region's economy and education, especially the training of cadres of the people of various nationalities. The council has assigned a work team to Dac Lac and Gia Lai-Cong Tum Provinces to study the improvement of the mountain region's economy and the implementation of the movement for settled farming and new life in accordance with the method of combining agriculture with forestry.

The Economic, Planning and Budget Committee listened to reports made by the ministries of Home Trade and Labor on the circulation and distribution system, market management, the daily lives of workers and civil servants and the wage system.

The committee has assigned four work teams to inspect the living conditions of workers, cadres, troops, teachers and students at a number of offices, enterprises, schools and military units in Hanoi Municipality, Lang Son, Bac Thai and Quang Ninh Provinces. The committee heard a report on the implementation of the state plan during the first months of 1982 and the country's distribution of labor during the third 5-year plan.

Activities regarding the formulation and review of various draft laws have kept the Judiciary Committee busy. The committee has held weekly and monthly working sessions.

The assignment of work teams to various localities and grassroots units to study the situation has concretely and promptly contributed ideas to various sectors, localities and grassroots units. This also helps the Nationalities Council and various National Assembly committees grasp the situation on the implementation of the state laws in order to make proposals to the Council of State, the National Assembly and the Council of Ministers.

HANOI COMMENTS ON FALKLANDS LESSON FOR PRC

OW230307 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1230 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Station current events talk: "What Does the Malvinas Incident Show?"]

[Text] As everyone knows, with the support of U.S. imperialists and the NATO bloc, the British imperialists have forcibly occupied the Malvinas, territory of Argentina. This incident has fully exposed the contradictory nature of U.S. imperialism. The Beijing authorities, however, have vigorously publicized the imperialist United States as China's strategic ally and a close friend. We believe that the Chinese people can see through the nature of U.S. imperialism from the Malvinas incident and thus increase their vigilance.

Argentina's Galtieri government was a pro-U.S. Government groomed by U.S. imperialists. It became an anticommunist tool of U.S. imperialist expansion in South America. But this Argentine Government closely linked with the U.S. imperialists was abandoned during the Malvinas incident. Siding with the British imperialists, U.S. imperialists provided the British with weapons and logistical support, exerted pressure on Argentina and urged the European Common Market to impose economic sanctions on Argentina. The Reagan administration has thus played the role of international gendarme opposing the struggle waged by the people of all countries in striving for liberation and safeguarding national sovereignty.

The Vietnamese and Chinese people have seen through the U.S. imperialist wolfish ambition from their own experience. The Galtieri government of Argentina also realized this after it was treacherously betrayed, and it strongly condemned the Reagan administration for supporting Britain and for damaging Argentine-U.S. relations. How can the imperialists in general, and U.S. imperialists in particular, have friends, friendship and good faith to talk about? They basically do not think much about the national interests of others. They are using the same old trick to buy people over with U.S. dollars and then use them and put pressure on them in order to serve their counterrevolutionary global strategy. The U.S. imperialists would employ the most savage means to safeguard their own interests whenever their policies are threatened. The Malvinas incident has fully exposed the ugly nature of U.S. imperialism. We do not know whether the Malvinas incident will open the eyes of those gentlemen in Zhongnanhai who are following U.S. imperialist steps in opposing the Soviet Union and the world revolutionary movement. The Chinese people are also aware of the Taiwan question. The U.S. imperialists are playing the two-China game by continuing to sell arms to Taiwan in order to maintain their colonial rule and to make Taiwan, an inalienable part of China's territory, into a military base in the East China Sea and a springboard for invading the China Mainland.

Who can guarantee that the line being pursued by the Deng Xiaoping faction will not bring about consequences similar to the Malvinas incident? The Malvinas incident, the Taiwan question and the wolfish ambition of U.S. imperialism are all ironclad facts, sounding alarm to the Beijing authorities. The Argentine people have uttered their strong anti-U.S. call. All those who are following the U.S. imperialists should also open their eyes and see the facts. The Chinese people, who are rich in traditions in revolutionary struggle, must rise to action and put a stop to the adventurist alliance [lian meng] between the Beijing authorities and U.S. imperialism.

Assembly Deputies Review Work

[Text] The National Assembly deputies from Hanoi met together to review experiences in maintaining contacts with the public and to discuss a plan to meet with voters before and after the Third Session of the Seventh National Assembly. Present at the meeting were Truong Chinh, Le Van Luong, Tran Vi, Nghiem Xuan Yem and other National Assembly deputies from Hanoi.

Nghiem Chuong Chau, deputy head of the delegation of National Assembly deputies from Hanoi, reported on the delegation's meetings with the public. Since October 1981 the delegation of National Assembly deputies from Hanoi has regularly organized meetings with the public twice a month on Thursdays of the first and third weeks. Members of the delegation have been assigned to conduct these meetings. A very large number of people in the capital have come to these meetings. Following several reviews of experience, improvement has been gradually made in organizing meetings with the public. The waiting period for such meetings has been made very short and the people have been very pleased to express their aspirations and feelings directly. All the complaints and charges made by the people have been considered by the delegation. In some cases, an investigation was ordered to clarify the matter further before it was handed over to the competent organs for action.

After a period of holding meetings with the public, the delegation assigned groups of National Assembly deputies to work directly with the people's committees of the various districts in order to follow up on settling the people's requests and complaints.

Thanks to these activities, many people in the capital have either had their complaints and charges settled or received clarifications on policies, systems and legal matters. Many units and individuals have sent letters to the delegation to express praise and thanks for its fruitful meetings with the public.

The National Assembly deputies from Hanoi enthusiastically exchanged their views on their meetings with the public and unanimously agreed that it is necessary to maintain the current system of regular meetings with the public and, at the same time, to establish regulations on meeting the public so as to further improve the results of such meetings.

The delegation of National Assembly deputies from Hanoi also decided to open two rounds of meetings with the public before and after the Third Session of the Seventh National Assembly. The first round of meetings is scheduled to be held at the various electoral units, namely urban and rural districts, on Sunday, 20 June 1982, for the deputies to hear voters express their feelings, aspirations and petitions to the National Assembly. The second round of meetings will be held after the conclusion of the Third Session of the Seventh National Assembly for the delegation of National Assembly deputies to report on the results of the National Assembly session to the voters in the capital.

Truong Chinh Meets Officials

[Text] Implementing the regulations concerning National Assembly deputies and preparing for the forthcoming Third National Assembly Session, the National Assembly deputies from Hanoi on 20 June held a friendly get-together with representatives of voters in the capital. Comrade Truong Chinh, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of State, met and cordially chatted with representatives of voters from Ba Dinh precinct and Tu Liem district.

Addressing the National Assembly deputies, representatives of voters from the postal equipment factory, the Buoi association of interbranch paper production cooperatives, the 8 March engineering cooperative, and the agricultural committees of Tu Liem District and Giang Vo and Quan Thanh wards expressed their confidence in the leadership of the party, the National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers over the struggle to build and defend the socialist fatherland. With a sense of collective mastery, honesty and constructiveness, they also contributed to a number of views and suggestions concerning the application of specific policies and systems in state and social management and law enforcement aimed at increasing industrial, small industrial, handicraft and agricultural production in the capital and improving the local people's livelihood.

In his speech, Comrade Pham Loi, member of the standing committee of the municipal party committee and deputy head of the delegation of national deputies from Hanoi, acknowledged and welcomed the views contributed by representatives of the local voters, saying these views would help the National Assembly deputies to carry out their duties satisfactorily. On behalf of the municipal party committee and people's committee, he promised that he will study and satisfy the legitimate petitions and aspirations and other urgent needs of the people in the capital promptly.

Chatting cordially with representatives of voters from Ba Dinh precinct and Tu Liem district, Chairman Truong Chinh mentioned briefly what cadres, party members and the masses should do to help strengthen the system of leadership by the party, mastery by the people, and management by the state. The chairman expressed the hope that, with their glorious revolutionary tradition, the party organization and people of Hanoi will record even greater progress in the socialist emulation movement so that they can contribute to the successful implementation of the resolutions of the fifth party congress and make their municipality the worthy capital of the SRV.

Friendly meetings between National Assembly deputies and representatives of voters were also held in Hoan Kiem, Dong Da and Hai Ba Trung precincts and Thanh Tri, Gia Lam, Soc Son and Dan Phuong districts on the same day.

Truong Chinh's Remarks

OW221158 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Station correspondent's report]

[Summary] Friends: Meeting with electorates' representatives is routine work of National Assembly deputies.

As the opening of the Third Session of the Seventh National Assembly is approaching, the Hanoi National Assembly deputies delegation has sent its delegates to all eight constituencies of urban and suburban Hanoi to meet with the electorates' representatives in order to gather their views, aspirations and petitions in the fields of industrial, agricultural, handicraft and small industry production, of cultural and social activities and of the implementation of state laws in the localities and then to report them to the coming session of the National Assembly.

One of the eight meetings took place on the morning of Sunday, 20 June, at the headquarters of the Ba Dinh Precinct VFF Committee. The meeting was attended by National Assembly deputies and representatives of the electorate in the second constituency, which consists of the Ba Dinh Precinct and Tu Liem District. The more than 80 representatives present at the meeting included representatives of people of all walks of life in the precinct and district, factories, enterprises, handicraft, small industry and agricultural cooperatives, intellectuals, youths, and women. They were particularly encouraged by the fact that they could meet with and directly voice their aspirations and petitions to State Council Chairman Truong Chinh and to other delegates in the Hanoi National Assembly deputies delegation.

During the meeting, Chairman Truong Chinh cordially inquired about the health, lives, work and difficulties of the electorates' representatives. Chairman Truong Chinh said: The resolution of the Fifth VCP Congress asserts our party's and state's concern about important issues concerning the economy, the people's lives, public order and national defense. Thorough study of that resolution is extremely important because it is the basis for creating a high unanimity of views among the party, the state and the people.

He pointed out: [begin recording] "The relations between the upper-echelon leadership -- that is, the central level, the National Assembly, the Council of State and the Council of Ministers -- and the masses, through a series of intermediary organs, which can be compared to the transmission belts of a machine, and which also include the VFF organizations, are similar to the operations of a complicated machine with many different parts and wheels connected by transmission belts. The cadres of different sectors -- party and VFF cadres -- and of front organizations are like the transmission belts that connect the different wheels of a complicated machine. In fact, the mechanism of the dictatorship of the proletariat is not simple. Between the leading party and state organs and the masses at the grassroots level there is something that functions like the transmission belts of a machine and that must function well so that orders are properly transmitted from the upper echelons to the lower echelons and so that the experiences gained in implementing lines and policies, new observations and the rectifications that should be made are properly reported to the upper echelons. Then the upper echelons' decisions will be sent to and disseminated among the masses, which will carry them out under the guidance of cadres.

"After implementation by the masses, cadres will review the work, the experiences drawn concerning the ideological and organizational tasks and the rectifications made and then report them to the upper echelons. That is something like the operations of a very complicated machine, and the function of cadres, the contingent of cadres, is like that of the transmission belts. Therefore, we must ensure that in the coming political meeting, the party's lines and policies will be firmly grasped by cadres, who will disseminate them among the people." [end recording]

Addressing the representatives of the electorates of the Ba Dinh Precinct and Tu Liem District, Chairman Truong Chinh talked about what cadres, party members and the masses must do to contribute to strengthening the system of party's leadership, people's mastery and state management.

He continued: [begin recording] "We often talk about the system of party leadership, the people's mastery and state management. That is a correct general remark about our country's socialist revolution. The party provides leadership through the correct lines and policies it devises. Cadres and party members must set examples. In rural areas, people say that party cadres and members must set examples first and the masses will follow suit. This proves the people recognize and respect the leading role of the party, but they also place on the shoulders of the cadres and party members the weighty task of setting examples. People's mastery means the people have both rights and duties, not rights only, or duties only. How do we view the citizen's rights and duties? The people's mastery is reflected in the fact that they have rights to enjoy and duties to discharge. To enjoy mastership, the people must honor the Constitution and the law. Carrying out the state management duty, the state must organize the implementation of party and state lines and policies. Sometimes the state works on its own initiative. It must also conduct its own affairs, manage society with laws and organize controls and supervision." [end recording]

"Friends, the voters' representatives of the posts and telegraph equipment factories, the Buoi paper cooperatives, the 8 March engineering cooperative, the Tu Liem District agricultural committee, and the Giang Vo and Quan Thanh city wards expressed their views, voicing the feelings and confidence of the laboring people in their localities in the party's and state's lines and policies, as well as their wishes to be capable of making further contributions to the building of the national economy and national defense. Meanwhile, with a sense of collective mastery and a spirit of promoting progress, the representatives contributed views and suggestions concerning a number of policies and specific systems of economic management and law enforcement with a view to promoting the industry, handicrafts and agriculture of the capital and improving the people's living conditions."

The representatives of the Buoi paper cooperatives, the 8 March engineering cooperative, and the trade sector of Tu Liem District expressed their opinions on decentralization of management, the power supply system, and policies concerning producers.

The representative of the Agricultural Committee of Tu Liem District suggested that if decentralization of management is extended to the district level, the district should also be entrusted with the tasks of power distribution and fresh vegetables purchases because failure to entrust such tasks to the district level has often resulted in irregular power supplies which are often out of step with the growing season and waste fresh vegetables in the district which sometimes had to feed fish and hogs with thousands of tons of water cress while vegetable shortages were very acute in urban areas.

Regarding industry, the representative of the posts and telegraph equipment factories raised the question of the irregular supply of materials, which has hampered production, and increases in the cost of materials.

"Friends, at Gia Lam, Dong Anh District, the sixth constituency, National Assembly deputies paid great attention to voters' views. It may be said their views clearly reflect the fact that our people are highly patriotic, and are firmly confident in the leadership of the party and state. Therefore, in addition to advancing opinions on lingering difficulties in economic management, voters contributed views to be presented by the National Assembly deputies to the Council of State and Council of Ministers to help eliminate our state's current difficulties."

Friends, meeting with voters is routine work of National Assembly deputies, which is consistent with the statute promulgated by the National Assembly and the Council of State. The deputies were very much moved during the meeting. They all thought our people are a good people who are patriotic and love the party and socialism. Despite the difficulties facing them, all our people are upholding the spirit of collective mastery and are seeking ways, together with leading state organs, to resolve difficulties for the immediate future in order to take our country forward.

"Lawyer Tran Kiem Ly, vice chairman of the National Assembly Legislation Committee, after taking note of the voters' views, promised that he would report all the people's views to the National Assembly. He repeatedly told us that it is difficult to find a good people like ours in the world. With such a people in our fatherland, we are confident, absolutely confident, that we will certainly overcome all trials and difficulties and successfully build socialism in our country under our party's leadership."

ARMED SRV REFUGEES LAND ON NATUNA ISLAND

BK230328 Hong Kong AFP in English 0320 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] Jakarta, June 23 (AFP) -- A group of armed Vietnamese dissidents have landed on Natuna Island in the South China Sea, it was reported here today.

A total of 56 Vietnamese, led by 2nd Lieutenant Pham Gian, landed on the island on Monday after they fled Vietnam because of "ideological differences," the Jakarta Daily MORDEKA (FREEDOM) reported [word indistinct].

Lt. Gian yesterday told the Indonesian communication minister, Marshal Rusmin Nuryadin, who visited the island that he and his group left their homeland because they had been gripped by "fear" under the present communist regime, the paper said.

Last week 46 Vietnamese refugees also landed on Natuna, the paper added but it did not say if they were also armed.

The weapons and ammunition carried by the dissident group have been seized by the Indonesian authorities on the island, the paper said.

Lt. Gian told Marshal Nuryadin that his group wanted to go to Australia where they wished to settle down.

Vietnamese "boat people" refugees are usually processed at a centre on Galang Island before leaving for a country prepared to accept them.

The lieutenant was quoted as saying that he was a former officer in the South Vietnamese army during the war and that he had been reactivated by the present regime.

Part of the Natuan group is the subject of a territorial dispute between Indonesia and Vietnam following deadlock in talks on delineating their common border on the islands.

A Defence Ministry spokesman, who confirmed the landing, said the authorities would investigate to find out if the armed dissidents were really refugees.

He said the fact that the men carried arms raised the possibility that they were government agents infiltrated among the refugees.

Answering a question, the spokesman said that as far as he could recall it was the first time that Vietnamese boat people had been found carrying weapons. The Indonesian authorities have been tightly supervising boat people arrivals following reports that some Vietnamese Government agents have been among them on a certain mission.

Narshal Nuryadin has inaugurated a small communications station at Ranai on Natuna to enable direct communication with other islands such as Java, Sumatra, Kalimantan (Indonesian Borneo) and the Celebes.

Major General Iman Munandar, the governor of Riau Islands, which include Natuna, was quoted by the MERDEKA paper as saying that Natuna was important because of its strategic position.

JAKARTA COMMENTS ON KHMER RESISTANCE COALITION

BK200844 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Kampuchean Resistance Coalition"]

[Text] ASEAN officials, attending the foreign ministers meeting in Singapore, said on Friday [18 June] that the anti-Vietnamese Kampuchean resistance factions have agreed to form a coalition government.

As we know, the anti-Vietnamese Kampuchean resistance factions consist of the Khmer Rouge led by Khieu Samphan, the Moulinaka group led by Prince Norodom Sihanouk and the Kampuchean People's National Liberation Front [KPNLF] led by Son Sann.

According to the ASEAN officials, the three Kampuchean resistance factions will formally sign their agreement in Kuala Lumpur next week. With the signing of the agreement, negotiations between the three Kampuchean resistance factions, held over the last 2 years, will have ended successfully.

The Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea has already lasted nearly 4 years since it invaded Kampuchea at the end of 1978. The UN Security Council has not been able to end the Vietnamese military occupation of Kampuchea because the Soviet Union was always ready to exercise its veto right. However, the UN General Assembly has more than once adopted resolutions with an overwhelming majority if not quite unanimous support, calling for the withdrawal of all Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, although in practice it has not been carried out. The Vietnamese invasion of Kampuchea was launched after the big powers, the United States and the Soviet Union, lost their authority to settle conflicts between small countries. The October war in the Middle East in 1973 was the last conflict between small countries that could be settled peacefully with the cooperation of the big powers.

Although the conflict between North and South Vietnam appeared to be solved through a military settlement in 1975, the settlement of the conflict, in practice, was reached under the Paris Agreement in 1973 with U.S.-Soviet cooperation. But, following the October war in the Middle East in 1973, especially following the confrontation between OPEC and the oil importing Western industrialized countries, conflicts among small countries no longer reflected conflict for the sake of U.S. and Soviet interests. This has led to the consequence that there is no longer any cooperation between Washington and Moscow, and even if there was any, it would be powerless to solve the conflicts through the United Nations or otherwise. It is for this reason that, despite its resolutions, the United Nations has not been able to end the Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea, which was launched 5 years after the 1973 October War in the Middle East.

The Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea has been frequently described as reflecting a conflict of interests between the Soviet Union and China, but since China still cannot be regarded as a big power like the Soviet Union, Beijing and Moscow would not be able to solve the Kampuchean problem. With this background, there was no other alternative for the Kampuchean resistance factions than to build up their own national strength to continue their revolution which the Vietnamese tried to stop as the Duke of Brunswick of Prussia tried to stop the French Revolution in 1792, and whose invasion was defeated in Valmy. The history of this French Revolution is still vividly remembered by the leaders of the Kampuchean resistance factions.

SUZUKI CALLS IBM INDUSTRIAL SPY CASE 'SHOCKING'

OW240356 Tokyo KYODO in English 0254 GMT 24 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 24, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Thursday described as a shocking event the "industrial spy" case involving employees of Japan's two electronics giants but said it should not impair relations between Japan and the United States.

Suzuki told the Budget Committee of the House of Representatives: "It is really a shocking event. But special consideration is needed not to harm friendly and cooperative relations between the two nations."

Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, said the case should not be allowed to influence Japan-U.S. economic relations, nor lead to the flaring up of economic friction.

Nine Japanese and Americans have been arrested for allegedly conspiring to steal information on computers of International Business Machines Corp. (IBM). U.S. authorities also issued arrest warrants for 12 Japanese employees of Hitachi, LTD, and Mitsubishi Electric Corp.

Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi told the committee meeting that the United States has not yet asked Japan to hand over the 12 Japanese under the bilateral extradition treaty. He did not say whether the Japanese Government would respond to a U.S. request for their extradition, saying careful studies on the facts behind the case are needed before making any judgement.

Hitachi Official Comments

[Text] Tokyo, June 23, KYODO -- Yasukichi Hatano, general manager of Hitachi's computer group, said a Hitachi official bought IBM information from two U.S. consultant company staffers on April 23, not knowing that it was stolen property. Hatano said he obtained that information from the Hitachi staffers to whom arrest warrants were issued by U.S. authorities. Hatano said he met the staffers Wednesday.

Hatano said the Hitachi official bought that information after an "enthusiastic canvassing" by the two U.S. consultant company staffers. According to Hatano, the U.S. consultant company in question is "Glemmer Associates" (phonetic), and the staffers claimed that their names were Harrison and Kelligan (phonetic). The two Americans first contacted Kenji Hayashi, a senior engineer, Kanagawa Works, Hitachi.

Kisaburo Nakazawa, general manager of Kanagawa Works, who had initially no plan to meet the two U.S. men, but that since the sum of money sought by them was large, Nakazawa himself contacted them, Hatano said.

JAPAN LIFTS BOYCOTT ON ARGENTINA, TELLS UK

OW231139 Tokyo KYODO in English 1129 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 23, KYODO -- Japan Wednesday notified Britain of its termination of economic sanctions against Argentina, the Foreign Ministry said. The notice was delivered Wednesday to British Charge d'Affaires J.S. Whitehead by Kichiya Kato, director general of the European and Oceanic Affairs Bureau, Foreign Ministry at the ministry.

The Japanese move followed the European Community (EC) member countries' termination of economic sanctions against Argentina Tuesday. Shortly after Argentina's invasion of the Falklands early in April, the Japanese Government followed the EC countries in imposing economic sanctions against the South American country.

The decision was notified to the British Government in a letter from Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

FOREIGN MINISTRY COOL TO ROK AID PROPOSAL

OW221319 Tokyo KYODO in English 1253 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 22, KYODO -- The Foreign Ministry said Tuesday it could not regard South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok's "new proposals" on the long-pending economic aid problem as major progress in the knotty issue.

Ministry sources said South Korea still holds to its demand for dollar 6 billion in Japanese yen loans to South Korea and that there is no change in Japan's latest offer to extend dollar 4 billion to that country.

The ministry also wondered why Yi made the proposals to Japanese Ambassador to Seoul Toshikazu Maeda just when he is preparing to visit the United States and at a time when a South Korean cabinet reshuffle among ministers in charge of economic affairs is expected. However, the sources said Japan does plan to make some answer to Yi's proposals after he returns from the U.S. in early July.

SAKURAUCHI: OPENING MARKET WIDER WILL BENEFIT ASIA

OW231221 Tokyo KYODO in English 1204 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 23, KYODO -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Wednesday government measures aimed at opening Japan's market wider to foreign products will benefit Asian countries as well as the United States and Europe. Japan is lifting its non-tariff trade barriers equally to all countries, Sakurauchi said at a Diet committee meeting.

The remarks were interpreted here to mean that the government was reluctant to take further action to liberalize its trade policy for Asian and other developing countries in particular.

Japan has been asked by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to reduce its trade surplus with ASEAN countries. The request was renewed last week when the foreign ministers of the five-member regional group met in Singapore with Sakurauchi in an expanded ministerial conference.

SAKURAUCHI COMMENTS ON ASEAN TRADE, KAMPUCHEA

OW191301 Tokyo KYODO in English 1248 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 19, KYODO -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Saturday ruled out the possibility of Japan taking new measures to open its markets in the near future to deal with complaints from Southeast Asian nations.

Sakurauchi expressed his views on trade and Kampuchea in an interview with Japanese newsmen accompanying him on his current visit to Malaysia.

The foreign minister is scheduled to leave for home Sunday. He came to the Malaysian capital after attending a meeting in Singapore with foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

At the Singapore meeting, attended by officials of the United States, Canada, New Zealand, Australia and the European Community, ASEAN delegates said the two rounds of market opening measures taken by Japan thus far were directed at the U.S. and Western Europe and did not live up to ASEAN's expectations.

Foreign Minister Sakurauchi, however, told Japanese newsmen Saturday that it is impossible for the present for Japan to further open its market to foreign goods.

He said Japan has no responsibility to do something special for ASEAN, adding that he did not make any proposals at the Singapore meeting. He indicated that Japan would rather deal with ASEAN requests on a separate, individual basis.

At the Singapore meeting, ASEAN pressed Japan to open its market for tropical goods and light industry products.

On Kampuchea, the foreign minister said Japan would have to consider what it could do should three anti-Vietnam Kampuchean resistance groups succeed in establishing a coalition government.

This was interpreted to mean that Tokyo might extend economic aid to the three groups led by former Kampuchean Head of State Prince Norodom Sihanouk, one-time Prime Minister Son Sann and Khieu Samphan of the so-called Pol Pot group.

BANK GOVERNOR CALLS YEN DEPRECIATION 'UNUSUAL'

OW231123 Tokyo KYODO in English 0817 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo June 23 KYODO -- The Japanese yen's depreciation against the U.S. dollar is "unusual" and part of the problem lies in the high U.S. interest rates, Bank of Japan Governcr Haruo Maekawa said Wednesday.

But Maekawa refused to say what an appropriate level of the yen to the dollar is. "I will not and cannot answer that question," he responded when asked about what he considered to be a proper currency rate between the yen and the dollar. "All I can say is that the yen is too low in relation to the dollar considering Japan's (economic) fundamentals and other factors," the governor told a news conference.

After opening at yen 256.50, the U.S. dollar fluctuated between yen 254.80 and 256.90 before closing the day at yen 256.15.

"I don't see any major change in the general attitude toward the money markets," Maekawa said. "There are various factors behind it (the strong dollar) which is chiefly due to the high interest rates." He predicted that the future of the U.S. interest policy and any decline in the high rates depend to a great extent upon "the trust in U.S. authorities" in America.

U.S. monetary authorities have told West European countries and Japan the United States will intervene in currency markets only if "disorderly" conditions arise.

Maekawa stressed that the dollar has risen in value in recent days not only against the yen but against the Swiss franc and the German mark as well. "It's a big problem," Maekawa said of the yen's sharp decline against the dollar. "The yen is unusually low. We have a vested interest in the issue."

SUZUKI URGED TO RESTRICT TANAKA'S 'MEDDLING'

OW201141 Tokyo KYODO in English 1016 GMT 20 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo June 20 KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Sunday was obliquely urged not to allow disgraced former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka to meddle much in state affairs.

The urging came when Suzuki met former Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda to report his recent tour of France, the United States and Latin America, sources at the Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) said. Fukuda termed the severe state finances as the most difficult problem in the postwar era and said this should be solved by closing ranks among LDP dietmen. He said Suzuki should give special consideration to create an environment for an "all party setup," indirectly urging him not to dance to the tune played by the Tanaka faction.

Suzuki, who returned home last week, Saturday met former Prime Minister Takeo Miki, Tanaka's constant critic, and was told to regain political control of the ruling party, said to be under Tanaka's virtural rule. It was during Miki's government that Tanaka was arrested in 1976 for alleged involvement in a multi-billion yen Lockheed payoff scandal.

NODONG SINMUN: U.S. 'SOURCE OF THREAT TO PEACE'

SK221112 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1042 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Text] Pyongyang, Jun 22 (KCNA) -- It is the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and war policy that has caused the danger of a war breaking out at any moment on the Korean Peninsula, says NODONG SINMUN today. It demands that the U.S. imperialists go back to their den, taking along their aggression troops and lethal weapons.

In an article titled "U.S. Imperialists Occupation of South Korea and War Policy Are Constant Source of Threat to Peace on Korean Peninsula", the author says: U.S. imperialism is the aggressor trampling underfoot the national sovereignty of the Korean people, the very one imposing upon them the tragedy of division and bringing the situation on the Korean Peninsula to the utmost pitch of strain.

It is ridiculous of the U.S. imperialists to trumpet about someone's "military superiority" and "threat of southward invasion". This is a cock-and-bull story intended to beautify their criminal policy of occupation of South Korea and cover up new war provocation maneuvres they are hastening with the puppets. The threat of aggression comes from the South, not from the North, and it is not the United States or South Korea but our republic who is facing the threat.

Now the United States cries that "it has no intention to withdraw" from South Korea and openly declares that it "would not hesitate to use the force of arms" for maintaining its colonial domination over South Korea.

The U.S. imperialists have massively reinforced the South Korean occupation forces with latest types of fighter planes such as "F-16" fighter bombers, "A-10" close support planes and airborne warning and control planes and highly efficient guns, new-type tanks and other modern weapons and equipment, and are now scheming to introduce even neutron bombs and field nuclear missiles into South Korea.

They defined South Korea as the "main object of military aid" in Asia and are even working out an emergency plan to transfer ammunitions and war supplies worth 2,000 million dollars to the puppet army allegedly for preparing against a "case of emergency."

Intending to put up the Chon Tu-hwan clique as a shock brigade in the execution of their war policy, the U.S. imperialists are increasing the South Korean puppet army and zealously "supporting" its "buildup of combat power."

Of late the U.S. imperialists war preparations have got all the more frantic. The frequent infiltration of the "SR-71" high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane into the areas of the northern half of the republic by the U.S. imperialists for espionage purpose and other military provocations against the northern half of the republic committed by them and South Korean puppets numbered nearly 6,000 cases in less than three months from early March.

But the U.S. imperialists can not justify their policy of occupation of South Korea and their clamour for the provocation of a war with outcries over the fictitious "threat of southward invasion."

The only way of easing tension and removing the danger of war on the Korean Peninsula lies in putting an end to the U.S. imperialists occupation of South Korea. The U.S. imperialists must go back to their den, taking along their aggression troops and destructive weapons, and stop interfering in the Korean question.

NODONG SINMUN: KPA GENERAL ON COMBAT READINESS

[NODONG SINMUN 24 June special article: "If the U.S. Imperialists Provoke a New War, This Will Be Tantamount To Digging Their Own Graves" -- KCNA identifies this as an article by KPA Col Gen Kim Pyong-yul]

[Text] We greet the day of the 25 June anti-U.S. struggle under circumstances in which all the workers of the country are vigorously accelerating the three revolutions -- ideological, technological and cultural -- under the banner of imbuing the entire society with the chuche idea, upholding the programmatic tasks assigned by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his report to the sixth party congress and in his historic policy speech, and in the spirit of the anti-U.S. struggle which is increasing among South Korean youths, students and people with each passing day.

Observing this day, our people and People's Army officers and men cannot repress surging national resentment against the U.S. imperialist aggressors, who ignited a war of aggression in Korea, imposed matchless calamities and miseries on our people and are continuously occupying South Korea. They are also resolved to realize the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland without fail by smashing the new war provocation maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists.

The U.S. imperialists are the Korean people's implacable enemy and brazen war provocators who invaded our country long ago and waged a criminal war of aggression.

Korea has become one of most important targets in the U.S. imperialists' aggressive world strategy. To adopt Korea as a military stronghold against the national liberation movements and socialism, the U.S. imperialists, who illegally occupied South Korea after the defeat of the Japanese imperialists, have prepared for a large-scale war of aggression in Korea.

The U.S. imperialists and the Syngman Rhee puppet clique, who prepared vast armed forces of aggression, perpetrated military provocations everyday against the northern half of the republic around the 38th Parallel. At last, they provoked a war of aggression against our people on 25 June 1950. The U.S. imperialists' provocation of the Korean war was the outcome of the policy of aggression of the enemies engrossed in the wild desire to conquer the world. With the aim of eliminating our young republic in the cradle and occupying all of Korea at a stroke, the U.S. imperialist aggressors committed to the Korean battle several million military personnel -- including their armed forces equipped with modern technology, hired mercenary troops from 15 countries at their beck and call and the South Korean puppet army -- and countless quantities of combat equipment. Furthermore, they mobilized the most bestial means and methods of war unprecedented in the history of warfare. The U.S. imperialists committed bestial outrages by devastating our cities and villages through brutal bombing and shelling and by indiscriminately massacring our peaceful residents. But they could never subdue our people and People's Army with any means.

Under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader comrade Kim Il-song -- ever-victorious iron-willed commander and great military strategist -- our people and People's Army beat off the U.S. imperialist aggressors and won a great victory in annihilating the enemy by displaying matchless valor and mass heroism.

By winning a brilliant victory in the fatherland liberation war, our people gloriously defended the country's freedom, independence and national sovereignty, safeguarded world peace and vigorously encouraged the anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle of the world's revolutionary people and their struggle for national liberation. The defeat of the U.S. imperialists in the Korean war signalled serious damage to their brigandish policy of power, of military interference and of war.

Instead of withdrawing from South Korea, learning a due lesson from the defeat in the Korean war, the U.S. imperialists, still occupying South Korea, have infringed upon our nation's sovereignty and run amok in preparations for a new war, interfering in the domestic affairs of Korea. They are also blocking the independent reunification of the fatherland by pursuing a two-Koreas policy.

Reunifying the fatherland by ending the country's division is the unanimous desire of all the Korean people and our people's supreme national task which cannot be postponed even a moment. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The government of our republic is assigned the urgent task of realizing complete national sovereignty throughout the country by forcing the U.S. troops from South Korea and reunifying the divided fatherland.

Our party and the government of the republic have consistently demanded that the Korean people themselves resolve the question of the country's reunification in conformity with the nation's interests without any interference by foreign forces. Moreover, they have set forth tangible and realistic proposals to realize this and have made all sincere efforts to carry them into effect. However, the tragedy of division has not been ended and the threat of war is increasing. This is completely attributable to the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea, its policy of national division and its new war provocation maneuvers.

The U.S. imperialists have answered our party's proposal for independent reunification and its peace-loving stand with the policy of making South Korea their colony and maneuvers to intensify war rackets. Today, the U.S. imperialists are leading the situation in Korea to the brink of war. While turning a deaf ear to our proposal to replace the Korean armistice agreement with a peace agreement, the U.S. imperialists have continuously beefed up the armed forces of aggression and military equipment in South Korea.

The U.S. imperialists have introduced new-type military equipment, including F-16 fighter-bombers and A-10 close support fighters, to South Korea. They have also doubled the number of experienced combat personnel in the navy and have reinforced them with numerous naval ships such as frigates and guided missile destroyers. The U.S. imperialists have deployed numerous nuclear weapons in South Korea. Recently they have planned to deploy even neutron bombs there.

It is already known to the world that the U.S. imperialists have completed organizing rapid deployment forces and put them on the alert to send them to the Korean Peninsula in case of an emergency. The U.S. imperialists have been transferring modern lethal weapons and other military equipment to the South Korean puppets.

Today's military moves of the U.S. imperialists are reminiscent of the time when they triggered the war of aggression in Korea in 1950. The military exercise Team Spirit '82 staged this year by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique was the largest military exercise, unprecedented in history. Participating in it were the U.S. forces stationed in South Korea, the South Korean puppet army and the U.S. Army, naval and Air Force units sent from military bases on the U.S. mainland, the Japanese mainland, Okinawa and the Pacific-totalling over 160,000 troops -- and the latest type lethal mass weapons, including nuclear weapons. The military exercise Team Spirit '82 was not one staged separately by a military service or branch but was an all-out one which included all operations, including amphibious, river-crossing, airborne, intelligence, antisubmarine, and close-support operations.

All these facts show that the schemes of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets for a new war have entered a very grave stage. The U.S. imperialists are shamelessly asserting that their policy of aggression and war is to block a threat of southward invasion and to maintain peace and stability on the Korean Peninsula. This is nothing but a smokescreen designed to conceal their dark intention to hold onto South Korea as a permanent military base and colony and to trigger a new war of aggression in Korea.

There is no change in the U.S. imperialists' wild ambition to dominate the world. They have stopped at nothing to maintain and strengthen their colonial rule over South Korea.

The U.S. imperialists' bolstering of the brutal suppression of the patriotic Kwangju uprisers and their human butcher Chon Tu-hwan to perpetrate anticommunist confrontation and a policy of war proceeded precisely from their shameless and criminal intention to permanently dominate South Korea as a colony.

The U.S. imperialists are the very ringleaders of aggression and war and the main obstacles hindering the reunification of Korea. They are the backstage manipulators inspiring the South Korean puppets to division and war. As long as the U.S. imperialist forces are stationed in South Korea, the question of national reunification cannot be solved independently nor can peace and stability in our country or Asia be contemplated.

There is no reason whatsoever for the U.S. imperialists to stay in South Korea. The U.S. imperialists must renounce intervention in the internal affairs of Korea and immediately withdraw from South Korea in accordance with the armistice agreement and the resolution of the UN General Assembly.

The time when the imperialists could infringe upon the sovereignty of another country with bayonets and trample underfoot the people's independence is gone forever. Our people are not the Korean people of yesterday. They are a dignified people who treasure national sovereignty.

Today, our people possess the invincible strength of the entire people and the People's Army firmly rallied with one ideology and will around the great leader and of a powerful socialist state of independence, self-reliance and self-defense. The international dignity and prestige of our republic have been incomparably enhanced. The ranks of supporters and sympathizers of our revolution are increasing with each passing day.

Today, the world's people are opposing all forms of domination and subjugation and are demanding independence. Numerous countries are advancing along the road of independence. This is the trend of the times which cannot be blocked by anything.

The arson at U.S. cultural centers in Kwangju and Pusan and the burning of the U.S. flag in Chunchon were an expression of the South Korean people's firm determination no longer to live under the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule.

South Korea, where anti-U.S. sentiments are growing among the youths, students and people, will no longer be a place of rest for the U.S. imperialists. The rascals will surely be kicked out by the stern resistance of the South Korean people. The U.S. imperialists must look straight at the trend of history and act discreetly.

Our people and officers and men of the People's Army are keenly watching the schemes of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique for division and war. If the U.S. imperialist aggressors ignite a war in Korea again, disregarding our warning, it will result in digging their graves. All officers and men of the People's Army must maintain a strained and mobilized posture to cope with the prevailing situation and more strongly deepen their combat capabilities and combat readiness.

There exists no strength in this world which can block the road of struggle of the officers and men of our People's Army who have risen up to the sacred, just and patriotic cause.

Our people and officers and men of the People's Army will more vigorously struggle to smash the schemes of enemies at home and abroad for division and a new war and to achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland and the final completion of the chuche cause by firmly uniting around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the party.

NODONG SINMUN DISCUSSES REUNIFICATION ISSUES

[NODONG SINMUN 23 June editorial: "Let Us Achieve the Historic Cause of Independent Reunification by Repelling Aggression and Interference by Outside Forces"]

[Text] Under the circumstances in which the pan-national struggle for the reunification of the fatherland is being waged, we mark the ninth anniversary of the announcement of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's immortal classic work "Let Us Prevent the Permanent Division of the Nation and Reunify the Fatherland."

The work was announced at the time when the domestic and foreign splittists were intensifying schemes for two Koreas and the danger of perpetuation of national division was growing.

In the early 1970's, in accordance with the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's policy for comprehensive negotiations, the North-South dialogue, which had been deadlocked for a long period of time, was resumed. The historic 4 July North-South joint statement, the main content of which was the solution of the question of the reunification of the country in accordance with the three-point principle of independence, peaceful reunification and great national unity, was issued. This was an epochal event which brought a new aspect to North-South relations. Nevertheless, the agreement made in the joint statement was not enacted because of the betrayal and duplicitous tactics of the South Korean side, which did not want to implement the agreement and exploited the dialogue as a means to continue the division of the nation. As a result, relations between the North and South returned to the state before the announcement of the joint statement.

What is worse is that the South Korean puppets, in accordance with the U.S. imperialists' policy of two Koreas, declared the division of the nation as a policy. As a result, a great danger of the permanent division of our nation was created.

It was at this juncture that the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, in his historic work, made a scientific analysis of the prevailing situation. As a measure of national salvation to smash the schemes of two Koreas and open a way out for the nation, he put forth the famous five-point policy of the reunification of the fatherland, which called for the elimination of military confrontation between the North and South, mitigation of the tense situation, multisided collaboration and exchanges between the North and South, convocation of the great national congress participated in by the representatives of the people of all strata of the North and South and their political parties and public organizations, the establishment of a North-South confederal system under the single title of the State of the Confederal Republic of Koryo, and entry into the United Nations with the single title of the State of the Confederal Republic of Koryo.

The five-point policy of the reunification of the fatherland reflected the demands of the prevailing situation and the unanimous opinion and desire of the nation. Thus, it was a realistic, fair, just and patriotic policy aimed at eliminating obstacles to reunification and opening a path for the nation.

At the same time, the five-point policy was also entirely in accordance with the world people's desire and demand for elimination of the tense situation in Korea and the independent and peaceful solution of the Korean question. The five-point policy which delineated a milestone to reunification received warm welcome and support at home and abroad. Thus, it has become a driving force for the reunification of the country.

The announcement of the five-point policy of the reunification of the fatherland dealt a serious blow to the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets. The idea of the simultaneous entry into the United Nations by North and South, which the domestic and foreign splittists put forth to justify the creation of two Koreas in the international community, faced political and moral bankruptcy. As a result, the splittists were driven to a defensive position, and their isolation was accelerated at home and abroad.

The former South Korean dictator who sought a divisive line and persisted in despotism was put under trial by history and eliminated in the midst of the rising struggle of the people, who demanded independence, democracy and reunification.

The changes seen in the development of the South Korean situation in the 1970's proved the correctness and vitality of the five-point policy of the reunification of the fatherland.

The reunification of the divided fatherland is the cherished desire of our people and the supreme task of the nation. To implement the five-point policy of the reunification of the fatherland, our party has made every effort and continued to work out a series of aggressive measures aimed at accelerating the cause of the reunification. The proposal of the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] which was advanced at the sixth congress of our party calls for implementing this historic task and, thus, is an epochal proposal fully reflecting the ideas of the three-point principle and the five-point policy of the reunification of the fatherland.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Our party holds that the most realistic and rational way to reunify the fatherland in an independent and peaceful way, and based on the principle of the great national unity, is to establish a confederal state which leaves the ideologies and systems of the North and the South intact and achieves the unity of the North and South.

The proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and the 10-point administrative policy of a confederal state is a chuche-type reunification proposal which has been formulated by placing first priority on the interests of the people. It is a proposal for building an independent and unified state which will guarantee the complete independence of the country and the prosperity of the people.

Since this proposal was advanced, people at home and abroad have enthusiastically responded to it, and compatriots at home and abroad have actively carried out movements to quickly implement this proposal. This shows that the proposal for forming a confederal state is a uniquely just and practical proposal which has detailed the most correct way to resolve the question of the reunification of our country and has invincible vitality.

To achieve the fatherland's reunification, we should, above all, eliminate obstacles to this cause. The basic obstacle to achieving the reunification of our country is the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their policy of interference in the internal affairs of Korea. Illegally occupying South Korea for 37 years and implementing a policy of converting it into a colony, the U.S. imperialists have hindered the reunification of our country and forced our people to suffer immeasurable disasters, shipped nuclear weapons to South Korea and threatened us with these weapons. Although they call a puppet regime which they have fabricated to justify their policy of placing South Korea under their control the Republic of Korea and have recognized it as an independent country, this regime is only a scarecrow. The actual rulers who wield power in South Korea and exercise absolute influence are the U.S. imperialists. Those who move the puppet regime, exercise sovereign military power, grip the lifeline of the South Korean economy and have oppressed and exploited the people are none other than the U.S. imperialists. The ringleaders who have checked the people's struggle to achieve the democratization of society and the fatherland's reunification are none other than the U.S. imperialists.

As long as the U.S. imperialists pose as masters by sitting astride South Korea, the South Korean people cannot fulfill any demand in their daily life and state affairs. Only when we restore the lost national sovereignty by forcing the U.S. imperialists aggressive forces to withdraw from South Korea and end the U.S. imperialists' interference in the internal affairs of Korea can we achieve democratization, the country's reunification and maintain and preserve peace in Korea. The reunification question of our country -- the internal affairs of the people -- can only be resolved by our people, the masters of the country and the party directly concerned. The U.S. imperialists have no ground whatsoever to interfere in the internal affairs of Korea. Gone is the day when the U.S. imperialists randomly invaded and dominated other countries. Our era is an era of independence when the world's people, hundreds of millions strong, who were once oppressed and humiliated, have embarked on the road of building a new life by extricating themselves from the yoke of colonial slavery and becoming the masters of their own destiny.

Today an anti-U.S. struggle has been intensified among the South Korean people of all walks of life and voices have been raised among them to urge the United States to stop meddling in the internal affairs of Korea and withdraw from South Korea. Arsons at the U.S. cultural centers in Kwangju and Pusan were the proud torch of a colonial, national liberation struggle which the people lit in South Korea. This showed that they were not dead but alive and that they were not tame sheep but a dignified people who valued national dignity and sovereignty as they did their lives. This demonstrated their resolute will and indomitable spirit not to tolerate the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule.

South Korea, where the flames of anti-U.S. struggle are ablaze, will not remain any longer as a quiet refuge for the United States. No one can check the South Korean people's anti-U.S. struggle -- a patriotic struggle to achieve national dignity and sovereignty. The United States must closely consider this and act discreetly. If the United States wants peace in Korea and peaceful reunification, it should not engage in aggressive maneuvers but embark on the road of seeking a practical way to peacefully resolve the Korean question by keeping in contact with us.

We have repeatedly proposed negotiations with the United States on the question of replacing the armistice agreement with a peace agreement. Our proposal is to make unstable peace durable and accelerate the peaceful solution of the Korean question. If the United States wants to maintain peace in Korea, there is no reason to hesitate to conduct negotiations with us. If the United States replaces the armistice agreement with a peace agreement and withdraws its forces from South Korea, it will benefit from this. The United States should withdraw from South Korea at the earliest possible date, taking along its forces, and take its hand of interference off Korea.

To accelerate the cause of reunification and restore national sovereignty, we should eliminate the Chon Tu-hwan ring -- a wicked executor of the U.S. imperialists' policy of making South Korea a subservient colony. The Chon Tu-hwan ring is a dirty, fascist military group which the U.S. imperialists have used to overcome the worsening crisis of their colonial rule. It is a splittist and nation-selling treacherous group. The fascist jackals have cruelly suppressed democratic forces for demanding restoration of national sovereignty, democracy and the country's reunification. Many patriots and democrats have been dragged to prisons and the gallows, and thousands of Kwangju citizens have been killed. Acting as the dog of the U.S. imperialists, the fascist Chon Tu-hwan military clique is still begging for the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces' permanent occupation of South Korea, sold national dignity and sovereignty to foreign forces, fanned enmity and discord among the people by increasing its military capability and by kicking up anticommunist war rackets, distrubed peace and heightened tension.

Without removing the Chon Tu-hwan ring, the South Korean people cannot avoid disaster. By eliminating the stooges of aggression, they can foil the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression.

The fatherland's reunification could only be achieved by the united effort of the North and South. Differences in the ideologies and systems of the North and South are not factors hindering the unity of the people. If we refuse to achieve unity on the grounds of differences in ideologies and systems, we will only aid the splittists. Whether we achieve unity by transcending ideologies and systems with a single national goal constitutes a touchstone showing whether or not we want reunification. By uniting under the single banner, the banner of a grand united national front, all Koreans who oppose subservience, division and war and demand independence, reunification and peace should rise as one in a pan-national struggle to achieve the fatherland's independent reunification.

Our party will make every effort to fulfill the long-cherished desire of the fellow countrymen for founding an independent, peace-loving confederal state, restoring national sovereignty on a pan-national scale and leading a harmonious life in a unified fatherland. Under the wise leadership of the party and the leader and joining efforts with all patriotic forces at home and abroad, our people will thwart the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges and achieve the historic cause of independent reunification.

NODONG SINMUN ATTACKS SEOUL POLITICAL SUMMIT

[NODONG SINMUN, 23 June commentary: "A Farce To Defend Against Arrows"]

[Text] A few days ago, a meeting was held in Seoul by the leaders of the three ruling and opposition political parties to discuss measures for removing confusion created in connection with the curb loan scandal and thus settling the situation.

On that day, Chon Tu-hwan made absurd remarks on maintaining order, security and so forth, which had nothing to do with the incident, ignoring the people's demand that he take responsibility for the loan scandal and resign. He also said that he will set an example of peaceful transfer of power by quietly resigning when his term of his presidential office expires after 6 years.

The remark on seeking measures for settling the situation was made even in the early stages of the severe social criticism of the loan scandal. What he raved after more than 40 days since the incident occurred, letting time drag on after speaking as if he would expose the true nature of the incident, is that he would resign when his tenure expires. This is the same as the proverb "catching a rat after searching mountains."

Those who participated in the meeting carrying the signboard of the opposition political parties followed the dictator by responding to his ridiculuous remarks.

The talks of the leaders of the three political parties are nothing but a drama at defending against the arrows of attack and denunciation from the people. At a time when the South Korean people demand the immediate resignation of Chon Tu-hwan to take responsibility for the loan scandal, the very person who should apologize to the people and resign is scheming to continuously seize power, raving about the quesiton of term of office. This is preposterous. Pretending that he has nothing to do with the scandal, he even said that he would eliminate irregularities and corruption during his tenure of office.

Irregular and corrupt incidents have not been eliminated in South Korea not because there were no remarks stressing the elimination of the irregularties and corruption. Corruption is spreading everyday because Chon Tu-hwan himself is engaged in illegal profiteering by abusing power under the patronage of the U.S. imperialists and has patronized the corrupt acts of the privileged class.

Of the incidents of corruption which have repeatedly occured in South Korea over the last 2 years -- from embezzling political funds of former politicians to illegal imports of U.S. rice -- there have been none in which traitor Chon Tu-hwan has not been involved. The remarks of the ringleader of corruption about eliminating of irregularities and corruption is the same as a thief calling "stop, thief!"

The utterances on elimination of irregularities and corruption are an excuse for legalizing his long-term power. He made a cunning remark that a 7-year term is wearying for those who serve the nation and people and that he feels he cannot serve longer even if the people so desire. He attempted to describe himself as a man thoroughly imbued with the spirit of service.

How shameless are his utterances, far surpassing the former dictator: After massacring the Kwangju citizens, who demanded the resignation of the Yusin remnants and democratization of society, with military forces provided by the U.S. imperialists, he usurped power by driving out the incumbent president at gun point. He said he would intensify the security system and order. This is not a remark that he would resign.

He arrested democratic figure Kim Tae-chung, who won the reputation as a presidential candidate 2 years ago, and drove out all rivals within the puppet military. Today he is driving out the politicians calling for party politics. All his purge commotion is a scheme to remain in power forever.

The peaceful transfer of power raved about by traitor Chon Tu-hwan is a trick. He true intention is to keep the people as colonial slaves of the U.S. imperialists by realizing long-term power, to freely repress and exploit the people and to look after his own interests by fraudulent means.

His utterances at the meeting of the leaders of the three political parties reveal his dark intention. As long as there is Chon Tu-hwan, the South Korean people can neither have democracy nor sovereignty. Nor can they achieve justice and national reunification. Today the South Korean people are struggling to drive out the U.S. imperialist aggressors who support and patronize Chon Tu-hwan and to overthrow the corrupt regime.

The military fascist clique can never block with anything the people's movement and advance.

CHON REPLACES PRIME MINISTER, 3 OTHERS

SK240926 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0900 GMT 24 Jun 82

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan today appointed Kim Song-hyop, president of Korea University, as prime minister; Kang Kyong-sik, vice finance minister, as finance minister; Pae Myong-in, director of the Educational Institute at the Ministry of Justice, as minister of justice; and So Sang-chol, vice minister of construction, as minister of energy and resources.

The cabinet reshuffle was aimed at calling persons concerned to account for the loan scandal and to regain public trust in the cabinet. Measures to politically resolve the question of the loan scandal have thus been brought to a conclusion with today's cabinet reshuffle.

In particular, the replacing of Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun reflects President Chon Tu-hwan's will to regain the public's trust in the cabinet and to start over with a new spirit and a new resolve.

DJP LEADER CONCERNED OVER CRITICISM OF DKP HEAD

[From the column "Reporter's Bench"]

[Text] Expressing concern about the controversy within the Democratic Korea Party [DKP] over its own rating of the Chongwadae talks, Yi Chae-Hyong, leader of the Democratic Justice Party, said: "In terms of quality and quantity, we feel that DKP President Yu Chi-song did a superb job at the Chongwadae talks. Why there is an attempt to trifle with his success within the party, I don't understand."

Leader Yi continued: "If the DKP tries to trifle with President Yu's success at the Chongwadae talks, it will only humiliate itself in the end. I miss a political climate in which facts are truly appreciated."

Touching on President Yu's remarks at Chongwadae on the system, Yi explained: "In his remarks on the system, President Yu called for a revision of the election laws by saying that a peaceful transfer of power is difficult under the current presidential elections law. Since I heard him saying so, I can be a witness. When the government announces the followup measures, I plan to meet with President Yu quietly on my own initiative or his." Thus, he strongly hinted at a meeting of leaders of the three major parties sometime next week.

'DUE STEPS' SOUGHT IN DKP 'VIOLENT ACTION'

[Text] The Democratic Korea Party will hold a disciplinary committee meeting today to determine punitive measures against a party lawmaker who was involved in a violent action against a fellow legislator Tuesday.

The panel session will deal with the case at the instruction of party President Rep. Yu Chi-song, who called for due steps against the violent incident at an early date during a meeting of ranking party officials yesterday.

The controversy over the violent action arose when Rep. Yun Ki-tae, who once worked as secretary to former President Yun Po-son, struck Rep. Kim Won-ki on the chest and in the face with his fists in the room of a vice party president on the fourth floor of the party headquarters at about 12:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Rep. Yun allegedly did this when Rep. Kim refused to accept his request for an explanation of his remarks critical of former President Yun during a general caucus on June 17.

According to Rep. Pak Pyong-il, chairman of the Disciplinary Committee, Rep. Yun will be punished according to party regulations.

The punitive measures included expulsion from party membership and warning.

Meanwhile, the DKP decided to participate in drafting the next year's budget in such a way as to submit its own ideas to both the government and the majority Democratic Justice Party.

JOURNALISM PROFESSOR ARGUES FOR PRESS FREEDOM

SK240121 Seoul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 22 Jun 82 p 9

[Column: "TONG-A's View" by O Taek-sop, journalism professor at Korea University]

[Text] It is more or less a common phenomenon throughout the world that the press has an important function and role and, as a lower echelon in society, maintains a close relationship with the government and is restrained by the latter.

The matter of restraint can be seen from two perspectives. One is, who is it that restrains the press? The answer is either the government or the press itself. The other is, for who is restraint exercised? The answer is either for the people or for the one that does the retraining.

Today there are four types of press systems in the world: A) dictatorial -- the government restrains the press for the government itself, B) patriarchal -- the government restrains the press for the people, C) commercial -- the press restrains the press for the press itself, and D) democratic -- the press restrains itself for the people. The Korean press can be said to be patriarchal.

The patriarchal system, which prevails in most developing countries, views human beings as masses who are so inefficient and unreasonable that they should be enlightened by the ruling class. Accordingly, they need an guardian who will protect them from wrong ideologies or dangerous thoughts, and it is the government that plays the role of the guardian. It is from this patriarchal logic that many countries ban exaggerated commercial messages, lascivious articles and propaganda items which are considered too political.

That logic seems appropriate. However, it might evolve into the notion that when there is too much of the government's protection or restraint, the state's restraint of the press is a right, not a duty -- a notion which could do harm to the unity of the people. When the government's role as a guardian is overemphasized, lower echelons in society cannot grow normally, just as children who grow up with overprotective parents become incompetent in the future. As a consequence, all the channels of the press are monopolized by the government and the networks of people's self-will are paralyzed.

When the government and the press maintain a relationship, not a patriarchal one in the positive sense but one that exists between parents and their wayward children with the former issuing one-way instructions to the latter, this will have side effects.

Word channels in society play the role of the veins in the body. As the veins provide oxygen and nutrients to each cell, thus sustaining life, so work channels provide the nutrient called information to each group or individual in society. The two are different from each other in this way: When nutrients fail to reach a cell, the functions of the cell cease. When word channels fail to cover all the spheres of society, the social spheres not covered by word channels do not cease their functions, but form spontaneous communications systems of their own. Accordingly, there arises the side effect that cracks, not unity, become universal.

Korean society today is called a society of rumors, which is the most prominent of the side effects arising when formal word channels are blocked. It is said that information available in a society is maintained at the level required by the society. People in a society can make their psychological lives possible by breathing in and out a certain amount of information according to psychological and social conditions. By the same token, society -- which is a collective body of people -- sustains and develops its vitality by having certain amounts of information circulate within it. It is a universal feature of modern society that information circulating within it is supplied through formal word channels.

When enough of the supply of information that should flow through the formal word channels fails, rumors take its place, just like an emergency blood transfusion. For the same reason, rumors prevail when natural disasters or government restraint of the press block the flow of word channels. The stronger the restraint of the press becomes, the weaker the press' self-regulation and the degree of public confidence in the world channels becomes because the people grow more sensitive to changes.

Public attention can be diverted with a large enough supply of interesting articles. Under such circumstances, however, rumors persistently prevail as indicated by the theory that "if not supplied, people make information." This is exactly the same logic as the law of the preservation of matter, that is, the quality and course of information can change in society, but the quantity of information does not change.

Making the press a government mouthpiece or restraining the press to reduce articles functioning against the government can be advantageous to the government for a short while. But in the long term, they can seriously undermine public confidence in the government and give rise to wide circulation of rumors.

The fact that rumors are not entirely false has been proved by "The Hidden Story of the Third Republic". This series of articles has confirmed that the rumors wildly prevailing whenever political events took place during the third republic were true.

Once rumors start to circulate, there is no way to stop them from spreading. The only way to deal with rumors is to guarantee the self-regulation of the press and to maintain public confidence in the press by smoothly supplying information.

Social development is possible only when all the sectors in a society grow equally. When any of the sectors of society get out of balance, we cannot expect more than crippled growth for society.

The press is nothing but a part of the infrastructure constituting society, just like politics, economy, and education. We are to host the Olympics in 1988. In view of the present level of education, political capability, cultural disposition and economic wealth, we find quite a gap between the present position of the press and that which it should occupy. I believe the press should enjoy more freedom.

In a way, we can say it is natural for rumors to persistently prevail in Korean society in view of the short supply of information. In reporting a recent series of events, the press has been comparatively faithful. In certain instances, however, pseudo-word channels outstripped the formal word channels and, due to technical errors, the public announcements on events have only added more misgivings to public doubts. It would have been better if the government had not made announcements on them at all, or it should have revealed the truth of the matters from the start.

Fertilizer and pesticides are needed for the good growth of crops in the field, but a supply of natural water containing well-balanced nourishment is more essential. Water flowing from various sources through well-maintained dikes and waterways naturally contains good nourishment and oxygen for the crops. The role of good water and strong dikes for field crops is exactly the same as the role of true information and a self-regulated press for society. Good water can be supplied to the crops through strong dikes and waterways. Otherwise, water becomes polluted and ceases to be alive. The field is society. Crops are the public. Water is the source of information which can give the public direct and indirect nourishment, and the dikes are the people who have accumulated experience and knowledge through their lifetime. When the role of the dikes is neglected or given up because of political or egoistic motivation, water cannot flow and the crops in the field will be greatly damaged.

ARMY DESERTER THREATENS CIVILIANS, KILLS CAPTAIN

[Text] An army deserter, carrying an M-16 rifle with a fixed bayonet, broke into a house in Koyang-gun, Kyonggi-do, threatened three women and then shot and killed an army captain who attempted to restrain the enlisted man Sunday night.

PFC. Yu Ho-pyong entered a house owned by Yi Un-song, 64, in Hwajon-ri, Sindo-eup, Koyang-gun, Kyonggi-do, at around 10:10 p.m. Sunday and threatened three housewives, including Yun In-suk, Yi's daughter-in-law.

After making them kneel down on the floor, the deserter said, "I don't want to live any longer. I have already sent my will to my parents in my home town." While PFC Yu was threatening them, Capt. Yi Song-u who was on leave rushed to the scene. The army deserter fired two shots with his rifle and killed the officer on the spot.

After killing the officer, PFC. Yu hurriedly moved to a nearby house and fired five shots into a room in the house but no one was injured.

BUSINESS INDEXES RECORD RECOVERY SIGNS

SK240245 Seoul YONHAP in English 0140 GMT 24 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, June 24 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean economy is showing signs of recovery as the leading composite business index has increased for three straight months after a seven month decline, Deputy Premier and Economic Planning Minister Kim Chun-song said Thursday.

In a briefing with President Chon Tu-hwan, the chief economic official said the leading composite business index notched 0.1 and 1.3 percent increases in April and May, respectively, while the coinciding composite business index advanced by 0.6 percent in April and 0.8 percent in May.

Kim noted that the current account in May was 113 million U.S. dollars in the black, the first surplus since October 1981. It was made possible by a 109 million dollar surplus in trade and a sharp decline in the non-trade deficit, he added.

Wholesale and consumer price increase rates remained at 1.5 and 3.2 percent, respectively, as of June 15, representing 2.6 and 4.4 percent increases over the same time in 1981.

Kim explained that the single-digit price increases indicated a stabilizing trend but that the foreign exchange rate still stands in the way of complete price stabilization.

Kim predicted the price increase rate will rise in the fourth quarter of 1982 because the rate had dropped substantially in the latter half of 1981.

He added that the government will push forward with a price stabilization drive to remain competitive with Korea's major trade rivals, including Taiwan, Singapore, and Hong Kong.

HEAVY, CHEMICAL INDUSTRY EXPORTS INCREASE

SK240049 Seoul YONHAP in English 0030 GMT 24 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, June 24 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's heavy and chemical industry exports have been rising considerably in recent months, indicating success in the government's policy of promoting those industries.

A Commerce-Industry Ministry report showed Thursday that exports of heavy and chemical industrial products in the first five months of this year reached nearly 4.1 billion U.S. dollars, up 18 percent from the same period last year. During the same five month period, exports of agricultural products declined by 7.8 percent from the figure in 1981, and overseas shipments of light industrial products dropped by 3.8 percent.

Heavy and chemical products' share of total exports during the cited period increased from 42.8 percent in 1980 to 45.3 percent in 1981 to 47.9 percent this year.

Ships led the rise in exports of heavy and chemical products with an increase of 158.5 percent, followed by iron and steel products (19 percent) and electric machines and tools (16.4 percent).

SON SANN LEAVES KUALA LUMPUR FOR BANGKOK

BK240838 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0600 GMT 24 Jun 82

[Text] The leader of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front, Mr Son Sann, has left Kuala Lumpur for Bangkok this afternoon. He was in the federal capital to sign a declaration establishing the Kampuchean coalition government with himself as prime minister. The other signatories were Prince Norodom Sihanouk of the Moulinaka party and Mr Khieu Samphan of the Khmer Rouge.

AFP Interview

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 23 (AFP) -- Cambodian nationalist leader Son Sann said here today that he planned to visit the five members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to express his gratitude for their crucial role in forging a Cambodian anti-Vietnamese alliance. Mr. Son Sann, who became premier under a coalition government pact signed yesterday with Prince Norodom Sihanouk and Khmer Rouge chief Khieu Samphan, said he would take the trip before or after the establishment of the new Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea on Cambodian soil.

In an interview with AFP, he said he was returning to his jungle stronghold in Cambodia via Bangkok to await the arrival of Prince Sihanouk, the president of the new coalition government. Prince Sihanouk left here for the island of Penang, off the northwestern Malaysian coast this morning, and was to return to Beijing and possibly Pyongyang before joining the two other resistance leaders on Cambodian soil to proclaim the new government. Khieu Samphan, vice-president in charge of foreign affairs in the new government, left here this afternoon to return to his guerrilla base in Cambodia.

Premier Son Sann said his tour of the ASEAN five -- Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand -- would depend on the prince's schedule. The bespectacled 71-year-old nationalist leader also said he would like to visit China "if I am invited" to seek arms for his expanding guerrilla army.

He added that his Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) currently fielded 9,000 armed guerrillas, who could be immediately reinforced by another 3,000 if arms could be found for them. In addition, 4,000 able-bodied men are in training in jungle camps, he said. "We urgently need weapons, light weapons to harass the occupation forces. We have no recruiting problem," he said. Asked to comment on the U.S. rejection of Prince Sihanouk's appeal for massive military aid, Son Sann replied: "I hope they (the Americans) will reconsider their decision."

He also announced that all three leaders of the coalition planned to attend the United Nations General Assembly session in New York in September to demonstrate their newly-found unity.

Premier Son Sann indicated however that Prince Sihanouk would speak on behalf of the coalition to head off a fresh attempt by Hanoi and its allies to unseat Democratic Kampuchea from the world body. He also made clear that the main goal of the coalition was to force the Vietnamese to negotiate and to accept U.S. resolutions calling for a withdrawal of Hanoi's 180,000 troops followed by U.N.-monitored elections in Cambodia.

In this connection, he voiced hope that the forthcoming visit to Hanoi by Australia Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr, who chaired last July's U.N. conference on Cambodia, would help speed up a political settlement to the three-and-a-half-year-old conflict.

Asked whether he favored Prince Sihanouk's call for an international parley similar to the conference on Indochina held in Geneva in 1954, he replied: "Let's wait and see what comes out of Mr Pahr's visit to Hanoi before making any fresh move."

Last Monday, Prince Sihanouk suggested an international conference in Geneva bringing together the five big powers, all the Cambodian factions, including the Hanoi-installed Heng Samrin government, Vietnam, ASEAN countries, Japan, India, Yugoslavia, Australia and New Zealand.

DENG XIAOPING MEETS WITH IENG SARY

OW240834 Beijing XINHUA in English 0826 GMT 24 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, June 24 (XINHUA) -- Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping of the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee met with Ieng Sary, deputy prime minister of Democratic Kampuchea in charge of foreign affairs, and his party here today.

Vice-Chairman Deng said that the signing of the agreement on setting up a coalition government by the leaders of the three Kampuchean resistance organizations "is a success for the patriotic Kampuchean forces in their united resistance to the Vietnamese aggression." The agreement was signed by Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, Khieu Samphan, and Son Sann in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, on June 22.

Present at today's meeting were Han Nianlong, adviser to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and Pich Cheang, ambassador of Democratic Kampuchea to China.

Ieng Sary and his party are scheduled to leave Beijing shortly for home.

SPK: KUALA LUMPUR 'PUPPET SHOW' WILL NOT LAST

BK230952 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0422 GMT 23 Jun 82

[SPK commentary: "The Puppets Will Be Crushed by the Wheel of History"]

[Text] Phnom Penh, 23 Jun (SPK) -- The curtain rises...Three puppets sign a paper. But this is not a puppet show; this is what happened in Kuala Lumpur on 22 June.

The protagonists in this show are Khieu Samphan, Son Sann and Sihanouk, and all three are equally "famous." The first, on account of the 3 million Kampucheans massacred by the regime over which he presided, a regime to which Son Sann alluded when he declared on 24 April 1980: "It is an insult to our dead and our disabled for anyone to accuse us of conniving with the Khmer Rouge!" The second, author of this statement, who believed himself "cleaner" than his ilk, was a bank director and prime minister who sold off his country to international financiers. The third, well known as a political prostitute, bears a crushing responsibility for the misfortunes that have befallen the Kampuchean people: it was he who defended the regime of genocide at the United Nations on the day following the liberation of the country and who stated in Phnom Penh on 29 August 1981 that Son Sann was not any better than Khieu Samphan, that he could survive only thanks to plenty of aid and regular injections of U.S. dollars, Chinese yuan, Japanese yen, French francs, Deutsche marks...by the United States, China, Japan, and ASEAN! Sihanouk concluded that neither Son Sann nor Khieu Samphan could symbolize the sovereignty and dignity of the Kampuchean people. As for himself, he made it known that he joined Khieu Samphan and Son Sann because such was the will of China (AP, 9 February 1981). For the Kampuchean people and the progressive and imperial [as received] opinion in the world, there is no need for this confession by Sihanouk to know that the real sponsors of the Kuala Lumpur agreement are the Chinese expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and assisted by the reactionary circles of ASEAN.

What can Son Sann and Sihanouk do inside this "coalition" dominated by the perpetrators of genocide? As quoted by AFP on 10 February 1981, didn't Sihanouk say: "I would play only a representative role within this coalition; the real leadership would belong to Khieu Samphan"? Did Son Sann get the stick which he asked for before entering the tiger's cage? Did he get the sacrifice of the Khmer Rouge ringleaders? Didn't he declare that it would be impossible for him to drive a vehicle with three steering wheels?

The show in Kuala Lumpur is only cosmetic surgery to make up the face of the Beijing Dracula. The ASEAN countries admitted this by affirming that it would be impossible to keep Democratic Kampuchea in the United Nations if it always embodied the bloody regime. That is the true goal of this so-called coalition. The Chinese expansionists and their accomplices want to use it to legitimize their arms supplies to the murderers in their attempt to make them rule again in Phnom Penh before extending their empire into other countries of the region. The reactionary circles of ASEAN are responsible before history for their complicity in this criminal undertaking by Beijing.

The maneuver is perfidious, but it cannot mislead the Kampuchean people. By allying themselves with the criminals, Son Sann and Sihanouk have dropped their masks. Never will the Kampuchean people forget their 3 million dead, the 4 years of forced labor and the untold physical and moral tortures in a society without markets, schools or hospitals. For the past 3 years, assisted by their Vietnamese, Lao and Soviet brothers and other peoples in the world, they have reestablished a free, independent and sovereign state, a country which is still poor but where it is possible to work with an absolute faith in a better future. Aware of the perfidy and cruelty of their enemies, it is certain that the Kampuchean people will unite further in order to face them.

Expressing the will of his people, Chairman Heng Samrin recently declared in an interveiw with the Hungarian newspaper NEPSZABADSAG that the coalition is doomed to failure because its goals run against the interests of the Kampuchean people.

The Kuala Lumpur show was the object of a lengthy publicity campaign, but hardly has the screen been raised than the public realizes that this troupe of puppets will not last long. No matter how perfidious the maneuvers of the Kampuchean people's enemies, they will not be able to reverse the situation. The puppets will be crushed by the wheel of history.

SPK SCORES U.S. 'SLANDER' ON CHEMICAL WEAPONS USE

BK231222 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1433 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 22 Jun (SPK) -- A commentary in the latest issue of the journal KAMPUCHEA notes that by renewing the so-called "use of toxic chemical weapons in Kampuchea, Laos and Afghanistan" slander, the United States wants to bring down the prestige of the socialist countries and of the Kampuchean revolution on the eve of the 37th session of the UN General Assembly.

The central organ of the front writes that the misleading tactics of the imperialists -- with the United States as the ringleader -- have become a familiar tool for them in their opposition to the socialist revolution. However, they do not surprise well-informed people at all.

It was the United States which dumped thousands of liters of chemical products in Indochina, badly damaging the environment. Not only have the culprits at the Pentagon refused to pay indemnity to the peoples of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, but they have been seeking to make people believe that toxic chemical weapons are used by Vietnam and the USSR and, thereby make them forget that the United States itself manufactures chemical and mass destruction weapons.

By bringing up the problems of toxic chemical weapons, the U.S. imperialists hope to get the necessary funds for their nuclear arms race to achieve military supremacy over the USSR, KAMPUCHEA notes.

Bou Thang Speech

BK221428 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Comrade Bou Thang, member of the Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense, took the floor to present his speech indicating the development of the revolutionary armed forces.

After welcoming the guests, the comrade minister of national defense stressed at the beginning of his interesting speech the efforts made by the party to build the armed forces since its founding. The party has assisted and supported the armed forces enabling them to change their structure from small units lacking a large amount of materiel to become regular forces with more combatants able to stage activities everywhere. During successive battles, these armed forces have received assistance, support, respect and love from the people. In their struggle against the colonialists and the imperialists, the revolutionary forces always preserved the traditional solidarity fighting shoulder to shoulder with Uncle Ho's combatants and the Lao liberation forces. This enabled the revolutions of the three countries to be victorious which was a factor contributing to the 17 April 1975 victory when our country was completely liberated.

The comrade minister talked about the situation after 17 April 1975 and stressed the crimes of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique -- lackeys of the Beijing Chinese expansionists -- which betrayed the people and implemented a barbarous policy which was disastrous for the country. They changed the army into an instrument to massacre the people and applied a policy of betrayal toward the people. They also incited hatred between the three peoples.

Later on, the comrade minister noted the rising of our people to struggle against the genocidal regime saying: Their barbarous acts, however, could not extinguish the fire of contempt of our people. Our people rose in a number of areas until it became a nationwide uprising. Initially a number of genuine revolutionaries in the army began to oppose this barbarous regime, and split from this clique. Various units rose up and formed many bases to oppose this genocidal clique such as in the eastern region, Koh Kong, Svay Rieng and so on. Various progressive forces and genuine revolutionary organizations were unanimous in creating a National United Front for National Salvation at the end of 1978. Under the leadership of the front and with the assistance of the Vietnamese Communist Party, army and people, our armed forces toppled the genocidal regime and liberated the country on 7 January 1979. This victory created a new era -- an era of independence and genuine freedom.

Later on, the speech dealt with the rapid development in quantity and quality of our armed forces after the 7 January liberation day under the leadership of the front. Concerning relations with the people, the comrade minister talked about the traditional solidarity between the army and the people which was demonstrated by concrete revolutionary acts. The army has assisted the people in their agricultural production work and in their everyday lives. It has cooperated with local state powers to motivate the people to fight the enemies, and to discover and reveal the enemy's agents hidden in our organization. This cooperation has contributed to the reinforcement of the state power, assured social order and protected the people's belongings and lives.

After presenting the enemy's situation and maneuvers to push ahead their guerrilla warfare, to construct support bases and to stage psychological warfare and diplomatic activities, the comrade minister expressed his views on our situation compared with the enemy's forces and recommended taking the following necessary steps:

[Begin recording] Respected comrades and friends,

The present situation in our country shows that the revolution has more advantages than the enemy. Our people are richer than before. The enemies have been seriously defeated but they are aggressively ambitious. They become confused when they face defeat. In 1982, they will continue to implement their maneuvers. Therefore, in order to defeat all of the enemy's maneuvers and activities, we must not relax in our efforts to strengthen the good character and traditions of the revolutionary army. In fact, it is necessary to implement the following points well:

1. Do not relax in efforts to reinforce faith and loyalty to the fatherland, the revolution and the people. It is necessary to recognize that the character of our army is similar to the character of the working class with two special peculiarities -- its revolutionary nature and its scientific nature. Consequently, it is necessary for our army to be led by a Marxist-Leninist party. Evidently, it is directed, educated and forged in all fields by the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party. Our armed forces must always be an efficient sharp instrument which has the confidence of the party, the revolutionary state and the people. It must be the hope and the great pride of the nation and friends all over the world.

2. It is necessary to serve the people with all our hearts deserving to be an army of the people, born from the people and for the people. Each cadre and combatant must understand and know clearly that the people are the masters of the nation's destiny. They are the great and everlasting source of manpower. Our army is the child of the people. It was born by them and has been respected, loved, cared for and fed by them. Therefore, our army must always struggle to improve themselves in all fields and to transform itself to deserve being the people's army in order and to earn the respect and love of the people. It is an honor to be a revolutionary combatant assigned by the people to defend the fatherland and the peaceful life of the people.

3. It is necessary to maintain solidarity and unity at all levels. It is necessary to devote body and soul, develop a solidarity spirit, love each other as friends -- between comrades and between units -- and strengthen the spirit of initiative of the masses and the capacity of each combatant in fulfilling their work as well as in the struggle.

Our army is a revolutionary army. All cadres have the right to study politics and have the same ideals. They do not distinguish themselves from the minorities, people from the East or the West, men or women. They consider themselves as relatives from the same family. It is necessary to love and respect each other. It is necessary to share weal and woe in both difficult and joyful circumstances.

F Favoritism, bureaucratism, militarism, liberalism and the lack of respect for authority are bad manners contrary to the good character of the revolutionary people's army.

Our army must demonstrate a good character and follow the good traditions of the Issarak army. Our army must make every effort to build militant solidarity ties between high-ranking groups and their subordinates, between cadres and combatants and between units. Solidarity should also be maintained between the ministry and offices and units. All of us must be determined to unite with each other to surmount all obstacles and difficulties, to win over all kinds of enemies and to achieve success in all tasks assigned by the party and the people.

4. Our army must heighten the spirit of international proletarian solidarity. It has to maintain close solidarity and militant solidarity with Vietnam and Laos. It must keep up close solidarity with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries.

International solidarity constitutes a revolutionary line of our party. It is the expression of profound sentiments of our people and it is also a strategic task of our country's revolution. Therefore, international solidarity is an important and indispensable factor in the duty to improve the behavior and the tradition of the revolutionary army.

5. It is necessary to heighten our spirit and resolutely be determined to defeat all reactionary maneuvers of the Beijing Chinese expansionists in collusion with the imperialists and their lackeys. All cadres and combatants of our armed forces must constantly heighten their vigilance and be ready to foil all sabotage tricks of the enemy. [end recording]

In conclusion, the comrade minister of national defense, on behalf of cadres and combatants, expressed his thanks for the attention given the revolutionary army by the party and the front. He also thanked cadres, employees, and peoples and experts of friendly countries for the friendly sentiments expressed to our army.

The ceremony of the 31st anniversary of the founding of the people's revolutionary army was concluded in a joyful atmosphere after all the meeting participants listened to a tale of frontline model heroism displayed by Comrade (Pel Sam At), representative of outstanding vanguard cadres and combatants.

Chan Si Speech

BK210250 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Speech by Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers, at a 19 June meeting in Phnom Penh marking the 31st founding anniversary of the KPRAF]

[Text] [Begin recording] My respects to the Presidium members, foreign guests, dear comrades and friends:

At a time when all our people are emulating in building and defending the motherland, and because of the rapid rebirth of our country, it is with great pride and elation that we welcome the traditional anniversary of our army. We hail our combatants who have achieved immense successes and who have overcome many tests and trials in the struggle for national liberation. They have attacked the French, driven out the U.S. imperialists and toppled the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime -- that subservient lackey of the Beijing big-nation expansionist-hegemonists -- and restored our national independence, brought happiness to our people and ensured their right to be treated as human beings and citizens. We miss those of our combatants who cannot be with us here today because they are firmly wielding their weapons around the clock to defend the motherland and our revolutionary gains.

Dear comrades and friends,

In the struggle against the French colonialist aggressors, thanks to the leadership of the Indochinese Communist Party and at the call of the motherland to join the revolutionary struggle movement of the masses, the outstanding sons and daughters of the Kampuchean people rose up and armed themselves to fight against the enemy to achieve national salvation.

Starting from small militia units and groups equipped with primitive weapons maintained, supported and fed by the people and struggling for the cause of national liberation and the interests of the people our army fought and won victory after victory, growing up gradually into the Issarak army which was the forefather of our present people's army.

Since its founding, the growth of our army has been linked with the struggle alliance of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos. This close militant alliance of the three Indochinese countries helped our revolution to overcome many obstacles and trials and to score victories over the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists. In particular, at the beginning of 1979, once again, thanks to the immense and sincere assistance of the fraternal Vietnamese people and army, our revolutionary armed forces together with the people rose up eagerly and violently crushed the clique of traitors Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan -- the out-and-out valets of the Beijing expansionists -- completely liberating the whole country and saving our people from genocide.

Under the leadership of the KPRP and KUFNCD, enjoying the assistance of the Vietnamese combatants and experts who carry out their internationalist duty in our country in conformity with the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation signed between the two countries, our armed forces have surmounted difficult tests in struggle and in concrete labor. They have developed rapidly and achieved many exploits on the battlefields. They have succeeded in promoting agitation work among the masses and building revolutionary bases in various villages and communes, thus creating solid foundations for the revolution. Many units, combatants and cadres have been presented with decorations and the army as a whole has been awarded the national defense medal, first class, by the state. [end recording]

Later, the comrade chairman of the Council of Ministers talked about the multifaceted development of the country, which proves the success of the revolution. At the same time, the speech dealt with the maneuvers of the expansionists, imperialists and their lackeys who are colluding to oppose the independence of the Kampuchean people in a senseless manner. Afterwards, it noted the valiant efforts of our people to build the country and withstand the sabotage activities of their enemies. The speech also clearly pointed out that the task of national defense is a duty of the whole party, people and army.

Dealing with the campaign to create exploits marking the 31st founding anniversary of the revolutionary army, the speech called for movement to implement the "four goods." First, it advised us to make every effort to strengthen and enhance the national defense task by instilling a high level of political consciousness into all villages and communes and exhorting them to hate and despise our enemies so they will heighten their vigilance, frustrate the enemy's maneuvers, carry out mass agitation work and productive labor, and to build firm and strong revolutionary forces with strong administrative apparatuses, mass organizations and militia forces. We must also train understanding, efficient and responsible cadres who will implement all policies, directives, decisions and orders of the higher authorities and state well and who are imbued with a high sense of political unanimity and enjoy the affection, esteem and solidarity of the people.

Second, the speech advised the whole party and all people to contribute to the consolidation of the armed forces to enable them to become fully qualified to defend our territorial integrity.

On this point, the speech urged the building of regular, regional and militia forces imbued with a high degree of political consciousness, a resolute will to fight and win, and great courage and determination to defeat all enemies. Further, these forces must be well disciplined, have a high level of combat readiness, be skilled in combat tactics and work, have high cultural standards, have the potential to become a regular and modern army, be closely attached to the people and display all the characteristics of being an army of the people, by the people and for the people.

The speech also advised that party leadership over the army be further expended and that attention be given to building party bases and core groups, educating the combatants and improving the material and cultural conditions of the combatants. It urged that resolute opposition be directed against rankist and militarist behavior among the cadres, which is a source of weakness in the combat efficiency of the army.

Regarding the third point, the speech taught that the militant solidarity with the Vietnamese people and army and with other fraternal countries should be enhanced. It stressed that solidarity is a matter of life and death for our country. As the fourth party congress resolutions noted: The annals of the Kampuchean revolution which span more than half a century clearly show that whenever the Kampuchean revolution was linked with the Vietnamese revolution there was always victory.

On the fourth point, the speech advised that solidarity among the people should be increased in order to better defend and build the motherland. The revolution is a cause for the masses, therefore, it depends on the people to bring it to victory. In order to strengthen and expand the solidarity and allegiance of the entire people, the speech called for educating the people so that they will thoroughly and profoundly grasp all policies of the party, front and state and turn these policies into daily revolutionary activities for the masses. It also urged the immediate strengthening and broadening the National United Front and vigorously expanding the mass organizations from the central to grass-roots levels in order to increase the number of revolutionary forces with every passing day. The administrative apparatuses at all levels, particularly in the villages and communes, should be expanded so that the state power will become the true representative of the people's interests, clearly understand its authority and duty, wholeheartedly serve the people and resolutely overcome rankist behavior and aloofness from the people.

In conclusion, the comrade chairman of the Council of Ministers praised our Kampuchean people for the progress of the country and for their readiness to fulfill their tasks. He also thanked the friendly countries for their sincere aid and conveyed his greetings to the families of the combatants and of those who have rendered service to the revolution. He said:

[Begin recording] On this occasion, on behalf of the party Central Committee, the front, state organs and the Kampuchean people, I would like to extend my thanks to the glorious VCP, to the Vietnamese state organs and to the fraternal heroic Vietnamese people and army who are carrying out their glorious internationalist duty by sincerely, resolutely, consistently and effectively assisting and supporting our Kampuchean people. [applause]

I would like to extend my thanks to the parties, governments and peoples of Laos, the Soviet Union and the other fraternal socialist countries, to all other countries and to many international organizations for sincerely supporting and assisting our Kampuchean revolution and people. [applause] On this occasion, on behalf of the KPRP Central Committee and the PRK Government, I would like to convey greetings to the families of the fallen combatants and disabled soldiers and the families of those who have rendered great services to our Kampuchean motherland. [applause] We wholeheartedly admire all the cadres and combatants in all units of the armed forces who have brilliantly carried out the tasks assigned them by the party, state and people. [applause] I wholeheartedly praise the industriousness and ingenuity of all our people who, in a joint effort, have rapidly brought our beloved country back to life. [end recording]

PREM HOLDS PRESS CONFERENCE ON KHMER COALITION

[Text] Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon spoke to newsmen at Government House today. Asked about the reported plan of Prince Sihanouk to come to Thailand this Saturday [26 June], the prime minister said he believed Prince Sihanouk will come because he will have to go to Kampuchea to see his people. The prime minister said it is up to Prince Sihanouk if he wants to come to Thailand in an official capacity. We will accord him an official reception if he makes an official visit. If he merely wants us to provide him conveniences we will do so also. Thailand is the only transit place if he is to go to Kampuchea. Asked if the Prime Minister will meet with Prince Sihanouk, the prime minister said he will meet with the prince if that is what the prince wants.

Asked if the establishment of the coalition government in Kampuchea will bring about a change in the overall situation, the prime minister said Thailand will be able to safeguard itself regardless of the situation in Kampuchea, and the stronger the Kampucheans become, the easier they can safeguard their country. Asked if Thailand is ready to face a situation which might affect its security, the prime minister said he are always ready. He said Thailand has plenty of experience regarding border problems and we are ready to face any situation. He does not, however, anticipate any problem.

Asked if a loose coalition in Kampuchea will make national administration difficult there, the prime minister said we must wait and see how the administration will take shape, but noted that Prince Sihanouk is an experienced administrator and so are the other two leaders. They should be able to come up with ideas which will benefit Kampuchea.

Asked if the successful joining of the Kampuchean factions will result in more arms activities in Kampuchea, the prime minister said he believed there are trends in that direction because there could be more fighting as both opposing sides grow stronger.

Asked what Thailand's position will be if the Kampuchean factions should ask for assistance, the prime minister said he expects that there would be requests for assistance. Thailand must, however, consult other ASEAN countries about assistance to the Kampucheans for the sake of consensus. Assistance will be in the forms which will help the Kampucheans to be able to govern themselves and of course be in the forms which we can provide. The assistance will have to be jointly agreed to by the other ASEAN countries. Such assistance must not conflict with our national interests -- this is the principle which every country must uphold.

The prime minister also told newsmen that a royal decree has been issued appointing Suthi Singsane deputy finance minister to replace Phaichit Uathawikun who has resigned.

Further Report

BK231451 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Statement to newsmen by Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon on 23 June at Government House -- recorded]

[Excerpt] The ASEAN countries have always tried to get the leaders of the three Kampuchean factions to join together. This has been the common view of all the ASEAN nations. Now it has been achieved, it should be a cause of joy for all ASEAN. Besides, I believe this coalition will increase the credibility of both ASEAN and the Kampucheans in the eyes of the world. ASEAN itself will surely attract greater credibility from international circles for its achievement in bringing the three Kampuchean factions together.

Democratic Kampuchea will benefit from the coalition. What is clear is that it will get more votes when the seating issue comes before the United Nations General Assembly in September. That means Democratic Kampuchea will be in a stronger position in view of recognition it gets from the United Nations.

As for Thailand, we believe this will elicit a more favorable response toward the UN resolution or the international conference on Kampuchea. Countries like Australia which have withdrawn their recognition from Democratic Kampuchea might think about reviewing their position as a result of the coalition success.

Now, regarding the problem of security for Thailand, I believe the coalition of the three Kampuchean factions will strengthen their forces.

On Military Aid to Coalition

BK231151 Hong Kong AFP in English 1138 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Bangkok, 23 Jun (AFP) -- Thai Premier Prem Tinsulanon today said Thailand would "consider in consultation with ASEAN" any request for military aid from the new coalition government of Democratic Kampuchea. Addressing a rare press conference at Government House, Gen. Prem said Thailand's policy towards the new coalition government was to "help it become self-reliant." But he stressed any aid Thailand might extend to the new coalition would come only after consultations with its partners in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) -- grouping Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore and the Philippines.

Asked if this would include military aid, the Thai leader said "if they make the request, we would consider it in consultation with ASEAN."

Gen. Prem hailed success in the formation of the coalition as a move that would benefit Cambodians and increase the credibility of ASEAN.

In the battlefield, the coalition would strengthen Cambodian forces seeking to drive out of Cambodia the estimated 180,000-strong Vietnamese army, he said. But the greater strength of the resistance force might lead to more violent clashes, he noted. Thailand was prepared to meet any fall-out from an escalation in the fighting, he affirmed.

NATIONS REVIEW ON SIHANOUK'S UPCOMING VISIT

[Editorial: "Sihanouk Can Do Much To Enhance Credibility"]

[Text] Prince Norodom Sihanouk has assumed various titles during the long period he ruled Kampuchea but he was usually called chef d'etat. And now as president of Democratic Kampuchea, the government that is recognized by the United Nations, he is again the chef d'etat. When Sihanouk visits Thailand on Saturday, it will be about a quarter of a century since he visited this country. Somehow, he is very cautious about what he says about Thailand because he seems to take it for granted that he is disliked in Thailand. Sure there was much bad blood between Thailand and Kampuchea over 20 years ago when Kampuchea laid claim to Khao Phra Wihan and took the claim to the International Court of Justice at the Hague where on some technical legal grounds, Thailand lost the case.

But he would be totally wrong to think that after all this time Thailand bears any personal animosity towards him. Since that time, the whole geopolitical picture of this region has changed, and what is more important is Kampuchea itself is in a state of flux and is currently a victim of Vietnamese aggression. If in the interests of his country and his people, Sihanouk can forgive the Khmer Rouge who had kept him under house arrest for more than two years, then much of the past acrimony can be forgotten. Sihanouk must also remember that Thailand, as one of the ASEAN members, was at the forefront in bringing about the coalition.

Sihanouk's present visit to Thailand must necessarily be of a business-like nature since, as the head of the coalition, he should join Khieu Samphan and Son Sann on Kampuchean soil to set up the government and attend to various details that will follow. But Sihanouk himself does not seem to be sure of his future role. For some years he has been staying in Beijing and in Pyongyang and has not been able to play an influential role in Kampuchea — his Moulinaka faction has some troops inside Kampuchea, but the brunt of the Vietnamese attacks have been taken by the Khmer Rouge.

Once the details of the coalition have been announced from Kampuchean soil so that it would not be considered a government-in-exile and administrative details attended to, he would be free to travel extensively to drum up support for the coalition. From our point of view, the first task of the coalition is to establish its credibility internationally. Sihanouk, definitely the best-known Kampuchean, has shored up a lot of prestige during the time before he was ousted in a coup. And he is ideally suited to win backing from the Third World countries.

We sincerely hope that he will not again become a recluse in Beijing or Pyongyang. For instance, the non-aligned grouping at present is following the "empty seat formula" as far as Kampuchea, which is a member, is concerned. Soon there will be a non-aligned summit in Baghdad and there is much that Sihanouk could personally do to obtain recognition for the coalition.

INTERIOR MINISTER TALKS ON LAO BORDER INCIDENT

[Excerpt] Commenting on the Lao shooting on Thailand's Mekong River patrol boats, Interior Minister Gen Sitthi Chirarot said the matter is over now. The Thai ambassador in Laos had protested to Laos over the incident, but Laos said it was not responsible for what had happened. That was politics, the interior minister said. He said relations are difficult when it is not based on mutual sincerity. Thailand therefore will have to be careful of every step it takes and must be prepared for anything which might happen.

On his meeting with the Malaysian deputy prime minister on 21 June, the interior minister said they held consultations on the work of the Thai-Malaysian border committee. The Malaysian deputy prime minister and the interior minister are both co-chairmen of the committee representing their respective countries. There is no problem at present concerning the situation along the Thai-Malaysian border. Asked whether there had been any agreement on a prisoner exchange, the interior minister said they had not talked about that arrangement yet. So far, there has only been a cabinet decision to have the Foreign Ministry study this issue. The interior minister said, in his opinion, if there is to be any arrangement on prisoner exchanges, it should be with all countries, and not only with Malaysia alone.

BANGKOK REPORTS INCREASE IN THAI-LAO TRADE

BK210630 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 20 Jun 82

[Text] According to the Bank of Thailand, Thai-Lao trade has improved following a general decline in 1981. During the first 3 months of this year, Thailand exported 249.9 million baht worth of goods to Laos, as compared with 101.9 million during the same period in 1981. Most of Thai exports to Laos were consumer goods. Imports from Laos during the first 3 months of 1982 amounted to 8.3 million baht, as compared with 9.4 million baht for the same period of 1981. The above figures show that Thailand enjoyed 241.6 million baht in trade surplus with Laos during the first 3 months of 1982.

AFP CITES NGUYEN CO THACH ON KHMER COALITION

[By Michel Blanchard]

[Text] Hanoi, 23 June (AFP) -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said today that Tuesday's signing in Kuala Lumpur of a tripartite Cambodian coalition agreement "does not bother Vietnam at all," adding that Hanoi was still prepared to make a "gesture" if Thailand stopped aiding the Khmer Rouge.

Mr Thach, who spoke to AFP in a break during the inaugural session of Vietnam's National Assembly, said the agreement between the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge and anti-communist groupings led by former head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk and former Premier Son Sann "changed nothing" in the situation.

The new coalition government was merely another attempt to mask the "odious features" of the Khmer Rouge regime, headed by Pol Pot during its five years in power when (according to Vietnamese estimates) some two million Cambodians were massacred, in a bid to maintain the Khmer Rouge in the Cambodian seat in the United Nations, Mr Thach said in substance. "No one is fooled by this manoeuvre," he said.

Vietnam, however, was still prepared to make a "gesture" if Thailand ceased giving aid to the Khmer Rouge, he added. This gesture could be a partial troop withdrawal from Cambodia, where between 180,000 and 200,000 Hanoi troops are propping the Heng Samrin Phnom Penh regime, observers said.

It seemed increasingly likely that when the Indochinese foreign ministers meet, probably in Ho Chi Minh City, in early July they will decide on a unilateral partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia to show "good will," the observers said.

Vice Foreign Minister Vo Dong Giang said in an interview on June 18 that Hanoi and Phnom Penh were ready to make such a gesture "if there were positive signs" from the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) countries.

Although ASEAN support for the anti-Vietnamese coalition could hardly qualify as a "positive sign," observers believed that it was not enough to make the Vietnamese give up the idea of a "gesture," particularly as some ASEAN countries, notably Indonesia, have reaffirmed the necessity of a dialogue with Hanoi.

Mr Thach did express regret that ASEAN should make the mistake of "playing the Chinese political game" by agreeing to a role in the setting up of the coalition. However, there seems to be no question that his visits to Burma, Singapore and Malaysia in mid-July and to Indonesia and the Philippines later this year will still take place. Hanoi attaches great importance to the visits, as it favours dialogue with the ASEAN countries.

Mr Thach said that Vietnam and Cambodia were "not in a hurry" to see the Cambodian seat in the United Nations voted to the Heng Samrin government. The world body has next to consider the question of Cambodian accreditation after the beginning of its next session in September.

Observers noted that Hanoi and Phnom Penh were now well in command of the ground situation in Cambodia and apparently regarded the setting up of the coalition as merely a disagreeable incidental. The only thing really likely to irritate them would be if countries which had hitherto voted for the Cambodian seat to be left vacant voted for the coalition government now that it was more "presentable." Vietnam in any case considers that the coalition government is "doomed to failure" because of the dissensions between the participants.

The Vietnamese foreign minister said Prince Sihanouk would find his presence in the coalition government to be "a bad thing" for himself. "Twice is too many times," Mr Thach said, alluding to the fact Prince Sihanouk lent the Khmer Rouge his prestige by remaining head of state at the beginning of their regime before they stripped him of the title in 1976 and made him into a virtual prisoner in his own palace.

Some observers here believe that Hanoi might even be quite pleased that Prince Sihanouk, who might have retained some popularity in Cambodia, should have openly compromised himself with the Khmer Rouge, execrated by the population for their extreme cruelty while in power.

ENVOY WARNS ASEAN ON SUPPORT FOR KHMERS

BK240643 Hong Kong AFP in English 0615 GMT 24 Jun 82

[Text] Jakarta, 24 Jun (AFP) -- The support of the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN) for the newly-formed anti-Vietnamese Cambodian coalition government posed a danger for ASEAN members themselves, Vietnamese envoy in Jakarta Trinh Xuan Lang was today reported as having said.

The leading Jakarta newspaper KOMPAS quoted Mr Lang as saying: "I would like to stress and warn ASEAN members that in this way (supporting the coalition government) they have made a most dangerous example for themselves."

The Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge and two anti-communist groupings headed by former head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk and former Premier Son Sann respectively signed an agreement in Kuala Lumpur this week to set up a tripartite coalition government.

Mr Lang said China still used pro-Chinese rebels in its subversive activities to oppose the legal governments of ASEAN members. ASEAN had been trapped by China into supporting the anti-Vietnamese coalition government which is only a trick of Beijing and the United States to cover up the tarnished image of the Khmer Rouge and to defend its occupancy of the Cambodian seat in the United Nations, he said.

The ambassador was quoted as saying "ASEAN now supports China by backing the coalition government and this can be regarded as defiance towards the Cambodian people." The ambassador said the coalition government was like a "forced marriage" and added: "Who forced it? Everybody knows." He described the coalition government as an attempt to "put three horses which often fight each other into one stable." None of the three signatories of the declaration on the coalition government had the right to represent the Cambodian people, because they all had obeyed Chinese interests, he said.

The current pro-Vietnam government in Phnom Penh had been given a mandate through a general election, he said, adding, "If you mean that another election arranged by ASEAN must take place, this is completely impossible."

Meanwhile in an editorial, KOMPAS said the coalition government should not rely on China in carrying out the struggle. "For Vietnam it is like a red rag in front of a bull, and certainly the coalition government will not agree that the Vietnamese in Cambodia be replaced by the Chinese," the paper said.

TOKYO EMBASSY DENIES GUERRILLAS' PRESENCE

OW171037 Tokyo KYODO in English 1026 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 17, KYODO -- The Vietnamese Embassy in Tokyo has denied the existence of organized antigovernment guerrilla activities in Vietnam, which were reported here last week.

The report was part of Sino-U.S. propaganda against Vietnam, the embassy said in a recent statement. The embassy statement was made in response to Japanese press reports that a Vietnamese refugee temporarily resettled in Japan had taken part in a battle against Vietnamese communist troops while visiting his homeland as a "tourist."

The unidentified Vietnamese had claimed in letters to Japan that he had fought Vietnamese Government forces. The refugee also said the antigovernment guerrilla group concerned has received financial assistance from Vietnamese living in Japan.

While admitting the existence of "reactionary" elements in Vietnam, the embassy statement said they are no more than bandits, victimizing villagers in remote areas. There is no organized resistance or antigovernment guerrilla movement in Vietnam, the statement added.

SRV JOINS NUCLEAR NONPROLIFERATION TREATY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 17 -- Proceeding from its consistent policy of peace and in conformity with United Nations statements and resolutions on curbing the nuclear arms race, the Socialist Republic of Vietnam has decided to subscribe to the treaty of non-proliferation of nuclear weapons, declared Deputy Foreign Minister Vo Dong Giang at the second special session of the U.N. General Assembly on disarmament on June 6. Vo Dong Giang pointed out that the U.S. imperialists were exacerbating international tension, undermining East-West detente, stepping up the arms race, and opposing disarmament, national independence and sovereignty, and world peace and security.

"The well-known peace programme adopted by the Communist Party of the Soviet Union at its 26th Congress and the Soviet Union's recent proposals eloquently prove that the Soviet Government places the elimination of the nuclear catastrophe above all other interests," he said. "As a non-nuclear country threatened by a nuclear country, the R.S.V. firmly supports the proposal for an international accord protecting all non-nuclear countries as initiated in 1978," Vo Dong Giang continued.

Vo Dong Giang said: "In the tension now prevailing in many parts of continents, the removal of hotbeds of war has become urgent, the S.R.V. supports the establishments of peace and nuclear-free zones in Latin America, Africa, the Middle East, the Mediterranean, Europe, Northern Europe, the Indian Ocean and Southeast Asia. The establishment of such zones must be based on respect for the interests and aspirations of the countries in these regions and must be free of interference and intimidation by outside powers. As an Asian country, Vietnam welcomes and wholeheartedly supports the proposal made by the Peoples Republic of Mongolia for a convention of non-aggression and renunciation of use of war among the Asian and Pacific countries.

"On Southeast Asia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic representing the other two Indochinese countries at the 36th Session of the U.N. General Assembly, advanced a seven-point proposal of peaceful co-existence among countries in the region. This proposal and others made at the various Indochinese ministerial conferences are still standing. Vietnam will spare no effort to join the other Indochinese countries in discussion with the ASEAN countries for peaceful settlement of conflicts and differences between the Indochinese and A.S.E.A.N. countries through negotiations in the spirit that Southeast Asian problems be solved by Southeast Asian countries themselves on the principles of equality, friendship, mutual respect and understanding, consideration of one another's legitimate interests, common consent, non-imposition, non-interference from outside, without the use of force or threat of force in their relations. This will create favourable conditions for setting up a region of peace, stability and co-operation in Southeast Asia.

"It is clear that interference and threat on the part of Beijing and Washington are the main obstacle to the establishment of a region of peace, stability and co-operation in Southeast Asia. For this reason the Southeast Asian problem does not mean a problem between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries. It is the question of doing away with the interference and threat from China and United States so that the countries in this region may set up a region of peace as conceived by them. Which has been pointed out in the final statement of the first special session. [sentence as received]

"The Vietnamese delegation expresses its most cherished hope that this session will reflect the common, prevailing demand of millions of people around the world for an end to the arms race and the elimination of the danger of a nuclear war, which will help to improve the international atmosphere on the basis of protecting the independence, sovereignty and security of all nations, and to create necessary conditions for social and economic development of all countries especially the developing countries, in justice and democracy."

"The Vietnamese delegation holds that state leaders should heed the voice of people of all walks of life on all continents who have different political views but who all want world peace and are makers of history. We maintain that it is necessary to go ahead with preparations for a world-wide disarmament conference as soon as possible."

HANOI HAILS USSR PROPOSAL ON NUCLEAR WEAPONS

BK231418 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] The Soviet Union's new peace proposal has touched on the burning and vital problem of our era. Facts show that Washington and other reactionary forces are frenziedly stepping up their arms buildup, especially nuclear arms buildup.

In 1948, the United States had only some 150 atomic bombs. Now it possesses almost 10,000 strategic nuclear units. Each unit has a bigger explosive charge than the atomic bomb the United States dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945. This constitutes a serious threat to world peace. An urgent problem facing mankind is to check the occurrence of a nuclear disaster to defend mankind's civilization and the people's lives.

Stemming from its responsibility toward mankind's destiny, the Soviet Union has unilaterally put forth a very important proposal to eliminate the danger of a nuclear war. If all nuclear countries do like the Soviet Union, there will be no nuclear war and the complete ban of the use of nuclear weapons can be realized. This is the desire of the majority of the world people. Worthy of notice is that through its proposal, the Soviet Union intends to enhance the trust in the relations among countries and in putting conditions for disarmament.

The U.S. press has remarked that the new Soviet peace proposal is blow dealt at Reagan's warlike policy. Meanwhile, people throughout the world welcome this Soviet peace proposal as a great contribution to disarmament and preventing the danger of a nuclear war.

The Soviet initiative is embarrassing the United States and other Western countries. In his speech at the UNGA on 17 June, U.S. President Reagan tried to elude the Soviet proposal. Moreover, he spoke ill of the Soviet Union and Vietnam and reiterated the deceitful proposal he made in November last year. He even called his proposal the calendar for peace. But as the New York TIMES has pointed out, Reagan's speech is not his policy. The Reagan administration will be judged not through its words but it deeds.

If Mr. Reagan really desires world peace as he claimed, he should respond to the Soviet initiative. At present, the Reagan administration is planning the use of some $1,600 billion for military expenditures and the production of deployment of nuclear and other strategic weapons in the coming 5 years -- about $1 billion a day.

President Brezhnev said that the world people are entitled to demand that the United States and other nuclear countries respond to the Soviet proposal. We demand that they must act in response to the interests and aspirations of the world people.

TAP CHI CONG SAN ON HO CHI MINH'S BIRTHDAY

BK240652 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN No. 5 in Vietnamese May 82 pp 1-3

[Text] This year, our entire party, army and people celebrate President Ho's birth anniversary in a joyful and enthusiastic atmosphere of greeting the success of the fifth party congress.

Continuing to implement President Ho's sacred testament, the fifth party congress reviewed the revolutionary movement in our country over the past years; outlined the strategic tasks for the Vietnamese revolution in the new stage; set forth the guidelines, tasks and main economic and social objectives for the 1981-85 5-year period and the 1980's; decided policies and measures on the development of the party with a view to increasing the party's combativity; and elected a new party Central Committee. The congress was a new milestone on the path of long-term revolutionary struggle of our people for national independence and socialism.

Since President Ho's passing away, acting on his sacred testament our entire party and all our armed forces and people have struggled arduously and registered great victories. We have defeated the U.S. imperialists and completely liberated the southern part of the fatherland. We have unified the country quickly on the state level, promulgated the Constitution of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and established a system of dictatorship of the proletariat throughout the country. We have fought and defeated the Chinese hegemonists and expansionists and their lackeys on the northern and southwestern fronts, defending firmly the Socialist Vietnamese fatherland. We have restored, transformed and built the economy; transformed and developed culture; and maintained political security. We have strengthened the militant alliance and formed a firm and steady interdependent posture of the revolution in the three Indochinese countries. We have strengthened militant solidarity and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal countries in the socialist community. The position of our country has been enhanced in the world arena. These victories have brought our revolution to a new, more stable strategic position compared to the past, creating greater possibilities for firmly defending the fatherland and successfully building socialism.

At present, our country, while enjoying peace, has to cope with a multifaceted war of sabotage waged by the Chinese hegemonists and expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists. Our entire party and all our soldiers and people now have two strategic tasks: Successfully building socialism and standing combat ready to defend firmly the socialist Vietnamese fatherland. Only by fulfilling these two strategic tasks will we be able to fully implement President Ho's testament.

Building socialism is our primary task. Success in building socialism will make our country powerful and prosperous and enable our people to live a plentiful and happy life. President Ho has advised us in his testament: "Our party must devise very sound plans for developing the economy and culture in order to improve constantly the people's living standards." Continuing to act on his behest, the fifth party congress outlined the orientation and tasks to further develop the national economy, readjust the economic structure and push forward socialist transformation with a view to basically stabilizing the economic and social situation and meeting the most pressing and essential requirements in our people's material and cultural life. The number one target of the economic program devised by the congress is to solve the food problem of society firmly and steadily and to satisfy adequately clothing needs and other essential demands of the people. Let us do our best to implement the resolutions of the congress and successfully build socialism in our country so that our people will enjoy a plentiful and happy life, as President Ho has long expected.

Social construction goes along with the defense of the socialist fatherland. Lenin has said that a revolution is of value only when it is capable of defending itself. President Ho said on his visit to King Hung's temple: "The Hung Dynasty founded the nation, you and I must join hands in defending it." The fifth party congress also outlined our people's immediate tasks in national defense, namely, to resolutely defeat the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists' multifaceted war of sabotage, successfully perform the task of maintaining political security, public order and social safety, while ensuring that the country is always powerful enough and ready to triumph over the enemy in all eventualities. Defending the fatherland is the sacred right and obligation of every citizen. Implementing the resolutions of the congress, let every Vietnamese citizen heighten vigilance and combat readiness in order to firmly defend the socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

To fulfill these strategic tasks, it is imperative to strengthen the combativity and improve the leadership abilities of the party. Achieving unity on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and the party's revolutionary line is a prime requirement of the party-building task. President Ho taught us in his testament: "Unity is an extremely precious tradition of our party and our people. All comrades from the Central Committee to chapters should preserve the party's unity as they do the apple of their eye." President Ho further advised: "Our party is a ruling party. Every party member and cadre must truly be imbued with revolutionary ethics and be frugal, incorruptible and absolutely impartial. It is necessary to keep our party absolutely pure so as to be worthy as the leader and the faithful servant of the people. Imbued with President Ho's views on party building, the fifth party congress has set forth the key current party-building task, namely to continue to enhance the party's working class character and make the party strong in political, ideological and organizational aspects. This is necessary to ensure the successful implementation of the party's line. We must improve the party's leadership abilities in the cause of socialist construction and national defense. We must make our party constantly maintain its revolutionary and scientific nature so that it will remain as a truly pure party that has a high combativity and which is attached closely to the people. Implementing the resolution of the congress on the party-building task, let us endeavor to make this task a success and help the party fulfill its duties satisfactorily in the new stage.

We are now in a fairly complex situation. We have won great victories and scored great achievements, but we have also committed some mistakes concerning policies and economic management, and we are faced with numerous difficulties. The demands concerning the people's daily life, the defense of the country and the building of material and technical bases of socialism are particularly urgent and great. The new stage has imposed difficult but very glorious tasks on us. Our party and people, having gone through a protracted and arduous revolutionary struggle, are experienced in overcoming difficulties. They have never shrunk from difficulties.

The fifth party congress has illuminated the way for us to advance. In light of the resolutions of the congress, we are determined to overcome difficulties and fulfill our revolutionary tasks in the new stage.

Under the great President Ho Chi Minh's banner, our entire party and all our soldiers and people should exert every effort to turn the resolutions of the congress into reality in the everyday life and bring the cause of socialist construction and the defense of the Socialist Vietnamese fatherland to complete victory.

REVIEW OF JUNE ISSUE OF TAP CHI CONG SAN

OW231001 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 20 Jun 82

[Text] [Three-minute passage indistinct] production of nuclear weapons and neutron bombs with the turning of the European Continent into a limited nuclear battlefield and with the creation of hotbeds of tension and regional conflict in many areas of the Earth. Consequently, all nations must raise high their vigilance and struggle resolutely to preserve peace and frustrate all acts of war by the imperialists, led by U.S. imperialism and other reactionaries.

This month's issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN carries Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong's talks at the fifth congress of Vietnamese women, "Bring the Women's Movement Up to the Level of Our People's Great Socialist Revolution."

Next is the article, "To Open a New Development in Our Country's Women's Movement" by Comrade Nguyen Thi Nhu, deputy chairwoman of the Vietnam Women's Union. The article deals with the implementation of the guidelines and tasks set forth at the fifth party congress for the Vietnam Women's Union, in which to motivate women to participate in socialist construction and national defense constitutes the primary guidelines and tasks, and to solve problems relating to women's interests and livelihood, to achieve equality between the sexes and to train in the qualities of new women constitute the second most important task in the work of motivating women.

The article says: The only path the union can take is to satisfactorily perform propaganda and motivation work so that the masses will voluntarily and enthusiastically carry out their assigned tasks. The various grassroots levels of the union should be in closer contact with the masses and know how to coordinate with various sectors, considering this as a principle in the union's mode of action. In order to perform well the union's tasks in the new situation and in order to improve the method of action that must be well coordinated with various sectors and echelons of the union, particularly at the central and provincial levels, we must strengthen survey and research work to grasp the problems which the union has to resolve.

We must strengthen the training and fostering of cadres for the women's movement, aimed at raising the motivation of women to a higher level having a scientific, theoretical base and a more solid mass character and practice.

On the occasion of Georgi Dimitrov's birth centenary, TAP CHI CONG SAN carries an article written for it by Comrade Dimitur Stanishev, secretary of the Bulgarian Communist Party Central Committee, "Georgi Dimitrov, The Great Internationalist." Georgi Dimitrov was an outstanding representative of new-style Leninist revolutionaries, a great son of the Bulgarian working class, a leader and teacher of the Communist Party and all the people of Bulgaria.

Outlining the salient points in Dimitrov's thoughts, the article points out: His strength, greatness and magnetism stemmed first from his boundless confidence in Marxism-Leninism and in his creativeness regarding Marxism-Leninism in revolutionary theory and practice.

For Dimitrov, proletarian internationalism was the fundamental point in the whole theory and policy of proletarian parties and an irreplaceable weapon in the struggle of the enslaved and oppressed working class and masses of the people. Regarding the Soviet Union, Dimitrov affirmed: The litmus test to gauge the sincerity and purity of each activist in the workers' movement, of each workers party and each organization of working people, and of each member of the democratic parties in capitalist countries lies in their attitude toward the great country of socialism.

The article also highlights Dimitrov's thoughts on the unity of the international communist and workers' movement on all of the main problems of our era, particularly those relating to war and peace and to the dialectical unity between the patriotism and internationalism of the working class. Dimitrov himself was a shining example of the coordination of patriotism and internationalism in the practice of class struggle.

Next is Comrade Nguyen Khanh Toan's article "Some problems on training the young generation in communism." Dealing with the basic problems of the training of the young generation in communism, the article stresses: Its primary responsibility is to train the youth in noble virtues as the core of the quality and nature of new-type men. The five teachings given to children by Uncle Ho constitute a lively, creative and attractive condensation. They are simple, while profound, in accordance with the content and spirit of communist principles. In essence, they are a platform, a plan for building new-type men in all aspects -- virtue, will and aesthetics -- in a manner fully compatible with the situation of our country and people.

According to the author, communist education, in order to be systematic and consistent, must be carried out and developed uniformly in three fields: teaching communist ideology and virtues, and training and meeting challenges in realistic activities in accordance with the communist spirit.

This month's magazine also carries Comrade Ha Xuan Truong's article "The Relationship of Art and Literature With Politics." The article points out: Because of the special character of art and literature and because of their close relationship with the political state of society, there are always two trends in the development of literature: One, to participate in political struggle, considering it as the mission of art and literature, artists and writers; and two, to detach oneself from the political struggle, considering politics as something binding art and literature, depriving them of their freedom. In reality, the second trend is illusory and has been misused by the bourgeoisie.

After affirming our party's viewpoint on art and literature, the article praises the majority of our artists and writers for holding fast to the party's stand and viewpoint and for being inclined to receive the new, continue the artistic path dear to their hearts and register noteworthy achievements. The article at the same time criticizes deviations in a section of artists and writers.

Commemorating Nguyen Dinh Chieu's 160th birth anniversary, this month's magazine carries Nguyen Tai Thu's article, "Our Nation's Staunch, Patriotic Fighter Towards the End of the 19th Century." Reviewing his outstanding activities against an eventful historical background, the article highlights the qualities and talents of Nguyen Dinh Chieu, a great patriot, a talented poet, a staunch fighter on the cultural and ideological front of our nation towards the end of the 19th century. The life and poetic and literary works of Nguyen Dinh Chieu were those of a fighter who fought and made sacrifices for the great cause.

Next is Comrade Pnan Xuan Dot's article, "The Question of Coordinated Agricultural and Forestry Production in Our Country." The article shows that in our country, which is moving from small-scale production to large-scale socialist production, the execution of the method of coordinating agriculture with forestry has great significance.

This coordination aims first at partially solving, on the spot, the requirements in grain and foodstuffs to fulfill the tasks and objectives in building up forestry, gradually engaging in harmonious production beneficial both to the economy and to the protection of the environment. Coordinating agriculture with forestry is simultaneously the direction to advance and a measure of strategic significance for developing forestry. At the same time, it is an inseparable part of a comprehensively developed agriculture. The article then deals with the forms and measures for achieving coordinated agricultural-forestry production.

This month's issue of the magazine also carries Comrade Hong Long's article "More Attention Should Be Given to Vocational Training." After analyzing our shortcomings in formulating and implementing the vocational training plan, the article stresses: Under current conditions, despite economic difficulties, the development of vocational training remains necessary and urgent because the training of workers is not only an economic question but also a very major and long-term political and social question.

Next is Dong Thao's article "Studying the Party's Economic Leadership," dealing with the question of studying the resolution on the development of strategic economy, the development of social economy, 5-year and annual economic development plans, economic policies of national scale, the economic management system and policies on economic management reform.

This month's magazine carries Nguyen Thanh's article "Uncle Ho and the Tours Congress," providing new materials on the Tours Congress which enable us to know more about some of his activities connected with this historical event.

Next is Tran Ngoc Thu's article, "The Leninist Attitude." The article shows that the Leninist attitude includes basic characteristics such as the uniting of party and science, unification of revolutionary ardor and action according to regulations, organizational mind, practical spirit, realistic sense, constant closeness to the grassroots and reality, close contact with the masses, assuring and developing the masses' right of collective mastery, the mass collective spirit, principled spirit and high sense of responsibility.

As for each cadre and party member , to train oneself in the Leninist attitude is the essential condition for satisfactorily fulfilling the revolutionary task entrusted him by the party and the people.

This month's magazine also carries Comrade Nong Quoc Chan's article, "Oppose the Enemy's Psychological Warfare at the Sino-Vietnamese Border." The Chinese reactionaries' psychological warfare tricks are very perfidious and varied. However, they center on trying to separate our different nationalities, separate the armed forces from the people, our party and administration from the masses, causing confusion and fear among the masses, so as to achieve their expansionist and hegemonic designs. The article points out: The struggle on the ideological and cultural front at the Sino-Vietnamese border will continue in many protracted and complicated forms. Our cultural, information, literary and artistic activities must be further strengthened to meet the requirements of the task of struggling against the enemy's psychological warfare and satisfy the spiritual life of the people of various nationalities and of the cadres and combatants of the people's armed forces at the northern border region.

Next is Thanh Tin's article, "The Reagan Administration's Military Strategy or the U.S. Impasse and Strategy." What is presently the Reagan administration's military strategy? That strategy does not have a definite name yet. But it is a belligerent, reckless and blind strategy. In Reagan's military strategy, all of its irrationality is revealed. Consequently, in itself, this strategy is carrying the elements of defeat.

STATISTICS ON RICE HARVEST, PLANTING REPORTED

[Text] Last week, thanks to sunny and warm weather, the harvest of the 5th month-spring rice crop was carried out satisfactorily and the quantity of paddy falling on the ground or sprouting was smaller than in previous peridds.

According to the General Statistics Department, as of 15 June, the north had harvested 5th-month rice on 745,000 hectares or 70.4 percent of the cultivated area -- an average of 28,000 hectares per day and an increase of 1,000 hectares over the previous 10 days. Binh Tri Thien Province has already finished the harvesting of 5th-month rice while Haiphong City and Nghe Tinh Province have finished this work on approximately 90 percent of the cultivated area.

In addition, the north has sown 10th-month rice and upland rice on nearly 81,000 hectares. All these totals, however, are still low compared to the same period last year. The provinces in the Bac Bo Delta region have almost finished the sowing of early 10th-month rice seedlings on the planned area. In general, these rice seedlings are developing satisfactorily. The northern provinces have also secured more than 3.149 million tons of organic fertilizer -- an increase of nearly 160,000 tons over the same period last year -- and more than 28,900 tons of chemical fertilizer -- an increase of more than 12,600 tons over the same period last year.

As of 15 June, the southern provinces had planted summer-fall rice on 528,000 hecteres or 80 percent of the planned acreage. Localities which have achieved a high percentage in planting this crop are Cuu Long, 111.9 percent; Dong Thap, 100.5 percent; and Hau Giang, 84 percent.

JAKARTA COMMENTS ON KAMPUCHEAN COALITION

BK231514 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Unattributed commentary: "The Signing of the Kuala Lumpur Agreement"]

[Text] The agreement to form a Democratic Kampuchea Coalition Government, signed by Norodom Sihanouk, Khieu Samphan and Son Sann in Kuala Lumpur and witnessed by Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, was another historic event for Kuala Lumpur. It may be recalled that it was in Kuala Lumpur that the ASEAN declaration on the neutralization concept for Southeast Asia was signed in 1971.

The declaration on the formation of the Democratic Kampuchea Coalition Government, which henceforth we will call the Kuala Lumpur agreement, will save Democratic Kampuchea's seat at the United Nations.

After the late 1978 Vietnamese invasion -- which succeeded in capturing Phnom Penh in a blitzkrieg-type attack early in 1979 -- Democratic Kampuchea's seat at the United Nations was threatened by attempts at the least to vacate it. It was only because the majority of UN member nations opposed the Vietnamese invasion -- and not because they supported the Khmer Rouge -- that the Democratic Kampuchean seat was saved.

In spite of this, it must be noted that in the last 3 years support at the UN General Assembly for continued acceptance of the credentials of Democratic Kampuchea has decreased year by year. This has caused concern that at the forthcoming annual UN General Assembly session majority support might dwindle to minority support.

However, with the formation of the Democratic Kampuchea Coalition Government with Prince Sihanouk as president, majority support can at least be maintained.

Another noteworthy point was the statement by Sihanouk at a press conference on his arrival in Kuala Lumpur on Monday evening when he said that the Democratic Kampuchea Coalition Government will be set up within Kampuchean territory. He said: Since I shall be appointed president of Democratic Kampuchea I plan to stay on Kampuchean soil. If it proves to be impossible to stay in the interior region, I sahll at least stay in an area near the Thai border, but on Kampuchean soil.

Thus, unlike the exiled Royal Government of National Union of Kampuchea, which he led from Beijing during the period 1970-1975, the Democratic Kampuchea Coalition Government will not be a government in exile. Sihanouk seems to have drawn a lesson from his own experience when he led a government in exile from Beijing. When he returned to Kampuchea with the expectation that he would be welcomed as a leader who had just won a big victory, he was instead toppled by the Khmer Rouge in a power struggle. He will not repeat this mistake, and so has decided to return to Kampuchea as president of Democratic Kampuchea.

The formation of the Democratic Kampuchea Coalition Government at least reflects the political will of the Kampuchean resistance movements against Vietnamese military occupation which has already lasted more than 3 years. The political will of the Kampuchean resistance movements will grow enormously if the Vienamese military occupation begins to upset the Kampucheans, considering the occupation an insult to their national honor.

SINO-U.S. RELATIONS 'SERIOUS THREAT' TO ASEAN

BK211359 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said that Southeast Asian countries feel concerned over the growing relations between the United States and China, because they pose a serious threat to ASEAN countries. This was stated by Minister Mokhtar in an interview with NEWSWEEK magazine.

Mokhtar said that U.S. foreign policy is directed too much toward the interests of its global policy and the big powers by disregarding other factors. As an example, he cited that the United States is using its relations with China to balance its policy with the Soviet Union.

Minister Mokhtar said that ASEAN countries believed that U.S. relations with China should be balanced with its relations with Southeast Asia.

MALAYSIAN COMMENT ON KHMER COALITION FORMATION

PM Congratulates Leaders

BK221417 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1330 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Text] Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed has congratulated the leaders of the three Kampuchean nationalist factions on their success in reaching agreement to form a coalition government in their country. He wished them well in their efforts to restore the independence and sovereignty of Kampuchea. The prime minister also reiterated Malaysia's support for the coalition. He made the statement when the three Kampuchean leaders called on him at his office in Parliament House. The deputy prime minister, Datuk Musa Hitam, and Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie were also present.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk expressed to the prime minister the coalition government's appreciation for Malaysia's role and hospitality in the efforts to reach an agreement. The three leaders signed a declaration earlier in the afternoon to establish a coalition government under which Prince Sihanouk becomes president, Mr Khieu Samphan, vice president, and Mr Son Sann, prime minister.

The major objective of the coalition is to present itself to the international community as a viable alternative to the Vietnam-installed Heng Samrin regime. It will also campaign internationally for the implementation of the declaration of the international conference on Kampuchea. It will also work toward the implementation of UN resolutions calling for the withdrawal of foreign forces from Kampuchea and the restoration of the people's rights to determine their own future. The new Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea will be represented at the UN General Assembly in September by Prince Sihanouk.

The minister of foreign affairs, who presided over the signing ceremony, says the document signed by the three leaders was an instrument to bring about the political solution to the problem of the foreign occupation of Kampuchea.

In an interview with RTM [Radio Television Malaysia], Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie says the three Kampuchean factions, having already established solidarity, should now work with one voice toward the withdrawal of the occupation forces. This will enable elections to be held and for Kampuchea to be sovereign and independent again. Tan Sri Ghazali will be leaving on Thursday to report of the achievement of the Kuala Lumpur gathering to Dr Willy Pahr, chairman of the international conference on Kampuchea sponsored by the United Nations.

Coalition Formation Hailed

BK231421 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] In the life of every nation, there comes a time when men of vision, of courage and men of purpose will emerge to face the opportunity in a crisis to mould the destiny of the people and lead them to salvation and grandeur. That moment came for Kampuchea yesterday when Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Khieu Samphan and Son Sann signed the declaration of the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea in Kuala Lumpur.

For the first time the three groups fighting the Vietnamese military occupation of Kampuchea agreed to become coalition partners of a government that is the sole, true representative of the Kampuchean nation and its people. Nearly 100 members of the United Nations had attested to this, and in sharp contrast, the Vietnam-imposed Heng Samrin group in Phnom Penh stands isolated, an embarrassment both to itself and its Vietnamese and Russian patrons. There is now a single government representing all those who are opposed to the foreign domination and military and political subjugation of Kampuchea. No one had any delusion about the enormity of the task facing the new coalition government -- the first of these being the complete withdrawal of all foreign forces from Kampuchean soil.

The Malaysian foreign minister, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, also pointedly reminded the three leaders that they owe it to the Kampuchean people to make the coalition government a viable and meaningful entity, so that those who perished fighting for the honor of Kampuchea did not die in vain.

The Khmer Rouge, Moulinaka and the KPNLF [Kampuchean People's National Liberation Front] have deep divisions between them that needed to be healed, so that a truly cohesive and united resistance movement can emerge in the task of restoring independence for Kampuchea.

But there are positive factors and these were evident at yesterday's signing ceremony that was witnessed by news correspondents from all over the world. The three factions have realized that they have a common enemy in the Vietnamese, who is greater and more dangerous than the petty squabbles and power plays among themselves. As Prince Sihanouk stated yesterday, there is a new spirit in Kampuchea that has identified Vietnam as its common enemy. He also accused the Vietnamese of attempting to Vietnamize Kampuchea by allowing Vietnamese to exploit Kampuchea's fish and other resources.

For the ASEAN nations, the coalition agreement is a sign of a positive move toward finding a political situation to the problem of the foreign occupation of Kampuchea. It will provide legitimacy to the Democratic Kampuchean Government and there is no doubt that, with Prince Norodom Sihanouk as president, many more nations would come out in positive support of the broader-based government.

ASEAN nations can be expected to step up their humanitarian and economic aid and a few other nations can be expected to respond to Prince Sihanouk's international appeal for more military aid.

The situation in Kampuchea is not irreversible as maintained by Hanoi, for this means the acceptance of Vietnam's colonial and military subjugation of Kampuchea.

The formation of the Democratic Government of Democratic Kampuchea in Kuala Lumpur yesterday marked the beginning of the reemergence of an independent, united and proud Kampuchea.

No Military Aid Offered

BK201325 Hong Kong AFP in English 1306 GMT 20 Jun 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 20 (AFP) -- Malaysia will not offer military aid to the coalition expected to be formed soon by the three main anti-Vietnamese resistance groups in Cambodia, Prime Minister Datuk Seri Dr Mahathir Mohamad said today.

Dr. Mahathir said it was possible Malaysia would offer assistance for refugees, but added: "Malaysia will not extend military aid to the coalition government now or in the future because we do not want to interfere in military matters."

He said that the expected signing of an accord here this week on creation of an anti-Vietnamese coalition for Cambodia was a Malaysian effort "which appears to be heading towards success."

Dr Mahathir said whether it would be regarded as a "feather in the cap" for Malaysia would depend on public opinion. "For me, however, it constitutes an effort of our government and it looks like it will be a success," he said.

Khieu Samphan of the ousted Khmer Rouge regime, Son Sann of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front and Prince Norodom Sihanouk of the Moulinaka movement were expected to sign the coalition agreement here Tuesday.

SAKURAUCHI TALKS WITH MALAYSIAN LEADERS

BK191217 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Japan supports Malaysia's efforts in working toward the formation of a coalition government of the three resistance groups in Kampuchea. This message was conveyed by the visiting Japanese foreign minister, Mr Yoshio Sakurauchi, in talks with the prime minister, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed, in Kuala Lumpur.

A spokesman for Wisma Putra [Foreign Ministry] told newsmen they also discussed the possible relocation of certain Japanese industries in Malaysia. This will help transfer Japanese technology and knowhow to Malaysians. On the economy, Datuk Mahathir said it was not very healthy due to the low prices of export commodities and global recession. Malaysia would require more financial assistance from Japan. In this context the prime minister stressed that Malaysia should not be treated as a newly industrialized country but as a developing one.

Earlier, Mr Yoshio Sakurauchi met the minister of foreign affairs, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie. He pledged that Japan would help Malaysia in its look East policy. In lien with this, a team of experts will be sent to Malaysia soon to assess its training and educational requirements. The experts will also recommend the fastest way of teaching Japanese to Malaysians intending to pursue studies and training in Japan.

Meets Prime Minister

OW191231 Tokyo KYODO in English 1219 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, June 19 KYODO -- Malaysian Prime Minister Dr. Mahathir Bin Mohamed accepted an invitation to visit Japan in October during a meeting with Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi here Saturday afternoon.

The prime minister also asked for visa exemptions for Malaysian students planning to study in Japan and exchanged views on Kampuchea during the meeting at his office in the Parliament building.

The invitation was contained in a letter from Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki which was hand delivered to Dr. Mahathir by Sakurauchi.

The Malaysian leader cited his government's "look East" policy of learning from Japan and Korea in asking Sakurauchi for visa exemptions for Malaysian students sent to Japan for vocational training. He also asked for more Japanese direct investment and economic cooperation, and for expanded technological cooperation in packaging, food processing and other fields.

Japan has decided to accept more than 1,000 Malaysian vocational students over approximately four years beginning in Sep ember. The government hopes to settle the visa exemption question before Dr. Mahathir's visit in October.

Dr. Mahathir emphasized that the recently announced three-party coalition of anti-Vietnamese Kampuchean resistance groups should be carefully watched to see if it proves effective.

MARCOS: PHILIPPINES WILLING TO RETAIN U.S. BASES

HK240101 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] President Marcos indicated yesterday the Philippines is willing to keep U.S. bases on its soil, but said this should not be at the expense of Philippine sovereignty. Addressing members of the diplomatic community, including U.S. Ambassador Michael Armacost, President Marcos described the bases as vital to the United States in its role as a global power engaged in a strategic adversary relationship with the Soviet Union. The bases, the president pointed out, support the U.S. military presence in Japan and South Korea. They also enable the United States to project its power into the South China Sea and the Indian Ocean. President Marcos said the Philippines desires to continue its share to maintaining peace in Asia, but the Philippines believes this contribution should not exact from the Filipinos the diminution of their national sovereignty.

MARCOS SPEAKS ON FOREIGN MINISTRY ANNIVERSARY

OW240809 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] The Philippines will pursue its foreign policy with emphasis on freedom and sovereignty among other national values. The president bared this task during the 84th anniversary celebrations of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. During the affair, the president also disclosed that Prime Minister Cesar Virata was the country's number two official and not Speaker (Kelve Macalintal) of the Batasang Pambansa. The president issued this clarification to avoid confusion in the diplomatic front.

Jose Carlos has more on today's (Padre Foaras) celebrations:

The president said today that the conduct of the country's foreign policy will continue to be pursued in the enhancement of freedom and other national values within the context of national sovereignty. The president voiced this determination before the 84th anniversary celebrations of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs at (Padre Foaras). The chief executive said if today the Philippines enjoys full sovereignty and dignity in the concert of nations, we must extend congratulations to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and particularly to Foreign Minister Carlos B. Romulo.

In his speech, the president praised our Filippino leaders who have struggled to fight for, guard and promote, with care, national sovereignty and that evolved a Philippine foreign policy that has enhanced our nationhood. From (Apolinari Mabini), the country's first foreign minister to the present dispensation, the preservation and protection of national sovereignty has been the national purpose in the conduct of foreign policy.

The president said that through the instrument of diplomacy and through the safeguards afforded by our vigilant defense policy, and with the all-important cooperation and partnership of Filipino people, the continued and external existence of sovereignty shall be assured.

[Begin Marcos recording] What we must keep in mind is that sovereignty, from the Philippine historical point of view or from the history of the Philippines, is never won once and for all. Rather, it must always be fought for and guarded and promoted with care. In our daily work, to keep it intact and enjoy its application in the widest sense possible, we are limited only by our own free, enlightened will and by no other interests than our own. Today, I am confident that our people fully appreciate the importance of their independence as a nation and their rights as a free people and this appreciation is a distinct hallmark of the authenticity of our national sovereignty. [end recording]

A highlight of this morning's ceremony at the renovated building at (Padre Foaras) was the unveiling of the marker in honor of President Marcos located in the edifice's main entrance.

SUZUKI: JAPAN TO PRESS U.S. ON SAKHALIN ISSUE

OW251159 Tokyo KYODO in English 1154 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 25, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Friday Japan would continue to call on the United States to remove the Sakhalin oil and gas project from the list of tightened U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union.

He was replying to questions from opposition parties representatives at Friday's meeting of the House of Representatives Budget Committee on the strengthened U.S. economic sanctions against the Soviet Union announced late last week.

Suzuki said that since the Japan-Soviet oil and gas project off Sakhalin is of a nature different from the Western Siberia-Western Europe natural gas pipeline project, Japan would continue to call on the U.S. to exempt the Sakhalin oil and gas project from the U.S. sanctions.

REACTION TO HAIG RESIGNATION REPORTED

Foreign Ministry Reaction

OW260153 Tokyo KYODO in English 0142 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 26, KYODO -- No major change in the U.S. diplomatic policy toward Japan can be expected as a result of the resignation of Alexander Haig as secretary of state and nomination of former Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz to succeed him, Foreign Ministry officials said Saturday. But the officials said the U.S. Government might show hereafter attentive considerations to various affairs between the two countries as newly-nominated Secretary of State Shultz is well informed about Japan.

They pointed out the fact that the resignation might have stemmed from foreign policy differences within the Reagan administration. Haig has paid close attention for coordinating deep discrepancies in U.S. views with European allied nations and Japan, although he had assumed generally hawkish posture, the ministry officials pointed out.

The officials believe the U.S. Government might assume a more hard-line diplomatic policy, particularly toward the Soviet Union and other communist bloc nations, as the key posts of the U.S. Government might be taken by hawkish officials hailing from California. They said the Foreign Ministry was closely watching at present what steps the U.S. Government might take to settle pending key issues between the two nations under new secretary of state.

The pending issues between Tokyo and Washington include strengthened U.S. ban on shipment of oil and gas development equipment to the Soviet Union affecting Japanese participation in the Soviet Sakhalin oil and natural gas exporation program and industrial espionage case involving two Japanese electronics firms.

Suzuki Comments

OW260327 Tokyo KYODO in English 0304 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 26, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Saturday expressed his gratitude for Alexander Haig's efforts for the promotion of the friendly relations between Japan and the U.S.

Commenting on Haig's resignation and nomination of new Secretary of State George Shultz, Suzuki told reporters it might take some time to see the full effects of the change. The prime minister said he had become acquainted with Shultz, a former treasury secretary, on two previous visits to Japan.

He also met Shultz during summit talks with U.S. President Ronald Reagan in Washington last year as well as at the Ottawa summit meeting of seven industrial democracies earlier this month.

Shultz is an outstanding statesman in the U.S., having served in key government posts, Suzuki added.

Sakurauchi Comments

OW260024 Tokyo KYODO in English 0018 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 26, KYODO -- Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Saturday said he was surprised to hear of U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig's resignation.

The foreign minister told reporters Haig's resignation might have resulted from discord with other aides to President Ronald Reagan. But he did not elaborate.

Major change in U.S. diplomatic policy towards Japan cannot be expected, because Secretary of State Designate George Schultz is well-versed in Japanese afffairs, Sakurauchi said. Shultz has visited Japan several times, he added.

Foreign Ministry Official

OW260016 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 2330 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] Commenting on the resignation of Secretary of State Haig, an official of the Japanese Foreign Ministry has said that while he still has no information on the background details surrounding the resignation, he thinks that in view of the thoughtful consideration he showed concerning Japan-U.S. relations on various occasions, it is regrettable that Mr Haig has resigned as secretary of state. Mr Shultz, his succesor, the official continued, has experience in many important government posts and is also known for his deep understanding of Japan. It is believed that he will make further contributions to the strengthening of Japan-U.S. relations, as his predecessor did, the official added.

FISHING COUNCIL ORDERS BOATS FROM DPRK WATERS

[Text] Tokyo, June 25, KYODO-- The Japan-North Korea Fishing Council, a private body of fishermen, Friday ordered all Japanese fishing boats operating in a 200-nautical-mile zone around North Korea to leave the area as soon as possible, council officials said.

This order was issued after North Korea announced Thrusday that it would not permit Japanese fishery operations in the 200-mile zone from July 1, when the current Japan-North Korea private-level fishery agreement expires. About 300 Japanese cuttle fishing boats are operating in the zone at present and will have to leave the area by the end of June.

Hauls by Japanese fishing vessels in the zone were worth yen 5 billion (dollar 19.6 million) in 1981, a large drop from the yen 13 billion (dollar 50.9 million) recorded in 1980.

Sakurauchi on DPRK Fishing Talks

OW260524 Tokyo KYODO in English 0516 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 26, KYODO -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi indicated Saturday the government may admit a North Korean delegation, depending on its membership, to discuss extension of a private fishery agreement.

North Korea said Friday it would not allow Japanese fishermen to operate within its 200-mile economic zone on June 30 at the expiration of the present fishery accord.

Speaking at a meeting of the House of Representatives Budget Committee, the foreign minister said his office would discuss prudently the question of the visit of a North Korean delegation if it materializes. This was interpreted to mean the government would allow the North Korean delegation to visit Japan depending on who will be in the group.

North Korea said a new fishery agreement could not be concluded because of Japanese authorities' unfriendly stance toward the communist government.

MINISTER ASSURES ASEAN OF MARKET OPENING

OW251253 Tokyo KYODO in English 1248 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 25, KYODO -- Kichiro Tazawa, minister of agriculture, forestry and fisheries, said Friday Japan would try to meet as far as possible the desire by Southeast Asian nations to export fruit, lumber and fishery products to Japan, while taking the domestic demand into consideration.

Tazawa told the Diet the two packages of measures taken by Japan since late last year to open its market wider to imports are also intended to facilitate imports from ASEAN, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations which links Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines.

He said Japan has adopted no package aimed solely for ASEAN countries. However, since the ASEAN nations have a strong desire to export fruit, lumber and marine products to Japan, efforts will be made to meet this desire as far as possible, Tazawa said.

SUZUKI URGES EFFICIENT DEFENSE CAPABILITY

OW251201 Tokyo KYODO in English 1157 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 25, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, citing the British-Argentine war over the Falkland Islands, Friday said Japan should build up an efficient defense capability.

"The number of troops did not decide the outcome of the Falklands conflict. The decisive element was sophisticated military equipment," he told the House of Representatives Budget Committee.

Suzuki said Japan should build up high-quality, efficient defense forces under the tight state finances and within the framework of defense spending. He said his government policy to keep defense outlays for fiscal 1983 to a necessary minimum level was unchanged.

The government allowed defense expenditures for fiscal 1982 to increase 7.75 percent over fiscal 1981 while putting on the brake on increases in social, educational and other expenses.

ITO SEEKS 1 PERCENT OR MORE OF GNP FOR DEFENSE

OW191205 Tokyo KYODO in English 1159 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 19, KYODO -- Defense Agency Director General Soichiro Ito will meet soon with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki to urge him to agree to spend 1 percent or more of Japan's gross national product on defense, a high-ranking agency official said here Saturday. Ito has concluded that it will be difficult to keep defense expenditures below 1 percent of GNP in the new five-year mid-term defense program estimate to take effect in fiscal 1983, the official said.

A subcommittee on weapons procurement of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) recently presented a proposal calling on the government to abolish the traditional 1 percent ceiling on defense spending. The United States has also been pressuring Tokyo to spend more than 1 percent of GNP on defense. The defense program estimate, the Defense Agency's arms procurement plan, is subject to annual review. A new estimate is worked out every three years. The official said an agreement has nearly been reached with the Finance Ministry on the number of F-15 fighters, P-3C antisubmarine patrol planes and destroyers to be procured during the five-year period.

SK251402 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1310 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] The U.S. imperialist aggressors' acts of aerial espionage against our country are being conducted more frequently. Despite our repeated warnings and protests, the U.S. imperialist aggressors, who are running wild to prepare for a new war in Korea, are committing acts of espionage by continuously infiltrating reconnaissance planes into the territorial airspace over the east and west of our country.

At 1444 on 25 June, the U.S. imperialist aggressors committed hostile acts by infiltrating the high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane SR-71 deep into the air above the territorial waters east of Kosong, Kangwon Province of our country. Earlier, at 1113 on 19 June, they committed an espionage act by infiltrating a reconnaissance plane deep into the military boundary line east of Kosong, Kangwon Province of our country and into the sky over Sosura, in Northernmost Hamgyong Province.

In recent days, the U.S. imperialist aggressors have been clamoring that they attach the greatest importance to South Korea in the national interests of the United States. They are also more frequently committing provocative military acts against the northern half of the republic while endlessly building up the U.S. aggression troops in South Korea and the puppet army.

Espionage acts in the territorial airspace east and west of our country by the U.S. imperialist aggressors' high-speed, high-altitude SR-71 reconnaissance planes numbered as many as about 10 in June alone. Such acts number as many as 100 this year alone. This is a grave violation of our country's sovereignty and a wanton violation of the armistice agreement.

All facts clearly show that the U.S. imperialist aggressors are the most truculent enemy of Korea's peace and peaceful reunification and the ringleader aggravating the tense situation in our country.

Our people and the People's Army are watching with heightened vigilance the acts of aerial espionage of the U.S. imperialist aggressors against our country, which are more undisguised with each passing day, and their schemes to prepare for a new war.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors should look squarely at reality and act with discretion. If the U.S. imperialist aggressors, despite our repeated warnings, adhere to acts of espionage against our country and pursue an adventuristic military line, they should recognize that they will suffer the consequences arising therefrom.

'CRIMINAL ACTS' PROTESTED AT MAC MEETING

[Text] Kaesong, June 26 (KCNA) -- Major General Han Chu-Kyong, the senior member of our side, at the 414th meeting of the Military Armistice Commission which is now in session at Panmunjom strongly protested to the enemy side against the continued aerial espionage and military provocations committed by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military fascists against the DPRK in wanton violation of the armistice agreement, and strongly demand it to take responsible steps for the discontinuance of such criminal acts. The meeting was called at the proposal of our side.

According to the statement of Major General Han Chu-kyong at the meeting, the U.S. imperialist aggressors infiltrated the "SR-71" high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane on June 9 into the sky above the Kangnyong Peninsula in the southwestern part of South Hwanghae Province and into the sky above the territorial waters east of Kosong, Kangwon Province, on June 25 into the sky above the territorial waters east of Kosong to fly up to the sky above the coastal waters off Sosura, North Hamgyong Province, for espionage.

The enemy repeatedly committed grave armed provocations against our side in the Demilitarized Zone, too.

On June 3, 7, and 9 the South Korean puppet army committed the armed provocation of firing large-calibre machine guns and automatic weapons at the posts of our side in the Demilitarized Zone in the eastern and central sectors of the front.

On June 19 it committed the criminal act of bringing in recoilless guns.

The aerial espionage and military provocations committed by the enemy numbered over 1,800 in the period from May 25 to June 22 alone.

All the facts clearly show that the enemy is extremely insincere in the implementation of the armistice agreement and persistently manoeuvring to heighten tension in our country, said Major General Han Chu-kyong.

Followup Report

SK261615 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1603 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Kaesong, June 26 (KCNA) -- The cases of violation of the armistice agreement committed by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean bellicose elements in the sky, land and sea from the ceasefire on July 27, 1953, to June 22 this year numbered more than 346,300, declared Major General Han Chu-kyong, senior member of our side to the Military Armistice Commission.

At the 414th meeting of the MAC held at Panmunjom on June 26 at the proposal of our side, he pointed out that the military provocations perpetrated by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military fascists against the northern half of the republic over the last 29 years since the ceasefire clearly indicated how feverishly the U.S. imperialists are running about to realise their aggressive designs on Korea which they had harboured from long ago. And he cited historical facts to expose the enemy's manoeuvres for the provocation of another war.

The U.S. imperialists who suffered an ignominious defeat in their war of aggression against our people, far from drawing a proper lesson from it and getting away, have been occupying South Korea and stepping up their preparations for a new war after the war.

Especially these days, the U.S. imperialist bellicose elements are reorganising their aggression forces occupying South Korea to meet the demand of modern warfare and increasing their airforce and naval force and reinforcing, improving and replenishing their combat equipment with ultra-modern one, crying that the Korean Peninsula is "an area vital" to the United States, and South Korea "is a tactical geopolitical vantage more essential to the state interests of the United States than ever before," and they would not hesitate at a war for the "state interests of the United States."

While massively building up their aggression forces, the U.S. imperialists have incessantly staged war exercises, taking us as the attacking target, for the purpose of testing and rounding off their war capacities and preparations.

Noting that the reckless arms buildup and new war provocation manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists are turning South Korea into a more delicate hotbed of a new war and bringing the situation to the extreme pitch of strain, the senior member of our side said: All the developments today remind us of the eve of the 25th of June 32 years ago when the U.S. imperialists started a war of aggression against the Korean people.

At the meeting the enemy attempted to conceal the crimes they had committed and shamelessly tried to evade the responsibility for their provocation of the Korean war in June 1950.

Showing video-recorded historical materials on the provocation of the war of aggression in Korea by the U.S. imperialists, the senior member of our side scathingly stripped bare the enemy's crimes. He stressed that the U.S. imperialists occupation of South Korea must be brought to an end, if the tension created in our country today is to be eased, the war danger removed and the question of the country's reunification solved by peaceful means.

The U.S. imperialists, the senior member of our side said, must look straight at the reality and give up their "two Koreas" scheme and anachronistic occupation policy in South Korea and, in accordance with the United Nations resolution, must get out of South Korea at once with all their aggression forces, taking off the "U.N. forces" beret, and respond to Korea-U.S. negotiation for replacing the armistice agreement with a peace agreement.

At the end of the meeting, the senior member of our side Major General Han Chu-kyong met with home and foreign reporters.

U.S. TRANSFERS HAWK MISSILES TO S. KOREA

SK272346 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2212 GMT 27 Jun 82

[Text] Pyongyang, June 28 (KCNA) -- A "ceremony" was held on June 25 to transfer Hawk missiles for one battalion possessed by the U.S. imperialist aggression forces occupying South Korea to the South Korean puppet army, according to a report.

It was watched by the commander of the U.S. forces occupying South Korea, the U.S. ambassador, the commander of the South Korea-U.S. Combined Field Army and chief of the General Staff of the puppet army.

This is said to be part of the "plan" of transference of U.S. forces equipment as decided upon at the "South Korea-U.S. annual defence ministers meeting."

Continuously arming the South Korean puppet army with modern equipment, the U.S. imperialists encourage the puppets to the provocation of a new war.

KOREAN WAR, CURRENT ARMY EXERCISES HIT

SK251541 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1527 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] Pyongyang, June 25 (KCNA) -- A dangerous situation has been created on the Korean Peninsula today in which a war may break out any moment. The powder smell of war is coming from the South where the U.S. imperialist agressors are entrenched just as 32 years ago when the Korean war broke out.

The U.S. imperialists' manoeuvres of aggression and war in Korea have entered a more dangerous stage after warmaniac Reagan took office.

Early in February this year the U.S. imperialists brought 14 warships of the carrier task force of the U.S. Seventh Fleet to the East Sea of Korea and staged a massive military exercise in strict secrecy 13 years after a similar exercise. Then they staged with the South Korean puppets 70-odd day long "Team Spirit 1982" joint military exercises, which were said to be "largest in scale in the Free World".

The three-stage "Team Spirit 1982," including "strategic deployment exercise," "field mobile exercise," "bombing exercise," "large landing and invading operation," "marine exercise" and exercises by nuclear and chemical weapons, involved carrier "Midway," the capital ship of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, and other warships, fighter-bombers "F-15" and "F-16", planes of latest types such as "A-10" and "A-130" and sophisticated combat equipment of large quantities and 161,600 troops.

These adventurous military exercises were a row for the provocation of a war of aggression, a "test war," for carrying out wars of all forms according to such short-term operational plan and nuclear war plan as "five-day operation" or "nine-day war" plans they had worked out against us.

The U.S. imperialists and the puppets continue committing military provocations against us in the sky and sea and on the ground.

In defiance of our repeated warnings, the U.S. imperialists incessantly infiltrate the spy plane "SR-71" and other military planes into the airspace of our country for aerial espionage. The cases of military provocations by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets exceeded 1,570 in the period from May 1 to 24 this year.

The U.S. imperialists are reinforcing their armed forces of aggression occupying South Korea and modernizing their equipment. The U.S. imperialist warmaniacs plan to introduce a new military intelligence battalion into South Korea. After bringing new-type fighter-bombers "F-16" into South Korea, they are going to deploy a group of close support planes "A-10" accompanied by 900 men, the first of its kind in the Far East. Six of the planes were introduced already early in March.

The U.S. imperialists are to supply the puppets with improved Hawk guided missiles and rockets worth 68 million dollars this year and with military equipment worth 211.9 million dollars in total in fiscal 1983. The U.S. Congress carried a plan to transfer annunitions, parts and logistic materials worth 2,000 million dollars to the puppets in case of a war in Korea.

By increasing the military capacity of Japan and strengthening the U.S.-Japan-South Korea military tie-up, the U.S. imperialists render the situation of our country more strained. The present situation of the Korean Peninsula, in fact, reminds us of the eve of June 25 32 years ago when the U.S. imperialists started the Korean war.

Attendees Listed

SK252350 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2207 GMT 25 Jun 82

Chong Chun-ki Speech

SK260658 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0755 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Speech by Chong Chun-ki, candidate member of the Political Bureau of the KWP Central Committee and vice premier of the Administration Council, at 25 June Pyongyang rally -- live]

[Text] Comrades: Under the solemn circumstances in which all working people are vigorously accelerating the cause of modeling the whole society in the northern half of the republic after the chuche idea under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the guidance of the glorious party center, the anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation is being waged to liquidate the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule and achieve national sovereignty in the southern half of the fatherland. The strong tide for making the world independent is rushing forward on a broad basis on the five continents of the earth. Today we greet the day of struggle against U.S. imperialism of 25 June.

The hearts of our people greeting this day are burning with surging hatred and hostility toward the U.S. imperialists, our inveterate enemies, who ignited the war of aggression in our country 32 years ago and imposed vast calamities and disasters on our people. They are filled with burning resolve to establish national sovereignty on a nationwide scale by making the U.S. imperialist aggression forces withdraw from Korea, taking along their lethal weapons, including nuclear weapons, and achieving the independent and peaceful reunification of the country. [applause]

The Korean war, which was triggered by the U.S. imperialists on 25 June 1950, 32 years ago, was the most brigandish and shameless war of aggression intended to occupy the whole of Korea, to make the entire Korean people colonial slaves and, furthermore, to gratify their wild ambition to dominate Asia and the world. It was also the most brutal and criminal war of massacre in the history of war in the world.

Our people's heroic war of resistance against the armed invasion of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges was a national liberation war of justice to defend the freedom, independence and national sovereignty of the fatherland. It was also a sacred anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle against the combined forces of the world reactionaries headed by the U.S. imperialists to safeguard the peace and stability of Asia and the world. [applause]

The 3-year-long war forced by the U.S. imperialists was an unprecedentedly severe trial for our people. The U.S. imperialists, who ignited the war of aggression in Korea, mobilized the armed forces of their army, navy and air force, the military units of 15 follower countries and the South Korean puppet army -- totalling over 2 million troops -- and huge amounts of military equipment and materiel and employed all available cruel and barbarous methods and means of war to raze our young republic.

The U.S. imperialists reduced our peaceful towns and villages to ashes through their indiscriminate bombings and shellings. They shot, burned and buried alive innocent people everywhere they set foot. Violating international law, they used even chemical and germ weapons while resorting to all other means in their atrocities to murder the people. [slogans shouted]

With no brutal, genocidal war, however, could the U.S. imperialists bring the Korean people to their knees or realize their wild ambition for aggression.

In the arduous period determining the fate of the fatherland, our people and officers and men of the Korean People's Army rose up as one man in the sacred war of smashing the enemies by firmly rallying around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the legendary hero of the anti-Japanese struggle, the great military strategist and the ever-victorious iron-willed commander, and achieved brilliant victory by mercilessly annihilating and mopping up the aggressors under the wise leadership of the leader. [applause]

Under the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our people defeated the U.S. imperialist aggressors in the great fatherland liberation war. Thus they firmly defended the freedom of the fatherland and the sovereignty of the nation, safeguarded peace in Asia and the world, became the first in history to explode the myth about the mightiness of the U.S. imperialist aggressors, opened the start of their downfall and opened the age of a new upsurge in the anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle on the globe. [applause]

The historic victory attained by our people in the fatherland liberation war has proven that a people blessed with the wise leadership of a great leader are ever victorious and invincible and that nothing can conquer a people who have risen for a just cause, with their destiny in their own hands, under the banner of independence. [applause]

The U.S. imperialists, drawing a lesson from their defeat in the Korean war, not only should have left South Korea but should have abstained from committing acts infringing our people's independence. The U.S. imperialists, however, have remained in South Korea to maintain a colonial rule trample upon the national sovereignty of the South Korean people, obstruct the reunification of our country and run about frantically preparing for a new war of aggression.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their policy of aggression are the source of all misery suffered by our people, the basic element blocking our nation's reunification and a constant danger, likely to trigger a war in Korea.

The present era is one of independence. It is a fundamental trend of our times that people are now advancing toward independence while opposing all sorts of domination and servitude and nothing can stop them. The U.S. imperialists, who are being driven out by this great stream, are more persistently clinging to a policy of force in a bid to emerge from the road of destruction and are further strengthening their maneuvers for aggression and war.

Attaching great significance to the military and strategic position of South Korea, in particular, they are trying to keep the South forever as a colony and military base. Under the pretext of protection, the U.S. war maniacs have frequently made outrageous remarks to the effect that they would not rule out the use of nuclear weapons in Korea. They describe the Korean Peninsula as an important area, a matter of life and death to their interests. This is a revelation of their dark intention to keep South Korea as a military foothold in the Far East region and to dominate the whole of Korea by force.

To achieve this aggressive ambition, the U.S. imperialists have been raving about the non-existent threat of a southward invasion and the north's military superiority and, using this as an excuse, are increasing the aggressive armed forces in South Korea. While constantly reinforcing their armed forces which occupy South Korea with sophisticated, lethal weapons and combat equipment, the U.S. imperialists have moved the center of strategic development of the U.S. 7th Fleet to the East Sea of Korea and are building Chinhae port into a new operational base.

Not only have they turned South Korea into the world's largest nuclear base and deployed hundreds of nuclear weapons there, but they also are trying to ship into South Korea neutron bombs and even theater nuclear missiles. In addition, they are trying to deploy cruise missiles targeted at our country on warships belonging to the U.S. 7th Fleet.

While increasing their armed forces in South Korea and improving their attack capability, the U.S. war maniacs are instigating the South Korean puppets to war preparations by keeping them supplied with modern weapons and equipment. After transferring new-type fighter-bombers, AWACS equipment, various types of missiles, tanks and communication systems to the South Korean puppets, they even made public some time ago an emergency plan to transfer to them $2 billion worth of ammunition and war supplies.

Thus, South Korea is turning into a dangerous powder magazine for a war, a depot of mass destruction weapons of U.S. imperialism in the true sense of the word. In many U.S. bases around the Korean Peninsula, such as Japan, Okinawa, Hawaii and Guam, along with the Korean Peninsula, the U.S. imperialists are increasing armed forces for a task force aimed at attacking our republic. Also they are pursuing criminal maneuvers to induce the Japanese Self-Defense Forces into the war front in Korea.

The U.S. imperialists' maneuvers to provoke a new war in Korea are clearly shown in their war exercises staged against our republic and in their intensified military provocations. The U.S. imperialists, who staged a large-scale military exercise racket named Team Spirit '82 for 70 days beginning last February, are now straining the situation in our country to the extreme by frequently staging war exercises with the northern half of the republic as the target of their offensive.

Violation, of the Korean armistice agreement by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, who commit military provocations against our republic in the skies, sea and ground almost every day, exceeded 1,570, in the period from 1 to 24 May [shouts] All these facts prove that the U.S. imperialists do not want dialogue, peace in Korea or her peaceful reunification, but scheme to ignite a new war, keeping South Korea under their military domination.

In an attempt to maintain their colonial rule in South Korea and to pursue a policy of aggression and war, the U.S. imperialists are clinging to a most unabashedly fascist military dictatorship. The present fascist military dictatorship established in South Korea, a product of a crisis of colonial rule aggravated ever since the October incident, is nothing but a means to be used in executing the U.S. imperialists' policy of colonial enslavement and war. The present fascist military dictatorship in South Korea, which was fabricated by the U.S. imperialists' bayonets in the sea of blood in Kwangju and whose strings are being pulled by the U.S. imperialists, is a most barbarous one, unprecedented in its cruelty and brutality.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique is suppressing and obliterating with bayonets all the social and political elements hindering the execution of the U.S. imperialists' policy of colonial enslavement and war. Placing South Korea under the pall of more fascist evil laws and more oppressive means than ever, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is harshly suppressing the students and the masses of all strata opposed to the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule and imprisoning and oppressing all forces regarded as invidious to the clique, including democratic personage Kim Tae-chung.

In a recent interview with a foreign reporter. Kim Yong-sam, former president of the New Democratic Party, demanded that the current regime be ousted, reflected South Korean public sentiment. The Chon Tu-hwan clique placed him under house arrest. This shows the level which the puppet clique's fascist deeds have reached.

The Chon Tu-hwan clique is unabashedly committing the traitorous act of staging celebrations, falsifying the 100-year history of the U.S. imperialists' invasion of Korea, while, under the protection of the U.S. imperialists' bayonets, committing all sorts of corruption and irregularities, including the major curb market scandal. In addition, the Chon Ty-hwan clique is laying grave obstacles in the way of peace in the nation and the peaceful reunification of the country by accelerating the criminal war maneuvers and aggravating tension.

On behalf of this rally, I sternly denounce with bitter national resentment the U.S. imperialists for illegally occupying the southern half of our country for 37 years and imposing immeasurable misfortunes and sufferings upon the South Korean people, and the Chon Tu-hwan clique, the tool of their colonial rule, for engaging in fascism and war, treachery and division. [applause]

The policy of aggression and war which the U.S. imperialists are pursuing on the strength of the fascist military dictatorship, is, instead of consolidating their position in South Korea, deepening the crisis in their colonial rule. The South Korean masses of all strata and students, who have wakened to national and class consciousness through life and experience, are now vigorously joining in the just anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation to expel the U.S. imperialists and to achieve independence. Starting with the arson at the American Cultural Center in Pusan in March, anti-U.S. struggles erupted elsewhere in South Korea, including Seoul, Kwangju and Chunchon. This is an explosion of the South Korean people's grudges and frustration accumulated against the U.S. imperialists and their colonial rule and a manifestation of their firm will and patriotism to drive out the U.S. imperialists and to regain national dignity and independence. The anti-U.S. and antidictatorship struggle, ever growing in South Korea, is driving the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique into endless fear and terror, dealing a severe blow to their fascist colonial rule.

In the name of the entire people in the northern half of the republic, I warmly support and encourage the masses of all strata in South Korea who, under the anti-U.S. and national salvation banner, are struggling for independence, democracy and reunification, even under the right suppressive rule in which bayonets are wielded and prison and gallows await them. [applause]

Comrades: Today, our people face an important task of establishing national sovereignty throughout the nation by preventing the ever-increasing danger of war and realizing the complete independence of the nation.

Independence is the life of the country and the nation. Only when we are independent can we enjoy the freedom and independence of the country and attain the country's prosperity and development. In order to achieve national sovereignty throughout the country, the U.S. imperialist aggression troops should be withdrawn from South Korea.

With the U.S. imperialists left in the southern part of our fatherland, the South Korean people can neither realize national sovereignty nor achieve the democratization of society and the peaceful reunification of the country.

The South Korean people should resolutely struggle against the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and for the liquidation of their colonial rule under the banner of sovereignty and independence.

At the same time, they should positively struggle to have the U.S. troops and all their aggressive military power, including nuclear arms, withdrawn from South Korea as early as possible and give the aggressors no room to stay in South Korea.

The South Korean people should struggle against the U.S. imperialist aggressors. They should also struggle staunchly to overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist dictatorship -- the tool of the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule -- and realize the democratization of society.

The struggle to achieve the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification is a patriotic struggle to achieve national sovereignty throughout the country. For the accomplishment of the cause of national reunification, the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] put forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the sun of the nation, should be realized. [applause]

All compatriots in the North, South and abroad should wage a positive struggle to realize the proposal for founding the DCRK in great national unity under the banner of anti-imperialism, for national salvation and for independent reunification. Our people's just cause against imperialism and for independent reunification enjoys the absolute support and encouragement of the world's progressive peoples.

On this occasion, we extend deep gratitude to the world's governments, progressive peoples and friends which extend solidarity with our people's cause for the fatherland's reunification and with the South Korean people's struggle against the United States and for national salvation. [applause]

So as to frustrate the U.S. imperialists' aggressive schemes and advance the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification, the northern half of the republic should carry out socialist construction.

Upholding the grand programs put forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth KWP Congress and his historic policy speech at the joint session of the KWP Central Committee and the Supreme Peoples' Assembly of the DPRK, we should vigorously accelerate the cause of modelling the whole society on the chuche idea and more vigorously push ahead with the three revolutions -- ideological, technological and cultural -- on all fronts of socialist construction.

All workers should be more firmly prepared as chuche-type revolutionaries, endlessly loyal to the great leader and the glorious party center and continuously achieve new upsurges and innovations by highly displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance in all sectors of the people's economy.

At the same time, the officers and men of the People's Army and of the People's Constabulary and all people should enhance their revolutionary vigilance against the aggressive maneuverings of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges. They also should always defend the socialist fatherland as an impregnable fortress with an alert and mobilized posture.

Only victory and glory await our people, who are struggling for a just cause under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and under the guidance [hyangdo] of the glorious party center. [applause]

Let all of us more vigorously fight for the fatherland's reunification and for the ultimate consummation of the chuche cause, firmly rallying around the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the genius of the revolution, the sun of the nation, the ever-victorious iron-willed commander and the legendary hero, and the glorious party center. [applause]

Let us drive the U.S. imperialists out of South Korea and reunify the fatherland! [cheers]

Long live the reunified Korean people! [cheers]

Rally Adopts Letter

SK261239 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0900 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Letter of appeal to the South Korean people adopted at 25 June Pyongyang mass meeting and read by unidentified speaker -- live]

[Text] South Korean fellow countrymen, brothers and sisters: We have held a Pyongyang mass meeting to mark 25 June, the day of anti-U.S. imperialist struggle, under magnificent circumstances in which a struggle has been vigorously staged in South Korea to achieve the sovereignty of the people and in which a trend for independence prevails in the world. With surging hatred and enmity against the armed U.S. imperialist aggressors, who caused the entire country to undergo the scourge of war 32 years ago and imposed immeasurable disasters on our people, and proceeding from a single desire to protect the sovereignty of the people and to expedite the fatherland's independent reunification, the participants in the meeting send this letter of appeal.

The 3-year Korean war, which the U.S. imperialists provoked, was a most piratic war of aggression and a most barbarous war of holocaust, unprecedented in the history of war in the world. Mobilizing vast numbers of troops and lethal weapons, the U.S. imperialist aggressors burnt our beloved fatherland, reduced cities and villages to ashes and randomly murdered peaceful residents. Indeed, very great were the war scourges our people suffered at the hands of the U.S. imperialist barbarians and the injuries sustained by our fatherland. However, Korea did not surrender. Under the tested leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the victorious iron-willed commander and outstanding strategist, our people and the heroic people's army -- displaying an indomitable fighting spirit, matchless heroism and the spirit of dedication and preferring death to a life of colonial slavery -- in the decisive war against the U.S. imperialists, who attempted to exterminate our republic in the initial stage, mercilessly dealt great blows at the aggressors, broke the noses of the arrogant rascals, who were said not to know defeat, and finally won a glorious victory.

The Korean war showed that the U.S. imperialists were by no means invincible and that the people, rising for the just cause of protecting national sovereignty by becoming the masters of their own destiny, could not be made to surrender by any force whatsoever.

With the Korean war, the U.S. imperialists began to tread the road of decline and the world's people greeted a new era of anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle. The present era is an era of independence. The iron shackles of domination and subservience have been broken and the trend for independence and welfare is prevailing all over the world. Facing the fate of downfall amid this surging trend of history, the U.S. imperialists are wickedly challenging the cause of the world's people for independence against imperialism. Challenging with arms the South Korean people's sacred cause for national salvation and for independent reunification against imperialism and maintaining an evil colonial rulen the U.S. imperialists have trampled underfood national sovereignty and sought a policy of aggression and war. They are trying to maintain South Korea forever as a colony and as military base.

The present U.S. rulers have attached special significance to South Korea in fulfilling their wild desire for world conquest with strength and have converted South Korea -- a strategic base -- into the biggest nuclear base in the world and into a powderkeg of war.

While greatly increasing the U.S. forces occupying South Korea and while brazenly vowing to use nuclear weapons, U.S. war maniacs have continuously deployed nuclear weapons in South Korea.

In addition, they are wickedly planning to deploy neutron bombs and theater nuclear missiles in South Korea. This is an intolerable challege to the world people, who demand sovereignty and oppose nuclear weapons, and is an outrageous threat to the South Korean people struggling to achieve national sovereignty and the country's peaceful reunification.

To justify their criminal maneuvers, the U.S. imperialists are clamoring about the threat of southward invasion and about the military supremacy of the North. This is a sheer lie and a fiction. How can those who, having massed a large number of aggressive troops in South Korea and in the area surrounding it, have kicked up war exercise rackets daily, simulating us as the target of attack, deceive public opinion, no matter how eagerly they may babble about threat from someone? Paradoxically, the theory on the threat of southward invasion advertised by the U.S. imperialists is one of northward invasion.

The reference to the supremacy of the North is an excuse to justify the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces' occupation of South Korea and their maneuvers to increase their military capability. When the U.S. war maniacs feel it necessary to increase military capability in South Korea, they clamor about the military supremacy of the North. Whenever they feel it necessary to threaten someone, they clamor about their formidable military capability. This contradictory argument by the U.S. imperialists proves that their reference to the threat of southward invasion and to military supremacy is a lie. The U.S. imperialists cannot conceal their color as aggressors and as bellicose elements no matter what means they may use. Nor can they justify their maneuvers for aggression and war.

To enforce their war policy of making South Korea a subservient colony, the U.S. imperialist aggressors have sought to maintain an unprecedented fascist military dictatorship in South Korea. The fascist military dictatorial system established in South Korea is a most dirty, toadyist, murderous ruling system which has been formulated in accordance with the requirements of the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression and which is regulated by the United States.

Holding in high esteem the United States as a friend and as a friendly ally and holding bayonets which the U.S. imperialist masters have given it, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is engaged in maneuvers for fascism, war, treachery and division, running counter to the interests of the people. From the beginning, the Chon Tu-hwan ring has ignored the interests of the country and the people. Solely to benefit the U.S. aggressors and to seek its own fortune and long-term power, this treacherous clique has suppressed its fellow countrymen in a fascist manner, cictimized compatriots by kicking up war rackets, violated the interests of the people by committing treacheries and tried to fabricate two Koreas following a splittist line.

Raising the raging voices of all the people against the aggressors and the traitors, this meeting resolutely denounces the criminal attempt of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan ring, a group of their stooges, to make half of our fatherland a colony, to maintain the most barbarous fascist military rule and to light the flames of war in this land. [shouts]

We are now hearing the resonant shouts proudly raised by the South Korean people and students in opposing foreign aggression, in struggling against treacheries and oppression and in glorifying the history of their sacred, patriotic struggle. The thunderous shouts for independence and democracy raised throughout South Korea, including Kwangju, Pusan, Seoul and Chunchon, demanding "Yankee withdraw!", "We denounce the neocolonialism of the United States!" and "Chon Tu-hwan must withdraw!" is the eruption of the pent-up rancor and resentment against the fascist colonial rule by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges.

This represents a righteous, patriotic struggle to achieve national sovereignty and is a just nation-saving struggle to achieve democracy and the country's peaceful reunification.

On behalf of the meeting, we extend warm support and encouragement to the South Korean people of all walks of life and students, who are resolutely waging a patriotic, sacred struggle to oppose imperialism and to save the country and achieve democracy and national reunification, without fearing prisons and death. [applause, shouts]

South Korean fellow countrymen, brothers and sisters: Independence is the lifeline of the country and the people. Today's harrowing situation in South Korea, in which the sovereignty of the people has been trampled underfoot and in which the dark clouds of war are hanging low over our fellow countrymen, urgently calls for you to struggle more vigorously to oppose imperialism and achieve national independence.

The U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their policy of making South Korea a colony and a military base is the source of all misfortunes and hardships suffered by the South Korean people. Without forcing the U.S. imperialists aggressive forces to withdraw from South Korea and without ending their colonial rule, we cannot achieve national sovereignty. Nor can we fulfill our desire for democracy and the country's reunification.

South Korean workers, peasants, students and youths, intellectuals and religionists: Wage a vigorous struggle to put an end to the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule! Rise as one in the struggle to remove the U.S. troops of aggression along with all the weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons, from South Korea! Deter and crush the aggressors' maneuvers to provoke a war at every footstep and raise vigorously the flame of anti-U.S. struggle throughout the nation so that they cannot stay in the sacred land of our fatherland, not even a single one of them! [applause]

The struggle waged against the alien aggressors should be linked closely to the struggle against the internal flunkyists. Wage a more vigorous struggle to overthrow the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique, which is running wild to execute the U.S. colonial enslavement policy and war policy, and to put an end to its fascist rule!

Struggle bravely to abolish all the fascist evil laws and suppressive institutions and to release all the illegally arrested democratic personages, including Kim Tae-chung, and patriotic students! [applause]

Men and officers of the South Korean armed forces: You should not walk along the criminal road of opposing your fellow countrymen with the guns handed down by the U.S. imperialists. Come to the side of the nation and people and train the muzzle of your guns on the U.S. imperialists and the puppet stooges -- the Chon Tu-hwan clique.

Reunification of the fatherland is a paramount task facing all the Korean people. The most realistic and rational way for an independent and peaceful reunification is to achieve the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Korea put forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song -- the sun of the nation.

Everyone, let us struggle and struggle again to establish the DCRK, transcending difference of ideology, thoughts and systems. [applause]

Victory is on the side of the South Korean people who have risen for the just cause under the banner of independence.

Let us all wage vigorous struggle to establish a new and independent world free of alien forces and flunkyists and traitors -- a single reunified and independent Korea -- on the land of our beloved fatherland. [applause]

NODONG SINMUN SCORES SEOUL CABINET RESHUFFLE

[NODONG SINMUN 27 June commentary: "Another Fraudulent Tactic"]

[Text] Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is trying hard to clear himself of the loan scandal in which he himself is deeply involved as evidenced by recent cabinet reshuffles. On 24 June puppet Chon Tu-hwan replaced the puppet prime minister and the finance, justice, and energy and resources ministers.

This is a fraud -- the second of its kind -- that traitor Chon Tu-hwan has worked out to bail himself out of a difficult situation created by the loan scandal and the voices calling for the resignation of traitor Chon Tu-hwan and his military fascist regime.

In effecting the reshuffle, traitor Chon Tu-hwan did not say a word about his involvement in the scandal. Rather, he tried to fool the people with nonsensical words. He said that the Cabinet has been reshuffled to call it to account for the loan scandal and to create a new spirit to promote national harmony and satisfy public opinion. With this Cabinet reshuffle, he said, the loan scandal has been brought to an end politically.

He would have no qualms about embezzling money, being a shameless murderer who slaughtered several thousand compatriots in Kwangju and who appeared in the very place where the killings occurred, babbling about national harmony. If someone should be called to account for the loan scandal, it is Chon Tu-hwan himself. The South Korean people call him to account for it and demand he step down from power.

However, the one who masterminded the scandal stays on, while his underlings are replaced by new ones. This is another fraudulent tactic to fool the people. The deceptive cabinet reshuffle can convince no one. It constitutes a grave crime against history and will only cause a new wave of protests. It has nothing to do with national harmony. The claim that it has brought the scandal to an end politically is an outrageous challenge to the South Korean people. Behind the claim is the fascist murderous threat that anyone who has a different opinion about the conclusion of the scandal will meet political reprisals.

Like a thief crying, "Stop thief," puppet Chon Tu-hwan is trying to use the scandal as an excuse to trample on the people's demands and to make a new assault against democracy and human rights. This does not mean it is a fresh start. This is an intensification of U.S. imperialist colonial rule and the military fascist rule of terror and more corrupt practices. He does not care about a just solution to the loan scandal; he cares only for power and money.

The South Korean people should not be fooled by traitor Chon Tu-hwan's fraudulent tactic to whitewash the loan scandal by effecting cabinet reshuffles. They should stubbornly call him to account for it and drive him from power. They can have an independent new life only when they drive him out of power, overthrow the military fascist rule and end the occupation of South Korea by U.S. troops.

VRPR Commentary

SK271010 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] As you all know, on 24 June the traitor Chon Tu-hwan reshuffled his cabinet for the sixth time since the beginning of this year, changing the prime minister, ministers of finance, justice and energy and resources, amidst the loud voices calling for a revelation of the truth about the major loan scandal.

The traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique said this was a decisive step aimed at appeasing the public suspicions and its will to embody responsive politics.

Nevertheless, with his repeated sacking of cabinet members such as the prime minister -- an unprecedented game of cabinet reshuffle never found in other countries -- Chon Tu-hwan will never be able to avoid the responsibility for having perpetrated the large-scale loan scandal.

As the voices of the masses of all strata denouncing him and accusing the people in Chongwadae of having perpetrated the large-scale loan scandal were growing, the traitor Chon Tu-hwan, in an attempt to mislead public opinion and to avoid responsibility for this incident, has taken a poorly worked out stopgap measure of changing the prime minister, whom he had refused to relieve within 1 year of his appointment as stipulated in the constitution, pretending his hands are clean.

Even with such petty wiles, he can never provide solace to the public suspicions, nor can he avoid the responsibility for the curb market scandal, nor can he stop the uncontrollable power crisis.

As for the large-scale loan scandal, the ringleader of which is Yi Sun-cha, the sacked cabinet ministers and the imprisoned imposters are none other than the servants who ran errands for Chon Tu-hwan. This is a well-known fact.

The masses of all strata, financial circles, business circles, legal circles and even the political circles, too, unanimously demand that Chon Tun-hwan and Yi Sun-cha take the responsibility for the large-scale loan scandal, that Chon Tun-hwan reveal the whole truth about the incident and that he step down from power after giving up all the wealth he amassed illegally. What our masses demand is not any kind of reshuffle in the government offices but a total resignation of the regime of Chon Tu-hwan -- the U.S. stooge.

As is well known, the regime of Chon Tu-Hwan, as were all the regimes in the past, is a stooge regime of the United States and a traitorous regime which is devoted to territorial split, fascist dictatorial rule and corruption. Every one of the fascist dictators nurture by U.S. imperialists has been corrupt. As long as such a fascist dictator as Chon Tu-hwan, the U.S. stooge, remains in Chongwadae, corruption and irregularities will never be eradicated, nor will the reunification of the nation, social democratization, or correct solutions to the public livelihood be possible.

Instead of being intent on misleading public opinion or deceiving the people, the traitor Chon Tu-hwan should frankly make public the truth about being the ringleader of the loan scandal and step down from power without delay. This is what Chon Tu-hwan should do at this moment. Chon Tu-hwan should know that he can never deceive our people, no matter what tricks he may employ. Our masses will continue struggling to oust the fascist Chon Tu-hwan clique -- the ringleaders of the loan scandal and faithful stooges to the United States -- from power.

YI BEGINS U.S. TRIP DESPITE HAIG RESIGNATION

Foreign Ministry Comment

SK260219 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 2203 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] The Ministry of Foreign Affairs has said that it has, through the Korean Embassy in Washington and diplomatic channels, confirmed that U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig has resigned. Though there has been no change made in the itinerary of Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok, who had been scheduled to hold talks with Haig on 29 June, the ministry believed that this matter would be discussed again through the diplomatic channels of the two countries.

Haig Praised

SK260306 Seoul YONHAP in English 0258 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, June 26 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok will leave for Washington Saturday afternoon as originally scheduled despite the sudden dismissal of U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig, the Foreign Ministry announced Saturday.

Yi's visit to Washington is at the official invitation of the State Department, the ministry said. Yi will meet with Acting Secretary of State Walter Stoessel June 29 to discuss a wide range of issues, and also discuss matters of mutual interest with Vice President George Bush and other government and congressional leaders.

Kim Sok-kyu, director general of the Foreign Ministry's American Affairs Bureau, said that Haig contributed to the improvement of relations between Seoul and Washington by arranging the summit talks between Presidents Chon Tu-hwan and Ronald Reagan early last year. Kim expressed his hope that the traditionally amicable relations between Seoul and Washington would be further cemented with George P. Shultz' appointment as the new secretary of state.

Meanwhile, Minister Yi cabled a congratulatory message to Shultz on his appointment as new secretary of state. He also sent a telegram to Haig, expressing his thanks on behalf of the Korean Government for his contribution to the betterment of bilateral relations.

Yi will be accompanied to Washington by Kim and Mun Tong-suk, Yi's chief secretary.

TONG-A ILBO: Haig 'Troublemaker'

SK280754 Seoul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 26 Jun 82 p 3

[Article by reporter Kim Chong-so: "A Bombshell Announcement on Friday"]

[Excerpts] Alexander Haig's announcement of his resignation from the post of secretary of the Department of State of the United States was a bombshell declaration on Friday. Not to mention the fact that none of the Western allies of the United States was informed of the matter in advance, even the officials of the U.S. State Department were surprised by Haig's resignation when they learned of it through President Reagan's announcement.

Appearing before television cameras at the White House press room looking gloomy, President Reagan made a brief announcement that Secretary of State Haig had resigned and George Shultz, former secretary of the treasury, has been appointed as his successor. He gave no explanation why Haig had resigned and, in this regard, did not answer reporters' questions.

Alexander Haig, because of frequent conflicts of opinion in the Reagan administration, after all, had been branded a troublemaker and tendered his resignation. This however, was a kind of forced resignation, when it is viewed from the stance of those around President Reagan.

All in all, it can be said that, with Haig's resignation and with the appointment of George Shultz as the new secretary of state, U.S. diplomacy has entered a period of transition in which a new course must be determined. However, observers foresee no drastic changes in U.S. foreign policy, because Haig's resignation resulted not from conflicts of opinions on U.S. policies but from his arbitrariness and failures and from his unharmonious human relations.

Haig Departure Concerns TIMES

[Editorial: "Haig's Retreat"]

[Text] A disagreement on foreign policy among relevant agencies in the American administration -- and for that matter in any other government -- is not a novel phenomenon. In Washington, discord between the White House and the State Department over foreign affairs has often developed into open dispute in recent decades -- especially following the presence of a strong-minded national security advisor to the president.

Apparently mindful of the ill effects emanating from such frictions, President Ronald Reagan since his inauguration has kept his security assistants in relatively low profile. Yet there have been frequent reports about rows develping between the secretary of state, Alexander Haig, and his counterparts in other agencies and sometimes with his own subordinates.

For all that, it was a surprise to learn that Mr. Haig had to quit his office in a more or less abrupt manner — and particularly at a time when the United States was expected to make urgent decisions and play swift roles in the face of mounting crucial issues around the world.

In addition to the suddenness of his retreat, the way Mr. Haig divulged the reasons for the resignation -- at least some of them -- was rather unusual. He told an open staff meeting that he was leaving the office because the Reagan administration's foreign policy in recent months had strayed from the carefully-charted goal of "consistency, clarity and steadiness of purpose," which he said had been set by President Reagan and himself at the outset of the administration 17 months ago.

His statement was unusual in that it in a sense constitutes a challenge to, if not public rebuke of, his opponents in the Reagan camp. It moreover draws concerns as it indicates the magnitude of policy conflicts besetting the Washington administration, a situation which was described as cumulative.

Those disputes are now hoped to be solved by the wisdom and statecraft of President Reagan and his aides -- and with the appointment of a new secretary, Mr George P. Shultz, a seasoned public figure armed with ample experience with various government and private functions.

On the American domestic scene, Mr. Haig's abrupt departure may have much political bearing now that midterm elections are due shortly amid piles of sensitive issues, both internal and external.

Of overriding concern to the international community is whether the change at the helm of U.S. foreign policy should be taken as a sign of possible alteration in the performance of policy execution, if not policy orientation, though no major shift is expected being under the same administration.

For Koreans, the sudden replacement of the secretary of state is somewhat embarrassing -- not because of policy matters but because of its timing which came on the eve of Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok's departure to Washington for an official visit at the invitation of Mr. Haig. Minister Yi left yesterday as scheduled for the invitation was not personal but a formal one extended by the U.S. Government, which has already lined up appointments for his talks with a number of Washington leaders.

In a sense, the minister's trip is timely because he may be able to gain unanticipated results through his talks with leading American figures and a better understanding of the Washington situation following the change in the State Department.

We are sure that, regardless of the secretarial reshuffle, Korean-American relations marking the centennial this year will become more amicable and closer than ever in all aspects, and Minister Yi's tour is hoped to be successful in providing a new momentum for that cause.

Review of U.S. Ties Sought

SK261134 Seoul CHUNGANG ILBO in Korean 23 Jun 82 p 2

[Editorial: "ROK-U.S. Foreign Ministers' Talk"]

[Text] This year saw many well-wishing remarks exchanged between Seoul and Washington pledging the further promotion of the traditional friendly relations between Korea and the United States.

As a function marking the centennial anniversary of the diplomatic relations between the two countries, many U.S. dignitaries, including Vice President Bush, visited Korea. At the same time, many leading personages of Korea also made friendly visits to the United States. Thus, a friendly mood between the two countries has been in full swing.

Viewed from this context, Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok's planned visit to the United States cannot be regarded as an unexpected or unprecedented one. When a new foreign minister has been appointed in Korea, as a rule, he has wanted to want to meet his U.S. counterpart as soon as possible to confirm matters of common concern and the basic stance of both sides.

In particular, Secretary Haig was originally scheduled to visit Korea on the occasion of the centennial anniversary of the diplomatic relations between the two countries. But his plan to visit Korea was cancelled because of the Falklands dispute. Considering this, the ROK-U.S. foreign ministers' talks slated on 29 June in Washington are considered logical and very opportune.

It is believed that the talks will discuss matters on the security of the northeast Asia, an increase in U.S. military loans to Korea and possibly a U.S. role in the current negotiations on economic cooperation between Korea and Japan.

However, in the light of the changing international situation surrounding the Korean Peninsula, the ROK-U.S. foreign ministers' talks in Washington should not adhere too much to questions pending between the two countries and should be rather an opportunity to open a new horizon in their relations.

In West Europe alone, taking advantage of the icreasing influence of socialist parties, moves to recognize North Korea are increasing. France can be taken as an example of this. Of course, there is no guarantee that such moves will not occur in the future in other regions of the world. The same moves can occur between Korea and the East European countries and between Korea and nonaligned countries.

Such moves can be finally developed into the cross-recognition of South and North Korea by the four powers, the subsequent alleviation of tension on the Korean Peninsula and reconciliation between the South and the North. To cope with such a situation, coordination between the two countries is most important.

It seems that there are no difference in views or conflicts of national interest between Korea and the United States. From a common sense point of view, the U.S. defense commitment to Korea is not a mere favor offered to Korea but is because of its own national interests. Considering this, we urge review of possible changes in the U.S. stance of the past 30 years on cross-recognition of the South and the North and the South-North dialogue.

Finding out such basic things as the U.S. stance on the strategic value of Korea and the stance of the United States and neighboring countries on the freeze of present situation on the Korean Peninsula is more important than trying to get more military loans at this juncture. U.S. support to Korea is not given as a matter of course, nor is it everlasting. Nevertheless, we have maintained relations with the United States without having a long-term view. The yardstick of the Korea-U.S. relations has been the amount of the U.S. aid. Such a shortsighted attitude on our part will no longer be permitted by the present international situation.

In this context, President Chon Tu-hwan's planned visit to the African countries will be an opportunity to diversify our diplomacy and to expand our independent diplomatic line. The time when we had joy or sorrow in the number of votes at the UN session or a meeting of the noanligned countries and when we were excited over the recognition of North Korea by some of our allied nations, regarding it as a great loss in our diplomatic activities, is already passed.

Our national strength and international status have been strengthened to the extent that our diplomacy in the new era can be carried out with a firm and resolute attitude and with a vision to rectify the present national division.

The ROK-U.S. foreign ministers' talks in Washington should be an opportunity to review the U.S. stance toward Korea and to liquidate such a diplomatic attitude as clinging to the United States. This is also a demand of the present international situation. We believe that the time has come for us to deal with the United States with our head, not our heart.

UNC SEEKS NEW FORMAT FOR MAC NEGOTIATIONS

SK270300 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 27 Jun 82 p 8

[Text] Panmunjom -- The U.N. Command proposed to North Korea yesterday that both sides focus negotiations in the meetings of the Military Armistice Commission on specific measures to reduce tensions. The UNC initiative was voiced by the UNC's senior member, Rear Adm. James G. Storms, III, during the 414th MAC meeting at this truce village.

"The UNC will call specific meetings for the single purpose of negotiating carefully defined actions to reduce tensions and your side will be notified of the agenda well in advance," Adm. Storms told Han Chu-kyong, the northern senior MAC member.

He stressed that the northern side would have opportunities to study proposed actions in advance of the meetings and to negotiate mutually beneficial results in an atmosphere free of rhetoric. The admiral invited the northern side to undertake similar actions in preparation for meaningful negotiations and to comment on means to ensure the success of this new approach to MAC business.

There was no immediate response by Han to Adm. Storms' proposal. In the meeting, which lasted for about four and a half hours, Han charged the UNC with distorted, false reports including a fabricated violation of the armistice agreement by the UNC side.

Adm. Storms strongly warned Han not to misuse the MAC to blatantly spread distorted historical facts and propaganda. "The UNC will not be a part of your negativism. We will continue to approach these meetings in a positive, hopeful manner." Adm. Storms said. "We will continue to offer proposals which can have no other effect but to reduce tension and promote peace."

After making a lengthy propaganda statement, which lasted nearly three hours, including translations, Han disrupted Adm. Storms' initial attempt to speak by insisting on a recess.

After about 25 minutes of recess, Adm. Storms rejected Han's protest about SR-71 missions, which Han charged made flights over the northern land and sea areas in violation of the armistice agreement. The flight path of UNC aircraft was so carefully controlled that "there is no possibility of violating the North's airspace," he said.

YI ASKS 'FARSIGHTED' TOKYO VIEW IN LOAN TALKS

SK260821 Seoul YONHAP in English 0730 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, June 26 (YCNHAP) -- South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok Saturday urged the Japanese Government to view Korea's outstanding request for Japanese Government loans from a far-sighted perspective that is aware of the potential threat of communist expansionism in this area of the world.

Addressing a Seoul correspondents' club luncheon as the guest of honor, Yi, who assumed the foreign affairs portfolio earlier this month, said, "I would hope that Japanese Government leaders look 100 years ahead and have more understanding of the nature of communist expansionism. If South Korea is communized, it (communist expansion) would not stop here. If anyone thinks that it would, they would be downright wrong."

Yi also said that recent events in Korea, including the so-called "Mrs. Chang" curb market scandal, have neither affected the country's stability nor its economy and added that Korea's domestic problems should not be linked to the Korean-Japanese negotiations over Seoul's request for six billion U.S. dollars in Japanese Government loans.

The Korean minister refused to comment on a Japanese newspaper report that Japan's recent offer of 1.5 billion dollars in official development aid and another 2.5 billion dollars in Japanese EX-IM bank loans was final and unnegotiable. Yi expressed displeasure over Japanese officials allowing their position on this sensitive issue to be repeatedly publicized in that country's media.

Yi is scheduled to meet with senior U.S. officials, including Vice President George Bush, in Washington next week. At the press luncheon given a few hours before his departure for Washington, the foreign minister also said the purpose of his U.S. visit was for routine consulations on topics of general interest to both sides. He said he would meet Acting Secretary of State Walter Stoessel instead of Alexander Haig, who originally invited him to Washington but resigned from office Friday.

"We (South Korea and the United States) consider ourselves most important allies. Since I just assumed the job of foreign minister, it would be mutually beneficial to have an exchange of views between myself and pertinent U.S. officials," Yi said. Yi said, in answer to a reporter's question, that he does not believe there is a trend toward anti-Americanism in Korea. "The (Korean-American) friendship remains intact and the majority of South Koreans appreciate the role of the United States in this country."

On President Chon Tu-hwan's forthcoming tour of four African states -- Kenya, Nigeria, Gabon and Senegal — Yi observed the trip underscores the importance of the African Continent in today's world, and said the trip would help make South Korea better known among African nations. He noted that Africa is abundant in natural resources, and said Korea's human resources and Africa's raw materials could combine for fruitful bilateral economic cooperation.

In prepared remarks, Yi said the fundamental aim of foreign policy is to create an international environment in which all nations can live in peace and harmony. He added that South Korea is forced to devote more time and energy to the pursuit of this aim since it faces a hostile regime in the North "whose sole objective is to destroy the Republic of Korea and communize the entire peninsula. Because of the threat from North Korea, we have to spend six percent of our Gross National Product on defense, one of the highest ratios in the world," Yi said. "If we did not have to face North Korea, we could have achieved more rapid economic growth and substantial progress in social welfare," he also said.

During a question-and-answer session, Yi said that South Korea's high defense expenditures not only safeguard its own security but that of the entire Far East region, including Japan.

When asked whether Korea would be willing to back down from its original demands concerning its request for Japanese Government loans, he said that concessions would have to be made on both sides.

POLICE INVESTIGATING THEFT OF EXPLOSIVES

SK260132 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 26 Jun 82 p 8

[Text] Kwangju, Cholla Namdo (YONHAP) -- Police yesterday started investigating the theft of 20 explosives and many detonators from a construction site in a farming community near here.

A report from Dongbok-myon, Hasun-gun, said yesterday 20 industrial explosives and 70 detonators were stolen from a warehouse in a construction area in Toksang-ni. A water channel for agricultural use was being built there.

The report said police believed the theft occurred sometime betweem 7 p.m. Wednesday and 8:30 a.m. Thursday. It quoted police there as saying that barbed wire surrounding the warehouse was found widely cut and a window pane broken.

SIHANOUK PROPOSES GENEVA CONFERENCE TO REMAKE KAMPUCHEA

BK270410 Hong Kong AFP in English 0353 GMT 27 Jun 82

[Text] Penang, June 27 (AFP) -- The President of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, has proposed that a Geneva conference be held to "re-make a nonaligned, new Kampuchea".

He said that such a conference -- similar to the 1954 Geneva conference on Cambodia -- must have the participation of the United States, China, the Soviet Union, Vietnam and countries from ASEAN and the nonaligned movement. He hoped that peace-loving countries such as the United States or Britain would help to organise the meeting to solve the Kampucehan issue.

The prince made the suggestion in an interview with the Malaysian national news agency BERNAMA before leaving for Singapore after (?arriving) in Penang with his wife, Princess Monique. He said that he would, however, need to come to a consensus on the proposal with his two other partners in the coalition.

Prince Sihanouk will continue with his tour of the ASEAN capitals before returning to Kampuchea to launch the new coalition government next month. He said he would convey his gratitude to ASEAN leaders for their support in forming the coalition government and, at the same time, sound out what kind of aid they could provide.

The prince said he would go to New York to address the United Nations in September and hoped to talk to the Reagan administration on eventual U.S. aid. "We will not ask for weapons from the U.S. We know they will reject our requests for such aid, but we will try to get economic and humanitarian aid from the Americans," he added.

Prince Sihanouk also said that the ASEAN countries would lobby strongly to enable him to attend the forthcoming nonaligned summit meeting in Baghdad. "The Kampuchean seat in the Nonaligned Movement has been left empty, and if we cannot take the seat, at least I hope to be allowed to address the summit," he said. "I am ready to present our case to the Nonaligned Movement," he added.

Last night Prince Sihanouk and Princess Monique were entertained to a dinner by Penang Governor Tun Dr Awang Hassan at his home. Penang Chief Minister Dr Lim Chong Eu was among the dignitaries who attended the dinner.

Prince Sihanouk also told BERNAMA that since the signing of the declaration to form the coalition government there has been a "change of heart and spirit" among his people and that even the Khmer Rouge was gaining support in Kampuchea. "More and more people realize that they have to accept the Khmer Rouge or they will lose Kampuchea to become one of the provinces of Vietnam," he said.

Referring to his past strained relations with his partners in the coalition, Prince Sihanouk said he did not want any more disputes with Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan and former Prime Minister Son Sann because the real enemy now was the Vietnamese. "I told them once the coalition government is set up, they should be the administrators and I will take on my role as the spokesman and diplomat to gather international support for the movement", he said.

The prince said there was no "overnight solution" to the Kampuchea problem as the Vietnamese in Kampuchea were "still strong and equally stubborn." He said resistance forces were in need of food and military aid. He predicted that the Vietnamese would launch a serious attack on the resistance once the current rainy season is over. He said the coalition government would have no fixed headquarters and adopt Vietcong-type guerrilla tactics to oppose Hanoi's troops.

Arrives in Singapore

[Text] The president of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, Prince Sihanouk, is in Singapore on a 3-day visit as the personal guest of President Devan Nair. The prince, who is on a tour of ASEAN countries, was met on arrival at the airport this afternoon by the foreign minister, Mr Dhanabalan.

Speaking to reporters at the airport, Prince Sihanouk hoped that Singapore would be able to provide it with humanitarian, financial and economic aid. He said such aid was needed to help his people to solve problems in the social field. Prince Sihanouk said they were now facing the food problem, but they had enough weapons for the time being. The prince hoped continued pressure would be put on Vietnam to bring it to the conference table to resolve the Kampuchea issue.

This evening, Prince Sihanouk will pay a courtesy call on President Devan Nair. Later, he will attend a dinner hosted by the president. Tomorrow, the prince will meet Mr Lee Kuan Yew, the deputy prime minister and minister of foreign affairs, Mr Rajaratnam and Mr Dhanabalan. Prince Sihanouk flew in from Penang.

Speaking to newsmen there, he proposed that a Geneva conference be held to remake a nonaligned, new Kampuchea. He said that such a meeting, similar to the 1954 Geneva conference on Kampuchea, must have the participation of the United States, China, the Soviet Union, Vietnam and countries from ASEAN and the Nonaligned Movement.

VODK EDITORIAL WELCOMES COALITION GOVERNMENT

[Station editorial: "The Kampuchean People All Over the Country, the Whole Democratic Kampuchean National Army and Guerrillas, Male and Female Combatants and Cadres of All Our Democratic Kampuchean Ministries and Offices Welcome the Declaration on the Formation of the Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government"]

[Text] After listening attentively to Khieu Samphan's statement on the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, the statement of the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas Supreme Command on uniting with all Kampuchean people in continuing to attack the Le Duan Vietnamese genocidal aggressors until final victory and the text of the declaration on the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea broadcast by our Democratic Kampuchea Radio on 22 and 23 June, Kampuchean people all over the country, our Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas on all battlefields as well as male and female combatants and cadres of all our Democratic Kampuchean ministries and offices sincerely and with national pride welcome the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea which has Samdech Norodom Sihanouk as president, His Excellency Khieu Samphan as vice president in charge of foreign affairs and His Excellency Son Sann as prime minister.

We are confident that this coalition will increase the resistance forces to fight the Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators until they are all driven out of the Kampuchea that we love as our life.

During the past more than 3 years, the patriotic and Democratic Front of the Great National Union of Kampuchea [PDFGNUK], our Democratic Kampuchean Government, our people all over the country, our Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas have long hoped that the Kampuchean people would unite with each other to increase the forces fighting the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators in all fields -- military, political, diplomatic -- to liberate our country and nation from the Vietnamese enemy quickly, and to liberate our Kampuchean people from the greatest tragedy and the genocide committed by the Vietnamese enemy aggressors. This desire was aimed at restoring peace in Kampuchea so that our people of all nationalities and social strata could enjoy peace, work for prosperity, and make our country independent, neutral and nonaligned and developed. Therefore, the fact that our nation is united is our pride and hope.

Friendly peoples and countries all over the world and all peace and justice-loving countries warmly welcome the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea. They will continue to assist and support ardently the just struggle of the Kampuchean people to fight the Vietnamese enemy genodical aggressors to achieve the just cause of national liberation, to defend the survival of our Kampuchean nation, territory and race. In fact, the Kampuchean people's struggle has resisted the danger of aggressive and expansionist strategy of the Vietnamese and the Soviets in Southeast Asia.

Concerning the Vietnamese Le Duan enemy aggressors and exterminators of the Kampuchean race, the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea is their shameful political and diplomatic defeat. Because they are completely defeated, bogged down and at a complete impasse on the Kampuchean battlefields -- militarily and politically -- the Vietnamese Le Duan enemy is making efforts to stage all kinds of activities in an attempt to obstruct the formation of the Kampuchean national coalition. The Kampuchean people, however, have a long and glorious tradition of struggle, deep national pride and strong patriotism, and will never bow to be lackeys of the Vietnamese.

By considering the national interest as sacred and with a determination to liberate their beloved country and nation from the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, the three Kampuchean parties agreed to set up a Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea after carefully discussing the issue. The formation of this government is aimed at increasing forces to fight the Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators until they are all driven out of Kampuchea.

All of us -- male, female combatants and cadres of the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas on all battlefields, cadres and male and female combatants of all Democratic Kampuchean ministries and offices as well as the people all over the country -- are determined to implement all points of the declaration of the formation of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea in order to increase forces to fight the Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators until they are all driven out of Kampuchea which we love as our own life. We are determined to forge national solidarity to defend the nation and build it in harmony for the future. Concurrently, all of us will unite with each other shoulder to shoulder to fulfill our daily duty to fight the Vietnamese enemy aggressors in all forms and methods -- on the frontline and rear battlefields -- to gain daily, monthly and yearly victories until we win final victory over the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors and race exterminators, to liberate our nation and people and to defend our nation, people and race for their eternity.

CHEA SIM: USSR TRIP A STEP TO CLOSER SOCIALIST TIES

BK251418 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 24 Jun 82

[Station correspondent's 24 June interview with National Assembly Chairman Chea Sim on his parliamentary delegation's recent visit to the USSR -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] Recently, you led a delegation of our National Assembly for an official friendship visit to the Soviet Union. We would like to hear about the results of this visit.

[Answer] The visit of our PRK National Assembly delegation to the Soviet Union can be seen as a new success which actively contributes to the elevation of our national prestige and identity on the international stage. Beside helping to strengthen and develop the fraternal friendship, militant solidarity and fruitful cooperation between the two Kampuchean and Soviet parties, governments and peoples, the visit of our National Assembly delegation has inaugurated the links between the national assemblies of the countries; that is, between the PRK National Assembly and the USSR Supreme Soviet. This is a new historic event for the PRK and a giant step toward strengthening cooperation with fraternal socialist countries.

Through this visit, our delegation has gained many important experiences useful to the socialist construction effort of our country. The visit to state enterprises, factories, farms and cultural centers enabled our delegation to further grasp the building of socialist foundations, particularly the management of the productive system, the construction of a modern industry and advanced agriculture and the promotion of a revolutionary culture successfully carried out by the fraternal Soviet people who have turned the fatherland of Lenin into a solid mainstay of the socialist community and a bulwark for world peace.

The fraternal talks with the leaders of the USSR Supreme Soviet, the leaders of the Girghiz SSR and the leaders of the Moscow and Leningrad city soviets gave our delegation opportunities to exchange experiences and learn from the wonderful heroic achievements of the Soviet people who have struggled actively to build their fatherland despite all kinds of obstacles and hardships to the point that they now enjoy a billiant stage of development.

Let me stress that wherever it went, our delegation received a warm welcome from the Supreme Soviet leaders and from the fraternal Soviet people, displaying deep friendship and close solidarity with our revolutionary cause and resolute support for our party and people in the defense and building of our country toward genuine socialism.

Let me recall that after completing the visit to the Soviet Union, I led another delegation representing our KPRP to attend the centennial of Georgi Dimitrov in the People's Republic of Bulgaria. During this mission, our delegation participated in the International Conference on Georgi Dimitrov and the World Today. It also attended the solemn meeting marking Georgi Dimitrov's birthday. To our party and people, the participation in this is significant for three reasons: 1) It shows our gratitude to Georgi Dimitrov, the elder of the Communist International who fought and make all kinds of sacrifices for the cause of socialism and peace in the world; 2) it was a grand international forum rallying parties of fraternal socialist countries, communist parties from Asia, Africa, Latin America and Europe and peace and justice-loving progressive forces in the world, mobilizing unanimous views and actions to continue along the glorious path of Georgi Dimitrov and upholding the spirit of proletarian internationalism in line with the world; and 3) the brilliant outcome of the centennial of Georgi Dimitrov also shows the force of the struggle waged by the socialist countries and of the peace and justice-loving progressive forces against the aggressive and hegemonist policy of the imperialists and their allies, including the Beijing expansionists, who have been senselessly carrying out activities to sabotage detente and threaten world peace and the identity of mankind through a nuclear war.

Additionally, the participation in the centenniel of Georgi Dimitrov also gave our delegation a chance to strengthen and develop friendship and militant solidarity between our party and other fraternal proletarian parties.

KAMPUCHEA ARTICLE HAILS KPRP ANNIVERSARY

BK270940 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0256 GMT 27 Jun 82

[Text] Phonom Penh, 27 Jun (SPK) -- The newspaper KAMPUCHEA, central organ of the National Front, carried an article in its latest issue devoted to the 31st founding anniversary of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party (28 June). The paper says:

In the melting-pot of the seething struggle of the national liberation movement in the world, and particularly in Indochina, the Khmer People's Revolutionary Party came into existence at the end of a meeting held on 28 June 1951 under the direction of Ache Mean, alias Song Ngoc Minh.

KAMPUCHEA hails the Khmer People's Revolutionary Party, which led the Kampuchean revolution and guided it from one victory to another over the Japanese fascists, the French colonialists, the U.S. imperialists and finally the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan criminals.

Our party, the paper says, will never forget the acts of treason of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique which wormed itself into the party, murdered general secretary Tu Samut and seized the party leadership. From then on, the Pol Pot gang diverted the party from the principles of Marxism-Leninism and, having completely betrayed Marxism-Leninism, led it toward bigoted nationalism and turned it into a disciple of Maoism.

Following the victory over the U.S. imperialists and their Lon Nol lackeys on 17 April 1975, the Pol Pot gang and its disguised company massacred the authentic cadres and partisans of the revolution and stripped the party of its working class character by decreeing that the party was open to poor and middle-class peasants. They incited the people toward extreme chauvinism and the abolition of proletarian internationalism. They opened Kampuchea only to Beijing and, finally, transformed it into a springboard for Beijing's policy of expansionism and hegemonism, thus creating a serious menance to peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

These bad experiences, the paper goes on, led the Kampuchea People's Revolutionary Party to strengthen its determination at its fourth congress to observe Marxist-Leninist principles and build itself into a vanguard party of the working class.

The Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party is the offspring of the working people and struggles for the working class and the Kampuchean laboring strata. It follows the path of Marxism-Leninism. Its interests are those of the fatherland and the workers. The Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party realizes that the Kampuchean revolution is part of world revolution. The law of the development of the Kampuchean revolution is based on the continuous consolidation of the strategic alliance of the three Indochinese countries who are bound together by geography and history and who have forged themselves in the struggle against French colonialism, U.S. imperialism and Beijing reactionary expansionism. To maintain solidarity with the USSR, other socialist countries, the national liberation movements and the authentic parties of the working class is one of the fundamental principles for progress of the Kampuchean revolution.

Thanks to the just political line of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party, during the 3 years since its rebirth the Kampuchean nation has overcome all obstacles and made steady progress toward victory.

We have averted famine and restored the economic and social structures by developing production, putting money back into circulation and reopening markets, schools and hospitals. State institutions have been founded. Laws have been adopted making it possible to have social justice and security and social order have been gradually instituted. The foundations of Kampuchean society are being consolidated and serve as a basis for its advance, the paper writes.

THAI 'REACTIONARIES' BACKING POL POT, SEREIKA FORCES

BK200923 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Weekly roundup of KPRAF activities]

[Text] During the past week, the defeated army of Pol Pot and Son Sann's Sereika forces, with the backing of Thai reactionaries, staged provocative actions in many places along the border using 105-mm cannons and H-12 rockets to fire between 100 and 200 rounds every day at hills 199 and 343, Smat Deng, Pailin and the Preah Vihear temples. On 5 June, 100 rounds fell on the Pailin area. On 9 and 10 June, 200 Thai artillery shells caused damage to the people's property in the vicinity of Smat Deng. At the same time, the Thai reactionaries on 7 occasions sent their L-19 and C-47 aircraft to fly over Anlung Veng, Yeang Dangkum, Poipet and Kamrieng in support of the Pol Pot remnants in their intrusions into Kampuchea.

Along the coast, Thai vessels carried out nearly 120 threatening moves during their maneuver involving 5,000 troops and warships.

Pol Pot remnants and Son Sann Sereika elements also infiltrated our territory to increase their activities to destroy the peaceful lives of our people. It is true that the more perfidious their maneuvers, the greater their setbacks. Competing with each other in the emulation campaign on the occasion of our army day, our forces have appropriately punished the Pol Pot and Son Sann gangs and inflicted heavy losses on them. The survivors were chased out and, in panic surrendered to our forces. On some battlefields, we killed many of them and managed to defend every inch of our beloved fatherland.

On 6 June, under the cover of their artillery fire directed at Hill 199, Pol Pot soldiers infiltrated into Kampuchea to attack our positions but were beaten back by our revolutionary forces who killed nine enemy soldiers and seized an AK rifle and eight mines. The remaining enemy soldiers, in their hasty retreat, stepped on our mines. Two of them were killed.

West of Smat Deng, on 8 and 9 June, 2 groups of enemy soldiers tried to plant mines along the border; our forces killed 3 of them and seized a B-40, an AK and 70 mines.

In Preah Vihear, close to the Kampuchean-Thai-Lao border junction on 30 May, our border guards in cooperation with the Vietnamese volunteer army launched a mopping up operation destroying 2 enemy positions, killing 84 enemy soldiers and dismantling 24 of their shelters. Nearby, about 3 km from Trapeang Kol, on 8 June, our forces attacked and killed 35 enemy soldiers and seized 10 weapons including a 60-mm mortar, 2 B-40's, 7 AK's and 400 kg of rice.

Earlier, on 1 June, our border guards attacked a group of disbanded enemy soldiers killing three and seizing a B-40 and seven kit-bags. In their panic, the rest of the group surrendered to our forces bringing along their weapons as well.

Further KPRAF Activities

BK251226 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 24 Jun 82

[Weekly roundup of KPRAF activities]

[Excerpts] During the past few days, the reactionary Beijing expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and their ASEAN allies made frantic efforts to get their lackeys -- the three reactionary Khmer groups -- to meet and form the so-called coalition government.

During the same period, along the border of our fatherland and inside the country, the defeated Pol Pot gang and other reactionaries painstakingly and lamely attempted to create insecurity to prevent our people and army from celebrating the traditional people-army solidarity day.

Between 9-15 June, Thailand sent its L-19 reconnaissance aircraft and helicopters to carry out more than 10 spying flights in violation of our airspace. More serious still, on 12 June, they sent helicopters to strafe the area northeast of (?Sampeou) and northwest of (Tbeng Kun) causing some damage to the people's property.

At sea, Thai warships violated our territorial waters more than 111 times. On land, particularly worth noting is the provocative action on 14 June in which the enemy fired thousands of rounds of 105-mm, 120-mm and DKZ artillery pieces into the sector west of Smat Deng.

Along the Kampuchean-Thai border, with the constant support of the Thai reactionary artillery fire, on 16 June, the Pol Pot remnants infiltrated the area west of Smat Deng four times but were shamefully pushed back into Thai territory by our border defense forces. Many enemy elements were killed and a vast quantity of arms and ammunition was captured.

On the night of 10 June, under the cover of darkness and rain, a group of enemy elements sneaked into our territory to plant mines in order to cut and destroy our roads. They were intercepted by our border guards who killed 13 of them and seized 6 mines and some B-48 rockets.

On the night of 12 June a group of hungry enemy elements who refused to surrender tried to steal rice from our people southeast of Trapeang Kol, Preah Vihear. Our militia, in cooperation with the district force, killed three of them on the spot and seized three B-40's and a quantity of war materiel and documents. Furthermore, they captured nine other traitors who mingled among the people in order to sabotage the revolution.

Inside the country, thanks to good defensive measures taken for communes and villages and in close cooperation with the people, the Prey Veng armed forces captured four bandits on the same day when they tried to loot our people's property.

SIANG PASASON SCORES KHMER COALITION

BK260513 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 26 Jun 82

[SIANG PASASON 26 June commentary: "Revival of the Dead"]

[Text] Last Tuesday, the leaders of the exiled Khmer reactionary groups, namely Sihanouk, Khieu Samphan and Son Sann, met in Kuala Lumpur to agree on setting up the so-called tripartite coalition government with the goal of continuing their resistance against the legitimate revolutionary struggle of the Kampuchean people. Of course, the masterminds of this move were none other than the Beijing reactionary ruling clique and the U.S. imperialists together with a number of their henchmen who have shown themselves to be very much concerned about the so-called Kampuchea problem.

The farce staged by these elements in Kuala Lumpur surprises no one. This play has been in preparation for over a year, but so far no success has been scored. And now, before the 37th UNGA session is convened and the seventh summit of the nonaligned is held in Baghdad, the Beijing ruling clique and the U.S. imperialists have put more pressure on the ASEAN countries to persuade the leaders of the Khmer reactionary group to agree to set up a coalition government which they can manipulate. The attempt to revive these notorious ghosts lies in the cunning scheme of Beijing and Washington to create a basis for arousing world public opinion and securing support from UN members so as to retain the seat of the Pol Pot clique at the United Nations.

It is ridiculous to watch the creators of this coalition government trying to claim they are the representatives of the Kampuchean people despite the fact that world public opinion fully knows that such a government will only act as a pretext for continued interference by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists and the U.S. imperialists in the internal affairs of Kampuchea.

The Kampuchean people will never forget that over 3 million of their beloved parents, relatives and children perished at the bloody hands of the murderous Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique. No one has ever heard of the so-called Khmer People's National Liberation Front led by Son Sann. It did not even seem to exist while the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique ruled the country. As for Sihanouk, he lived happily in a golden palace under house arrest during that time. Thus, what did they do for the country to claim that they justifiably deserve respect and praise from the Kampuchean people?

It is extremely regrettable that some ASEAN countries have colluded with and rendered support to the above-mentioned notorious ghosts, and have allowed themselves to be used as a tool by the Beijing reactionary clique in opposing the PRK and other Indochinese countries and in implementing their great-nation expansionist and hegemonist policy in Southeast Asia. The ASEAN countries should realize that this scheme of the Beijing leaders is very dangerous. The Beijing leaders have pitted the governments of the countries in this region against one another so as to create an unstable situation with a view to fishing in troubled waters. They are now doing just that in Kampucnea, and will do likewise in some ASEAN country in the future. No matter how much harder the enemies of the Kampuchean revolution struggle, all of their sinister schemes will undoubtedly be smashed as in the past. The present situation in Kampuchea is irreversible.

The peoples of Laos, Vietnam, the Soviet Union and other socialist countries always stand side by side with the Kampuchean people. We have paid close attention to giving effective assistance and support to them, thus creating an important factor in the Kampuchean revolution's firm march forward so that no reactionary force will be able to shake it. The successes scored by the Kampuchean people in the past more than 3 years and the stability prevailing in Kampuchea have convinced more and more countries in the world to extend recognition to the PRK. This clearly shows that the PRK Government is the sole legitimate and genuine representative of the Kampuchean people.

LPRP CENTRAL COMMITTEE GREETS KPRP ANNIVERSARY

BK280742 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0430 GMT 28 Jun 82

[LPRP Central Committee 28 June greetings message to KPRP Central Committee in Phnom Penh]

[Text] On the occasion of the celebration of the 31st founding anniversary of the glorious KPRP, in the name of the LPRP Central Committee, party members, the working class and the Lao people of all strata, we are very pleased to extend fraternal salutations and warm greetings to the KPRP Central Committee, party members, the working class and fraternal heroic people of Kampuchea.

Over the past 31 years, the KPRP -- a true Marxist-Leninist party -- has led the Kampuchean working class and people to wage a protracted and hard revolutionary struggle, defeating the French colonialists and the U.S. imperialists, overthrowing the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime, opening up a new era of independence and freedom and leading the country of the path of socialism.

During the past 3 years, the Kampuchean people have energetically striven to defend the gains of the revolution, consolidate national defense and public security, restore their economy, boost production and develop education and culture, thereby winning great successes and gradually and firmly improving the situation in Kampuchea which cannot be broken by any reactionary force.

The achievements and successes recored by the Kampuchean people serve to strengthen the revolutionary might and firm solidarity among the three fraternal peoples in Indochina, thereby making an important contribution to the cause of the various nations in this region and the rest of the world for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress. The entire Lao people rejoice at and highly value the various great and glorious successes of the fraternal Kampuchean people and regard them as their own.

The KPRP, bringing into full play the glorious traditions of the Indochinese Communist Party, has tightened the special solidarity and militant alliance with the LPRP and the Lao people and with the VCP and the Vietnamese people. We have always mutually relied on, cooperated with and assisted each other. This has been a factor deciding the success of the revolution in each of our countries. Meanwhile, the KPRP has strengthened solidarity and cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries in defending and building socialism and in opposing schemes and acts of intervention and aggression committed by the imperialists, the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists and other reactionaries.

We are convinced that the fraternal Kampuchean people, under the correct and resolute leadership of the KPRP led by Comrade General Secretary Heng Samrin, will score new successes in implementing the resolutions of the Fourth KPRP Congress and lead their beloved country to march firmly along the socialist path.

On this auspicious occasion, we wish that the special solidarity, friendly relations and fraternal cooperation between the two parties and peoples of Laos and Kampuchea will last forever. We wish the Kampuchean people new, greater successes. We also wish you, comrades, good health.

HAIG'S RESIGNATION, U.S. FOREIGN POLICY VIEWED

POST Editorial

[Editorial: "Searching for a Foreign Policy"]

[Text] No one is just exactly sure why Alexander Haig suddenly parted company with Ronald Reagan and resigned as American secretary of state. It could have been some small incident like the leaking of details of a National Security Council meeting, which actually occurred. It could have been a major showdown, such as the one he actually had with Defence Secretary Casper Weinberger over the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

But maybe the resignation, which surprised, shocked and bewildered American politicians, came over something much more basic -- the lack of a discernible American foreign policy. Haig himself, in his public letter of resignation to Reagan, said that U.S. foreign policy lacks "consistency, clarity and steadiness."

He is so right. After four years of a confusing Jimmy Carter administration, there was hope abroad that the politically conservative Reagan would guide a State Department which could inspire confidence. His choice of General Haig as head of that department was at first surprising. It also brought some fears because of the war-mongering caricature that military men inspire. But in the past 18 months, that first rush of confidence that U.S. foreign policy would at least be clear has faded. Once again, as it was under Carter, the United States was reacting to events rather than acting upon its own.

Inconsistent? Yes. Reagan and Haig said embargoes were hurting America more than the Soviet Union and took off the post-Afghanistan embargoes of Carter. Then, within the year, Reagan and hawkish officials had applied new embargoes on Poland and the Soviet Union. Last week they put them on their own Western European allies who hope to help Moscow build a gas pipeline west.

Unclear? Certainly. The Reagan administration last year was putting down SALT talks and agreements. Now it has proposed arms reduction talks with the Soviets, leading to arms limitation talks. Unsteady? You bet. Washington has embraced China with a fervour which has made its friends nervous and its potential foes enraged. Its insistence on pushing Beijing on the matter of arms sales to Taiwan just injects some additional lack of clarity into the picture.

It is certainly time, as Haig said, "for a new and forward looking foreign policy" from Washington. The ever-smaller world demands more from America than simply conducting day-to-day business with foreigners on the basis of its European ties, its new-found friendship with China and its 1950's friendship with Taiwan. The appointment of big-time financial expert George Shultz to replace Haig, however, appears at first glance an unimaginative fresh start.

Once again, the world will be waiting for signals from Washington that it has an actual foreign policy; that it realises the dangers, futility and despair that it bring by always waiting for something to happen so that it can react to it. From a rich and strong nation which wants to be and claims to be the leader of the Free World, we expect better.

NATION REVIEW Editorial

[Editorial: "U.S. Policy on S.E. Asia Not Likely To Change"]

[Text] Who makes American foreign policy? This question was posed rhetorically by highly respected former foreign minister of an ASEAN country to a senior reporter of this newspaper.

Answering his own question the minister said that the State Department had its own foreign policy, the White House had its own, while the CIA and Pentagon had their own. And what is worse, he continued, is they are often different from one another and each implements or tries to implement its own in addition to making public statements or leaking contradictory opinions to the press; naturally, this confuses all nations, both American friends and enemies. This may be a sarcastic way of looking at U.S. foreign policy but there is some basic truth in it.

It must be conceded that the U.S. has had a high turnover in its secretaries of state. Even the rather colourless administration of Jimmy Carter had two secretaries of state. With the wisdom of hindsight we can say that, given his personality, it is surprising that Alexander Haig lasted as long as he did as President Ronald Reagan's secretary of state. On the other hand, it must be mentioned en passant that the other super-power, the Soviet Union, has had Andrey Gromyko as its foreign minister for more years than we care to remember.

To start with, Reagan's appointment of Haig was controversial, but Haig's credentials were questionable. His knowledge of both Europe and Latin America were good, while his acquaintance with Asian affairs cannot be faulted. As head of NATO, preceding his appointment to the Reagan Cabinet, he had intimately involved himself with the ploys and counter-ploys of the Warsaw Pact nations. But credentials alone do not suffice, since Secretary Haig was cast in the role of the top American diplomat and was unable to carry out this duty because of his highly individual approach to international politics. On his first day in office, Haig is reported to have said that Reagan had told him that he (Haig) would be "the vicar of American foreign policy." And since then he has behaved as if that was his mandate.

There is no point in trying to pinpoint the reason for Haig's resignation since nobody quits such a prestigious post for a single reason. There must have been an accumulation of tactical foreign policy defeats before Haig took the final step. But there is always the last straw and even on that nobody seems to be agreed. It could have been over the Israeli attack on West Beirut or the embargo imposed by Reagan on European cooperation in the Siberian gas pipeline.

While the conundrum is for the pundits in Washington to tackle, our interest is naturally in U.S. policy in this region. Haig, mainly because of his involvement in the Vietnam war, had a passable understanding of the problems of this region. We are pretty sure that the Senate will approve Reagan's choice of George Shultz to succeed Haig, but we are not yet aware of his attitudes towards the confusing politics of Asia, where guerrilla wars are going on in both Kampuchea and Afghanistan.

There are of course other major problems which Shultz will have to face -- the two major problems being the deteriorating relations between China and the U.S. over Taiwan, and trade protectionism in relations with Japan. From our point of view it will be interesting to see whether the new secretary of state has any new concrete ideas about the formation of the Khmer coalition government uniting the three anti-Vietnamese factions. The main thing that has been said about Shultz is that he is a "team player" and, if that is correct, the prognosis ought to be there will be no departure in American policy in this region.

RECENT VISIT TO BANGKOK BY SHULTZ NOTED

[Text] George Shultz, who has just been nominated to the post of U.S. secretary of state, visited Bangkok early this month and met with several Thai officials and executives. Shultz was president of Bechtel Corporation when he came for a private visit. He stayed at Oriental Hotel during June 1-3. He met with Industry Minister Chatichai Chunhawan and others. He also called on Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon.

As a result of Shultz's visit, a team of Bechtel executives will come to Bangkok for more talks with their Thai counterparts. Bechtel, which is a giant in the construction industry in the United States, may open a branch office here.

Shultz appeared to be well versed with Asian affairs when he was in Bangkok. He is, therefore, likely to put more emphasis on Asia when he assumes his new post.

FOREIGN MINISTRY PROTESTS MEKONG INCIDENTS

BK260250 Bangkok POST in English 26 Jun 82 p 5

[Text] Thai Ambassador to Laos Sunthon Khongsak on Wednesday handed the Laotian Foreign Ministry a memorandum which protests at recent shooting incidents along the Mekong, Foreign Ministry Deputy Spokesman Saowanit Khongsiri said yesterday.

The memorandum asked Laotian authorities not to shoot at Thai patrol boats on the Mekong because such actions were not in accordance with joint communiques and memorandums signed by the Thai and Laotian Governments. Such provocations could affect the brotherly relations between the two countries, the memorandum said.

SITTHI TALKS TO VIENNA PRESS ON KAMPUCHEA

[Text] The newly-formed coalition government of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Son Sann and the Khmer Rouge will contribute to a comprehensive settlement of the Kampuchean problem, ACM Sitthi Sawetsilia told Austrian reporters in Vienna on Friday.

Speaking at a press conference, the Thai foreign minister said the coalition agreement signed in Kuala Lumpur last Tuesday was an "encouraging development", which would help bring about a comprehensive political settlement within the framework of the declaration of the international conference on Kampuchea (ICK) held in New York last July.

ACM Sitthi is visiting Vienna as guest of the Austrian Foreign Minister Dr Willibald Pahr. The two men have held talks on a wide range of topics.

Asked to comment on Dr Pahr's forthcoming visit to Hanoi, ACM Sitthi said that the visit should be seen as part of Dr Pahr's attempts to achieve a political solution in Kampuchea.

The Thai foreign minister said that the visit would enable Dr Pahr to find out "the feeling of the Vietnamese" about the ICK's peace plan which was overwhelmingly endorsed by the United Nations General Assembly last November. He added that the ICK plan would also benefit Vietnam by taking into account "Vietnam's legitimate interests in terms of its own security."

"We in the ASEAN countries have been trying to help them (the Vietnamese) out of the quagmire that they found themselves in," he said.

Asked what should be done to prevent Khmer Rouge domination of Kampuchea if the Vietnamese withdraw, ACM Sitthi said that several steps would be taken including the holding of free elections in which all concerned parties, including the Vietnamese-supported Heng Samrin regime, could enter. "We have no right to tell the Kampuchean people what choice they should make in the expression of their free will," he added.

In answer to another question, he said that ASEAN and several other countries including Austria have some ideas about "what we should do next" regarding Kampuchea during the next few months.

ACM Sitthi said that the major cause of the Kampuchean refugee problem is the continued Vietnamese occupation. He added that thanks to assistance by Thailand and the world community, "about half the total population of Kampuchea had been saved from extinction."

THAI ROLE IN KHMER COALITION AID QUESTIONED

[Editorial: "Should Thailand Become Conduit to Coalition?"]

[Text] We clearly stated our view yesterday that Thailand should not become an arms supplier for the Khmer coalition government and its guerrillas who are fighting Vietnamese aggression. Of the many reasons we specified the most important is our belief that there are no military solutions. Military solutions only lay the groundwork for recurring future disputes. The Falklands "war" and the Israeli invasion of Lebanon can be cited as the most recent examples.

Although Britain has convincingly flexed her naval muscles, the Falklands dispute has not been settled; and even if the Israelis completely break up the Palestinian Liberation Organization, the solution to Middle East problems is nowhere in sight.

Without going into history, and taking only the present situation in Kampuchea, it may be rightly argued that it is the Vietnamese who are seeking a military solution. Part of their premise must also be conceded in that the Khmer Rouge government in Kampuchea was pro-Chinese and anti-Vietnamese; in fact the Khmer Rouge authorities were against their own people -- with Prince Sihanouk openly saying that his children and his grandchildren were victims of the massacre.

This is where it becomes confusing -- are the Vietnamese or the new Khmer coalition trying to impose a military solution? The only country which has no doubts about answering the question is China, which has stuck by its original concept of "bleeding the Vietnamese white." For Thailand, the frontline state, the problems of Kampuchea are in various shades of grey, except that we have to uphold the principle that no aggressor should enjoy fruits of aggression.

But a definite military policy of supplying arms to the coalition should clearly be eschewed. But even this is not very simple. As Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon has said, the supply of arms and other aid to the coalition should be a joint decision of ASEAN and we totally agree to that. But we strongly doubt that any joint declaration will be made as to military aid. It is most likely ASEAN will leave it up to the members to help the coalition as much as individual members can.

One of the important things to be considered will be humanitarian aid, which will primarily mean food and medical supplies. Since this is completely different from the supply of weapons, Thailand should take it upon herself to provide such aid as she is capable of. While that problem faces no difficulty in solution, what may prove to be a little ticklish is that those who want to supply arms to the coalition might want Thailand to be the conduit.

It is not easy to arrive at a policy decision in this matter since both President Sihanouk and Prime Minister Son Sann have said that with the coalition agreement signed, they will be shopping around the world for arms -- and it is quite likely that they may meet with some success.

We know that Thailand's decision to be a conduit or not is essentially one to be made by our government alone. But actually Thailand would do well to consult in this matter not only with her ASEAN partners but also with other countries friendly to us. The decision will have long-range implications for the region.

HAIG'S RESIGNATION REPORTED; NHAN DAN COMMENTS

Radio Report

BK270436 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 27 Jun 82

[Text] On 25 June U.S. Secretary of State Haig resigned from his post after having held it for more than 17 months. President Reagan has selected George Shultz to replace Haig. Shultz was secretary of the Treasury under the Nixon administration and adviser on foreign affairs for Reagan during his 1980 election campaign.

In his resignation letter addressed to Reagan, Haig complained that U.S. foreign policy was shifting from the careful course laid out by Reagan and himself.

NHAN DAN On U.S. Policy

BK271030 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 27 Jun 82

[Text] U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig resigned on Friday after 17 months in his post. President Reagan appointed George Shultz to replace Haig.

Commenting on this event, the Vietnamese daily NHAN DAN on Sunday says: Haig's resignation marked a setback in the U.S. foreign policy. Haig himself was the one who helped Reagan make and carry out the U.S. foreign policy. For nearly 18 months working at the White House, Haig's foreign policy faced constant failure. The U.S. embargo against the Soviet Union aroused an indignation among the U.S. allies in Western Europe and caused great losses to the U.S. economy.

The U.S. policy of arms buildup has been strongly protested in Western and northern Europe, Japan and right in the United States. The U.S. slander campaign against the Soviet Union, Vietnam and the world revolutionary movement did not bring about the results Reagan wanted.

Haig's foreign policy -- which is also Reagan's -- makes other countries have a bad image of the United States.

NHAN DAN 28 June Commentary

OW280753 Hanoi VNA in English 0742 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 28 -- Alexander Haig's resignation is an inevitability which marks a big failure of the U.S. foreign policy in recent time, remarks NHAN DAN in a commentary today. The paper says:

"The Reagan-Haig team has not lasted more than 18 months. Some U.S. officials alleged that Haig's departure resulted from his deep divergences with many of his colleagues in the Reagan administration. Not quite so. In fact, there has always been a consensus between Reagan and Haig on the principles and the fundamental content of the U.S. foreign policy based on strength, increased confrontation between the United States and the Soviet Union and the whole socialist community, a high level of tension in the world and further poisoning of the international atmosphere....

"Under Reagan and Haig, the U.S. foreign policy remains an outdated and shortsighted policy, especially with regard to the three Indochinese countries. For nearly 18 months now, the U.S. foreign policy has sustained repeated and bitter failures which generated wide discontent in the country and sank the U.S. influence to the lowest ebb. The U.S. has demonstrated a high level of passivity and embarrassment in face of the Soviet Union's repeated and important peace initiatives. The peace movement is developing vigorously in the West."

The paper continues: "The recent differences between Reagan and Haig in handling the American foreign policy, after a string of failures, have grown deeper. So, the Reagan-Haig wedding has come to its logical end. Haig has left on his desk an expansionist and bellicose foreign policy. The big crisis of the U.S. foreign strategy continues in parallel with the prolonged crises in military strategy. Mr Haig has not left a single 'achievement' to be remembered by".

"His departure comes just a moment when the boat of the U.S. foreign policy is wrecking", NHAN DAN remarks.

FOREIGN MINISTRY NOTE ON PRC MARITIME INCIDENT

BK271518 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 27 Jun 82

[Text] On 27 June our Foreign Ministry sent a note to the Chinese Foreign Ministry. The following is the full text of the note:

Respectfully to the PRC Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Beijing:

Following the 26 June note of the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Vietnamese Embassy in Beijing regarding the so-called attack on and seizure of Chinese boats in the Gulf of Tonkin by armed Vietnamese vessels on 16 June, the SRV Ministry of Foreign Affairs holds the following views:

The event referred in the above-mentioned note issued by the Chinese side is completely fabricated. The local Vietnamese administration in this area has confirmed that no such incident has taken place as alleged by the Chinese side. In fact, as already charged by the Vietnamese side several times in recent months, Chinese armed vessels have continued to violate Vietnamese territorial waters from Quang Ninh to Binh Tri Thien, carrying out reconnaissance activities, arresting fishermen and sabotaging the peaceful work of the Vietnamese fishermen at a rate of several hundreds incidents each month.

The SRV Ministry of Foreign Affairs resolutely rejects the above-mentioned slander by the Chinese side and demands that it put an immediate end to all violations and sabotage activities in Vietnamese territorial waters as well as along the border and on the mainland of Vietnam and that it also cease all other hostile schemes and activities against Vietnam.

INTRUSIONS BY PRC TROOPS FOR 8-21 JUNE REPORTED

OW251634 Hanoi VNA in English 1616 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 25 -- Chinese troops from June 8-21 made repeated armed intrusions and shellings into many areas in Vietnam's northern border provinces.

-- On June 16, the Chinese troops on two occasions fired more than 20 artillery rounds at Ra Ngai Cho Village, Muong Khoung District, Hoang Lien Son Province, killing or wounding five local civilians.

-- On June 16, Chinese troops fired infantry rifles at Thuong Phung area, Meo Vac District, Ha Tuyen Province, killing a number of cattle.

-- On the same day, a Chinese platoon intruded 200 metres into Vietnamese territory in the area of marker-post 60 in Dinh Lap District, Lang Son Province, and opened fire at local villagers working on the fields.

-- On June 20, a Chinese squad crossed the border at marker-post nine in Yen Ninh District, Ha Tuyen Province, and lay in ambush and laid mines at footpaths leading to Vietnamese hamlets.

-- On June 21, Chinese gunners from the other side of the border lobbed mortar shells into Vietnamese territory to cover Chinese infantrymen intruding into Po Hen area in Quang Ninh Province, killing a local civilian and destroying many houses. On the same day, two Chinese armed vessels sailed into the portion of the Da River in Muong Te District, Lai Chau Province, 700 metres inside Vietnam for sabotage activities.

Vietnamese people and armed forces in those localities promptly fought back the intruders and punished them for their crimes.

NHAN DAN DENOUNCES KAMPUCHEAN COALITION

OW260801 Hanoi VNA in English 0732 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 26 -- "The authors of the 'Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea' are congratulating one another, but the composition of the cast reveals a great weakness," says NHAN DAN in a commentary today. The paper goes on: "The masterminds behind the Kuala Lumpur agreement had to know that this was aimed at preventing support for the Khmer Rouge from decreasing and at maintaining its presence at the United Nations. To put it differently they agreed to the weakness of the genocidal criminals they were protecting and admitted that they were dolling up a corpse".

NHAN DAN says that these people are trying to whitewash the crimes of the genocidal clique, who are condemned by the whole of mankind. It continued: "The new product is in no way different from the ousted 'Democratic Kampuchea' whose satantic leaders killed three million Kampucheans with hoes, bayonets and guns and through hard labour, and who pushed the whole Kampuchean society to the brink of extinction. And behind it are the Chinese expansionists who engineered the genocide". NHAN DAN continues:

"The ASEAN countries, forced by Beijing and Washington to take part in the play, are in an awkward position. They say that they advocate non-intervention but they are now grossly intervening in Kampuchea's affairs. They say they do not want confrontation with Vietnam but they now support Kampuchean reactionaries whose primary aim is to oppose Vietnam. They speak of peace and stability, but some of them are now openly planning military aid to Kampuchean reactionaires to continue their crimes and increase tension in the region".

The paper notes that some responsible officials in some A.S.E.A.N. countries who want dialogue with Vietnam have expressed concern over the farce, seeing in China the mastermind and also the main threat to Southeast Asian countries. "All advertisement for the 'Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea' is useless. This monster will not last long", the paper concludes.

PLO REPRESENTATIVE MEETS WITH PHAM VAN DONG, PRESS

Call on Pham Van Dong

OW262052 Hanoi VNA in English 1503 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 26 -- Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong received Sa'id Khalil al-Masri, acting representative extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Palestine Liberation Organization (P.L.O.) in Vietnam, at the presidential palace here today. Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs Ha Van Lau joined in the reception.

Sa'id Khalil al-Masri conveyed to Chairman Pham Van Dong greetings of solidarity and friendship from chairman of the P.L.O. Executive Committee Yasir 'Arafat and informed him of the present war of resistance of the peoples of Palestine, Lebanon and other Arab countries to the U.S.-backed Israeli Zionist aggressors against Lebanon.

On behalf of the Vietnamese people, Chairman Pham Van Dong vehemently condemned the Israeli aggressors, supported and armed with sophisticated weapons by U.S. imperialism, for launching many extermination assaults on Beirut and other densely-populated areas in Lebanon. He noted that in furtherance of their sinister designs, aggressors have killed many civilians, destroyed many Palestinian refugee camps and a number of cities and villages in Lebanon, brazenly encroached upon this country's national independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, and seriously endangered peace and security in the region and in the world as a whole.

He resolutely demanded that the U.S. imperialists and the Israeli invaders stop immediately all their criminal acts of war, and reiterated the Vietnamese people's unswerving stand of firmly supporting the just and certainly victorious fight of the peoples of Palestine, Lebanon and other Arab countries to foil all sinister plots and acts of aggression of the Israeli Zionists, storm-trooper of U.S. imperialism in this region.

After extolling the staunch and undaunted struggle of the P.L.O. fighters side by side with the patriotic forces of Lebanon and other Arab countries, Chairman Pham Van Dong expressed his firm confidence that though this fight still has many more severe trials to undergo it is bound to win total victory, that all areas occupied by the Israeli aggressors will be wrested back, the Palestinian people will finally return to their homeland, and recover their fundamental and legitimate national rights including the right to set up an independent and sovereign state of Palestine under the leadership of the P.L.O., the Palestinian people's genuine representative.

Chairman Pham Van Dong asked the P.L.O. official to convey his greetings to Chairman Yasir 'Arafat and his warm feelings of solidarity to the P.L.O. fighters as well as the patriotic forces of Lebanon and other Arab countries.

Sa'id Khalil al-Masri expressed his sincere thanks and high appreciation of the Vietnamese people's consistent stand, and their firm and strong support for the just fight of the peoples of Palestine, Lebanon and other Arab countries till total victory.

The reception took place in an atmosphere imbued with friendship and militant solidarity.

Press Talk

OW251626 Hanoi VNA in English 1608 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 25 -- Sa'id Khalil al-Masri, acting representative extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Palestine Liberation Organization in Hanoi, today strongly condemned the U.S. imperialists and Israeli Zionists for mobilizing hundreds of thousands of Israeli troops and many U.S. advisors and officers into indiscriminate attacks on Beirut and other densely-populated areas in Lebanon.

Addressing pressmen here this afternoon, the PLO official denounced Israel's extremely barbarous crimes against the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples-killing or wounding tens of thousands of civilians, mostly aged persons, women and children, ruining 14 Palestinian refugee camps and causing destruction to many Lebanese cities and villages.

He also denounced the Reagan administration for backing and encouraging the Israeli aggressors in broadening the scale of the war, thus grossly violating Lebanon's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and seriously endangering peace and security in the region and the world.

After citing major exploits of the Palestinian combatants and patriotic forces of Lebanon, Syria and other Arab countries, Sa'id Khalil al-Masri re-affirmed the Palestinian People's unshakeable determination to continue fighting till complete victory, so they can return to their homeland and exercise their sacred fundamental national rights.

He expressed his joy at the thorough support rendered by the socialist countries, friendly nations and peace-loving forces in the world to the just struggle of the Palestinian, Lebanese and other Arab peoples. He urgently called on these countries and forces to continue and increase their support so as to force the U.S. and Israel into ending their criminal war of aggression and withdrawing their troops immediately, totally and unconditionally.

NHAN DAN REAFFIRMS SOLIDARITY WITH PALESTINIANS

OW260815 Hanoi VNA in English 0738 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 26 -- NHAN DAN in its editorial today reaffirms Vietnam's solidarity with the just struggle of the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples, and condemns Israel's massive aggression against Lebanon.

The paper says: "The aggressors have shown unlimited arrogance and brutality. They have given themselves a right to bomb and strafe and occupy at any moment and any place in independent and sovereign Lebanon, using U.S.-supplied extermination weapons, destroying many cities and villages and killing or wounding tens of thousands of civilians.

"World public opinion has branded U.S. imperialism as backer to the Israeli aggressors. They have attempted to abolish by force the Palestinian people's P.L.O-led resistance war, set up in Lebanon a pro-Israeli administration, crush the fighting will of the Arab peoples, and impose a neo-colonialist U.S.-Israeli domination upon the Middle-East ...they arrogantly demand the surrender of the Palestinian combatants and the withdrawal of the Syrian peace-keeping forces from Lebanon".

"However", NHAN DAN continues, "the P.L.O. fighters and the Lebanese patriotic forces in coordination with the Syrian peace-keeping units, have firmly rejected the Zionist aggressors' demand, and are valiantly overcoming difficulties and hardships and dealing the enemy duly punitive blows. No force can compel them to lay down their weapons".

"Israel's brutal aggression against Lebanon, and its genocidal attacks on the Palestinian people," NHAN DAN stresses, "constitute a serious threat to peace in the Middle East and a shameless challenge to mankind's conscience. Such a situation calls for a close solidarity of the Arab countries and of progressive people in the world with the combatants now fighting in Lebanon to stay the blood-stained hands of the cruel Zionists.

"The Vietnamese people always stand on the side of the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples' just cause. President of the Council of State Truong Chinh, on behalf of the Vietnamese people, has expressed militant solidarity with and resolute support for the Palestinian, Lebanese and other Arab peoples in their heroic and surely victorious struggle against U.S. imperialist and the Israeli aggressors, for the Palestinian people's sacred national rights and for the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Arab countries".

"The Israeli expansionists will have to pay a high price for their criminal adventure in Lebanon," NHAN DAN says.

LEADERS COMMENT ON HAIG RESIGNATION

Fraser's Comments

BK270913 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 27 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Fraser said there is a very real element of sadness in the resignation of U.S. Secretary of State Haig. Speaking on a commercial television program fraser said there had been a great deal of speculation about changes in the direction of American policy as a result of the resignation. But, he said, it was speculation and as the prime minister he had to wait and see what in fact happened.

Mr Fraser said he didn't fear any change in the direction of American policy because he had confidence in the broad thrust of President Reagan's attempts to strengthen the defense of both the United States and the West.

Opposition Spokesman

BK260921 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] There has been no comment yet from the Australian prime minister on the resignation of U.S. Secretary of State Haig. However, the opposition spokesman on foreign affairs, Mr Bowen, said he believed it had been prompted partly by the Reagan administration's attitude to what he termed, Israel's brutal invasion of Lebanon. Bowen said Haig had resigned because he believed the United States policies had become distorted and unbalanced. He said precisely the same thing had happend to Australia's foreign policy on the Middle East and claimed there was a discrepancy between the prime minister's views and those of the foreign minister, Mr Street, and foreign policy advisers. Mr Bowen claimed Mr Street had condemned Israel's flagrant aggression but Mr Fraser had continued to refuse to follow suit.

MINISTER STREET ADDRESSES UN DISARMAMENT SESSION

BK240934 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 24 Jun 82

[Text] Australia's Foreign Affairs Minister Mr Street has strongly criticized continued nuclear testing and has warned about the spread nuclear weapons technology. Speaking at the United Nations disarmament conference, Mr Street said Australia was convinced that the highest priority on the disarmament agenda was the need for a comprehensive and fully verifiable test ban treaty. He offered Australia as the site of one of a chain of United Nations data centers which will monitor whether countries were conducting nuclear tests in the region.

Mr Street was critical of countries which moved toward a nuclear weapons capability and the countries which supply them with technology.

The American news agency, ASSOCIATED PRESS, says Mr Street's criticism of nuclear tests was clearly aimed at France, which continues to test weapons at Mururoa Atoll in the South Pacific. But his condemnation of nations which dump or store nuclear materials in the Pacific also applies to the United States, which makes use of the Marshall Islands, and Japan, which has planned to dump waste in the Pacific Ocean.

Mr Street also called for practical solutions to the arms race saying arms control and disarmament depended on international confidence and trust.

PRC SEEKS LOW-INTEREST LOANS FROM JAPAN

OW281313 Tokyo KYODO in English 1243 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 28, KYODO -- China has asked Japan to provide yen 91.2 billion (dollar 357 million) in low interest loans for its six projects in fiscal 1982 which started last April -- much more than yen 60 billion (dollar 235 million) provided in the previous fiscal year, government sources said Monday. Indications are that Japan would offer a yen 65 billion loan (dollar 254 million).

Japanese officials regard the requested sum as too large because construction work under the projects involved is delayed owing to Beijing's economic readjustment and also because Japan has to consider a balance between loans to China and those to other countries, the sources said.

Japan wants to hold working-level talks with China on the loan amount late in August before Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's visit to that country expected late in September.

The six projects as specified by China consist of the Baoshan steel mill in suburban Shanghai, a petrochemical complex at the Daqing oilfield and four projects related to coal mine development, including the construction of Shijiusuo port and the expansion of the Beijing-Qinhuangdao railway, the sources said. However, they said, yen-denominated loans supplied for the projects up to fiscal 1981 are not yet fully used because of delay in construction mainly caused by Beijing's readjustment of its economic priorities.

A survey team recently sent to China has reported to the government that any aid request surpassing yen 80 billion (dollar 353 million) would be too large in view of the actual progress of the projects, the sources said.

Japan started to provide China with yen loans in fiscal 1979 in accordance with a basic policy expressed by the then Prime Minister Masayoshi Chira when he visited China in December 1979. The loan amount has been increased from yen 50 billion in fiscal 1979 to yen 56 billion in fiscal 1980 and yen 60 billion in fiscal 1981.

GOVERNMENT DECLINES AUTO NEGOTIATIONS WITH CANADA

[Text] Tokyo, June 28, KYODO -- Japan has no intention of starting talks with Canada on voluntary restraint on auto exports unless Ottawa stops delaying the entry of Japanese vehicles into the North American country, a high-ranking government official said Monday.

The official at the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) said the Tokyo government has lodged a protest with Canada against what he called the deliberate delay in clearing Japanese-made vehicles through customs. MITI chief Shintaro Abe feels full-scale negotiations with Canada will not be held because of the Canadian action, the official explained.

The official said stopping such action immediately is "a prerequisite" to full-scale discussions between the two countries on Japan's car exports to Canada. The MITI official speculated that Canada's action has delayed the entry of some 10,000 Japanese vehicles in the port of Vancouver. Canadian Ambassador to Japan Barry Steers asked Abe for a start of auto negotiations Monday but the Japanese minister flatly declined, the official added.

In preliminary talks held earlier this year, both sides remained wide apart with the Japanese insisting the shipment quota for this year be kept unchanged at last year's 174,000 units and Canadians demanding a cut to 146,000 units.

DPRK GOVERNMENT STATEMENT ON LEBANON, ISRAEL

SK290503 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0429 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Text] Pyongyang, June 29 (KCNA) -- The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea made public a statement today denouncing the vicious manoeuvres of the Israeli aggressors to wipe out the Palestine resistance movement, launching a large scale armed invasion against Lebanon. Follows the full text of the statement:

Many days have passed since the Israeli Zionists started a large-scale armed invasion against Lebanon with the active backing of U.S. imperialism.

Ignoring the unanimous protest and denunciation of the world's peace-loving people, the Israeli aggressors have occupied vast areas of Lebanon including southern Lebanon and are ruthlessly slaughtering Lebanese and Palestinian people.

The Israeli Zionists, who have intruded deep into Lebanon, are steadily escalating their brigandish acts of aggression behind the facade of "ceasefire", fully revealing their true colors.

After besieging the capital city of Beirut, they massed large armed forces there and are tightening the encirclement and intensifying bombing and shelling against the residential quarters of Beirut and Palestinian bases from the sky, ground and sea.

Scheming to prolong their occupation of Lebanon, the Israeli aggressors are continuing provocative attacks on the Syrian Army which legally performs the mission of preserving peace in Lebanon and viciously maneuvering to stamp out the Palestine resistance movement. Begin openly announced that Israel demanded an "end to the existence of the Palestine Liberation Organization itself."

It is none other than the U.S. imperialists who instigated Israel to the reckless aggression on Lebanon. The high-handed aggression of the Israeli Zionists, patronized by the U.S. imperialists, clearly shows that they are the aggressors who permit himself at any crime to attain their expansionist aim, the most dangerous warlikers and harrassers of peace.

It is crystal clear that Israel's aggression on Lebanon proceeded from the wild design to totally stamp out the Palestinian people's cause of liberation and build a "great empire of Israel" in the Arab land.

The U.S. imperialists are using the Israeli Zionists as their cat's-paw to carry into practice their strategic plan in the Middle East area. It is part of the U.S. imperialists global strategy to bring the Arab countries under their domination one by one by keeping hold on the Middle East as their military strategic stronghold and using Israel as their springboard. The U.S. imperialists gave a colossal amount of military and economic aid every year to the Israeli Zionists to use them as a "shock force" in realizing this strategic aim. All the mass destruction weapons of latest type including airplanes, tanks and warships Israel mobilized in invading Lebanon were supplied by the U.S. imperialists.

Reality shows that the U.S. imperialists are the chieftain of aggression and war, an international gendarme and the common enemy of mankind.

With nothing can they conceal this stark fact or veil their true colors as a criminal who manipulated behind the scene Israel's aggression on Lebanon.

It was the United States which at the U.N. Security Council rejected by a veto a draft resolution calling for an immediate check of Israel's aggression against Lebanon and the withdrawal of its troops. It was also only the United States that opposed a resolution calling for the withdrawal of the Israeli aggressors from Lebanon at the U.N. General Assembly where an overwhelming majority of member nations supported it unanimously.

The outright aggressive acts of the U.S. imperialists and the Israeli aggressors in Lebanon are arousing bitterer indignation among the peace-loving people of the world. If their reckless aggressive acts are not checked, it will be followed by second and third "Lebanon incidents" in the future. They are now talking about "ceasefire" in an attempt to mislead world public opinion. But, in actuality, they are more persistently committing all sorts of criminal manoeuvres behind its smokescreen to attain their aggressive aim.

The present critical Middle East situation makes it incumbent upon the world peace-loving countries and peoples to pool their strength and conduct more powerful joint action for checking and frustrating the brigandish aggressive manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and Israel against Lebanon.

We consider it necessary first of all for the socialist countries, non-aligned countries and all the new-emerging countries to do all they can to assist the just cause of the Lebanese, Palestinian and Syrian peoples and all other Arab peoples.

The valiant Palestinian and other Arab peoples are now hardening the determination to repulse all the vicious manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and the Israeli aggressors and fight them to the last.

The Government of the Democratic Peoples Republic of Korea and the Korean people have consistently supported the just cause of the Palestinian and other Arab peoples.

The Government of the Demcoratic Peoples Republic of Korea solemnly declares that if the Palestinian and other fighting Arab peoples request, it will extend every form of support and encouragement to them including the dispatch of volunteers.

We regard it as a bounden internationalist duty of a brother and comrade-in-arms standing on the common front against imperialism and for independence. The struggle of the Palestinian and all other Arab peoples against the U.S. imperialists and the Zionists is a just cause and enjoys the full support and encouragement of the world's peace-loving people. Therefore, it will certainly emerge victorious.

If a fair solution of the Middle East problem is to be attained, an end must be put to the aggressive manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and Israel in this region. Israel must withdraw completely from all the occupied Arab lands and the legitimate national rights of the Palestinian people including the founding of an independent state be restored. With the Palestinian question left unsolved, the Middle East problem cannot be settled.

The U.S. imperialists must immediately refrain from the criminal act of encouraging the Israeli Zionists to the escalation of the war in Lebanon and the Israeli aggressors withdraw without delay from all the occupied Arab lands including Lebanon.

If the U.S. imperialists and the Israeli aggressors persist in their brigandish acts of aggression, ignoring the unanimous demand and warning of the world people, they will be unable to escape a stern judgement of history.

NODONG SINMUN OBSERVES ANTI-U.S. STRUGGLE DAY

[NODONG SINMUN 25 June editorial: "The U.S. Imperialists Should Stop Their Maneuvers for Aggression and War and Immediately Withdraw From South Korea"]

[Text] Under circumstances in which all party members and workers, upholding the magnificent program the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song set forth in his report at the Sixth KWP Congress and in his historic policy speech, have enacted a new revolutionary upsurge in socialist construction and in which an anti-U.S., nation-saving struggle has been vigorously waged in South Korea, we greet 25 June, the day of struggle against the U.S. imperialists. Proceeding from a heinous, wild desire for exterminating our republic in the initial stages and converting all of Korea into a colony, the U.S. imperialists launched a large-scale armed offensive against our people on 25 June 1950, 32 years ago.

Absurdly attempting to fulfill their piratic, aggressive and wild desire in one breath and mobilizing on the Korean frontline several million troops from the core contingents of the U.S. Army, Navy and Air Force armed with sophiscated technology, from 15 countries allied with the United States and from the South Korean puppet army, as well as vast military hardware, the U.S. imperialists desperately resorted to the most barbarous means of war, unprecedented in the history of war.

The fatherland liberation war of our people forced on us by the U.S. imperialists was a grim decisive war determining whether our people could protect the sovereignty of the country and the people or become colonial slaves of imperialism. This war was a sacred anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle to oppose the allied forces of the world's reactionaries led by the U.S. imperialists and to protect world peace and security.

During the difficult period of the war in which the fate of the country and the people was at stake, our people and the officers and men of the people's army, firmly uniting around the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, a victorious, iron-willed commander and a great strategist, dashed to the decisive battleground to smash the enemy. During the war, they defeated the U.S. imperialist aggressors and won a great victory by fighting like a phoenix with matchless courage and mass heroism, adding a brilliant chapter to the history of the fatherland.

The historic victory of our people in the fatherland liberation war was the brilliant victory of the immortal chuche idea and profound military art of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and a great demonstration of the invincible might of our people firmly united around the great leader. By defeating the U.S. imperialist aggressors, our people and the people's army protected the freedom and independence of the fatherland, the sovereignty of the people and peace in Asia and the world, smashed the myth of the might of the U.S. imperialists and ushered in on a global scale a new era of national liberation struggle and anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle.

Twenty-nine years have passed since the sound of gunfire ended in Korea. This period has been a period of national salvation struggle during which our people have waged a pan-national struggle to end the tragedy of national division caused by the U.S. imperialists and to achieve the cause of the country's reunification.

Achieving the country's reunification independently, based on the principle of democracy, using peaceful methods without interference by any foreign forces is a firm position and policy consistently assumed and adopted by our party and the government of the republic. In accordance with the basic policy for the fatherland's reunification delineated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our party and the government of the republic have advanced just proposals to convert the armistice into durable peace and to achieve the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification and made every sincere effort to implement these proposals. Because of the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their policy of aggression, however, the desire of our people for the fatherland's reunification has not be fulfilled.

The danger of war and the tragedy of national division have increased in Korea with each passing day. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their policy of aggression are the source of all misfortunes suffered by our people, basic obstacles to the reunification of our country and constant factors which could lead to a war breaking out in Korea.

Successive U.S. rulers have reacted to our peace-loving effort by intensifying their policy of making South Korea a colony subordinate to them and by adopting a policy of aggression and war -- a position of strength. By violating the Korean armistice agreement envisaging the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Korea and the resolution of the UN General Assembly demanding the withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Korea, the U.S. imperialists have not only ignored our proposal for replacing the armistice agreement with a peace agreement but also continously increase aggressive troops and armaments in South Korea, converting all of South Korea into a dangerous powderkeg of war.

Calling for reconstructing a strong United States and for supremacy of strength, the present U.S. rulers are fanatically running amok to fulfill their wild desire for world conquest by threatening others with military strength and making other countries surrender. In implementing their aggressive world strategy, they have selected the Korean Peninsula as the first testing ground. Bellicose U.S. circles say that the Korean Peninsula is vital to the United States, as are Europe and the Middle East, and that they will not hesitate to wage war to protect it. Needless to say, this is a manifestation of a desire to maintain South Korea as a military stronghold to invade the Far East and dominate all of Korea with strength. Spreading a fraudulent theory on the military supremacy of the North and the threat of southward invasion, the U.S. imperialists have accelerated war preparations for a northward invasion in line with such an aggressive aim, deployed a large number of U.S. troops in South Korea and increased their firepower on a large scale. It is well known that the U.S. imperialist war maniacs have deployed in South Korea sophisticated military equipment and mass destructive weapons, including new F-16 fighter bombers and A-10 close support aircraft, shifted the priority with regard to the strategic deployment of the notorious U.S. 7th Fleet to the sea east of Korea and converted Chinhae port into a tactical base for this fleet.

In addition to several hundred nuclear weapons deployed in South Korea, the U.S. imperialist war maniacs are trying to ship neutron bombs and theater nuclear missiles to South Korea and deploy cruise missiles on warships of the 7th Fleet.

The U.S. imperialists have continuously transferred sophisticated lethal weapons and military equipment to the South Korean puppets. After offering military aid worth several million dollars to the South Korean puppets and transferring large quantities of military hardware to them last year, the U.S. imperialists are attempting to render greater military aid to them in the new fiscal year. They have even announced a plan for transferring $2 billion worth of ammunition and war materials to the South Korean puppets in a contingency.

It is no secret that the U.S. imperialists have already formulated a war plan against us and established a tactical system, activated in a contingency and put it on constant alert. The Team Spirit 1982 exercise which the U.S. imperialists conducted for 70 days from February to April in South Korea and in the waters surrounding it by mobilizing vast troops was in fact an experimental and preliminary war designed to complete such combat readiness.

Because of the U.S. imperialists' continuous military buildup and their war exercise rackets, South Korea has been converted into the source of a new war, tension has been extremely heightened on the Korean Peninsula and our country faces impending danger in which a war might break out at any moment.

The U.S. imperialists brazenly define their policy of aggression and war as designed to protect South Korea from the North's threat and to guarantee peace and security on the Korean Peninsula. The security clamored about by the United States under the pretext of a non-existent threat of southward invasion is designed to maintain its colonial domination over South Korea. The protection it clamors about is designed to protect the fascist South Korean colonial regime -- a faithful tool for its policy of aggression and war.

Whenever their colonial rule faced a crisis, in South Korea the U.S. imperialists have instigated atrocious fascist elements to commit crimes of cruelly strangling the human rights and democracy of the South Korean people to maintain colonial domination by enforcing coercive rule through the use of violence. Proceeding from their criminal aim of sitting astride South Korea forever as a colony, the U.S. rulers have instigated traitor Chon Tu-hwan to bestially murder the patriotic Kwangju uprisers and illegally made the human butcher Chon Tu-hwan -- unanimously denounced and cursed at home and abroad -- the boss of the puppet regime.

Although they call South Korea an independent country and describe themselves as an aid giver to conceal their policy of making South Korea a colony subservient to them, the actual rulers who have seized power in South Korea, including the military prerogative of supreme command, are the U.S. imperialists. Instigated by the U.S. imperialists, traitor Chon Tu-hwan has traversed the criminal road of increasing the danger of war and perpetual division by fanning enmity and confrontation among the people. In accordance with a scenario prepared by the U.S. imperialists to criminally fabricate two Koreas and maintain their colonial domination, the puppet traitor has clamorously advocated simultaneous admission to the United Nations and cross-recognition and maneuvered to justify the plan for the division of the national territory by proposing mutual visits and a general election.

Facts show that the U.S. imperialists are the aggressors who have cruelly trampled underfoot the dignity and sovereignty of the South Korean people, war maniacs who have disturbed peace and increased the danger of war in our country, the ringleader of fascism and division and the vicious enemy of reunification.

The road toward the fatherland's independent reunification is to banish the U.S. imperialist aggressors from South Korea and to end their colonial rule. This is a true way to achieve national independence and democracy -- the South Korean people's ardent desire. By rising as one in the struggle to force the U.S. imperialist aggressive troops to withdraw from South Korea, all Koreans who are concerned about the destiny of the country and the people should expedite the fatherland's independent reunification.

Today the spirit of anti-U.S. struggle has rapidly increased among the South Korean people whose sovereignty has been trampled underfoot by the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule and who have been forced to suffer contempt, humiliation and poverty. When slogans reading "Yankees must withdraw!" appeared and anti-U.S. handbills were scattered, fires were set at the U.S. cultural centers in Kwangju and Pusan and the cursed Stars and Stripes was torn to pieces and burned. This demonstrated an indomitable will not to live any longer under the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule.

The flames of the anti-U.S. nation-saving struggle ablaze in South Korea are the token of a resolute resistance against the aggressors. This demonstrates that the South Korean people are not dead but alive even under a dark fascist colonial rule. They are not tame sheep but a dignified and proud people who value man's sovereignty and national sovereignty more than their lives and who struggle to protect it.

South Korea, where the spirit of the anti-U.S. struggle has grown, will not remain a refuge for the aggressors. The more closely the U.S. imperialists nestle in South Korea, the more the people's spirit of anti-U.S. struggle will increase with each passing day, and the eruption of anti-U.S. sentiment will become formidable.

The U.S. imperialists' policy of military adventurism -- an attempt to threaten the Korean people with strength -- is an anachronistic illusion. Our era is the era of independence during which the masses of the people, who were once oppressed and humiliated, have begun to build a new life after emerging as masters of history and their own destiny. Gone forever is the day when the U.S. imperialists, clinging to a policy of strength, randomly invaded other countries and exercised absolute influence over the destiny of the people.

Our people are a heroic people who courageously struggled in the early days against the U.S. imperialists' piracy and who in the 3-year war forced the U.S. imperialist aggressors to suffer an irrevocable, miserable defeat. They are a dignified, magnificent people who possess the power to repel any aggressors.

The U.S. imperialists must correctly realize the revolutionary spirit and firm will of our people, stop a reckless play with fire and, in accordance with the resolution of the U.N. General Assembly, withdraw from South Korea without delay, taking along all their aggressive forces and lethal weapons.

The South Korean puppet clique must be clearly aware that its betrayal of the country and nation and its role as the shameful war servant of the U.S. imperialists will accelerate its ruin.

If the U.S. imperialists and their stooges ignite another aggressive war in Korea, ignoring our repeated warnings, our people, for the honor of the fatherland and the nation, will rise up as one and deal a firm blow at the enemy.

The proposal for the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song put forth at the historic Sixth KWP Congress is the fairest and most just and realistic reunification and national salvation program. It is the only way to the independent reunification of the fatherland.

All the Korean compatriots in the North and the South and all the overseas Koreans must firmly unite under the banner of the great united national front and vigorously wage a pan-national struggle to smash the domestic and foreign splittists' schemes for two Koreas at every stageand to implement the proposal for the establishment of the DCRK.

Our party and people will make all efforts to realize the people's desire to live a happy life by establishing an independent and self-reliant unified state, achieving national sovereignty as a whole and building a paradise of the people in the land of the fatherland.

To smash the outside forces' policy of aggression and war and accelerate the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland. The revolutionary forces of the northern half of the republic must be strengthened.

Upholding the militant tasks which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song put forward in his report at the Sixth KWP Congress and his historic policy speech, the party members and working people must strengthen our revolutionary force politically, economically and militarily and be fully prepared to swiftly smash the enemy's aggressive maneuvers and provocations and to defend the gains of the revolution as firmly as in an impregnable fortress.

Ever-victorious and invincible is the cause of our people moving forward under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the guidance of the glorious party center. Only victory and glory await our people.

SEOUL ANNOUNCES ECONOMIC STIMULUS PACKAGE

Taxes, Interest Cut

SK280209 Seoul YONHAP in English 0202 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, June 28 (YONHAP) -- The Korean Government Monday called for large reductions in bank interest rates and corporate taxes to rejuvenate the country's sagging economy.

Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Kim Chung-song told the press that the government decided to lower bank interest rates by an average of 4.0 percent and reduce the corporate tax rate from the current 33 to 38 percent to 20 percent to revive the faltering economy.

As a result, the annual interest rate on bank loans was reduced from 14.0 to 10.0 percent and the rate for bank deposits was lowered from 12.6 to 8.0 percent effective Monday, and corporate taxes will be reduced beginning next year.

Kim explained that the reductions in interest rates and corporate taxes are necessary because domestic commodity prices have been stabilized, the country's balance of international payments has considerably improved, and there is an urgent need to stimulate investment by enterprises.

The economic revitalization package also calls for complete private management of all Korean commercial banks by the end of next year. The Korea First Bank and the Seoul Bank and Trust Co. will become privately managed in 1982 and the Chohung Bank in 1983. Korea's remaining two commercial banks, the Hanil Bank and the Commercial Bank of Korea, have already been transferred to private management.

The cuts in bank interest rates and corporate taxes are expected to save enterprises more than 800 billion won (1.1 billion U.S. dollars) per annum. In a related move, the government will also lower the interest rates of short-term financing companies and other secondary banking institutions, Kim said.

Other highlights of the economic package include the reduction of excise taxes on 18-inch and larger color TV sets and other consumer goods, expanded financial assistance to financially solvent small and medium-sized enterprises with emphasis on those specializing in machinery and their parts, and the release of maximum funds to meet the growing monetary demand by operating the 25-percent total money supply increase goal for this year, in a flexible way.

DKP: Measures 'Insufficient'

[Text] Major political parties yesterday commented that the sweeping economic measures taken by the government yesterday accented the positive government attempt to revitalize the economy.

Kim Yong-tae, spokesman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), said there is no doubt the measures will help stimulate investment, improve balance sheets of big enterprises and increase employment opportunities.

He said, however, that sustained efforts should be made to continuously maintain price stability and prevent the possible reduction in bank savings.

Kim Chin-pae, spokesman of the opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP), said the measures are insufficient to invigorate the economy although they will contribute to reducing the financial burden for big companies.

He emphasized the need for revitalizing the rural economy, protecting smaller enterprises, stimulating the buying power for low-income urban residents and increasing real estate transactions.

Meanwhile, Yi Song-il, spokesman of the Korea National Party (KNP), commented that his party generally welcomes the government measures. He said the measures will be able to yield fruits only when they are carried out fairly and steadily, without being changed overnight as it was so in the past.

Parties Agree to Panel

[Text] The floor leaders of the three major political parties agreed yesterday to convene the National Assembly Economy-Science Committee Firday to deal with the government's measures to help invigorate business.

The whips of the Democratic Justice Party, the Democratic Korea Party and the Korea National Party also decided to call the Health-Social Committee into session next Wednesday to handle the controversial dispute over prescriptions between pharmacists and the government.

In a meeting at the assembly building, the floor leaders shared the view that the three parties should have working level contacts to discuss matters concerning a meeting among the leaders of three major parties. They also reached accord that the assembly would recommend that the Agriculture-Fisheries Ministry work out comprehensive programs to help farmers, including the early release of agricultural funds, based on what was debated in the Agriculture-Fisheries Committee session yesterday.

During the meeting, Rep. Yim Chong-ki of the DKP requested meetings of all house panels except the Defense Committee by next week to tackle pending issues concerned.

Followup Steps Expected

SK290137 Seoul YONHAP in English 0110 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, June 29 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government will supplement Monday's economy revitalization package which featured, among others, reduction in bank interest rates and corporate taxes, government sources said Tuesday. The sources said the supplementary measures, to be announced shortly, will include the normalization of the curb loan market, substantial cutbacks in personal income taxes and the implementation of measures to raise incomes of rural farm workers across the country.

The sources said the follow-up steps are designed to improve national purchasing power so that Korea's economy can recover from the prolonged recession which has plagued the country since 1979. The government also plans to discourage the flow of foreign currency out of the country which is expected because of the wide gap between domestic and international interest rates.

The sources added that a detailed plan for the complete private management of Korean commercial banks, including the Korea First Bank, will be made public soon.

YONHAP Analysis

SK280916 Seoul YONHAP in English 0835 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, Jun 28 (YONHAP) -- The Korean Government's June 28 economic revitalization measures are considered "shock therapy" because they differ sharply from the stability-oriented economic policies which the government has so far pursued.

As the national economy has shown no signs of recovery despite three pump-priming steps since the beginning of the year, the government seems to have decided to place greater emphasis on expansion and growth instead of stability.

The large four-percentage-point drop in bank interest rates which was just implemented is a striking contrast to the four one percent cuts since last November, and an indication of how seriously Korean enterprises are plagued by the protracted business slump. As Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Kim Chun-song said, it may be true that the nation can hardly expect economic revitalization or a second economic take-off in the 1980's without vigorous business activities.

In this respect, the June 28 measures, designed to stimulate investment and business activities by large reductions in bank interest rates and corporate tax rates, can be said to be a positive step toward that goal.

When the serious fund shortage facing enterprises in the wake of the recent curb loan scandal, especially small and medium-sized firms, is taken into consideration, the new measures become particularly appropriate.

Stabilized domestic commodity prices and the country's improved balance of international payments have made it possible for the government to lower interest rates by four percent.

According to government statistics, wholesale and consumer prices in the first five months of this year rose by 2.6 and 4.4 percent, respectively, over the level of one year before, and the current account deficit totaled only 500 million U.S. dollars compared with the 2.5 billion dollar deficit of one year ago.

Because commodity prices are expected to stabilize, the reduced eight percent annual interest rates for bank deposits will not threaten the real interests of depositors, the government said.

The interest rate cut alone will save enterprises some 500 billion won (680.3 million dollars) per annum. Economic experts here, however, express worry that the interest rate cut may cause a mass transfer of funds from banks to real estate speculation, which would fan inflation. They also voiced fear that the wide gap between domestic interest rates and international interest rates would result in decreased amounts of short-term trade credits, worsening the nation's international payments position in the long run.

HERALD Views Package

[Editorial: "A Financial Shot in the Arm"]

[Text] The set of financial policies announced by the government yesterday was a surprise package as it "sank" the bank interest rate to an unusual low of 10 percent or below a year. Together with the big drop in lending rates, the windfall of a similarly drastic reduction in corporate taxes will no doubt free languishing businesses from their hefty payment burden in interest and tax.

Apparently these measures are designed to give a shot in the arm to the nation's economy which has been in a slump long enough. The greatest initial beneficiary is the industrialist who may now draw more money on easier terms to invest and resume operations in full swing. Over the long haul, the benefit will spill over into the working and consuming public.

Eclecticism is the name of the game in the current attempt of the administration to fight hard battles on two fronts, keeping inflation under control while stimulating activity and growth. As such it represents an astute, and yet possibly risky, combination of Keynesian and monetarist approaches.

Foremost of all in the proclaimed financial reforms is the drastic across-the-board cut in interest rates. Various lending rates including one for export financing were brought down to 10 percent a year. The streamlining of bank interest rates is remarkable in that it removed preferences given to different categories of credit, thus leaving no room for the so-called policy-oriented loan to serve the interest of particular sectors.

It is estimated that our business community will be relieved of 500 billion won in interest payments a year. The amount will go a long way toward enhancing the viability and competitive edge of local manufacturers and traders in both domestic and international markets. The margin may boost investment and create more jobs to reverse the economic downturn.

Beginning next year the proposed reduction in corporate tax and personal income tax will take effect upon passing the legislature. Reduced corporate taxes and lower interest payments will perk up production. Personal income tax relief, aided by liberalized tax breaks on some selected goods, will increase the effective demand to some extent.

One fear being raised is the probable relapse of the speculative fever on real estate and securities as a result of the diversion of idle funds from the low interest-bearing bank deposit account to the unbridled potential of the money market. Timely safeguards must be provided against such disruptive abnormalities as well as the manipulation of the curb loan market.

The reform plan calls for the transfer of a few major "state-dominated" banks to private management — a step in the right direction in view of the frequent irregularities and sluggish performance of those banks in recent months. Bankers should prove efficient as their autonomy may be nullified by incompetency and irresponsibility on their part.

Lifting the ceiling on the money supply will facilitate circulation but it may also set off an inflationary spiral. The success of the latest financial package depends on how well the essential stability can be reconciled with the desired growth. The feat will test the caliber of the new cabinet.

TIMES EDITORIAL WELCOMES CABINET RESHUFFLE

[Editorial: "A Fresh Renewal"]

[Text] Another cabinet reshuffle has just been made, the third in five weeks. In all, 16 ministers have been changed, accounting for more than two thirds of the entire cabinet membership of 22 -- and those including the premiership which had to see a replacement after less than a half year.

Such an extensive and rapid succession of cabinet shakeups vividly underlines the magnitude of the awesome impacts which a recent series of shocking incidents including an unprecendented curb loan scandal have had on our society -- the government and politcal quarters as well as the general public.

The, it also testifies to the resolute determination of the chief executive to tide over the current national hardships and moreover effect another renewal in state affairs by undertaking renovations more in line with public opinion.

For one thing, the latest cabinet change came about a week after President Chon Tu-hwan had a candid meeting with leaders of the three major political parties, in which the oppositionists reportedly suggested a set of bold, far-reaching steps to redress the existing situation.

Noteworthy in this regard is the appointment of Mr. Kim Sang-hyop, president of Korea University and long regarded as a potential all-embracing political figure, to the post of prime minister. His emergence presents a fresh impression to the public in many respects and as President Chon himself stressed, it is expected to create a new momentum in managing national affairs. Mr. Kim's appointment marks a bold departure from the practices of the past several years, in which the premiership was entrusted to either an economic technocrat or a figure versed in economic affairs.

This obviously points to the crucial need to achieve national reconciliation, which has been undermined by the recent incidents to the extent that it now overshadows economic issues. After all, economic fluctuations -- especially in Korea -- are much influenced by non-economic factors ranging from socio-political developments to psychological trends among the people. Thus the cabinet reshuffle may be seen as a forward-looking move to effect another national renovation, including that in government administration, more on political considerations, transcending the dimension of merely resolving the aftermath of the scandals.

Indeed with Mr. Kim in the premiership, the cabinet function may possibly change from being largely an apparatus for policy execution to a more "political cabinet." One of the most acute issues facing the government -- and for that matter the nation as a whole -- is now to wipe away the deplorable yet prevalent trend of mutual distrust in our society and restore popular trust and confidence in the government. This was the very point which acting Prime Minister Kim -- acting till the forthcoming parliamentary consent to his appointment -- emphasized in his inaugural remarks as an overriding task.

In this connection, it is to be noted that the restoration of public confidence cannot be achieved only by a change in the cabinet lineup, however fresh and impressive it may be. Such a shakeup should be substantiated by tangible improvements in government administration and policy orientation, convincing to the people. In the process, the new cabinet is expected to be keenly attentive to public voices and also to broaden the effective popular participation in national affairs.

TONG-A ILBO VIEWS CHINESE TIES TO NORTH KOREA

[Editorial: "The Visit to North Korea by the Defense Minister of Communist China"]

[Text] The recent visit to North Korea by the defense minister of Communist China draws our attention. In the past, too, the leaders of Communist China made visits to Pyongyang to promise aid, payment of foreign debts and to reaffirm the Chinese support for Kim Il-song. However, according to reports, it is the first time in 20 years that such a high-ranking Communist Chinese military leader as the defense minister has toured areas of the Demilitarized Zone on the Korean Peninsula and resolutely demanded the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea at a mass rally held in Pyongyang.

North Korea, while advocating a nonaligned, independent foreign policy, has sought an equidistant diplomacy between China and the Soviet Union. Recently, however, it started to show signs of distrust towards Communist China.

In January 1981 when the premier of North Korea, Yi Chong-ok, paid an official visit to China and had talks with Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping, RENMIN RIBAO did not mention it in an editorial, which was unusual. Meanwhile, North Korea has maintained a reserved attitude toward the Sino-Vietnamese conflict.

It is believed that North Korea has come to have feelings of distrust towards Communist China for the following reasons: First, Communist China has reacted coldly to the Kim Chong-il succession; second, Communist China's capacity to render aid to North Korea has been reduced due to the continued adjustment of economic plan; third, because of the strategy against the Soviet Union, Communist China covertly desires the continued presence of U.S. troops in South Korea; and fourth, there have been moves of indirect trade between Communist China and South Korea.

Taking into the account the above reasons, the visit to North Korea by the China's defense minister is construed as a step aimed at improving the somewhat cooled relations between the two sides. At the same time, it is assumed that China, within its capabilities, might have promised some military and economic aid.

As for the succession by Kim Chong-il, something may happen after Kim Il-song dies. However, the matter has now become a fait accompli and, therefore, Communist China will, it is believed adopt a stand of acquiescence for awhile.

As for the question of U.S. troops in South Korea, officially, Communist China has always demanded their withdrawal. However, it is certain that Communist China does not desire a U.S. troop withdrawal from South Korea because of the military threat from the Soviet Union.

China originally thought that if U.S. troops withdraw from the areas surrounding China, it could move its army units from the southern and eastern areas of China to the northern border against the Soviet Union and it could exercise its influence in the vacuum created by the U.S. troop withdrawal. This was why Communist China welcomed the Nixon Doctrine in 1972 and invited President Nixon to Beijing. Since then, however, Vietnam has fallen under the influence of the Soviet Union.

Accordingly, to avoid following the Vietnamese example and, to maintain a balance of power against the Soviet Union favorable to its interest in East Asia, China must think that it is better off, at least for the time being, with the U.S. troops remaining on the Korean Peninsula.

Therefore, Communist China never slackens its watch over a possible southward invasion which North Korea may launch with the support of the Soviet Union, and it is trying to face the Soviet military threat through alliance with the United States.

When the premier of Communist China, Zhao Ziyang, visited Japan recently, he said in regard to the situation on the Korean Peninsula that there would be no southward advance by North Korea. This can be construed as Chinese disapproval of a southward invasion by North Korea.

Unless Soviet policy toward China changes radically and unless the Soviet troops along the Soviet-Chinese border are drastically reduced, and, thus, China comes to feel it no longer need to maintain close relations with the United States, and as long as there is no prospect for a basic improvement in the Sino-Soviet confrontation in the foreseeable future, it is certain that Communist China does not want to face an enormous danger that could be created by upsetting the status quo of force of arms on the Korean Peninsula. All in all, the visit to North Korea which the leader of Communist China made this time can be regarded as one for placation, limited to preventing North Korea from leaning toward the Soviet Union and eliminating the unseen friction that has existed between Communist China and North Korea.

ACCUSED PUSAN ARSONIST CONFESSES TO 'MOST CHARGES'

SK280900 Seoul YONHAP in English 0755 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Pusan, Korea, June 28 (YONHAP) -- One of the 16 defendants standing trail in connection with an arson at Pusan's American Cultural Center Monday confessed to most of the charges that have been made against her.

Defendant Yi Mi-ok, 20, a former theology student, under questioning from the prosecution during the third session of the case at the Pusan District Criminal Court, admitted taking part in indoctrination programs administered by Kim Hyon-chang, the alleged mastermind of the arson. She denied, however, that the indoctrination programs included leftist or anti-American activities.

She also admitted that she and two other defendants distributed about 250 anti-government leaflets and placards here March 2-8.

The 16 people were indicted April 29 on charges of breaking the national security law and other statutes and two previous court sessions were held June 14 and 21.

One South Korean student died and three others were injured in the blaze at the American facility on March 18. Anti-government and anti-American leaflets were scattered in the neighborhood of the center at the time of the fire. The prosecution will further question the rest of the defendants about their motives in the arson. Ten defense lawyers and 100 family members of the defendants observed the proceedings.

SIHANOUK OFFERS TO JOIN SON SANN FACTION

[By K.S.C. Pillai]

[Text] Singapore, June 29 (AFP) -- Cambodian leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk today made a dramatic offer to dissolve his own faction in Kampuchea and join the nationalist front led by Sonn Sann in order to "build up a strong united nationalist front". "If Son Sann wants me and my followers to join his Khmer People's Nationalist Liberation Front, I am prepared to join and I hope I can persuade my followers also to join", he told a press conference before flying to Jakarta at the end of a 48-hour visit to the republic.

Prince Sihanouk, who is president of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea formed last week, underlined the importance of the unity of the two non-communist factions in the three-party coalition shared with the Khmer Rouge led by Khieu Samphan. Mr. Khieu Samphan is vice-president and Sonn Sann the prime minister in the coalition government, set up in opposition to the Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin government in Phnom Penh.

The prince said he hoped the countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and Singapore in particular, would extend all types of assistance to the nationalist factions to build up their strength not only in the political and diplomatic fields but in the military field as well to match that of the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge, which reportedly has 20,000 to 30,000 well-armed men in the field.

Prince Sihanouk said that ASEAN in general, and Singapore in particular, would like to see the forces loyal to him and Son Sann united in one nationalist movement, which would give them more cohesion and credibility. ASEAN would also like to see the nationalist forces stronger militarily, enabling them to be more effective counterweights to both the Vietnamese occupation forces and the nationalists' Khmer Rouge coalition partners.

Prince Sihanouk, who heads the Moulinaka group, said Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, with whom he had talks in Kuala Lumpur last week, had urged that the two factions unite.

He recalled that he had invited Mr Son Sann when they met in France last year to join him, but the nationalist leader wanted to retain the identity of his front and suggested that the Sihanoukists merge with his group. "So I am ready to join Son Sann and I will try to persuade my followers to join the united front", he added.

Asked whether the Khmer Rouge would object to the merger of the two factions, Prince Sihanouk said: "We do not have to get the approval of the Khmer Rouge", and pointed out that according to the tripartite agreement signed in Kuala Lumpur last week each faction was free to retain its own identity. The prince added that he was sure Khieu Samphan would not object to the two nationalist forces uniting.

He said he was all for a joint military command of the two nationalist groups, and suggested that Son Sann, "who is respected by everybody," be commander in chief of the unified command. At present the KPNLF forces are commanded by Gen. Den Diel and the Moulinaka by In Tam, a former prime minister under Sihanouk.

The prince, who had talks here with Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew and other top officials, was reluctant to discuss whether Singapore had promised the nationalists any aid.

On the question of aid from ASEAN he said that from his talks with Mr Lee he had the impression that "ASEAN in general, and Singapore in particular, would like to see our two factions united in one nationalist front. Mr Lee is willing to help, but would like to see the nationalists unite", indicating that this might be a condition for any substantial aid from ASEAN countries.

Asked whether China, which now provides substantial aid to the Khmer Rouge, would increase its military aid, now at very low levels, to the two nationalist groups, he said: "Certainly they will provide some help, but maybe not enough to balance our strength with the Khmer Rouge".

SIHANOUK MEETS WITH SINGAPORE LEADERS

BK281555 Hong Kong AFP in English 1250 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Singapore, June 28 (AFP) -- President of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (Cambodia), Prince Norodom Sihanouk had discussions lasting more than an hour with Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew this afternoon. The two men met alone in the prime minister's office at the presidential palace complex.

Protocol and security officials escorting the Cambodian leader back to his hotel did not allow waiting newsmen to talk to him, though the prince appeared his ebullient self, willing to respond to questions.

The prince had told newsmen yesterday on arrival from Penang that he would discuss with Mr. Lee the type of aid he had promised in a message sent to the Cambodian leader during the weekend. He said even if Singapore did not offer military aid, he would be satisfied with food and medical assistance badly needed by the non-communist resistance fighters in Kampuchea.

Before meeting Mr. Lee, Prince Sihanouk, who is here as the personal guest of President C.V. Devan Nair, had hour-long talks with Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan at his hotel suite, after which he was the luncheon guest of the foreign minister.

Some details of the talks the prince had with Singapore leaders are expected to be revealed tomorrow when the prince gives his scheduled press conference before leaving for Jakarta.

Earlier today, the prince visited the People's Association, the nerve centre of more than 160 community centres sprawled throughout the island republic. Senior Minister of State Lee Khoon Choy briefed the prince on the activities of the association.

Tonight the prince and Princess Monique, are to be guests at a dinner hosted by Deputy Prime Minister Sinnathamby Rajaratham. The prince, who leaves for Jakarta tomorrow, is also scheduled to visit the two other ASEAN capitals, Manila and Bangkok, before going on to Kampuchea.

In Kampuchea he is to declare the formation of the coalition government and hold the first cabinet meeting with Vice-President Khieu Samphan and Prime Minister Son Sann.

Wants To Address Nonaligned Summit

BK281549 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1300 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] The president of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, Prince Sihanouk, said he has asked ASEAN to present the case of his government to the nonaligned summit to be held in Baghdad in September. Prince Sihanouk, who is on the second day of his visit to Singapore, told Singapore Broadcasting Corporation that he made the request when he met Singapore leaders today. He said that although it appeared that it would be difficult for the coalition government to be recognized at the summit since the Kampuchean seat has been left vacant since the last meeting, he nevertheless wanted to address the summit to present the case for his government.

Prince Sihanouk also said that he did not foresee any problem with the Democratic Kampuchean seat at the United Nations. He added that after that next General Assembly session, the coalition government would implement its yet-to-be-announced political program in Kampuchea itself. It would also train new recruits and continue its efforts to secure aid so that they would be more effective in fighting the Vietnamese in Kampuchea.

THAI OFFICIAL: SIHANOUK DECIDED ON ASEAN TOUR

[By Jim Wolf]

[Text] Bangkok, 29 Jun (AFP) -- Cambodian leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk, anxious to avoid giving the impression he was at China's beck and call, ditched a suggestion that he visit Beijing soon after signing a tripartite coalition pact last week, sources said today. Chana Samutthawanit, a former Thai ambassador to Cambodia who was with the prince in Kuala Lumpur during the signing last Tuesday, said Sihanouk did not want to appear to be "reporting back" to Beijing.

There has been much speculation on the cause of Prince Sihanouk's on-again, off-again travel plans after becoming chief of state of the new Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea created to oppose the Hanoi-installed government in Phnom Penh.

A dispatch from Singapore yesterday quoted Cambodian sources as saying the decision to delay visiting Beijing was the idea of Malaysia which, the report said, was anxious to play down China's role in bringing about the coalition and play up that of the Association of Southeast Nations (ASEAN). But General Chana, a close friend of the prince who relayed messages for him to Thai officials last week, said Sihanouk made his own decision to steer clear of Beijing to head off criticism from his enemies. "He didn't want to allow any misunderstanding that he was under (the influence of) China," Gen. Chana said in a telephone interview.

The thrust of Gen. Chana's remarks were confirmed by a senior aide to Prince Sihanouk, who is due to leave Singapore today for Jakarta and Manila before winding up his ASEAN tour in Thailand, possibly on Saturday. Under the anti-Vietnamese coalition, Prince Sihanouk joined forces with nominal Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan, who became vice president, and anti-communist leader Son Sann, who became prime minister.

On arriving in Kuala Lumpur June 21, Prince Sihanouk said he hoped to visit Bangkok by the following Saturday en route to proclaim formally the new government on Cambodian soil with his partners. Gen. Chana said he realyed a request to this effect by telephone on Tuesday, the signing day, to the office of Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetasila.

Air Chief Marshal Sitthi, who was preparing to leave for a week's visit to Austria, replied that the prince would be welcome whenever he came, but suggested the proposed Saturday visit did not leave enough time to greet him "as good as they wish," Gen. Chana said.

He said Thai Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs Kasem Kasemsi, who forwarded the Thai reply in Kuala Lumpur, had suggested at the same time that a visit to Beijing would solve the timing problem nicely. But Sihanouk was adamant, Gen. Chana said. He figured it was better to visit the ASEAN countries during the absence from Thailand of Marshal Sitthi, who is due back in Bangkok tomorrow.

A source at the Singapore Embassy here also disputed the notion that ASEAN was trying to hog the spotlight by delaying a visit to Beijing. The source said Singapore had extended its invitation because "we knew Prince Sihanouk had some time to kill." He suggested Indonesia and Malaysia had followed suit.

Gen. Chana stressed that the prince initially wanted to return to Cambodian soil as soon as possible to match the movements of Khieu Samphan and Son Sann in returning to see their armies and people. Gen. Chana, who was Thailand's ambassador to Phnom Penh 1970-74, said the prince was still anxious to be on Cambodian soil for at least two weeks to oversee organization of the new alliance.

HENG SAMRIN, OTHERS RECEIVE SOVIET MEDALS

He went on to say: The Soviet people express their satisfaction with the progress achieved by the Kampuchean people in rehabilitating and developing the national economy and in solving social problems. The USSR will always be on the side of the Kampuchean people who, in cooperation with the fraternal peoples of Vietnam and Laos, are fighting against the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and Chinese hegemonists to guarantee peace and stability in Southeast Asia, and who adhere to the principle of settling disputes through negotiations.

On that occasion, Chairman Heng Samrin stressed that the conferement of Soviet medals, once again, reflects the consolidation of the friendly ties, cooperation and the brotherhood in arms between the Kampuchean and Soviet peoples. He went on to say: We would like to express our gratitude to the USSR Supreme Soviet Presidium for presenting us with these high honors for consolidating the brotherhood in arms between fraternal socialist countries. BK251103 Vientiane KPL in English 0914 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] Vientiane, 25 Jun (OANA/KPL) -- The representative of the Palestine Liberation Organisation, Mustafa Safarini, yesterday called on Sisana Sisan, minister of propaganda, information, culture and tourism. The discussion was on the tense situation in Lebanon.

M. Safarini informed the minister that there is clear evidence of close collusion between the U.S. imperialists and the Zionist militarists in this adventure in Lebanon which aims to exterminate the Palestinians and to control Lebanon in which the Zionists have deployed most sophisticated U.S.-made war machineries in shelling various Lebanese cities and Palestinian camps and killing thousands of Lebanese and Palestinian civilians, including women, old and young population.

Minister Sisana Sisan reiterated on this occasion his full and unconditional support and solidarity with the Palestinian armed forces. "Lebanon will successfully safeguard its independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and the Palestinian people who are struggling for the creation of their own state will surely meet with success," Sisana Sisan added.

UN REPRESENTATIVE ADDRESSES DISARMAMENT SESSION

OW262050 Hanoi VNA in English 1453 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, 26 Jun (VNA) -- Lao Ambassador Soubanh Salitthilat to the United Nations has rejected the U.S. Government's charge about the use of chemical weapons in Laos and Kampuchea as an awkward attempt to whitewash its own crime against the Indochinese peoples.

Addressing the plenary session of the second special session of the UN General Assembly on disarmament, on June 23, he condemned the feverish arms race by the U.S. and its use of small countries as a proving ground for new weapons.

The Lao ambassador said: Nobody has forgotten the use of chemical weapons by U.S. troops in Indochina and their disastrous effects on the environment. Thousands of U.S. militarymen are still suffering from the consequences, he pointed out, adding: Therefore, to fool public opinion in the United States and deceive world public opinion, the U.S. Government has fabricated stories about the "chemical war in Kampuchea and Laos". However, it can never provide conclusive evidences to back its affirmations.

He continued: "Even in the hottest fighting, our combatants have avoided as much as they could to fire on troops of the old regime because these are their fellow countrymen and brothers who were misled or forced to take arms. Seven years have elapsed and our armed forces have grown both qualitatively and quantitatively. Hence, there is no reason why we had to use chemical weapons against remnants of a disbanded army who survive only by taking refuge on high mountains and engaging in banditry. We prefer to leave them to the people's anger which we regard as the most efficacious sanction".

Ambassador Soubanh went on: Nobody has forgotten the Chinese aggression against Vietnam in 1979. Neither has one forgotten that China still occupies the Hoang Sa (Paracels) Islands of Vietnam and that China continues to provide military training to Lao exiles taking refuge on its territory, to muster many Chinese divisions along the Sino-Lao border and to work for the destabilisation of its neighbouring countries.

My delegation warmly welcomes the unilateral and solemn engagement of the Soviet Union made in President Leonid Brezhnev's statement before this assembly that the USSR will refrain from being the first to use nuclear weapons. The Lao People's Democratic Republic is also for the creation of zones of peace in the world," he added.

'CLARIFICATION' OF PREM STATEMENT ON KHMER AID

BK281406 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Following some misunderstanding concerning the prime minister's alleged statement that Thailand was ready to provide military assistance to the coalition government of the three Kampuchean factions, the spokesman of the Prime Minister's Office, Trairong Suwannakhiri, stated at Government House today that there is a clarification to be made on this matter. According to him, the prime minister only stated that any decision by Thailand concerning aid to the coalition government of the three Kampuchean factions must be the result of a group decision by the ASEAN nations. Thailand will not unilaterally make any decision in this regard. However, any consideration of aid must be in line with Thailand's interest.

ARMY COMMANDER COMMENTS ON KHMER COALITION

[Text] Assistant Army Commander in Chief Gen Athit Kamlang-ek dismissed reports which said Thailand would allow the forces of the three Khmer factions to use Thai territory in their resistance against the Vietnamese-backed forces. He said the reports were groundless and that the government has no such policy.

The government will not allow anybody to use Thai territory as a base for its forces fighting against another party. General Athit said the Khmer forces must be based inside Kampuchea. As to how far from or how near the forces would be to the Thai border, General Athit said the matter has nothing to do with Thailand.

Asked to comment about the move of the three Khmer factions to set up a coalition government, the assistant army commander in chief said it is a good thing for the Khmer people to have their own government without interference or backing from any country. It will be good if the coalition would pave the way towards peace and stability. However, the coalition could result in an escalation of the fighting. The Thai army must therefore be ready to protect our territory. So long as the fighting does not affect our national security and sovereignty, the army will have nothing to do with it, he said.

Yongyut said that the release of the two trawlers and their crews was the result of a negotiation carried out by the Army Assistant Commander-in-Chief Gen Athit Kamlang-ek with the Vietnamese officials.

The Vietnamese are still considering the release of several Thai trawlers still being held in Vietnam, Yongyut added.

LAO SPORTS OFFER SEEN AS 'FRIENDLY GESTURE'

[Text] Nong Khai -- A Thai-Laotian friendship football match will be held here early next month following a proposal by Vientiane officials, the first friendly gesture since last week's border shooting incident.

The chief of Vientiane's sport committee, Thao Bounsuan Khomphakdi, called on Assistant Governor Maj Daoruang Picharat at Nong Khai provincial hall yesterday morning with an offer to bring a soccer team to the province. The offer was accepted and the match was set for 4 p.m. on July 10 at the provincial stadium.

The Loatian offer was the first overture since last week's shooting incident on the Mekong river in which a Thai river patrol craft was sunk and another damaged. Two villagers were killed and four naval officers were wounded in the attack.

Maj Daoruang said the incident was not discussed during yesterday's meeting.

GOVERNMENT-PROPOSED BILL FAILS IN PARLIAMENT

[Excerpts] The national Constitution amendment bill failed to pass its final reading in a joint session of Parliament by 6 votes short of the required majority of 264. The voting, made known at 1235 this afternoon, was 258 in favour, 33 against with 119 abstentions.

Following the government's defeat, Samak Sunthonwet, leader of the Prachakon Thai Party, challenged the government to resign or dissolve Parliament.

During the casting of the votes, some senators and MP's left the chamber when it was their turn to vote for the bill which would have made far-reaching changes to the electoral and political party system.

The draft bill advocated candidate voting rather than party voting, a multiple constituency system rather than a single constituency electoral system and also required that an MP must be a member of a political party within 90 days of the bill being promulgated.

Under the bill, an MP stood to lose his seat if he failed by that time to become a party member, resigned or was sacked from a party and did not join another party within 90 days, or if his party's membership was terminated by a court order and he did not apply for a new party membership within 60 days.

Prem Comments on Defeat

[Interview with Thai Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon by unidentified correspondent on 26 June -- recorded]

[Text] [Prem[The government spokesman and I said before that the Constitution is the law of the people. The two points we proposed as amendments to the Constitution concern the formation of political parties and the conduct of general elections.

This issue must be decided by Parliament. Therefore, the government has not made any effort to influence or press for any decision. It was a question of how Parliament would decide. The government accepts the decision of Parliament.

[Question] Will the rejection of the draft bill yesterday affect the government's stability?

[Answer] It depends on future developments in the situation.

[Question] Are you confident that the two houses will support the government when the draft budget bill comes to Parliament next month?

[Answer] I think they will support us.

[Question] You are confident that they will support the government?

[Answer] Khun Saiyut [Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon] said in an interview yesterday that the Senate would support the government.

[Question] Is it true that you called Gen Athit Kamlang-ek back urgently?

[Answer] He is scheduled to return today. Do not make a big news story out of it. He told me before his departure that he would return on 26 June.

Further Prem Comment

[Text] Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon said yesterday that he saw no reason why the government should resign over the shock defeat of the Constitution amendments draft in Parliament on Friday.

Gen Prem also said that he would decide the government's response to the incident.

Meanwhile, Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Prayut Charumani yesterday abruptly cancelled a visit to China. He was scheduled to leave Bangkok yesterday as head of a Thai military delegation invited to Beijing by the Chinese armed forces.

Gen Prem yesterday discussed the defeat of the government-sponsored draft during a half-hour meeting at his Sisao Thewet residence with some top Democrat Party members including party leader Phichai Rattakun.

Gen Prem told reporters after the meeting that the government had initiated the Constitution amendments as broad guidelines on the voting and electoral systems it preferred for the next general elections. He insisted that the government had no intention of dictating to Parliament to accept the guidelines. The government wanted Parliament to exercise its freedom and discretion in making a judgement on them. While admitting that the draft was important legislation, Gen Prem maintained that it was the Parliament and not the government that was responsible for it. "So when the result was that it (draft) was not wanted, we simply let it be that way," he said. He disclosed that even his cabinet was divided over the draft.

The prime minister praised Mr Phichai for the concern he had shown over the incident. He said he had told Mr Phichai about the government's position on the law "and he agreed." He said he was not aware if there was any basis to allegations that Deputy Commerce Minister Thawi Kraikhup had made offers to MP's to vote against the draft. He promised to ask Mr Thawi about the allegations.

Gen Prem was optimistic that the defeat would soon die down and doubted that it would affect the government's position when the budget bill is debated next month. He said he had asked Gen Prayut to cancel his visit because there were already several Thai delegations visiting China and insisted that the decision was not related to Friday's vote.

Prem on Political Plans

[Text] Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon has confided to his close aides that he intends to seek political and military support to remain the country's chief executive after next year's general elections, highly authoritative sources told the NATION yesterday.

General Prem has also told his close advisers that he would run in the upcoming general elections to broaden his political base if he was to remain prime minister after the next general elections.

The premier reportedly has dropped hints that he feels that his "mission" has yet to be accomplished in his capacity as prime minister, a conviction which has prompted him to plan to plunge head on into politics when his current term expires.

Under the Constitution, the present government and Parliament will expire in April, 1983. It has yet to be decided by the government when Parliament would be dissolved to pave way for the general elections. Some legislators have proposed to Premier Prem to dissolve Parliament in January, 1983, so that elections could be held in April, allowing for candidates to campaign for 90 days as stipulated in the Constitution.

Informed sources said that when Premier Prem met Social Action Party leader M.R. Kukrit Pramont in Chiang Mai recently, the prime minister was quoted as saying that the current house tenure will complete its four-year term without any "political accidents."

The sources quoted M.R. Kukrit as asking General Prem directly on whether he would continue to be prime minister following the 1983 general elections. General Prem reportedly nodded his head in an affirmative gesture, pointing out that his mission had yet to be accomplished. The sources said that M.R. Kukrit then pointed out to the premier that he would have to run in the upcoming general elections if he was to broaden his base of support -- to which General Prem also replyed in a positive term. The prime minister agreed with M.R. Kukrit that he would have to run in the elections if he was to retain the premiership after the general elections.

The sources said that the SAP leader stopped short of asking General Prem to join the Social Action Party during that informal meeting on May 29, later described by both the ex-premier and Gen Prem as a "social chit-chat." But the sources confirmed that General Prem appeared to be "consulting" M.R. Kukrit over his political future although neither side made any commitment to each other.

The sources denied recent speculations that General Prem and M.R. Kukrit had discussed the premier's joining SAP so far. "No offer or request to that effect from either side has been made so far," the sources said.

SAP appeared ready to accept Prem although several factors will have to be taken into consideration, including the position he will hold in the party should that decision come to pass. Some casual discussions within top SAP executives have been held to discussing the despatch of an "emissary" to sound out the premier to more firmly establish General Prem's intentions, but so far, no such talks have taken place just yet.

Saiyut's Comments

BK251424 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon spoke to newsmen at 1700 today about the failure of a number of senators to support the government-proposed draft revision of the Constitution at today's parliamentary voting session and about reported remarks that the refusal by the senators to support the government is indicative of a rift between the government and the senators.

General Saiyut said he and the commanders of the three armed forces and other senior military officers had discussed the matter and they unanimously believed that as the armed forces serve the country they continue to sincerely and earnestly support this government. What occurred in the Parliament today is political and not related to the military. Also, what happened was normal in the parliamentary system, where it is not strange that views of the parliamentarians will differ. This shows that our current Parliament possesses a great degree of democracy -- senators are independent and are not under anyone's control.

The supreme commander said that as he is also a senator, he knows that the senators who abstained at the ballot did so because they disagreed with the government-sponsored draft revision of the Constitution, feeling that the current Constitution is fine and promotes continual development of democracy. They felt that a revision is not necessary at this time as the current Constitution will expire in the not too distant future and thus should be kept in force until its expiration.

Saiyut said although the draft is government-sponsored, it was initiated by members of Parliament and dealt largely with the general election. Therefore the senators felt passage of the draft should be the responsibility of the members of Parliament.

Saiyut emphasized that the armed forces will always support a legitimate government which has the support of the people. He and the commanders of the three armed forces are confident that no untoward situation will arise from failure of the draft; the people need not worry.

Asked about movement of some military units today, Saiyut said the movement is in accordance with previously planned exercises.

General Athit's Comments

[Text] Assistant Army Commander in Chief Gen Athit Kamlang-ek said that it is not necessary for the government to resign or the Parliament to be dissolved despite the defeat of the Constitution amendments draft in Parliament last week. At a press conference following his private visit to the United States, General Athit said that even if the amendments draft was dropped, a new draft can be submitted to Parliament. General Athit said that he did not regard the withdrawal of the bill in its final stages as a defeat for the government because the government had allowed free votes for the bill. General Athit added that the army will continue its full support for the government despite the defeat of the Constitution amendments draft proposed by it.

NHAN DAN CRITICIZES REAGAN ON CHEMICAL USE CHARGES

OW270733 Hanoi VNA in English 0715 GMT 27 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 27 -- U.S. President Reagan picked up Joseph Paul Goebbels's propaganda method by charging the Soviet Union and Vietnam with using toxic chemicals, in his speech at the UN General Assembly on June 17, says NHAN DAN in a commentary today.

The paper notes that for six years now since this slander campaign was started Washington has failed to convince public opinion. Yet the paper says, it sticks to its allegations because it needs a pretext to step up the chemical war it once made in southern Vietnam, justify its production of chemical weapons and preparations for chemical warfare, and cope with the worldwide demand for disarmament.

NHAN DAN recalls that the United States was the only member country which, at last year's U.N. General Assembly, voted against the resolution demanding that the United States and the Soviet Union resume talks on prohibition of chemical weapons as soon as possible.

The paper also notes that Reagan has not only kept mum about Israel's use of chemicals against the Palestinian people, but also supplied more weapons to the aggressors. "The Reagan administration's slander cannot cover the fact that the United States is preparing for a chemical war."

NHAN DAN Editorial

BK290415 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 28 Jun 82

[NHAN DAN 29 June editorial: "Overcome Difficulties and Advance"]

[Text] The Third Session of the Seventh National Assembly has concluded. This is the first National Assembly session since the splendid success of the Fifth VCP Congress. The session worked busily and scrupulously in light of the party congress resolutions.

Prior to the National Assembly session, various deputies held comprehensive meetings with eligible voters and collected many contributing ideas and urgent aspirations of the voters. The National Assembly attentively listened to a report on the establishment of the criminal law, a very important law code of our state's legal system. The criminal law protects the socialist state, regime and the citizen's rights against crimes which are detrimental to society and distruptive to social order and the socailist law. It defines the severity of crimes and punishments to punish criminals and reminds the people to abide by the law and avoid committing crimes.

The National Assembly contended that following the promulgation of the new Constitution, the promulgation of the criminal law is an important requirement to ensure the uniform nature of socialist criminal law.

The First Session of the Seventh National Assembly adopted a number of important laws. The establishment of the criminal law is a great and difficult task which cannot be fulfilled in one session. This Third Session of the National Assembly accelerated and completed the establishment of this important law.

The National Assembly also heard and contributed ideas to the reports made by the Supreme People's Court and the Supreme People's Organ of Control. These two branches submitted a number of proposals to the National Assembly which were given careful consideration.

The National Assembly showed its keen interest in these tasks -- tasks which are very essential to contribute to strengthening socialist law, enhancing effective management of the socialist state and ensuring the working people's collective right to collective mastery.

The National Ssembly worked with a sense of high responsibility. It discussed the 1982 draft state budget heatedly. Showing its profound interest in the economic situation and the people's daily life, the National Assembly analyzed our national economic situation, noting that although the nation has scored notable achievements, many imbalances prevail which cannot be overcome quickly. The National Assembly pointed out strongpoints and new factors as well as shortcomings in these domains and set forth many concrete and important measures aimed at accelerating production, complementing the practice of thrift and gradually improving circulation and distribution throughout the country.

The National Assembly considered and decided on the 1982 draft state budget. It pointed out various great potentials that must be exploited more vigorously and that the mobilization of the people's and the worker's strength must be carried out to implement the 1982 State Plan and budget satisfactorily.

The National Assembly also listened to a report on the development of the contest to compose a new national anthem and discussed the byelections of members of the Council of State and chairmen of National Assembly standing committees.

The third session of the Seventh National Assembly has completed many tasks with splendid success. It has charted the immediate tasks for the people which require them to enhance the revolutionary impetus, overcome all difficulties in order to surge forward, strive to produce more goods for the society, accelerate the production of grain and consumer goods to increase the state's income and reduce expenses in production and consumption in order to implement the 1982 State Plan and budget satisfactorily.

Le Xuan Dong, deputy head of the party Commission for Propaganda and Education, retraced the history of the KPRP and highlighted the great achievements of the Kampuchean people under its leadership especially since the overthrow of the Pol Pot regime. He stressed that no dark design of the Beijing reactionary clique in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces can reverse the present situation in Kampuchea.

On this occasion, Phan Trong Tue, president of the Vietnam-Kampuchea Friendship Association, has sent a message of greetings to his Kampuchean counterpart, Chan Ven.

VCP Greetings Message

BK280736 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0425 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 28 Jun (SPK) -- The VCP Central Committee has sent a greetings message to the KPRP Central Committee on the occasion of its 31st founding anniversary (28 June). The message says:

Over the past 31 years of struggle full of sacrifices and difficulties, the KPRP pursuing the glorious cause of the Indochinese Communist Party, has led the Kampuchean people in defeating the French colonialists, the U.S. aggressors and the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique in the pay of Chinese expansionism and hegemonism. It, therefore, has written glorious historic pages and enriched the traditions of a nation endowed with the famous Angkor civilization.

The 7 January 1979 historic victory has opened for the heroic Kampuchean people an era of genuine independence and freedom and has enabled them to build a civilized and happy life. Under the KPRP's correct leadership, the Kampuchean people -- united more and more closely behind the KUFNCD and determined to progress -- have surmounted innumerable difficulties and ordeals and achieved great successes in many domains of the cause of defending national independence and building the country.

The PRK has won resounding victories in foiling the perfidious maneuvers and schemes of intervention and sabotage by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces, thereby consolidating more than ever the position and force of the Kampuchean revolution and those of all the Indochinese countries. This constitutes an important factor for ensuring peace and stability in the Southeast Asian region and contributing actively to the common struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism in the world.

The Communist Party, working class and people of Vietnam are very proud of and happy with the brilliant successes of the fraternal party and people of Kampuchea. These successes constitute a great encouragement for and a precious aid to the Vietnamese people in their national construction and defense efforts.

The message continues: As close friends and comrades in arms sharing the same ideal and struggling against the same enemies, our two parties and our two peoples have always stood side by side. They have fought together and won victories together. Through the test of the long revolutionary struggle, the militant solidarity between Vietnam and Kampuchea, cultivated at the expense of the blood of the two peoples, has become a special solidarity that is binding us together. These special relations have become a law of development and a guarantee of all victories of the revolution in each of our two countries.

In its long and hard struggle, the Vietnamese revolution has always enjoyed the close coordination, support and aid from the Kampuchean revolution. On this occasion, we express our most sincere and profound gratitude for its support and devoted aid.

Faithful to Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism and imbued with the vital character of the revolutionary alliance between Vietnam and Kampuchea as well as among Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos -- an alliance which our fifth congress has confirmed -- the party, working class and people of Vietnam pledge to constantly cultivate the Vietnam-Kampuchea special relations, especially at a time when the Beijing hegemonist expansionists and other imperialist and reactionary forces are plotting to divide and destroy the militant Solidarity bloc of the peoples in the Indochinese Peninsula.

More than ever, our party and people will exert every effort to intensify the Vietnam-Kampuchea and Vietnam-Kampuchea-Laos militant solidarity and multifaceted cooperation in order to build socialism jointly and successfully and firmly defend each other country's independence. In this way, we will all contribute actively to the common struggle of the peoples in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

From the bottom of our hearts, we hope that the KPRP and the Kampuchean people will successfully implement the resolutions of the Fourth KPRP Congress and continue to win even greater victories in building and defending their beloved Kampuchean fatherland.

May the militant solidarity, great friendship and multifaceted cooperation between the two parties and peoples of Vietnam and Kampuchea last forever.

[NHAN DAN 28 June editorial: "Glorious Vanguard of the Kampuchean Revolution"]

[Text] For the first time since liberation, the 31st founding anniversary of the KPRP is being grandly celebrated today in the capital of Phnom Penh and throughout the country. This important political event testifies to the stability of the Kampuchean revolution, which, after surmounting the fiercest ordeals, has now emerged victorious and is entering a new stage of development -- that of building a new independent and free Kampuchea advancing along the road toward socialism. This event further shows that the KPRP is a Marxist-Leninist political party which always remains loyal to the interests of the country and the people and combines genuine patriotism with pure proletarian internationalism.

The history of the KPRP is a long process of valiant struggle fraught with glorious traditions. The 16 June directive of the party Central Committee Secretariat affirms that the party's predecessor was the Indochinese Communist Party and that its first congress, held on 28 June 1951 under the presidency of Comrade Son Ngoc Minh, marked the founding of the Khmer People's Revolutionary Party.

Founded amidst the flames of the resistance against the French aggressors, the party led the national salvation front, the Issarak Army and the entire people to wage a fierce struggle against imperialism and feudalism and coordinated with the struggles of the Vietnamese and Lao peoples to contribute to the common victory of ending forever the rule of French colonialism throughout the Indochinese Peninsula. Afterwards, for more than 20 consecutive years, the party's genuine combatants launched difficult and hard struggles, full of valor and sacrifices, against the rule of feudalism, the dictatorial regime of the U.S. henchmen and Beijing expansionism and hegemonism together with the traitorous Pol Pot clique.

Despite untold difficulties, hardships and staggering losses, the party's genuine forces, developing their valuable tradition of uniting the people and the three Indochinese countries, defeated all their enemies one after the other. Following the founding of the United Front for National Salvation, the third party congress laid out a program for national slavation and brought the people to the historic victory of 7 January 1979, smashing the genocidal rule, defeating the annexation scheme of the Chinese expansionism and hegemonism and opening up a new era for the nation.

Over the past 3 years and more the party has assumed the heavy duty of leading the people in preserving their newly gained independence and freedom, rebuilding the entire country and all aspects of social life, and advancing toward a civilized, progressive and happy life .

The new era has begun beautifully. The achievements already recorded are comprehensive and marvelous. The revolutionary administration is being made ever firmer and stronger throughout the country. The economy and the traditional and revolutionary culture have been rebuilt and initial progress has been made. With the genocidal scourge lifted, the nation and its people are reviving rapidly.

The general elections for the National Assembly, the adoption of a new constitution and the holding of the Fourth Congress of the People's Revolutionary Party were momentous events that symbolize the political and spiritual singlemindedness of the Kampuchean people and reflect their profound confidence in the People's Revolutionary Party.

The Kampuchean people's revolutionary cause enjoys broad sympathy and support the world over. The special solidarity and comprehensive cooperation between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos have been strengthened more than ever before. The PRK maintains fine relations with the Soviet Union and other fraternal countries in the socialist community and its prestige in the international arena is growing constantly.

The Beijing reactionaries' policy of opposition and sabotage against the Kampuchean revolution has met with ignominious defeat. Recently, in collusion with U.S. imperialism, they created the so-called Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea in a bid to renovate the face of the genocidal Pol Pot clique which has been held in disgust by all of mankind. Their hastily constructed farce, however, cannot deceive anyone, except for their followers. No devilish tricks by the Beijing reactionaries and U.S. imperialists can reverse the present situation in Kampuchea -- a situation which is developing in the interest of the Kampuchean people and of peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Sharing the joy of the Kampuchean communists and people on this meaningful anniversary, the Vietnamese Communists and people express their admiration for the glorious successes recorded by the party and people of fraternal Kampuchea. These successes represent an epic saga of ardent patriotism and the determination to fight and win that stem from the correct line of a genuine Marxist-Leninist party -- the KPRP, a brother also born to the glorious Indochinese Communist Party of old and a close comrade-in-arms of our party. Comrade Le Duan expressed our feelings so well: The Communist Party and people of Vietnam are boundlessly proud to have the KPRP as a stalwart comrade and a loyal comrade in arms.

In the current stage of the revolution, the KPRP, as pointed out in the directive of the party Central Committee Secretariat, stressed the need to formulate its political, ideological and organizational lines on the basis of Marxism-Leninism. The party pledges to continue the Marxist-Leninist tradition of the Indochinese Communist Party; set forth correct domestic and foreign lines; combine genuine patriotism with pure proletarian internationalism; closely unite with Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries; and build its own organization in accordance with the principles of Marxism-Leninism. It is certain that the party will grow stronger in all respects and fulfill its glorious mission entrusted to it by history.

The relationship between the three fraternal countries of Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos is a special, pure relationship which has been forged with the bones and blood of hundreds of thousands of combatants and the tears of countless mothers. Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee, said very correctly that no words can fully describe the profound love and attachment between the peoples of Vietnam and Kampuchea.

In the course of their revolutionary struggle, our party and people have always received wholehearted support, multifaceted assistance and close combat coordination from the genuine Kampuchean communists and the fraternal Kampuchean people. We bear in our hearts deep feelings of love and attachment.

We are deeply moved by the strong assertion in the resolution of the Fourth KPRP Congress that unity and comprehensive cooperation with Vietnam and Laos is the strategic thought of the party, an objective and inevitable demand of history, an issue that will decide Kampuchea's destiny in the future and a pure revolutionary sentiment and a firm stand of the new Kampuchea.

Our communists and people would like to convey to their close Kampuchean comrades and friends their warmest greetings on the occasion of this grand anniversary. From the bottom of our hearts, we sincerely wish the party and people of fraternal Kampuchea success in implementing the resolution of the Fourth KPRP Congress and new, even greater successes in the undertaking to defend and build their beloved fatherland.

Solidarity Message

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 25 -- The Vietnam Committee in Support of Korea and the Vietnam-Korea Friendship Association yesterday sent a joint message to the Korea-Vietnam Friendship Association on the occasion of the Month of anti-U.S. Struggle (June 25-July 27). The message says:

"The Vietnamese people resolutely support the Korean people's struggle for peaceful unification of their country. We demand that the U. S. imperialists stop supporting the Seoul administration in its repression of South Korean people and withdraw all their troops from South Korea, so that the Korean people may decide their destiny themselves. May the Korean people realize soon their legitimate aspiration for national unification."

On the same occasion, Yi Hong, Korean charge d'affaires ad interim, gave a film show here yesterday evening. It was attended by Le Thiet Hung, president of the Vietnam Committee in Support of Korea and representatives of the Foreign Ministry and the Commission for External Relations of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee.

NHAN DAN Article

OW250839 Hanoi VNA in English 0717 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, June 25 -- "The Vietnamese people firmly side with the Korean people in both parts of the country in their just struggle for national unification:.

This is reaffirmed by NHAN DAN in an article today on "the Month of Common Struggle Against U.S. Imperialism" (June 25-June 27) on the occasion of the signing of the truce agreement at Panmunjon on July 27, 1953.

"The agreement", the paper says "provides that all foreign forces shall withdraw from South Korea and that the Korean people shall solve the unification of their country by themselves without interference from outside. But Korea remains divided up to now and the people's earnest aspiration for sovereignty and national unification remains unfulfilled. U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces should bear responsibility for prolonging the division of Korea.

"Over nearly one third of a century, the situation on that peninsula has been tense. U.S. troops continue occupying South Korea. Following their humiliating setback in Indochina in 1975, the U.S. imperialists have tried to consolidate their position on the southern part of the Korean Peninsula and started a military build-up there to create a link for their new Pacific strategy.

"The Reagan administration has increased aid to South Korea. Provocations by the United States and its henchmen against the Democratic People's Republic of Korea are going on".

The paper stresses: "The United States' plot to prolong the division of Korea and turn South Korea into a military base and new-type colony has been approved by the reactionary forces in Beijing. There are proofs of a plan to establish the Washington-Beijing-Tokyo axis to oppose the forces of peace, national independence, democracy and socialism in Asia and the Pacific. Facts have shown that the U.S. imperialists and henchmen are working against the Korean people's just struggle for peace, sovereignty and national unification".

"The only way to solve the Korean issue is for the United States to immediately withdraw all its troops, weapons and other war means from South Korea and stop interfering in the internal affairs of the Korean people. The unification of Korea must be determined by its people," says the paper in conclusion.

REASONS FOR HAIG'S RESIGNATION SPECULATED ON

Radio Commentary

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] Secretary of State Alexander Haig has resigned. President Reagan announced that he had accepted his secretary of state's request to resign with deep regret. In his announcement Reagan did not explain why Haig had resigned, although the secretary of state said it was because there had been a shift in U.S. foreign policies. He did not elaborate, however.

According to the Voice of America, an American senator has expressed concern that Haig's resignation in the middle of the present Lebanese crisis could aggravate the situation. From all indications, it can be presumed that Haig's resignation is related to developments in Lebanon.

As a former commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, NATO, Haig's views are close to those of the Western European nations. Among President Reagan's foreign policy team, Haig has been the most moderate. As an intelligent internationalist, he not only understands Israel's concerns but also the concerns of the European allies in NATO. It should be remembered that the role of the European allies since the establishment of NATO in 1949 has been to moderate U.S. positions, a role they still play. On the other hand, Israel's role since the formation of the conservative Begin government in 1977 has been to radicalize the United States.

There were rumours last year about Haig's resignation, particularly following the White House decision to appoint a special envoy to the Middle East -- Philip Habib. With the appointment of the special envoy, the position of the secretary of state in dealing with the Middle East was curtailed. Therefore, it is no surprise that Haig was unable to do much in dealing with the Middle East crisis following Israel's invasion of Lebanon earlier this month. He is not well liked by the Begin government because he has spoken in favor of negotiations for Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank of the Jordan River after some kind of a solution has been achieved in Lebanon.

News of Haig's resignation has been received with concern in London because West European leaders consider him a vital link with the White House.

AFP Report of KOMPAS Editorial

BK280936 Hong Kong AFP in English 0759 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Jakarta, June 28 (AFP) -- The resignation of American Secretary of State Alexander Haig may have links with the failed nomination of Morton Abramowitz as the U.S. ambassador to Indonesia, the leading Jakarta newspaper KOMPAS said today.

Commenting in an editorial that lack of cohesion in the Reagan administration, particularly in foreign policy has harmed the United States both internationally and domestically.

Referring to the fact Indonesia turned down the Reagan administration's nomination of former Ambassador to Thailand Morton Abramowitz in May, the editorial noted "apparently the problem of the failure to appoint Morton Ambramowitz as the U.S. envoy here more or less came from internal conflict."

Quoting an American commentator describing the Reagan administration as "the most inept, the most pathetic American government of this century", it said "this criticism is probably an exaggeration, but there is no smoke without a fire".

The English-language newspaper INDONESIA OBSERVER said U.S. foreign policy had become more and more confusing. "It has forced the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to become its tool in promoting Chinese political interest in order to counter the growing strength of Soviet moves in Asia," the paper said in an editorial.

It continued that Malaysian Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie had been "practically reduced to a travelling salesman in Europe, begging for arms in the interest of the forces of the Chinese backed Khmer Rouge". "Carried to excess, this U.S. foreign policy with its preoccupation with the Soviet threat to Asia can possibly bring dissent and distrust within the walls of ASEAN.

"The resignation of Mr. Haig may have been caused by infighting or jealousy but it is also indicative of a failure of judgement of a changing world and therefore a failure in leadership in U.S. foreign policy", the paper said.

FOREIGN MINISTRY DISAPPOINTED IN U.S. VETO AT UN

BK281302 Jakarta ANTARA in English 1147 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Jakarta, June 28 (ANTARA) -- Indonesia regrets U.S. veto on the Security Council's resolution which demanded the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Beirut. This was stated by Foreign Ministry Spokesman Dr Martono Kadri to ANTARA here Monday.

Kadri also pointed out that Indonsia had always supported the efforts for a solution on the Middle Eastern conflict through peaceful means.

He further said that the current Israeli aggression and invasion into the Lebanon could never be justified because they were contradictory to international law and the U.N. Charter and posed a threat to world peace.

In this connection the Foreign Ministry spokesman reaffirmed Indonesia's support to the Palestinian peoples' struggle to restore their legitimate rights and to determine their own future, including the establishment of their own homeland.

CPM,MNLA ISSUE STATEMENT ON WAR ANNIVERSARY

BK231601(Clandestine) Voice of Malayan Democracy in Malay 1215 GMT 22 Jun 82

["Carry On the Revolutionary War to the End!" -- joint statement issued by the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Malaya and the Malayan National Liberation Army High Command on 20 June 1982]

[Text] 1. Because the British imperialists launched total armed suppression against our revolutionary forces on 20 June 1948, the Communist Party of Malaya [CPM] brilliantly led our people of all nationalities in a heroic armed resistance. This triggered the anti-British national liberation war.

Today marks the 34th anniversary of the 20 June revolutionary war. To mark this militant day, the Central Committee of the CPM and the High Command of the Malayan National Liberation Army [MNLA] pay their highest respects to all party members, all commanders and fighters of our army, all members of various revolutionary mass organizations, revolutionary comrades and patriots bearing noble ideals who carry on their struggle inside enemy jails, all families of fallen heroes and respected members of the army and the revolutionary people of all nationalities.

2. Under the leadership of the party Central Committee, the anti-British guerrilla forces throughout the country were integrated into the MNLA on 1 February 1949. With the full support of the people of all nationalities, our party and army untiringly carried on the struggle, engaged in bloody battles, smashed the enemy's dream of ending the war quickly, defeated the frenzied attacks of more than 400,000 soldiers and policemen, launched fierce large attacks and pushed forward the rapid development of our independence struggle. In the end the British imperialists were forced to recognize the independence of the Federation of Malaya in August 1957. This was a historic victory attained in the joint struggle of our party and army, all democratic patriotic forces and the various strata of the people of all nationalities. It was an irreparable great defeat for British imperialist colonial rule in Malaya.

However, the fruits of victory were seized by our country's reactionaries. The independence was not complete. Since 1957 our fatherland has become an imperialist-dominated country under neocolonialism with a half colonial-half feudal society and a change in class relationships.

3. In view of the changes in the characteristics of our society and in the class relationships, our revolution began to enter a new historic era, that is, the era of internal revolutionary war or the era of national people's liberation.

In the years immediately following our country's independence, the British imperialists were still directly in charge of the war. British troops and mercenaries were the main forces in carrying on the war.

Besides, the British imperialists intensified their activities in support of the comprador bureaucrat capitalist class in the political and economic sectors and were immersed in efforts to support, train, equip and expand an army to enable it to shoulder the responsibility of carrying on the counterrevolutionary war. Therefore, the internal revolutionary war and the national revolutionary war were interlinked. The present internal revolutionary war still has elements of the national revolutionary war.

4. Based on the above statement, the more than 50-year struggle of the CPM's history can be divided into five phases:

The first phase, from April 1930 to December 1941, was an underground struggle before World War II.
The second phase, from December 1941 to August 1945, was an anti-Japanese liberation war.
The third phase, from August 1945 to June 1948, was a peaceful struggle after World War II.
The fourth phase, from June 1948 to August 1957, was an anti-British national liberation war.
The fifth phase, September 1957 to the present, is the internal revolutionary war.

5. The Central Committee of the CPM and the MNLA High Command have decided that as of the date of the issuance of this statement the name Malayan National Liberation Army is to be changed to Malayan People's Army [Tentara Rakyat Malaya]. There is to be no change, however, in the date of the army day, the army flag, cap, conduct and discipline, name of units and military organizational system and so forth.

The Malayan People's Army [MPA] is under the absolute leadership of the CPM. It is a revolutionary army armed with Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought having strong discipline, brave and good at fighting. It is a people's army having as its members commendable sons and daughters of the people of all nationalities. It wholeheartedly gives everything in the interest of the people of all nationalities and enjoys the resolute support of the broad masses.

It is only natural that the MPA should proudly inherit the noble tradition of the Malayan people's anti-Japanese army and the MNLA. It relentlessly develops and expands its forces, steps up the development of a revolutionary and militant force, depends on the masses, exploits the jungle for opening up guerrilla zones and developing base areas, implements the strategic policy of active defense and carries out its noble tasks brilliantly.

6. After our country's reactionaries assumed power with British imperialist support in 1957, foreign monopoly capital, which was granted special privileges, began to flood the country. The comprador bureaucrat capitalist class expropriated large tracts of land, plundered natural resources and the abundant wealth and became rich quickly. The gap between the rich and the poor and the polarization of our society widened and the people of all nationalities were afflicted with sufferings.

The reactionaries, in following the British imperialists' orders, concentrated on the anti-communist and antipopular war against the will of our people, and tried to use rifles and cannons to eliminate the people's revolutionary forces and to maintain the interest of a handful of big capitalists inside and outside the country.

Under such circumstances, it was only appropriate to maintain the people's revolutionary armed struggle and the revolutionary mass struggle in our country. Our party and army should resolutely carry on the revolutionary war to the end. We must wage war to safeguard the basic interest of the people of all nationalities, to attain complete independence of the fatherland and complete national liberation.

7. The contradiction between the comprador bureaucrat capitalist class, the landlord class and their imperialist masters on the one hand and the various strata of our people of all nationalities on the other, is the basic social contradiction of our country in the present historic stage. The contradiction between the Kuala Lumpur and Singapore ruling cliques and the various strata of our people of all nationalities is the main social contradiction of our country at the present stage; the contradiction between the Soviet-Vietnamese hegemonists and their running dogs on the one hand and the various strata of our people of all nationalities on the other, is still in evidence, and this may develop into the main social contradiction of our country. Therefore, the target of the revolutionary war is the reactionaries and their imperialist masters. This means that the main target is the reactionaries at home and then those, including imperialist forces, who are hostile to our people.

The task of the war now is to oppose the policies and power of the reactionaries for the sake of safeguarding the people's interest and to oppose imperialism in general, and Soviet-Vietnamese hegemonism in particular, to safeguard the national interest.

8. The important statement, entitled "Long Live the CPM" which was issued by the Central Committee of the CPM on 28 April 1980, thoroughly analyzes the current situation. It says that the pressing task of our people is to strive to safeguard democratic rights and to improve living conditions and to safeguard the national security and territorial integrity. It also presents a specific program of our party for the present period.

Our people must continue the struggle to counter the reactionary anticommunist and antipopular policies launched by the Kuala Lumpur and Singapore ruling cliques, carry on a resolute struggle against infiltration and sabotage by Soviet-Vietnamese hegemonists against our country and integrate these two struggles. Our people should continue the struggle to implement the pressing tasks and the specific program.

9. In order to push forward the revolutionary movement in our country, our party and our army should hold high the three red banners of party development, armed struggle and united front. They should maintain the road of encircling the cities from the villages and to seize political power by armed force, develop an armed struggle front and an underground work front. We should give priority to work in the rural areas, launch all kinds of struggles, particularly armed struggle, and launch protracted guerrilla warfare. We also should give serious attention to urban areas, intensify underground work, develop a secret organization, fully employ both open and legal methods, make efforts to encourage mass movements, win over the broad masses in general and workers and peasants in particular, unite with all forces which can be united and launch the broadest democratic national united front.

10. The eighties are fraught with challenges. The international situation is growing tense and turbulent and the various contradictions at home and abroad are also growing in intensity. Although all kinds of problems will emerge, and despite the presence of great difficulties along the road of progress, nevertheless the main current of the situation is good and our just efforts are bound to succeed.

Let us hold high the great red banner of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought under the leadership of the Central Committee of the CPM headed by Comrade Chin Peng, rouse a spirit of revolutionary optimism, reaffirm the correct political line, unite in heart and in determination, advance heroically and strive to the end to seize victory for the revolution in our country!

Haig from the Reagan administration. Mr Marcos' brief statement, however, reserved any comment by pointing out that the implications of Mr Haig's resignation were still unclear at the moment.

Mr Haig's resignation (?came) in the wake of preparations of the Philippine Government for Mr Marcos' scheduled official state visit to Washington in September.

MARCOS PRAISES STATUS OF ARMED FORCES

HK290028 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] President Marcos has enunciated anew the government's policy of self-reliance in military equipment. Keynoting the 84th year of the Philippine Navy in ceremonies held at Fort Bonifacio, the president said the military will continue to stop importing equipment that could be made in the country. He said the policy is a special program of the government.

Turning to the navy itself, President Marcos lauded the navy for its dual role in the defense and economic development of the country. The president cited its role as a vanguard in defense and an active participant in social-economic projects like the KKK livlihood program.

On defense, the president assured the solid position of the country's armed forces can thwart and contain any threats to national peace, security and sovereignty. He warned those who would undermine the republic that the military would allow no attempts to topple or weaken the government. The president repeated the government policy of using development to restructure the economic framework of society as the ultimate weapon to remove the causes of rebellion.

The president warned rebels and insurgents not to make the mistake of testing the armed forces' capability to meet any threat of rebellion, insurgency or separatism. He also warned them not to test the willpower of the civilian government to face any means that seek to undermine the political authority.

AFP PREVIEWS INDOCHINA FOREIGN MINISTERS MEETING

[By Michel Blanchard]

[Excerpt] Hanoi, June 30 (AFP) -- Vietnam and Cambodia might announce a unilateral partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia during the indochinese foreign ministers' conference early next month, diplomatic observers said here today. Neither the place nor the date of the conference, the sixth since January 1980, have been officially announced. But well-informed sources said it would open on July 5 in Ho Chi Minh City.

Although still no more than a hypothesis, observers here see a partial troop withdrawal as increasingly probable. They consider this the most likely "gesture" by Hanoi to show its "good will" for a peaceful settlement of the region's problems. There is no way at this point of knowing how many troops might be pulled out if and when the withdrawal takes place. But the observers think any withdrawal would have to involve significant numbers to have the necessary impact.

So far Vietnam has refrained from disclosing the number of troops it has in Cambodia defending the Phnom Penh government in power since January 1979. But analysts generally estimate the figure to be around 180,000 men. No withdrawal however, would be big enough to jeopardize the Vietnamese presence in Cambodia, which Hanoi justifies as necessary to counter the "Chinese threat."

The possibility of a partial withdrawal first came up in May when Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach told AFP in an interview that a limited pullout "could be envisaged if it elicited a positive gesture from the other side," namely Thailand, accused by Hanoi of aiding the ousted Khmer Rouge regime. Vice-Foreign Minister Vo Dong Giang said in early June that there were "positive factors" for a partial withdrawal. In Hanoi's eyes, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) understood the situation better, and tensions on the Sino-Vietnamese border had "stabilized." Mr Giang also focused on Khmer Rouge military losses in Cambodia and the increased strength of the Phnom Penh regime of Heng Samrin. Then on June 18 the official VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY published an interview with Mr Giang reaffirming that Hanoi and Phnom Penh were ready to carry out a partial withdrawal "provided there are positive signs from the ASEAN countries."

Contrary to some expectations, Vietnam reacted mildly to the signing of an agreement by three Cambodian groups to set up an anti-Vietnamese coalition government to oppose the Heng Samrin administration, a move promoted by ASEAN. Mr Thach said that the agreement "doesn't bother Vietnam in the slightest" and had "changed nothing." He added that Vietnam was still disposed to make a "gesture."

Vietnam's reaction was also moderate towards ASEAN, heaping the main responsibility for the "farce" of the Kuala Lumpur coalition accord on China and the United States. Observers said that Hanoi could count among its "positive signs" the relatively moderate language used about Vietnam at the recent ASEAN foreign ministers conference in Singapore, and the fact that several ASEAN countries have appealed to Vietnam for dialogue.

Philippine Foreign Minister Carlos Romulo called on Vietnam to demonstrate that it is ready to take the first step towards peace in the region. A partical withdrawal would seem to respond to this request.

Mr Thach's forthcoming visits to ASEAN countries are also in line with Vietnam's professed commitment to dialogue and thus are very important for Hanoi. Reliable sources said Mr Thach is to travel to Burma, Singapore and Malaysia in July and to Indonesia and the Philippines in October.

SUZUKI RECEIVES REAGAN LETTER ON USSR SANCTIONS

OW300332 Tokyo KYODO in English 0313 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 30, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Wednesday that he has received a letter from U.S. President Ronald Reagan rejecting Japan's request that the Russo-Japanese Sakhalin oil and gas project be exempted from the tightened U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union.

The letter was believed to be a final U.S. reply to the messages sent earlier by him, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, to their American counterparts, seeking reversal of the U.S. action.

Suzuki said the agreement reached at the seven-nation Versailles summit in France early this month was quite general in nature and the White House action could not be construed as a violation of that agreement. He was commenting on a charge made by European Community (EC) leaders that the recent U.S. decision to tighten the sanctions against the Soviet Union might run counter to the summit declaration.

Miyazawa on Sanctions

OW291053 Tokyo KYODO in English 1042 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 29, KYODO -- Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa said Tuesday that Japan will not join in accusing the United States of breaching an agreement with other Western industrial powers by imposing a stricter ban on exports of oil and gas equipment to the Soviet Union.

Miyazawa was commenting at a press conference on a charge made by European Community (EC) leaders that the recent U.S. decision to continue and strengthen the sanction against the Soviet Union ran counter to the agreement reached at the seven-nation Versailles summit in France earlier this month. The U.S. sanction prevents West European countries from carrying out their joint project with the Soviet Union to lay a natural gas pipeline in western Siberia. Whether or not the U.S. decision has contradicted the agreement on cooperation at the summit meeting is a "matter of opinion," Miyazawa said.

The U.S. decision has also indirectly prevented Japanese firms from working with the Soviet Union to develop oil resources off Sakhalin as the project requires U.S.-developed logging equipment. On this point, however, Miyazawa noted that Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi has already asked the United States to reconsider its decision. Japan has thus fully expressed its stance on the matter and no further action needs be taken, he added.

GOVERNMENT AWAITS DPRK MOVES ON FISHERY ACCORD

[Text] Tokyo, June 29, KYODO -- A government official said Tuesday Japan could do nothing but watch closely the steps the North Korean Government would take for extension of the current Japan-North Korea fishery agreement, set to terminate Wednesday. Japan has no diplomatic relations with North Korea at present.

The official was commenting on the North Korean failure to extend the agreement after the Japanese Government refused entry of a North Korean delegation into this country for negotiations on its renewal. He said North Korean authorities had at one time intended to send a delegation to Tokyo to start negotiations for renewal of the non-governmental fishery talks but later had a change of heart. Extension of the agreement might have been an effective card for political bargaining with Japan but the Pyongyang Government seemed to have given it up, he added.

JCP CHAIRMAN ON RELATIONS WITH CPSU, JSP, KOMEITO

OW300735 Tokyo KYODO in English 0714 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 30, KYODO -- Ideological differences between the Soviet and Japanese communist parties will eventually be overcome, Japan Communist Party (JCP) Chairman Kenji Miyamoto said Wednesday. He said socialism was still historically in its formative stages and "present errors do not mean it has no future."

The veteran communist was addressing journalists prior to the party's 60th anniversary celebrations next month.

He said he was confident a coalition of opposition forces in Japan would eventually succeed in throwing out the long-ruling Liberal-Democratic Party.

"The current agreement between the Japan Socialist Party (JSP) and Komeito, excluding the JCP, is doomed to fail," Miyamoto said, predicting contradictions in Japanese politics would become "sharper and sharper." "If the JSP wants to win wider support, as the French Socialist Party has done, it must ultimately come to the side of the lesser (opposition) forces" Miyamoto said.

But he said the first task was for the JCP to increase its strength, especially in the Japanese Diet. The JCP now has a membership of 470,000, with over 3 million subscribers to the party newspaper AKAHATA. Miyamoto described this as "the greatest achievement of any communist party in a capitalist country."

However, he said the party's aim was "a very Japanese form of socialism," rejecting hegemonist currents in the international communist movement. The JCP is openly critical of its Chinese and Soviet counterparts, and particularly of Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and in Polish affairs.

"The achievement of socialist revolution is not our immediate task," Miyamoto said, when asked what changes a communist government would make in Japan. "Our first aim would be to control monopoly capital and later move toward nationalization based on the consensus of the Japanese people."

By removing government support for big business and cutting back defense expenditures, "we would like to use Japan's economic strength to improve people's welfare," he said.

However, he said the JCP "recognizes the right to self-defense for all people," and would establish Japanese neutrality -- including abrogation of Japan-U.S. security treaty -- and security measures from this standpoint.

Asked the perennial question -- whether he plans to retire at the party congress next month -- Miyamoto said jokingly "in communism, there's no such word as retire."

BRIEFS

PRC CONSTRUCTION ORDER -- Tokyo, 26 Jun (KYODO) -- Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries (IHI) and two Japanese trading companies have jointly now a yen 10 billion (dollar 39 million) order from China's National Technical Import Corporation for constructing a coal shipping facility, IHI officials said on 26 June. The shipping facility, loading coal on ships from trains, is to be built at Qinhuangdao Port, 300 kilometers east of Beijing. China is scheduled to start shipping coal from the facility in January 1985 with an annual shipping capacity of 20 million tons with half of them for Japan, the officials said. China, using Japan's overseas economic cooperation fund loans under the loan agreement between the two governments, has signed a contract in Beijing with IHI, Mitsui and Co and Wako Koeki Co, they said. VRPR ATTACKS CHON'S NEW ECONOMIC PROGRAM

SK300216 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Text] As already reported, the authorities on 28 June announced measures for revitalizing the economy through the promotion of investment, lowering interest and tax rates and the turning over banks to private ownership and management. According to the authorities, these measures will lower the annual interest rate on bank deposits to 8 percent, that of bank loans to 10 percent and turn over the First Citizen's Bank, Seoul Trust Bank and Chohung Bank to private ownership within the year and guarantee the autonomous management of these banks.

The authorities rave that these are epochal and comprehensive measures designed to revitalize the economy by overcoming the economic crisis, consolidating a foundation for economic growth, stimulating production activity out of its slump, anticipating that the economic situation will take a favorable turn, galvanizing investor confidence and that these measures benefit the national economy as a whole. This shows how desperately the Chon Tu-hwan ring is trying to placate the daily increasing discontent of the people caused by economic depression and financial difficulties so it may prolong its dirty remaining life.

As is widely known, the South Korean economy, influenced by international economic fluctuations and relying on foreign countries, faces a chronic crisis. In the bargain, the curb loan scandal involving Chon Tu-hwan and his wife's relatives has bogged down the financial community in a catastrophe. Because of the financial difficulties caused by this incident, large, as well as small and medium enterprises, have cut their operations and are on the verge of bankruptcy. Because of dwindling international credit, the slump in exports has worsened along with the balance of international payments. Unemployment has increased and income has decreased. As a result, workers' lives have become increasingly miserable. The people of all walks of life have raised their voices in complaint, saying that they can no longer endure hardship and urging traitor Chon Tu-hwan to step down from power, bearing responsibility for forcing the people to suffer misery.

To check such an antigovernment and anti-Chon Tu-hwan movement, the Chon Tu-hwan ring has come up with measures for revitalizing the economy, pretending that it will overcome the difficult economic situation and stabilize the people's livelihood. For the Chon Tu-hwan ring to come up with measures for revitalizing the economy hides a dark intent to prolong its dirty remaining life by strengthening the economic foundation of its fascist ruling system by reviving comprador financial groups. As is well known, the Chon Tu-hwan ring has relieved an annual monetary burden of over 500 billion won from these financial groups by drastically cutting lending interest, corporate and income tax rates on the pretext of improving the financial structure of enterprises and of creating an atmosphere for investment. On the pretext of meeting the demand of enterprises for funds, it has increased financial aid to them by increasing the rate of general currency against general national production. This is a trick designed to fatten comprador capitalists by lowering interest and corporate tax rates as a special favor to them on the pretext of revitalizing the economy through the promotion of investment.

Judging from this, the measures recently taken by the Chon Tu-hwan ring to revitalize the economy by promoting investment is a fraudulent trick designed to placate the discontent which has increased among the people because of economic bankruptcy and their financial difficulties and represents maneuvers to maintain the economic foundation of its toppling fascist ruling system. To conceal its dark, hidden intention, the Chon Tu-hwan ring pretends that it has taken these measures for the sake of workers, saying that with the announcement of these measures, businessmen's investment will increase, increasing productivity; that with the increase of productivity, employment will increase; and that with the increase of employment, workers' income will increase. However, no one will be deceived by this trick.

Instead of wriggling to maintain its dirty remaining life, the Chon Tu-hwan ring should step down from power without delay, bearing responsibility for causing the economy to bog down in bankruptcy and for forcing the people to suffer misery.

NORTH SCORES U.S., ROK MILITARY EXERCISES

OW/90831 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0800 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Text] Pyongyang, June 29 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military fascist clique are becoming more frantic in their new war provocation manoeuvres in South Korea.

The U.S. imperialists are these days massively beefing up their aggressive armed forces, not bothering to conceal their scheme of permanent occupation.

According to the U.S. imperialists' arms buildup program in South Korea, they intend to deploy there a U.S. army electronic intelligence unit of 500-600 men and one group of "A-10" close support planes, which are a type of anti-tank plane, together with air force strength of 900 men this year alone, and plan to introduce anti-tank helicopters carrying missiles for attacking tanks, "M-10" tanks and artillery pieces.

For allocating 141,803,000 dollars to the construction of the U.S. Air Force communication setups and fuel storages in South Korea, they had a bill for it carried at the House of Representatives. The scheme for increasing the South Korean puppet army forces and modernizing them is also being hastened.

Counting only those officially reported, the U.S. imperialists shipped into South Korea military equipment and weapons worth 160 million dollars in fiscal 1981 and decided to increase it to 169.3 million dollars in fiscal 1982 and to 211.9 million dollars in fiscal 1983. They transferred or intend to transfer to the South Korean puppets improved ground-to-air Hawk missiles and their parts worth 82 million dollars and latest-type "F-16" fighters. Besides, they handed two tankers belonging to the U.S. Naval Transport Command to the puppet navy some time ago and scheme to transfer 6 "F-4D" jet fighters in accordance with the aggressive "program of defence support" to South Korea.

With the zealous support and encouragement of the U.S. imperialists, the South Korean military fascist clique included in the "budget" of the puppet government for this year military appropriations to the tune of 3,298,574 million won, and increase of 21.3 per cent above last year, to frantically build up puppet armed forces and equipment and readjust and expand the military setups.

The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military fascists are getting more frenzied then ever before in their war exercises. The "Team Spirit 82" war exercises vividly revealed the aggressive and provocative nature of war provocation manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges which are becoming undisguised.

On June 21, the military fascists mobilized the puppet army and its detached force, the "Homeland Defence Reserve Forces" and "Civilian Defence forces," etc. in Taegu, North Kyongsang Province and kicked up quite a row, flying planes, firing smoke shells and shooting rifles allegedly for countering someone's "surprise attack."

They also infiltrate war planes including the "SR-71" spy plane into our airspace and naval vessels into our waters in succession to commit espionage acts and incessantly perpetrate armed provocations against our side in the Demilitarized Zone along the military demarcation line. The violation of the armistice agreement by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets numbered more than 1,570 cases from May 1 to 24. The criminal moves of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique have created a dangerous situation in our country in which a war may break out any moment.

DKP OFFERS ALTERNATIVE ECONOMIC MEASURES

[Text] The opposition Democratic Korea Party (DKP) demanded yesterday, that the government withhold capital gains tax for the next three years to help revitalize the economy.

The demand was contained in an alternative economic pump-priming package formulated by the DKP Policy Deliberation Council. The package called for the lowering of interest income tax from the present 10 to five percent and the exemption of residence and education surtaxes on interests. The special household savings system should be revived to enable low-income earners to save money at a high savings interest rate of 10 percent, the package said. Presently, the savings interest rate is eight percent. Special consumption tax rates should be drastically reduced to increase effective demand and income tax rates should also be dropped to help improve the financial standings of businesses, it said.

The formula further requested the freezing of public utility rates and the stabilization of foreign exchanges rates to stabilize prices. As a monetary measure to reinvigorate the economy, the formula demanded that bank loans to small and medium industries be increased by 50 percent and that the five-year economic and social development plan be rewritten to overcome the protracted economic difficulty facing the nation.

CHON DISCUSSES ECONOMY WITH INDUSTRIAL LEADERS

[Text] Changwon -- President Chon Tu-hwan said yesterday the government plans to announce follow-up measures to Monday's economic pump-priming package soon.

Talking with industrial leaders and "exemplary workers" over lunch here, President Chon said, "More concrete follow-up measures are under study among pertinent ministries. I expect they will be announced later this week or early next week." "The epoch-making economic revitalization package disclosed by the government Monday will not end up as only an announcement. It's the beginning," he stressed.

The president said the package will bring about desired results only when businessmen and people render unreserved cooperation. The success of the package depends on how confidently and actively businessmen will make investments in line with the package, he said.

Chon said the Republic of Korea will outpace North Korea in every field of life when the republic's gross national product exceeds $100 billion. "This will become motivating force for the North Koreans to come to the conference table." He emphasized the outbreak of another war on the peninsula should be prevented under any circumstances, saying that any renewed hostilities unlike the Middle East or other parts of the world could very well escalate into a third world war.

Prior to the luncheon, the chief executive presided over a monthly trade promotion meeting at a training institute here. Pointing out that the nation can hardly beat export rivals with complicated export procedures, Chon said at the meeting that pertinent export management organizations should drastically abolish unnecessary export procedures. Machinery producers should avoid excessive competition in the domestic market and exert their utmost efforts to achieve the capability of advancing to overseas markets, he said. "If we are to make our gross national product and export outstrip the targets of $100 billion and $50 billion respectively within five to six years, we should be able to achieve an annual machinery export of $20 billion," he said.

Stresses Industrial Growth

[Text] Changwon, Kyongsang Namdo -- President Chon Tu-hwan said yesterday it is critically important to upgrade the industrial structure, including that for heavy and chemical industries, in order to build a highly industrialized society.

In a speech delivered at the dedication of Korean Heavy Industries and Construction Co.'s integrated machinery plant here in the afternoon, the president said, "The machinery industry, in particular, is a key industry which has big ripple effects for other relevant industries. A labor-intensive industry which yields high added-value, the industry demands less energy consumption than other industries. Thus, the development of the machinery industry bears great significance in a country poorly endowed with natural resources and with a dense population like Korea," he noted.

Furthermore, the president added, the machinery industry is directly connected with the survival of the nation, now under the constant threat from the North Korea communist regime, because it constitutes the basis for the defense industry. "With the dedication of this complex, the nation has laid a stepping stone for a leap in the development of the machinery industry."

Saying that the "up-to-date facilities and the tremendous production capacity" of the new plant is good enough to give the people confidence and hope for the future, the president remarked, "now we must import or develop new technology, conduct thorough quality control, rationalize management, increase international competitive power and explore overseas markets so that this new plant can be utilized to the maximum extent possible." When this plant is in full operation, Chon added, it will serve as a forward base for the economic development and for the construction of a welfare society.

The plant was completed in five years and eight months at a cost of 381 billion won over an area of 1,600,000 pyong (5.28 sq. km). The plant is said to be the largest of its kind in the world. The Changwon plant specializes in production of power-generating facilities among other things.

There are seven main shops -- machine, heavy machine, heavy fabrication, boiler, steel foundry, forge and heavy construction equipment. In terms of the size of plant facilities, Changwon is said to be the world's largest machinery unit plant. It is capable of manufacturing annually up to 5,000 units of each of major construction equipment such as excavators, forklifts and bulldozers.

In addition, the plant can turn out assembly technology-intensive machinery inclusive of turbine-generators, boilers and industrial plants related to the production of iron and steel, cement and heavy chemical goods. It boasts a 10,000-ton open die forging press which is priced at $21 million. There are only nine of these costly equipment in the world, according to KHIC officials. "Our plant is not a single plant, which produces a single type of machinery but manufactures many different types, starting with raw materials and ending with the finished product, through a collective production system," said a company spokesman. "All shop facilites are of steel structure type and hold nearly 3,000 units of machinery of different sizes weighing 55,000 tons in total, he added.

There are also such latest and costly machines as plano miller used for fabrication and vertical offset bender, all subject to computerized numerical control, the spokesman said. The tolerance of such precision machines is limited to 10 million to one, he said.

KHIC is now designated as the only manufacturer of various power generating plants except for nuclear reactors which are imported mostly from the United States and other industrial nations. "The nation is now able to turn out a variety of power-generating plants and equipment with its own technology and export them to foreign customers," the spokesman said.

He acknowledged that improving the quality of KHIC products remains a formidable job facing the company which also runs a machinery plant in Kunpo near Anyang city. For this purpose, the spokesman said, KHIC will be active in accumulating technological know-how.

KHIC is in technical cooperation agreements with many foreign machinery firms. An army of 30 foreign specialists are also assisting KHIC employees in elevating the quality of company products.

A substantial increase in exports of products is also called for as the domestic machinery market is now limited. This plant is said to be operating at 30 to 35 percent of its capacity.

SEOUL TO EASE OVERSEAS TRAVEL RESTRICTIONS

SK291150 Seoul YONHAP in English 1114 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Text] Seoul, June 29 (YONHAP) -- In a step to broaden opportunity for overseas travel, the South Korean Government will allow its citizens to make overseas trips if they receive invitations of friends. The new measure will go into force beginning next month, the Foreign Ministry said Tuesday.

Thus far those who are qualified to issue such invitations had been limited to parents, brothers and sisters. Those who have received their friends' invitations are required to deposit one million won to obtain passports, and their overseas trips are limited up to six months. On return home, they are not allowed to apply for passports again to visit friends or enjoy sight-seeing unless they spend six months. Koreans in their fifties can travel abroad for sight-seeing for up to three months.

As of the end of May, the ministry issued 150,962 passports, a 12 percent increase over the same period last year. The drastic increase was attributed to the government's liberalization measures on overseas travel.

N. KOREAN MILITARY DEFECTIONS TO PRC REPORTED

SK300846 Seoul YONHAP in English 0837 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 30 (YONHAP) -- A "considerable" number of North Korean military officers, including "over 10 generals," have defected to Mainland China because of their unhappiness with the plan to replace Kim Il-song with his son Chong-il as the next leader of North Korea, a Tokyo daily reported Wednesday.

Quoting sources "well informed about North Korean affairs," the TONGIL ILBO, a daily owned by a pro-Seoul Korean expatriate, said the defections have triggered a dispute between Beijing and Pyongyang.

According to the paper, the defectors crossed into Manchuria in northeastern China from late April to May. It said that during a visit to Pyongyang in mid-June, a Chinese military delegation tried in vain to appease North Korean authorities, who demanded the repatriation of the defectors.

The paper said the defectors were among those who urged the modernization of the North Korean armed forces. They are enjoying wide popularity among an estimated 1,600,000 Korean expatriates living in China, one of the reasons the Chinese authorities are finding it difficult to deport them, the paper said.

HERALD WARNS PARIS ON PYONGYANG RELATIONS

[Editorial: "Paris Move on Pyongyang"]

[Text] A report originating in Paris on the Mitterrand government's move on North Korea draws keen concern, for it, if put into reality, would inevitably mar the present amicable relations this country maintains with France. The French Government, according to the report of an influential daily published in Paris, intends to establish diplomatic ties with the Pyongyang regime. Though the ultimate gains of the reported Paris policy on North Korea remain to be seen, its wisdom, to all appearances, is doubtful.

As a matter of fact, the emergence of the Socialist government in Paris aroused concern here over such a possibility. But we were pretty sure at the same time that the Mitterrand government would come, before long, to realize that its formal relations with Pyongyang, unless reciprocated by comparable action or developments for this republic, could in no way contribute to resolving the Korean problem laden with potential danger. Neither is it likely that such action by Paris would considerably boost French interests, political or economic.

As one of those Western powers which have been not only interested but also involved in international efforts to seek a Korean settlement, France is well aware of the need to keep a steady balance of power in the divided peninsula while searching for a solution. Such balance, needless to say, envelops more than military power. This is why our open-door foreign policy, declared in 1973, calls for "cross recognition" as a path to winding down tensions in Korea and encouraging joint peaceful undertakings by the South and North.

During the past nine years, this republic has opened its doors wide for exchanges with communist countries. But this approach has not been positively answered as yet -- to the extent of opening formal relations. For any Western partner of this republic to establish diplomatic relations with North Korea under these circumstances cannot but damage the existing equilibrium on the Korean Peninsula.

Even confined to bilateral matters, a Paris-Pyongyang linkup is unlikely to bring any substantial gains to France. Economic considerations will be out of the question in light of the past and present exchanges between France and North Korea. The volume of French-North Korean trade, in terms of value, is far below a tenth of that between Paris and Seoul which has exceeded the $500 million mark. Given the problems facing the North Korean economy today, it would be worse than wishful thinking to assume that Pyongyang's foreign trade or economic activities abroad will jump up in a matter of a few years.

Political effects of Paris-Pyongyang ties would work in favor of North Korea but hardly to French advantage. What merits could the French Socialists expect of their official association with the regime which has no equal in irrationality and intransigence, which is building a dynasty unheard of in the communist world, which exports violence and guerrillas to four corners of the world, and which is bent on defying its chieftan by fabricating a puerile legend?

We hope that the report in question will turn out to be unfounded, to begin with, or that the French Government will reconsider its intent for Pyongyang ties. By any chance, however, if the reported move is transformed into reality, our relations with France will be compelled to suffer an undesirable turn.

LE MONDE Report

PM281559 Paris LE MONDE in French 24 Jun 82 p 5

[R. P. Paringaux dispatch: "Possibility of France's Recognizing Pyongyang Regime Prompts Stern Warnings in Seoul"]

[Text] Seoul -- The intention of establishing diplomatic relations with North Korea which is attributed to the French Government is arousing apprehension, and even resentment in South Korean Government circles and among French businessmen in Seoul. On the one hand the uncertainty hanging over the possible timing and methods of implementing such an initiative is casting doubt on Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert's visit, which was initially scheduled for around the end of the month and which seems likely to be postponed. In addition South Korean Government sources are suggesting that if Paris recognizes the peoples democracy in the North without securing diplomatic guarantees or reciprocal advantages favorable to the southern republic, the latter "will react strongly and will be forced to reconsider its economic cooperation with France."

That cooperation has been developed for some years. Mr Giscard d'Estaing's France has no penchant for the rigid Pyongyang communist regime and on the strength of that political argument and in view of the difficulties of gaining access to the Japanese market, had directed its effort toward South Korea.

The most noteworthy success was the signing of a contract by FRAMATOME for the construction of two nuclear reactors. It had been consolidated early this year by the granting of the conventional part of the power stations to ALSTHOM -- despite or because of the anxiety aroused here by the French socialists' accession to power. (footnote: In March 1981 PS First Secretary Mitterrand had visited Pyongyang. In April [former Foreign Minister] Mr Francois-Poncet visited Seoul. The North Koreans have a trade mission in Paris).

The French are interested in other major industrial contracts: a railroad for high-speed trains, subways in Seoul and Pusan, the Kwangyang steel works, liquified gas terminals, a satellite for the 1988 Olympic games and so forth. They are also interested in sales of military equipment and the South Koreans make no secret of the fact that the price to be paid for those contracts is political.

It is a case of give-and-take and that is not new. "FRAMATOME and ALSTHOM won the contracts primarily for political reasons." Mr (Chung Kyong-il), director of the Seoul Foreign Ministry's European office, told us. That top official said he understands French diplomacy's universalist options and even its concern to contribute to a peaceful solution to the Korean problem. "During our foreign minister's visit to Paris last winter," Mr (Yil) explained, "We were informed of the French intentions. However we were given to understand that the timing of the implementation of that decision would depend on developments in economic cooperation between Paris and Seoul. If those developments were beneficial to France it would delay recognition of North Korea." "Our position is different," he added. "We have already awarded major contracts and we think that an improvement in our bilateral political relations should precede any new economic gesture. We are asking France not to endanger our security by a unilateral, unreciprocated gesture from which the North would be bound to draw advantage to our detriment. France talks of breaking North Korea's isolation, we point out that it is that country which decided to isolate itself from everybody."

People here are very much afraid that a French gesture toward Pyongyang might prompt gestures from other countries, especially European countries (footnote: South Korea is recognized by 117 countries, North Korea by 103).

The only hypothesis likely to satisfy Seoul would be for French recognition of the North to be reciprocated by recognition of the South by a communist bloc country or, better still, admission of the two Koreas into the United Nations.

However, for the Pyongyang regime, as previously for the Vietnamese communists, reunification is still the priority. With the backing of its Chinese and Soviet allies it has so far opposed the institutionalization of the German-style partition. A good-offices mission proposed by Mr Cheysson to his South Korean counterpart and entrusted to Yvelines Senator Machefer apparently did not make it possible to shift Mr Kim Il-Song's position on that point.

In those conditions the South Koreans think that the French gesture would be very damaging to them. Unless we obtain something in exchange we will not allow France to play and win on all counts, they say in substance.

French business circles do not understand why Paris is risking "dropping the substance for the shadow" by an "ideological gesture" for which they cannot see the need and in which they see no advantages but in which they do see drawbacks in the economic and commercial sphere (footnote: Franco-South Korean trade amounts to around $500 million, trade with the North around $20 million).

Seoul is reacting to the uncertainty France is allowing to hang over future events by hinting that the implementation of the nuclear contracts might be postponed -- the official reason being surplus energy capacity. Some 300 French technicians are due to start work very soon.

This is a far cry from the warm atmosphere which prevailed last year during Mr Francois-Poncet's visit here. The relentless optimism shown by some French officials who thought they saw a "new Japan" in South Korea has also waned somewhat for reasons more to do with the Seoul military regime's political and economic difficulties than with diplomatic initiatives. Nonetheless, a reassuring and realistic gesture is expected from the French Government soon to confirm the importance it attaches to the South Korean market.

SINOLOGIST DENOUNCES PRC HEGEMONISM, HOSTILITY

OW292346 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in Russian 1923 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 28 Jun (MONTSAME) -- Mongolian-Chinese relations in the past more than 30 years have been marked by the Chinese ruling clique's hegemonism and open hostility towards the MPR. Encroaching on MPR sovereignty, the Chinese leaders have been using all means to undermine our close ties with the peoples of fraternal socialist countries. Apart from the attempts to impose their policy they use the most diverse methods, from exerting political and economic pressure, ideological sabotage and intimidation by military power to Maoist falsification of history, writes historian and Sinologist C. Dalay in the journal MONGOLIA.

He notes the distortion by Chinese propaganda of the Mongolian people's successes in the construction of socialism, slander against the MPRP and MPR Government and attempts to rouse mistrust towards the Soviet Union. By falsifying Mongolian history and culture, the Beijing leaders in fact reveal their hegemonistic aspirations. Such distortion began in China as early as 1949, straight after the formation of the PRC. Books on Mongolian "history" are published whose authors try to associate the independent history of the Mongolian people with Chinese history in order to prove "the antiquity and indivisibility of the multinational Chinese state," underlines C. Dalay.

C. Dalay, scientific secretary of the Institute of Oriental Studies of the MPR Academy of Sciences, notes that books and articles recently published in China directly assert that, until 1924, the Mongolians did not exist as a sovereign nation, but were a part of China. Maoist leaders also constantly distort the international significance of the MPR's noncapitalist development. The historical truth, however, always triumphs. The number of countries of Asia and Africa interested in the MPR's experience of noncapitalist development and socialist construction in the contemporary stage is growing larger.

The reactionary course pursued by Beijing is aimed at denying the MPR state sovereignty and is an integral part of the great-power hegemonistic policy, whose brunt is aimed against world socialism, the article says.

RANGOON REPORTS SECRETARY HAIG'S RESIGNATION

BK261531 Rangoon Domestic Service in English 1445 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] The U.S. Secretary of State, Alexander Haig, resigned yesterday. This was announced by President Ronald Reagan in a brief televised statement. The president said Haig submitted his resignation earlier yesterday and that he accepted it with regret. President Reagan immediately named his successor as George Schultz, a former treasury secretary who held various posts in the Nixon administration. The president gave no reason of Haig's resignation and refused to answer any question on the subject.

Meanwhile, Haig said he was resigning because he felt U.S. foreign policy had shifted away from a course of consistency and compassion which he had agreed upon with President Reagan. In a televised statement read in a crowded auditorium in the State Department, he praised George Shultz, named by Reagan as his successor, and said he would stay on as long as necessary to ensure an orderly transition. Haig received a minute-long ovation from members of his staff crowded in the auditorium along with reporters to hear his statement made some 90 minutes after Reagan announced the secretary's shock resignation.

He said that when he accepted the post in January 1981 it was with the idea of carrying out a new and forward-looking foreign policy resting on the cornerstones of strength and compassion. But he said that in recent months it had become clear to him that the foreign policy was shifting away from the careful course which we laid out.

Thakin Thet Tin and his wife Daw Khin Swe were members of the delegation of the Burma Communist Party (BCP) during the peace talks initiated by the Revolutionary Council in 1963. Their five children were left behind in Beijing, the People's Republic of China. After the peace talks failed, the Revolutionary Council pledged to send the members of the BCP delegation to any destination they wished, either abroad or within the country. Thakin Thet Tin and Daw Khin Swe chose to go to Pegu Yoma where the BCP headquarters was located. In March 1967, Thakin Thet Tin surrendered in Chauk. In September 1965, Daw Khin Swe was captured during a military operation in Lemyethna township, Irrawaddy Division. Daw Khin Swe was released under the amnesty order in 1972. Both have been living peacefully in Rangoon.

Stresses 'Mutual Respect' With SRV

BK291229 Hong Kong AFP in English 1214 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Text] Jakarta, June 29 (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who heads a newly created Cambodian coalition government set up in opposition to the Phnom Penh administration of Heng Samrin, stressed here that his new government was not against Vietnam and the Soviet Union but was formed "to strengthen national resistance for a Cambodian Kampuchea."

He told a news conference at the airport on his arrival from Singapore: "We do not plan to make war for war. We make war for peace, for a peaceful settlement of the problem".

Asked if he wished a peaceful or military solution to the Cambodian problem, Prince Sihanouk said, "Personally I have always pledged a political, peaceful solution to the problem. If we have to lead an armed struggle it is only because we want to persuade Vietnam that it cannot go on in the process of colonizing our country". He stressed that his government wanted to be "friends with Vietnam, which would mean mutual respect". However, he warned, "If Vietnam says the situation is irreversible, we must tell Vietnam that we regret it, but we have to lead an armed struggle".

He recalled his proposal to convene a conference in Geneva "to solve the problem peacefully", in which the "concerned" Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) countries together with Japan, Australia, New Zealand among others would participate. He added, however, "I am aware of the fact that the other side is not ready to accept this idea of a peaceful settlement". When asked if he had set a deadline for the Vietnamese to come to the conference table, he replied: "There is no timetable. It is up to Vietnam. We are patiently waiting".

In a statement distributed to the press, Prince Sihanouk emphazised what he called "the very important role played by Indonesia and ASEAN to ensure that the international community does not forget the tragic problem of Kampuchea (Cambodia)", and further stressed the role of the newly formed coalition government at the United Nations.

Expressing his "fervent gratitude" to Indonesia and ASEAN, he said: "During my short stay in your capital, Jakarta, I will have the privilege of working with your leaders". Prince Norodom Sihanouk is to meet President Suharto and Vice President Adam Malik tomorrow morning.

Meanwhile, the Foreign Office issued a last-minute official statement stressing the "unofficial" nature of the visit of the new president who will be the "personal guest" of Vice-President Adam Malik. Prince Sihanouk last visited Indonesia in 1964, during the late President Sukarno's regime and President Suharto visited Kampuchea in 1972, shortly after becoming full president.

Calls on President Suharto

BK300927 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 0700 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] The president of the Kampuchean coalition government, Prince Sihanouk, and his wife Princess Monique this morning paid a courtesy call on President and Mrs Suharto at the Merdeka Palace. The courtesy call was followed by an hour-long private meeting between the two heads of state.

State Minister and State Secretary Sudharmono told newsmen that President Suharto at the informal meeting reiterated Indonesia's and ASEAN's political support to the Kampuchean coalition government. The head of state also expressed the hope that the prince would make the best use of this political support because, according to President Suharto, the success of a country's struggle depends on the country and its own people.

In response to questions by newsmen, Minister Sudharmono said any assistance, such as technical and agricultural aid, that Indonesia may give according to its ability would be for the rehabilitation or development of Kampuchea.

At the meeting Prince Sihanouk, besides explaining the twists and turns of the Kampuchean people's struggle and future plans, also conveyed his profound gratitude to President Suharto for Indonesia's assistance and support to the Kampuchean people's struggle and the establishment of the coalition government.

During the courtesy call at the Merdeka Palace, President and Mrs Suharto exchanged gifts with Prince Sihanouk and Princess Monique. At the meeting President Suharto was accompanied by Coordinating Minister for Politics and Security Panggabean and State Minister and State Secretary Sudharmono. Prince Sihanouk and Princess Monique were this afternoon received by Vice President and Mrs Adam Malik at the Merdeka Selatan Palace.

NATION REVIEW 'EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW' WITH SIHANOUK

[By Jacques Bekaert]

[Excerpt] The rainy season is here and Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of the newly-formed Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, told the NATION: "This is just the right season to form a coalition to build up a real Khmer resistance force against Vietnam."

It was the second exclusive interview Sihanouk gave to the NATION in Penang in less than a week. The second interview, a two-hour conversation on a wide range of subjects, took place only a few hours before Sihanouk left Penang on Sunday for Singapore.

"Vietnam," he explained, "is waging a conventional war against the Khmer resistance. It is a paradox. But Vietnam should know better. After decades of guerrilla warfare, the Vietnamese are now using heavy weapons, tanks, artillery pieces, and planes. There is no doubt that the dry season favours them. But we are now entering the rainy season. Soon it will be impossible for them to use all those heavy war gear. The Khmer resistance could take the opportunity to liberate some territory. In guerrilla warfare, the most important thing is infiltration, winning the hearts and minds of the people. A large number of young people are ready to fight with us. If we got the weapons and food, then we could become a serious threat to the Vietnamese...

"It is not going to be easy. Let's have no illusion about it. This new war of liberation will be more difficult than the one we fought against the Americans. We have to be patient. In fact, the Vietnamese would not withdraw from Cambodia easily. Cambodia has always been a rich country. We used to export a lot of rice. We have an abundant supply of fish. Why should the Vietnamese go? They lack everything. They settle in our land, they fish in our lakes and rivers. The great lake, the Tonle Sap is full of Vietnamese fishermen. We cannot accept it."

Prince Sihanouk, the new president of Democratic Kampuchea, insists once again on the necessity to provide aid to the resistance movement.

"The nationalist soldiers are undernourished. The next few months will be crucial. We have to show the world we are serious about the liberation of Cambodia, serious about the fight for our country. If we don't fight now, soon Cambodia will be like Ukraine or Georgia, just a province depending on a foreign master."

Prince Sihanouk challenged those who call him "the ever-changing prince."

"My goal has always been the same: Independence and dignity of my country. I respect our neighbours. I am not anti-Vietnamese. I was not anti-American. But I have always been anti-colonialist, anti-imperialist. I am not the one who changed. The Vietnamese have changed, since the days my former comrade-in-arms Pham Van Dong was struggling against the United States. In fact, I have been giving everybody equal treatment.

"The same is true about my feelings toward the Khmer Rouge. I have not changed my mind about them. The person Sihanouk, the individual Sihanouk does not like them. How could I like the people who murdered part of my people, part of my family? But the patriot Sihanouk knows that he cannot refuse to participate in the fight to liberate his country."

Norodom Sihanouk also made some revelations about his past efforts to find a political solution to the Kampuchean problem.

"In January 1980, I went to the United States. I met with several people from the State Department. I had a friendly chat with then Secretary of State Cyrus Vance who gave a banquet in my honour. I met with Richard Holbrooke, Joe Negroponte.... They all told me: Prince Sihanouk, we like you very much but there is no way we can give you military support. Why don't you concentrate on social work, help the refugees. Morton Abramowitz, who was at the time the American Ambassador to Thailand, came especially to see me and said: Let the Khmer Rouge do the fighting. I ask to meet with Pentagon and CIA officials. I could tell them a lot about Cambodia. My request was turned down.

"After leaving the United States, I wrote three letters to my former friend Pham Van Dong.

"My dear friend, I wrote him, I would like to have the opportunity to come to Hanoi and discuss with you the question of the relationship between our two countries. We should talk about our dispute. I want Cambodia to be a good friend of Vietnam. We can cooperate with Vietnam in many fields, cultural, economic, etc...but I would like to have an independent Cambodia. You should not colonize my country.

"Pham Van Dong never bothered to answer my letters. My third letter was even returned to me unopened."

Can the coalition really work?

"I will be a loyal partner. I will respect the terms of the declaration. One of the keys to the future of this coalition will be the relationship between Mr Son Sann's KPNLF and the Khmer Rouge. I am fully aware of the difficulties. But if they can establish a good mutual day-to-day understanding, we should be able to succeed.

"As far as my role is concerned, I want to be the spokesman, to go around the world drumming up support for the coalition, explaining why we are doing this, explaining that we are acting as Khmer patriot. I will leave most of the administration of the affairs of Democratic Kampuchea to Mr Son Sann and Khieu Samphan."

Asked about the "real leader" of the Khmer Rouge, Prince Sihanouk told us he is convinced that Pol Pot is still the real master. "And my guess is that Ieng Sary is the number two, followed by his wife, Ieng Thirit, and Mr Khieu Samphan is number four."

Prince Norodom Sihanouk also told the NATION he wants to go to the next conference of the nonaligned countries in Baghdad.

"I will try to get the Kampuchean seat back to Democratic Kampuchea. If I cannot achieve that, I would like at least to be able to deliver an address to the conference. I know very well that some so-called nonaligned nations, like Cuba, will do their best to prevent me from speaking in Baghdad, but I still have a few friends, don't worry..."

VODK SCORES USSR, SRV CRITICISM OF COALITION

[Station commentary: "Why Have Vietnam and the Soviet Union Raised a Hue and Cry Over the Coalition of the Three Kampuchean Groups"]

[Text] After the anti-Vietnamese Kampuchean patriotic forces reached an agreement and signed a declaration establishing the Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government, the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors and the Soviet Union -- Vietnam's boss, supported and accomplice in the Vietnamese war of aggression and genocide against the Kampuchean race -- have fiercely assailed both the Kampuchean patriotic forces and the countries which have supported the Kampuchean people's struggle against the Vietnamese aggressors. Why have Vietnam and the Soviet Union raised this hue and cry? It is because they have suffered shameful defeats in this regard. For almost 4 years, the Vietnamese Le Duan enemy and the Soviet Union have carried out all kinds of activities and schemes in an attempt to undermine and prevent the Kampuchean patriotic forces from uniting. Especially since the end of 1979, when our Democratic Kampuchean Government issued the political program of the Patriotic and Democratic Front of the Great National Union of Kampuchea, the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors have launched all kinds of activities, attacking and hurling foul abuses against the Kampuchean patriotic forces in an attempt to prevent the Kampuchean patriotic forces from uniting and struggling against them. The Vietnamese aggressors have done all this both by themselves and through their colleagues and agents. However, due to their lofty spirit of patriotism and their aspiration to salvage the Kampuchean nation, people and race from the evil claws of the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors, the Kampuchean patriotic forces have arduously sought meetings and discussions with one another. For its part, although it has been busy in the struggle against the Vietnamese aggressors on the battlefield, our Democractic Kampuchean side has made every effort for this coalition. Thanks to the efforts made by the three Kampuchean groups and the support and assistance of friends near and far, particularly the ASEAN countries, our three Kampuchean forces have reached an agreement and on 22 June signed the declaration of the formation of the Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government.

After signing the joint declaration, the leaders of our three Kampuchean national forces stressed their determination to unite, abide by the spirit and the letter of this declaration and fight against the Vietnamese aggressors until the beloved Kampuchean fatherland is totally liberated.

His Excellency Khieu Samphan, head of our Democratic Kampuchean party, stressed: We will abide by and implement the declaration on the formation of the Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government in order to realize the objectives of this declaration in increasing the forces to fight and drive out the Vietnamese Le Duan enemy and liberate our Kampuchean nation, people and fatherland. Since Vietnam is suffering a headlong dive, our coalition will certainly plunge Vietnam into a more difficult situation. This coalition will certainly give a greater impetus to the national liberation struggle of our Kampuchean people.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk said: No matter what problems we face in the future, the Kampuchean patriots, who are the sons of a great people with a glorious history, will certainly continue to struggle against the Vietnamese colonialist yoke. Although there are major and minor differences among us, we are guided now by the common principles set forth in the declaration. The three factions must cherish harmony, cooperation, friendship and mutual understanding.

His Excellency Son Sann said: We are determined to unite in the Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government and to liberate our Kampuchean nation from the foreign occupation troops.

This event constitutes a satisfying victory of the entire Kampuchean nation and people in their struggle against the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors and race exterminators, but a heavy blow against the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors and a shameful defeat for the Vietmanese-Soviet perfidious maneuvers.

The Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors have now suffered shameful defeats. But, as aggressors who want to swallow up Kampuchea so as to establish the Indochina federation to carry on their expansionist strategy and the southward drive strategy of their Soviet boss, the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors will certainly struggle on, both on the battlefield and on the diplomatic field, and will resort to all kinds of dark maneuvers in order to wipe out and split the united Kampuchean national forces. For this reason, we must all always be vigilant for the perfidious maneuvers of Vietman and the Soviet Union, hold aloft the banner of patriotism, be determined to place the national interest above all else, abide by and implement the declaration on the formation of the Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government, unite as one and fight against the Vietnamese aggressors and race exterminators until we can totally liberate our beloved Kampuchean fatherland and defend and preserve forever our Kampuchean nation, territory, people and race.

We are convinced that the establishment of this Democratic Kampuchean Coalition Government will certainly strengthen and give greater impetus to our Kampuchean people's struggle against the Vietnamese aggressors on the battlefield and in the international arena, thus enabling us to drive all the Vietnamese Le Duan aggressors and race exterminators out of Kampuchea, liberate our country totally and permanently and save all the Kampuchean people from the great misery and massacre caused by the Vietnamese aggressors.

Those compatriots fled to join the enemies because they fell for the deceitful propaganda of the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and their reactionary forces, to become their stooges in creating disturbances among the people of all nationalities and obstructing the progress of national construction and socialist construction. Upon their surrender, they were warmly welcomed by the local authorities and received education and training to become good citizens in accordance with the correct and just policy of our party and state. BANGKOK URGES SHULTZ TO USE OFFICE TO PROMOTE PEACE

["Foreign News Analysis" Feature]

[Excerpts] Those of you who follow foreign news must have heard of the unexpected announcement by President Ronald Reagan last Friday on the resignation of U.S. Secretary of State General Alexander Haig. The U.S. president said he accepted the resignation letter with extreme regret and announced that he has nominated George Shultz, the secretary of the treasury during the Nixon administration, as the new U.S. secretary of state.

Leaders of various countries are closely studying Mr Shultz's attitude and activities, particularly his attitude toward Southeast Asia. However, it is believed that the United States will not change its policy of support for ASEAN and that it definitely will not restore relations with the Indochina countries until Vietnam withdraws its 200,000 troops from Kampuchea.

Listeners, Mr George Shultz is a firm and determined person. He is an economics expert. He has served as labor secretary and budget director, and he was the sectetary of the treasury during the Nixon administration. Ronald Reagan asked him to be his secretary of state at the beginning of his administration, but at that time Mr Shultz was more interested in his chairmanship of the Bechtel Corporation. However, he is now ready to step in as U.S. secretary of state. We hope that Mr George Shultz will use the post of the secretary of state of the greatest superpower in ways which promote and create world peace to the best of his ability.

HOLDRIDGE CALLS ON PREM, THANAT; AFFIRMS U.S. SUPPORT

BK291548 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Text] U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs John Holdridge and his party paid a courtesy call on Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon at 1400 yesterday. The group was accompanied by Protocol Department Director General Nikon Phraisaengphet. Mr Holdridge reaffirmed that the United States will full support Thailand's policy, as it views Thailand as a significant frontline state in this region. U.S. foreign policy toward the Asian region will remain unchanged. He said the newly appointed U.S. secretary of state is well acquainted with Thailand, and it is therefore believed relations between the two countries will be further strengthened.

The prime minister expressed thanks for U.S. support and cooperation, expecially the support for Thailand's anti-piracy campaign, which has resulted in Thailand having been granted funds for the suppression. The prime minister hoped that the United States would also realize the burden Thailand has to shoulder concerning the refugee problem and would work for an increase in the number of refugees to be resettled in third countries.

Earlier, at 1030, Mr John Holdridge and his party called on Deputy Prime Minister Col Thanat Khoman. He told the deputy prime minister about his visit to the refugee camps along the Thai border and said that he was impressed by the progress of Thailand's communications system as well as its economic development. He said, as an old friend of Thailand, that the United States will fully support Thailand in all aspects, especially when Thailand is faced with several problems.

On the setting up of a coalition government of the three Kampuchean factions, he said the United States supports ASEAN efforts to this effect and also wants to see a political settlement of the problem as early as possible. The two sides also exchanged views on the situation in Europe and the Middle East.

TEAM TO HOLD TALKS WITH U.S. ON CONVICT EXCHANGE

[Text] A Thai delegation will leave for Washington D.C. in early August to hold talks with U.S. officials on prisoners exchange and very likely conclude an initial agreement on this matter.

A similar agreement with Canada may also be initialed when the delegation visits Ottawa in the second week of August.

Director general of the Foreign Ministry's treaty and legal department, Sathit Sathianthai, said yesterday he has been designated leader of the delegation. The departure for the U.S. capital has been tentatively set for August 2.

Sathit said Thai officials are reviewing a draft agreement prepared by a working committee headed by Chief Justice Sansoen Kraichitti of the Court of Appeal. He foresees no problems in reaching an initial agreement with the United States.

Sansoen will serve as special adviser to the Thai delegation.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State John Holdridge yesterday expressed optimism that the talks on prisoners exchange will lead to the signing of the draft agreement in Washington D.C.

When such an agreement comes into effect, Americans convicted by Thai court will serve part of their sentence before being eligible for repatriation; the same is applicable to Thais jailed in the United States.

About 70 Americans have been sentenced to imprisonment in Thailand. All except one were reportedly convicted on drugs charges.

There are about seven Canadians in Thai jails; all were convicted on drugs offences. However, the number of Thai prisoners in the United States is not yet available.

Thailand had earlier declined the prisoners exchange deal. But the Thai Government has recently reversed its position and assigned Sansoen's committee to work out the draft agreement on the exchange.

CABINET MOVES TO UPDATE CONTROLS ON FOREIGN DEBTS

[Text] The Cabinet yesterday agreed to update measures for controlling the incurring of foreign debts as recommended by the Ministry of Finance.

The measures will cover foreign debts for defence purposes which have repayment period of less than a year, encourage coordination among governmental agencies in controlling foreign loans in line with the economic situation and set new ceilings on the government sector's foreign loan burden.

As approved by the Cabinet, the ceiling on the foreign loan burden in relation with export revenue will be increased from seven to 9 percent while the ceiling on foreign loan for defence purposes will rise to 2 percent.

The Cabinet acknowledged that the 9 percent ceiling was still low compared with the rate in the other countries which was registered at 12.7 percent in 1979.

The Cabinet has also approved three more regulations governing the use of foreign loans for governmental organisations and state enterprises. The regulations stipulate that:

— The loans must not be used on salaries;

— If the loans are meant for financing building projects which are not investment projects then international construction standards must not be applied;

— Foreign consultant firms are allowed only for high-tech projects.

SHAN REBELS CROSS BORDER TO AVOID BURMESE-BCP CLASHES

BK300251 Bangkok POST in English 30 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] About 500 Shan rebels are reported to have crossed into Thailand on Sunday [27 June] after fierce fighting flared between Burmese Government forces and members of the Burmese Communist Party (BCP).

The Shans are believed to have sought refuge in Thai territory because they feared that the fighting would escalate.

An informed police source in Chiang Mai said yesterday that Thai Border Patrol Police [BPP] and volunteers had been despatched to Ban Huai Yuak in Mae Chan District of Chiang Rai where the guerrillas, from Khun Sa's so-called Shan United Army (SUA), were reported to be sheltering.

The source said skirmishes might break out if the rebels refuse to leave Thai territory.

The fighting between Burmese Government forces and the BCP flared at Bon Som Prang, about three kilometres from the Thai border village of Doi Lang, in Mae Ai District, of Chiang Mai Province, the source said.

The communists, numbering about 600, consist mainly of Muser and "red" Wa hilltribesmen.

The source said that both sides had sustained considerable casualties. He added that Thai BPP men were also rushed to Doi Lang to prevent the fighting from spilling across the border.

XINHUA COMMENTARY ON DISPUTED ISLANDS SCORED

BK291156 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] Vietnam's sovereignty over Hoang Sa and Truong Sa archipelagoes is indisputable. This was affirmed by our commentator in a commentary today. He said:

The white paper on Hoang Sa and Truong Sa archipelagoes -- Vietnamese territories -- made public by the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry in January this year with convincing historical and legal evidence has embarassed the Chinese expansionists. The only thing Beijing can do now is to distort the fact to claim over Hoang Sa and Truong Sa. The official information organ of the Chinese authorities reacted to the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry's white paper with grudge and anger.

The commentary of the NEW CHINA NEWS AGENCY, XINHUA, on 11 June just repeated China's outmoded allegation. It did not give any new basis to justify its acts of aggression and expansion. A question is raised: Why did XINHUA try to elude Vietnam's rejection of China's claim that Nansha and Sisha -- which are in fact Vietnam's Hoang Sa and Truong Sa -- have long been China's territories.

The commentary mentioned what China has done toward Hoang Sa archipelago since the thirties and called them historical facts from China's sovereignty. In fact, they were illegal actions completely invalid because for a very long time prior to the thirties, Hoang Sa and Truong Sa were Vietnamese territories. History shows that from many centuries, the Vietnamese state had sovereignty over Hoang Sa and Truong Sa archipelagoes; only since the beginning of the 20th century, successive Chinese authorities, with their expansionist ambition, annexed the archipelago in the eastern sea.

XINHUA's commentary brazenly charged Vietnam of invasion. But it was China not anyone else that invaded Vietnam and it is now occupying Vietnam's Hoang Sa archipelago. Beijing's familiar trick of making black white can in no way cover up this fact. Reality shows that for dozens of years now, China has been trying to produce vague evidence to claim millions of kilometers of land and territorial waters of neighboring countries. With this expansionist ambition, Beijing has sought pretexts for its claim over not only Hoang Sa but also Truong Sa archipelagos of Vietnam. This move is part of China's plan to control and step by step dominate the eastern sea to oppose Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea and expand toward Southeast Asia.

To both their deeds and words, the Chinese reactionary authorities are following the track of the former Chinese feudalist regime. This only leads them to complete bankruptcy.

TAP CHI CONG SAN ON NEW SITUATION, TASKS

BK291029 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN in Vietnamese May 82, pp 63-71

[Article by Tran Quoc Tu: "The Situation in Our Country and Our Tasks"]

[Text] Every revolutionary is required primarily to assess the situation and tasks correctly. Only by correctly assessing the situation and tasks, can we set forth effective policies and measures to improve the situation and advance the revolution to victory.

We should have a correct method of thinking to assess the situation correctly. The most correct method of thinking is the Marxist-Leninist method of materialist dialectics. Only by grasping this method of thinking firmly can we analyze the situation scientifically and objectively, detect contradictions in life and set forth proper guidelines and policies to settle these contradictions in our advancement.

Our country is in the stage of socialist revolution. To be well aware of the revolutionary situation in our country, we must understand socialist revolution and socialist laws. We must further know the peculiarities of our country which was originally a colony of imperialism and an economically underdeveloped country where small-scale production prevails. We are moving directly to socialism, bypassing the stage of capitalist development.

Together with a proper method of thinking, we must also have a correct attitude. Only by adopting the attitude of masters of the country and the revolution can we properly assess the tasks achieved in order to be aware of success, failure, advantages, shortcomings and problems, and can we analyze the causes correctly and discover guidelines to develop good points, correct mistakes and advance. If we lack a sense of mastery, adopt an indifferent and irresponsible attitude, and pass the buck, we will not be able to assess the situation correctly and discover the causes of difficulties in order to overcome them. Only those "clear-sighted and clear-minded" people can evaluate the situation correctly, tell right from wrong and perceive the struggle guidelines for continally advancing the revolution.

We are now in a rather complicated situation. Although we have won very great victories, we are facing serious economic and social problems. Although we have scored many achievements and good points, we still have shortcomings and mistakes. In our advance from small-scale production to socialism, we are encountering many new problems for which the solution does not exist in the works of the socialist founders Marx and Lenin. Our struggle takes place in a stage of very complicated conditions which require not only our courage but also our creative intelligence. Faced with this complicated situation rife with problems, large numbers of our party's cadres and members have demonstrated their revolutionary stalwartness by firmly maintaining their working class stand and relying absolutely on the party's revolutionary lines. They have properly and clearly realized the situation and their duties, and have strenuously struggled to overcome problems and fulfill their duties in the new stage. On the contrary, some people whose method of thinking and attitude is wrong, have seen only problems and not victories, only shortcomings and not achievements and advantages. They have therefore become suspicious and pessimistic. Their militancy has declined. This lack of tenacity is manifested among some of the party cadres and members.

Following the total liberation of the southern part of our country, the people's national democratic revolution ended and our entire country stepped into a new stage, the stage of socialist revolution. This is a special turning point in the history of our revolution. "Every special turning point in history has caused some formal changes in petty bourgeois vacillations. These vacillations always take place beside the proletariat and always impregnate, to a given extent, the ranks of the proletariat." (Footnote: V.I. Lenin: "Selected Works" Su That Publishing House, Hanoi 1959, Book II, Part II, page 535) "So long as the deep roots of capitalism have not been eradicated, these vacillations necessarily still take place." (same footnote as above). In a country like ours, small farmers and petty bourgeois account for a majority in the population. As a result, "these petty bourgeois vacillations" are all the more prevalent. They are the main cause for the erroneous conceptions about the present situation and tasks.

The strength of our party lies in the unity of millions of cadres and members who act as one. There must be unity of thought before we can achieve unity of action. Only by expounding the revolutionary situation in our country to help all the people properly understand the new situation and tasks, can the party unify its action and thought and develop its strength.

The present situation in our country was profoundly ananlyzed at the fifth party congress. Our achievements and shortcomings were correctly assessed at the congress. The strategic tasks of our revolution in the new situation were also set forth at the congress. This is the ground on which the party will unify its knowledge of the situation and tasks. Making all party cadres and members fully aware of the situation and tasks as viewed by the congress is a very important aspect of the present ideological task which is aimed at creating conditions for unifying the action and thinking of the entire party.

Our people's achievements over the past 5 years were highly appraised at the fifth party congress. The party Central Committee's political report read by General Secretary Le Duan at the congress pointed out clearly: "The past 5 years have gone down in national history as a very glorious and victorious stage of the Vietnamese revolution." Rightfully so, in the past 5 years, under the party's leadership, our people have scored very great achievements, completely changing the face of our country. These achievements have advanced the revolution in our country to a new strategic position firmer than previously, creating a greater capability to defend our fatherland firmly and to build socialism in our country successfully.

Following the victory over the U.S. imperialist aggressors, we quickly unified the country on the state plane. This is the first time that our country has been truly unified on the basis of lasting national independence and socialism. Vietnam is one. The Vietnamese nation is one. This is the will, aspiration and sacred sentiment of all the Vietnamese people. Our Vietnamese people sacrificed and struggled for generations to unify the country. Due to the ups and downs of history, interspersed with periods during which our country enjoyed independence, unity and prosperity, our people suffered painfully from the division of their country. The century-long "Nguyen-Trinh internecine war" divided the country into the "outside road" and the "inside road." No sooner had Nguyen Hue chased the Qing troops out to begin national reunification than quisling Nguyen Anh let the enemy enter our country. Under French domination, our country was divided into three parts. During the U.S. imperialist aggression our country was divided into two regions. Witnessing our country's division caused pain which tore our hearts. Who among the Vietnamese people of both sexes, young and old, did not want the country unified?

It was as if the Vietnamese nation was revived when its country was reunified, with life from north to south bubbling over with national conciliation. The Vietnamese people's long cherished dream had now come true. The system of proletarian dictatorship was established throughout the country. The Socialist Republic of Vietnam was born. The SRV Constitution was promulgated. All of the cruel plots and tricks of the imperialists and international reactionaries trying to sabotage the Vietnamese national unity were defeated. Under the leadership of the working class and its vanguard party, the Vietnamese people quickly unified the country on the state plane and implemented many economic, political, social and cultural policies to accelerate the process of unifying the country comprehensively. The Vietnamese people in the Ho Chi Minh era have achieved the extremely glorious goal of unifying their country. All of us can be legitimately proud of this great achievement. Henceforth, with the great strength of more than 50 million people living on a land of over 320,000 square kilometers full of natural resources, our Vietnamese people can build a prosperous country and firmly maintain our newly gained independence in order to feel proud and happy just like other nations on all the five continents. This is the most fundamental achievement because from now on the great strength of a unified country and the superior socialist system will be the basic factor in creating all of our people's victories.

With the strength of a unified country, our people have defeated Chinese expansionism and hegemonism to defend Socialist Vietnam firmly.

After living for a third of a century in fierce warfare our people now earnestly desire to live in peace and rebuild their country. This simple aspiration still cannot be fulfilled because the reactionaries among the Beijing ruling circles have plotted to annex our country and the Indochina Peninsula in order to achieve their ambition of invading Southeast Asia and conquering the world. The newly unified Vietnam had to face a crucial ordeal: The Chinese reactionaries and their lackeys launched a war of aggression against our country, using a pincers attack from the south upward and from the north downward. Upholding their vigilance, our people and troops courageously fought to defend their country.

Our people's victories in the two aggressive wars waged by Chinese expansionism and hegemonism are new pages in the history of our nation's glorious struggle against foreign aggression. These victories prove that our people have adequate moral and physical strength to defend firmly their socialist fatherland. No matter now cruel and dangerous is the enemy and no matter how big is its country -- with the largest population in the world -- adjacent to our country, our people still have the force to defeat it. If ever it recklessly launched another war of aggression against us, it will be defeated even more shamefully.

Our people's victories in the past two wars for national defense not only have defeated the Chinese reactionaries' plot to annex our country but also have checked the advance of Chinese hegemony and expansion to the Indochina Peninsula and Southeast Asia. With these victories, our people have fulfilled their international obligations to the fraternal Kampuchean and Lao peoples, strengthened the militant alliance and formed a firm system for mutual support of the revolution in the three Indochinese countries.

In the past 5 years, our people have scored many achievements in socialist revolution and socialist construction throughout the country. Noteworthy achievements have been scored on the economic front. We have made great efforts to overcome the consequences of war. The agricultural, industrial and transportation and communications installations which were destroyed during the wars, have basically been restored. Production has developed in some respects. The cultivated area through the country has increased to nearly 2 million hectares owing to our efforts in reclaiming virgin and fallow land and in multicropping. Industrial production capacity has also increased. Many projects under construction will be commissioned in the near future. Thousands of kilometers of railways and roads have been repaired and built. Socialist production relations have been consolidated a step further in the north. Initial results have been obtained in the socialist transformation of the south. The comprador bourgeois class has been eliminated. Capitalist industry and trade have been gradually transformed. Handicrafts and small merchants are being reorganized. Most of the peasants in the southern Trung Bo have been collectivized. In Nam Bo, some peasants have joined production collectives.

We have also recorded many achievements on the cultural front. Illiteracy in our country has been basically eliminated. Nearly 16 million people -- almost one-third of the population -- have attended school. A new culture is gradually being built throughout the country. The reactionary, backward and decadent culture left behind by the old regime is being eliminated. Literary, artistic, public health, sports and physical training activities have developed. All the scientific and technical sectors have developed to support national construction and defense better. In the process of the socialist revolution to build socialism and defend the socialist fatherland, new Socialist Vietnamese men have been formed, trained and enhanced.

With respect to the foreign affairs in the past 5 years, we have strengthened the relations of militant solidarity and comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union, reinforced our militant alliance with the two fraternal Lao and Kampuchean countries joined the CEMA and expanded our cooperation with other socialist countries. The position of our country in the international arena has been enhanced.

Our people's achievements in the past 5 years are really great. Looking back at the difficulties and ordeals we have gone through will make us treasure all the more dearly all that we have achieved. In assessing our achievements in the past 5 years, some people have stressed only the political, military and diplomatic achievements, and have belittled our successes in socialist construction. Some people have gone so far as to deny our economic achievements. This is a one-sided and mechanical assessment which separates fields of activities from one another and negates the dialectical relations among the various fields of activities in society. In fact, the military victories have intrinsically implied some economic achievements. If we had achieved no economic successes, how could our troops have enough food to eat and defeat the Chinese aggressors? Our successful national unification also has per se included our achievements on the economic, cultural and ideological fronts. Some people allege that we have suffered economic setbacks because we have not fulfilled the economic development norms prescribed by the fourth party congress. These people do not understand that our second 5-year plan was established during the peacetime. In case of war, any other country would have to put aside its peacetime economic development plan to concentrate its forces on winning victory in war. In fact, when the Chinese reactionaries' plot of aggression against our country was exposed, our party and state then advocated the policy of shifting the economic tasks to national defense in order to cope with the Chinese aggression. Since then, our country has practically adopted the annual economic development plan. Such an economic shift was a clear-sighted policy aimed at guaranteeing victory for our people and troops in their two wars of national defense.

The achievements in the economic and cultural as well as other fields are the results of our people's greatest efforts. They have shed blood and sweat in exchange for these achievements. We may not evaluate them casually but must treasure all that our people have achieved in socialist construction.

Our country is advancing from small-scale production to socialism. Already heavily damaged by war, it had to cope with a new aggressive war. In such a situation, it was not easy to score economic and cultural achievements. We must have specific knowledge of history to evaluate properly the comprehensive achievements of our people in the past 5 years.

These achievements were cited at the fifth party congress. The congress attributed these achievements to the consistent leadership of our party, the fine qualities of our people and their armed forces, the comprehensive cooperation with and the active assistance of the Soviet Union, the special solidarity with Laos and Kampuchea, the wholehearted support of other socialist countries and the sympathy and support of the forces of revolution and peace in the world.

While asserting our achievements strongly, the fifth party congress also pointed out the difficulties that we are now encountering in the economy of life. There are still serious imbalances in our national economy. Production has developed slowly while the population is increasing quickly. National revenue does not match social demands for consumption. The gap between financial receipts and expenditures, between the flow of goods and money, and between exports and imports are still large. Large numbers of workers remain unemployed. The market and prices have not been stabilized. The laboring people still encounter many difficulties in their life.

These difficulties stem primarily from the fact that small-scale production still prevails in our economy, an economy that has been heavily destroyed by a long and fierce war. And now we have to face a multifaceted war of sabotage by Chinese expansionism and hegemony.

Apart from the root objective causes of our present difficulties, there are some subjective causes. They are our mistakes and shortcomings in leadership and economic and social management.

In the spirit of scrupulous self-criticism, the party congress clearly indicated our mistakes in grasping the real situation, implementing party lines and organizing and guiding the implementation of planning and management operations. The congress severely criticized the shortcomings and mistakes caused by subjectivism, inpatience, haste, conservatism and sluggishness, and weaknesses in other fields of operation. Pledges were made during the congress to conduct thorough criticism and self-criticism after the congress within party and state agencies in order to set forth effective measures to correct these shortcomings and mistakes.

When analyzing the present difficulties, some comrades hold subjectivism as the main cause. As a matter of fact, from a certain standpoint, our shortcomings and mistakes were the main causes of our economic and social difficulties in the past years.

Nevertheless, we must understand clearly that our difficulties stem originally from a backward and poor economy dominated by small-scale production which colonialism (old and new) bequeathed to us. At present, in order to fulfill the requirements of our production and life, we need a large amount of fuel, raw and other materials and commodities of various kinds not available in our country. (Footnote: Before liberation, the south had to import annually 2 million tons of mineral oil, 1 million tons of chemical fertilizer, 1 million tons of cement, nearly 1 million tons of rice, corn and wheat flour; 362,000 tons of sugar, 45,000 tons of milk, 25,000 tons of cooking oil, 28,800 tons of textile materials, 21,700 tons of yarns, 70,000 tons of paper pulp and 50,000 tons of plastic raw materials. During the 10-year period from 1965 to April 1975, the south had to import $7.459 billion worth of commodities (excluding military imports) while exporting only $393.1 million worth of commodities.) Even if had had no shortcomings and had made no mistakes, we would not be able to overcome all the difficulties in our economy and life within a short period of time. If we commit no more mistakes and shortcomings and if we know how to work better, we will be able to alleviate our difficulties in some given fields and to a certain extent.

While pointing out the root causes of our difficulties, the congress not only emphasized the serious damage resulting from our shortcomings and errors but also wanted to make the cadres and party members clearly understand the harsh and enduring nature of these difficulties. This is aimed at enabling them to enhance their fighting will and to try their best to overcome all difficulties while preventing some people from possibly thinking that difficulties can be overcome easily in just a short period of time but when things do not turn out the way they want, they will become pessimistic and confused or even suspicious of the correctness of the party's lines.

On the basis of reviewing the actual situation of the Vietnamese revolution in recent years, the fifth party congress affirmed that the socialist revolutionary line laid down by the fourth party congress is correct. That line reflects the revolutionary law advancing our country from small-scale production to socialism without having to go through the period of capitalist development. Meanwhile, the congress also pointed out our shortcomings and errors in implementing the party's lines.

Our party's socialist revolutionary line -- originated from the political program formulated by the founders of scientific socialism, from the review of the achievements recorded in the 20-year struggle to build socialism in the north, and from the consultation of experience with various fraternal socialist countries -- has been proven to be correct by realities and has further developed its effectiveness in our country's revolutionary undertaking. Successfully determining a correct revolutionary line which can effect the entire revolutionary undertaking is the most important task. After completing the people's national democratic revolution in the entire country, our party promptly determined a correct line for our revolution in the new stage. That is the basic success of the party. Thanks to that correct revolutionary line, we have been able to avoid deviations at a time when our revolution was being shifted to a new stage.

That socialist revolutionary line has been defined by our party for implementation throughout the country during the period of transition to socialism -- which means for several decades. It is hasty to think that all objectives of that revolutionary line can be achieved in just a short period of time and without errors. Moreover, the party's general line can only provide the basic features as guidelines for the struggle of our entire party and people for a relatively long period of time. If we want to transform that general line into reality, it is necessary for us to concretize it into certain objectives and tasks for each specific stage. At the same time, we must adopt suitable organizational systems and policies to ensure the implementation of that general line. This, however, is a very difficult matter which can only be solved satisfactorily with good knowledge and the ability to grasp the objective law and the actual situation in the country during the period of transition to socialism.

Lenin said: "No new class can emerge in the historical arena in its capacity as leader of a society without having to go through a desperately 'unstable' and stormy period of upheaval and struggle, as well as a period of uncertainty, experimentation and hesitation in choosing the new methods to meet the new objective situation." (Footnote: V.I. Lenin, "Collection of Selected Works," Su That Publishing House, Hanoi, 1959, Vol 2, Part I, p 422) Therefore, the existence of "instability" and "uncertainty" in our country at a time when the revolution was being shifted to a new state is easily understood and not surprising.

The socialist revolution and socialist construction is a new undertaking. In such a new undertaking we can hardly say that we have not committed any mistakes and everything has run smoothly. Lenin once said: "In such a new, difficult and great undertaking, shortcomings and mistakes are inevitable. He who is afraid of difficulties in socialist construction and who is frightened by these difficulties into desperation and despondency, is not a socialist man." (Footnote: Ibid., Part 2, p 313) Mistakes are unavoidable in such a new undertaking. The problem comes in having the courage to admit mistakes and correct them in order to advance. Lenin said: "We are not afraid of admitting mistakes. We will look at mistakes in a clearsighted manner in order to seek ways to correct them." (Footnote: Ibid., Part 2, p 555) Lenin also said: "The attitude of a political party toward its mistakes is one of the most important and surest criteria for assessing whether this party is scrupulously and really fulfilling its obligations to its own class and the laboring masses." (Footnote: Ibid., Part 2, p 352) As a Leninist party, our party has publicly admitted its mistakes, analyzed the causes of these mistakes and carefully studied the measures to correct them in order to advance continually.

Our primary mistakes in the implementation of lines have shown that the level of our economic and social management is still low. To correct mistakes, we must strenuously study to increase the level of our knowledge and ability on a par with the new tasks. With a view to implementing the tasks set forth by the fifth party congress, we must conduct criticism and self-criticism scrupulously, carefully review our performances in the past years to derive useful lessons, increase the level of our comprehensive knowledge and outline the correct guidelines, policies and measures to advance the revolution.

The past 5 years have been of special significance. In only a few years of entering the new revolutionary stage, our party has accumulated useful experiences. We have realized more clearly the specific problems of the socialist revolution and national defense. Our party cadres and members have matured a step further. All of us must reflect on and analyze profoundly what we have done in the past 5 years -- both successes and setbacks -- in order to derive necessary lessons for improving our tasks. This way we will certainly fulfill our duties better in the future.

We are in a rather complicated situation rife with difficulties but also full of advantages. Our biggest difficulty is coping with the Chinese reactionaries -- condoned and supported by the U.S. imperialists -- who are waging a subversive war against our country in the military, political, economic and cultural fields by using various forces cruel tricks. Although our country is at peace, we are facing a multifaceted war of sabotage by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists. At the same time, we must always be ready to cope with a large-scale war of aggression likely to be waged by the enemy. The recent party congress clearly pointed out the two strategic tasks of our people: One is to build socialism successfully, the other is to maintain combat preparedness to firmly defend the Socialist Vietnamese fatherland. These two tasks are closely related. Our people must simultaneously fulfill these two tasks well. The party congre-s also adopted the slogan: "All for the socialist fatherland and the people's happiness." This slogan manifests concisely the lofty task to be assumed by every Vietnamese in the new stage. By implementing this slogan through practical acts, we will make the most contributions to national construction and defense.

Since it was founded, our party has devoted most of its time and effort to achieving national liberation. The party's present historic mission is to lead the people in the building of a prosperous country and in the defense of the country. If national liberation was once the motive for all the Vietnamese people to fight and sacrifice, drive the imperialists out and regain the independence of the country, national construction and defense should now be the lofty ideal burning in the hearts of all Vietnamese people, urging them to devote all their mind and ability to building socialism successfully and firmly defending the Socialist Vietnam fatherland. National construction and defense is the sublime and sacred duty of the Vietnamese people of all generations.

Despite difficulties, we have secured basic advantages in national construction and defense. We have enjoyed the leadership of a party founded and trained by President Ho, a party with a revolutionary line which is correct and boundlessly loyal to the liberation of nations, the working class and mankind. We have a body of party cadres and members tempered through a long revolutionary struggle full of ordeals. These cadres and party members are properly militant and have gained some initial experiences in conducting the socialist revolution and construction. They are determined to implement the party's revolutionary line. Our socialist system is superior. Our people are traditional stalwart, indomitable, highly patriotic and diligent in productive labor. Our armed forces are always vigilant and ready to fight and defeat all aggressors. Our country has abounded in manpower and natural resources, and its material and technical bases are increasing every day. We have secured comprehensive cooperation with and great assistance from the Soviet Union, Laos, Kampuchea and other fraternal socialist countries. The world progressives are sympathizing with and supporting our cause. With these advantages, our people will certainly overcome all difficulties to successfully build socialism and firmly defend their country.

In his speech to conclude the fifth party congress, General Secretary Le Duan clearly indicated: "Although our continuing struggle is fierce and complicated, the historic resolutions of the party congress are breathing new vitality into all our party, people and troops. We are determined to fulfill great President Ho Chi Minh's sacred testament. No obstacles can check our advance."

By realizing properly the revolutionary situation in our country and by grasping firmly the spirit of the fifth party congress resolutions, all our party, people and troops will strengthen solidarity and strenuously struggle to build socialism successfully and defend firmly our socialist fatherland.

AUSTRALIA

[Text] Australia has lifted its ban on imports from Argentina. The foreign minister, Mr Street, says the economic restrictions are being lifted now that Britain has regained control of the Falklands. But he says if the hostilities resume, the government will reimpose the ban. A spokesman for Mr Street's office says the import restrictions imposed on 8 April did not apply to existing contracts between Australian and Argentine companies or goods in transit. The spokesman says the effect of a trade ban was minimal.

PAPUA NEW GUINEA

NATIONAL ELECTION RESULTS FAVOR SOMARE'S PARTY

BK300631 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0500 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] With the counting of votes almost completed following Papua New Guinea's general election, more than half of the sitting members of Parliament appear to have been defeated. Radio Australia's Port Moresby correspondent Sean Dorney says the opposition Pangu Pati, led by former Prime Minister Mr Michael Somare, has increased its tally by at least 15 seats and is in the strongest position to form the next government.

Of the 103 members of Parliament who contested the election, only 50 have retained their seats and half of the cabinet ministers have been rejected by the voters. Three of the five party leaders from the coalition which took power in 1980 have lost their seats.

The latest counting gives Pagu 48 seats against 12 for the People's Progressive Party of the prime minister, Sir Julius Chan. The National Party and independents of Mr Ted Diro together have 21 seats, the United Party 9, the Melanesian Alliance 8, Papua Besena 3 and other independents 7. The Papua New Guinea Parliament will meet early in August to elect a prime minister.

INDONESIA WARNED OVER BORDER INCIDENTS

[Excerpts] Port Moresby, June 30 (AFP) -- Papua New Guinea's foreign minister, Noel Levi, has warned Indonesia that its armed incursions over the border must cease if relations between the countries are to improve. His warning follows reports of the latest alleged raids by Indonesian soldiers into PNG.

According to the reports, on Saturday June 26, the day counting started of votes cast in PNG's national election, six Indonesians armed with automatic weapons raided two hamlets near Imonda patrol post in west Sepik Province. They took back over the border into the Indonesian province of Irian Java 18 Irian Jayans who had been living in PNG since 1977. The 18 were part of a larger group of refugees who moved into traditional lands on the PNG side of the border.

Mr Levi said, "I am particularly concerned at the latest incursion because it appears people were subjected to physical threat on PNG soil. The fact that soldiers entered PNG at a time when we were exercising our constitutional and democratic obligations is cause for severe concern."

The man most likely to be PNG's new prime minister, Michael Somare, said before the latest raid that he would continue the consistent steady relationship he had built with Indonesia, if returned to office in August.

MOKHTAR COMMENTS ON RELATIONS WITH NEW GUINEA

BK260956 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0813 GMT 26 Jun 82

[Text] Jakarta, June 26 (ANTARA) -- Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja has said that Indonesia's relations with its neighbour Papua New Guinea have remained undisturbed despite the fact that Indonesian troops had been accused of regressing into the area of that country. He said this had been made possible by Indonesia's restraint in the wake of the accusation. Most recent happenings had also shown that what had really taken place was not as bad as initially described. Mokhtar made the statement in an interview with Radio Australia which was broadcast Friday morning.

The foreign minister explained what really happened was that certain unidentified persons had crossed across the Indonesia-PNG border and entered into Indonesian territory. They then kidnaped a number of workers from a sawmill. One of the people kidnaped was a Malaysian citizen.

After this event, the Foreign Ministry in Port Moresby protested saying that Indonesian troops had conducted a search for the "unknown persons" in our (PNG's) border area. The declaration was not definite on whether Indonesian troops had entered PNG territory or not.

Mokhtar said it is understandable because the Indonesian-PNG border is not as clearly marked as European borders go. All is steep wilderness in the border area. The search for the unknown kidnapers was certainly legal, he declared. We would have failed in our duty had we not done something. A sawmill in our border area had been attacked and a number of persons, including a foreign citizen, had been kidnaped away, he said.

Mokhtar pointed out Indonesia during the last several years had worked as best it could to have matters related to the border area arranged for properly under various agreements and administrative arrangements.

Now we have reached the stage where we could establish joint border committees that would subsequently carry out periodic discussions on any matter that might arise. He indicated time is needed to set up the committees.

Responding to questions, Mokhtar explained the Indonesian Government's decision of not allowing certain journalists from Australia to enter Indonesia was not at all directed toward the country where they come from or toward journalists in general.

Permits to enter Indonesia are being given to other journalists. He said: The trouble with these (certain) journalists was that they sometimes write only as they pleased. And I also want to ask why is it that only a certain group in the Australian press in inclined to publish negative items about Indonesia? I mean, he said, there are so many good things about Indonesia which you could report, so why do they choose to write only about things that are apparently aimed at worsening relations between the two countries? He concluded: "I could say the Indonesian people would appreciate it more if the news reported about Indonesia are better balanced and more varied."

TIMES ON 'FBSI LEADERS' AT HAVANA WFTU

BK290216 Jakarta THE INDONESIA TIMES in English 18 Jun 82 p 2

[Editorial: "The Two Mysterious Men in Havana"]

[Text] The chairman of the Indonesian Labour Federation (FBSI), Mr Agus Sudono, following his meeting with President Suharto last weekend said that he had reported to the head of state about the recent Conference of the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU) in Havana.

The conference itself has no relevancy with Indonesia but what attracts our attention is the presence of two men there claiming themselves FBSI leaders. One of them claimed that he was the FBSI general chairman and the other member of FBSI Executive Board. Their names, Mira Surya and S.P. Suhardi, are not known here and Mr Sudono disclosed that his organisation did not know anything about the persons. This is a clear proof of the existing latent danger of the outlawed Indonesian Communist Party (PKI), he said.

Although Mr Sudono did not explain the president's reaction on hearing this news, everyone can be sure that any Indonesian communist activity abroad is taken here as trying to discredit Suharto's government and to give an image abroad that the PKI is still very much alive and active here. The two are possibly Indonesian communist activists who, during the abortive communist coup in 1965 here had been abroad and do not dare to return home later. Since the WFTU conference was sponsored by the communist countries the two must have come from one of them. And the only known refuge of Indonesian communist escapees are Moscow and Beijing. And in this case the two have possibly come from Moscow.

Although the whole truth of this matter is still to be investigated we are quite sure that Moscow had played a decisive role in making this scenario, due to its dominant position among the communist bloc. So in this case Russia, who has been protested several times for interfering into our domestic affairs, now cannot help herself from playing a less dangerous game because everything took place within her domain.

One might say that the Kremlin leaders are stubborn but from the ideological point of view nobody can expect the oldest communist country to let things out of hand when a chance to boost the name of any communist party in the world comes. The communist leaders like to dream that their ideology is still popular around the world and every time a world conference is held under their sponsorship representatives from every corner of this planet Earth must join the show. And we are sure this is not the last time the so-called Indonesian representtatives show their rotten teeth abroad.

The sponsors are still there, undisturbed.

We, in Indonesia, should pay more attention to this development and if possible to prevent any action by the communist countries in defaming our country.

MALAYSIA

HAIG'S DEPARTURE TO BE 'MOURNED BY FEW'

BK291412 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 29 Jun 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] As the dust from the resignation of Gen Alexander Haig from the State Department begins to settle, it is becoming evident that his departure will be mourned by few. There were many who were unhappy at his accelerated promotion in the Nixon White House and the use of political leverage to gain promotion in the fully professional U.S. Army was roundly condemned by top military officers. But Haig, who had emerged relatively unscathed in the Watergate scandal, felt that he was one of the best commanders NATO ever had. He developed very close ties with most European leaders and more than anyone in recent cabinets he understood the European situation and aspirations. He also came to grasp the real nature of the Soviet threat to Europe and was instrumental in strengthening European defense against the Russian menace. Haig understood the true strength of the European peace movement, and more importantly, he knew the real value of trade between Western Europe and the Comecon countries. More than one-fifth of Germany's trade, for example, is being conducted with Eastern European countries. It can thus be seen why Western European nations placed greater value on this trade in the world widely affected by recession. Thus, President Reagan's decision to place greater restrictions on the trans-Siberia pipeline comes as a real blow to Europeans, and Haig, who too appreciated the situation and had no sympathy with the Republican right, had no other choice but to resign.

Haig can also be faulted with failure to get along with his cabinet colleagues, notably the defense secretary, Casper Weinberger, and lately Reagan's UN representative Jeane Kirkpatrick. It would also be interesting to know what was the state of his relationship with President Reagan and at what point did the relationship between the two men reach the turning point.

The U.S. policy with regard to west Asia also lies in tatters and Haig should be faulted with this. He is reported to have indirectly encouraged the Israeli invasion and military occupation of Lebanon. He had failed to appreciate the reality of the West Asian situation after the 1973-74 oil embargo. He has to (?stick) with simplistic views that force could settle all matters just like Eisenhower did when he dispatched the U.S. Marines to Lebanon. But he had failed to realize the clout wielded by the oil-producing nations, and Prince Fahd's threat to stop exporting oil to the United States together with the withdrawal of all Saudi assets and deposits plus the threat of Kuwait and other Gulf nations to follow suit quickly brought Washington to its senses. An immediate cease-fire followed and this calls into question the American view that it has no control over Israel. It is to be hoped that the new secretary of state designate, George Shultz, who has wide experience in West Asia and his so-called pro-Arab views, would bring a better and more thorough appreciation of West Asia to Washington, where Haig was a failure in more ways than one, Shultz will have to succeed if the United States is to recover some of its former prestige and credibility.

RESOURCES MINISTER ON TIN PRODUCERS GROUP

BK271409 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 27 Jun 82

[Text] The minister of primary industries, Datuk Pal Leong, says the Association of Tin-Producing Countries, when established, will be geared toward meeting the long-term needs of the tin industry. He said this in a statement before leaving for Bangkok to attend the ministerial meeting to finalize the articles of the association.

He said the association can promote further research and development on the uses of the metal. Malaysia is concerned that there was still a huge surplus of tin on the market and prices may remain weak because of the persistent world recession.

Another problem is the continuing releases of tin by the U.S. General Service Administration [GSA]. Datuk Leong points out that the problem will remain so in the foreseeable future despite the Sixth International Tin Agreement being signed by tin-producer and consumer countries. Since the beginning of this year, the GSA has sold 3,450 tons and such sales had taken place even during times when the bufferstock manager had bought tin from the market. He says during this month when the tin markets had fallen to its lowest, the GSA had sold 365 tons.

Taking these factors into account and the fact that the bufferstock manager had utilized those of its resources, it will be prudent for the stock not to exhaust its remaining available resources immediately.

Datuk Leong feels that the bufferstock manager should conserve its resources to ensure smooth liquidation of tin in the market. We should also take into account that the transition to the Sixth ITA will result in a smaller buffer stock.

SINGAPORE

TIMES CITED ON HAIG RESIGNATION, POLICY DRIFT

BK280852 Hong Kong AFP in English 0823 GMT 28 Jun 82

[Text] Singapore, June 28 (AFP) -- The STRAITS TIMES today described the exit of Alexander Haig as the U.S. secretary of state as the "sad product of squabbling" within the Reagan administration over foreign policy and a "sadder reflection of the lack of leadership at the top". "The different and confusing signals that keep emanating from Washington raise doubts abroad about whether there is someone in charge of foreign policy", the daily wrote in an editorial.

The paper said the increasing impression of "directionless policy" would hardly inspire confidence among America's allies and friends particularly at a time when it was faced with "problems stretching from Lebanon to Latin America". "Hopefully, with less tension and public feuding, Washington can begin to speak with one voice and be consistent and coherent in its foreign policy", it added, referring to the appointment of former Treasure Secretary George Shultz, as the new secretary of state. There has been no official comment on the change-over and none is likely.

Marcos-Losonczi Talks

HK230059 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 22 Jun 82

[Text] The Philippines and Hungary will soon broaden their bilateral cooperation in the economic, academic, cultural, scientific and technical fields. This was agreed upon in yesterday's talks in Malacanang between President Marcos and visiting Hungarian President Pal Losonczi. The two leaders also discussed international issues and agreed on the need for a new international order, the dismantling of trade protectionism, and world disarmament. The two men were joined in their talks by their key advisers. (Bert Asuke) has more on that story:

[Begin recording] President Losonczi was assisted in the Malacanang meeting by Deputy Foreign Minister Dr Vencel Hazi and senior Foreign Ministry official Viktor Polgar, who also acted as the interpreter. And among those who joined President Marcos in the panel talks were Prime Minister Cesar Virata, Foreign Minister Carlos Romulo, Minister [words indistinct], Trade and Industry Minister Roberto Ongpin, Ambassador Mario Belisario, and Information Minister Gregorio Cendana. The president said he was confident that President Losonciz's visit will mark the beginning of a resurgence of contacts between the two countries in various fields. President Marcos said that the Philippines and Hungary already had existing agreements on trade, culture and technical exchanges which, he said, would be further enhanced by the state visit.

For his part the Hungarian leader thanked the president for the warm cordial reception accorded him and members of his party on their arrival in Manila Monday for a 5-day state visit. He expressed elation at the fact that they were very close to each other on the issues they had discussed. President Losonczi noted the impact of the president on the Cancun world summit, where Mr Marcos was among [words indistinct] to discuss urgent issues affecting the relations between the rich and poor nations. He also sought the views of the president on the current situation in Southeast Asia, which he described as a strategic and important region in the world, as well as latest developments among the members of ASEAN, of which the Philippines is a part.

President Losonczi formally invited the president and the first lady to visit Hungary in the not too distant future. The President accepted the invitation. [end recording].

Meanwhile, the Hungarian visitors were honored last night at a state dinner given by President and Mrs Marcos in Malaganang. In his remarks, the president cited the history of the common struggle for self-determination by the Philippines and Hungary. He said this could serve as a lasting basis for mutual cooperation. The president said the Philippines can learn from Hungary's agroindustrial experience. Likewise the chief executive noted the encouraging increase in the total trade between the two countries since the opening of formal relations between them in 1974.

Marcos on Economic Cooperation

HK240119 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 23 Jun 82

[Text] President Marcos expects more energetic economic activities between the Philippines and Hungary as a result of the visit of Hungarian President Pal Losonczi. The president expressed appreciation for President Losonczi's journey to a distant land like the Philippines. He also accepted the invitation to visit Hungary.

The president said economic activity between the Philippines and Hungary will move forward with greater energy following the visit of the Hungarian president. Calling the Hungarian president a good friend, President Marcos said that his Philippine visit is indeed a gain of great magnitude for the Filipino people. The president announced that he had accepted the invitation for him and the first lady to visit Hungary at some convenient time in the future.

Departure, Press Conference

OW251411 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 25 Jun 82

[Text] Hungarian President Pal Losonczi left for home this morning after a successful 5-day state visit to the Philippines. The president and the first lady led a number of officials and dignitaries in bidding goodbye to the Hungarian head of state. And Jose Carlos has the details.

As befitting a state visitor, Hungarian President Pal Losonczi was given military honors, including a 21-gun salute prior to his departure for Budapest this morning. Losonczi ended his 5-day state visit here, which President Marcos described as very successful. The chief executive, who saw off Losonczi and his party at old MIA (Manila International Airport], said: The visit laid the framework for wider trade and cultural relations between the two countries. In their conversation on the way to the airport, the president said Losonczi's last statement as to his impressin of the Philippines was that the country is a single democratic state with order in the organization, institution and operation of democratic institutions, without any dictatorship.

The president also pointed out that the Philippine Government is interested in studying the Hungarian experience in agrarian reform, particularly farm cooperatives, and for this purpose, he is sending a delegation to Budapest sometime this August to study Hungary's agricultural program.

[Begin Marcos recording] We have not yet moved very intensively into cooperatives because of the fact that our people are not used to cooperatives. Actually the cooperatives that Hungary has is a consolidation of land. It is not the cooperatives that we refer to as individual ownership and then cooperative on the use of -- the common and beneficial use of -- heavy equipment as well as other infrastructure. [sentence as heard]

I have agreed with the President of Hungary as well as the agrarian reform minister of Hungary that sometime in August we are going to send a delegation to Hungary to look into the agrarian reform achievements of Hungary. [end recording]

In that interview after Losonczi's departure, the chief executive also said that President Losonczi was interested in the Philippine experience in energy development and other programs involving small people like the KKK [Kilusang Kabuhayan at Kaunlaran].

GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN ON HITACHI COURT CASE

OW010545 Tokyo KYODO in English 0528 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 1, KYODO — Japanese Government Spokesman Kiichi Miyazawa said Thursday it is up to Hitachi Ltd. and individuals involved to decide whether or not to appear before a U.S. court.

The chief Cabinet secretary commented on a U.S. federal grand jury's decision Wednesday to indict the Japanese electric machinery maker and 17 individuals, including 14 Hitachi employees, for alleged conspiracy to obtain IBM computer secrets. He said the government cannot be indifferent to the jury's decision which involves Japanese nationals. However, the matter is not a government-level one, Miyazawa said. Japan has so far received no official request from the United States to cooperate in investigation or to turn over 12 Japanese businessmen in Japan for whom arrest warrants have been issued, he said.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki told the Diet (Parliament) Thursday that Japan will consider the matter from an overall point of view if and when the United States asked for Japanese help in investigation.

Hitachi Reacts 'Sharply'

OW010541 Tokyo KYODO in English 0522 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 1, KYODO — Hitachi Ltd. reacted sharply Thursday to a U.S. federal grand jury indictment charging the company itself as well as its employees with conspiracy to transport stolen secrets on IBM computers.

"Hitachi strongly believes that it and its indicted employees have not engaged in any illegal activities and that this will become clear in due process," The major electronics firm of Tokyo said in a statement. "Hitachi at this moment is in the process of obtaining the strongest legal representation to meet the charges in the United States," it added. Both Hitachi and Mitsubishi Electric Corp., the other Japanese firm involved in the case and awaiting a grand jury decision, denied company responsibility for the purchases of IBM property claiming they were made by their employees authorized to do so on their own judgment.

The Japanese Government refused comment on the indictment. A senior official of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) said: "This is a judicial matter and any comment could affect proceedings of the litigation."

Hitachi officials said behind the indictment of the company was the payment of nearly 550,000 dollars for IBM information which they said was apparently judged as a sum large enough to show company involvement. But they claimed the senior official who decided to make the payment was authorized to spend up to 1 million dollars without company approval. The official, Kisaburo Nakazawa, heads one of Hitach's 28 domestic factories, all of which practice self-supporting accounting systems that permit independent spending on research and development, a Hitache spokesman said. "There seems to be ignorance or misunderstanding on the U.S. side in connection with the company indictment," he added.

ROK REVISES REQUEST FOR COMMODITY LOANS FROM JAPAN

OW010233 Tokyo KYODO in English 0218 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 1, KYODO — South Korea is seeking commodity loans totaling more than 1 billion dollars in its revised request for multi-billion dollar economic aid from Japan, it was disclosed here Thursday.

Observers said South Korea is well aware of the Japanese policy of refraining from providing commodity loans as much as possible to other countries.

The South Korean demand thus indicates the "high-handed posture" of Seoul in the bilateral economic cooperation relationship which will be discussed after South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Pom-sok arrives in Tokyo this week, the observers said.

Against the original South Korean request for dollar 6 billion in economic aid from Japan, Japan in April offered dollar 4 billion, consisting of dollar 1.5 billion in yen credits and dollar 2.5 billion in loans from the Export-Import Bank of Japan. According to informed sources, South Korea recently made the new proposal in response to Japan's "final" offer, agreeing to settle the total amount of aid at dollar 4 billion.

On the means for extension of the aid, however, South Korea demanded a drastic increase in yen credits and commodity loans totaling more than dollar 1 billion, the sources said. They said the Foreign Ministry regards the revised South Korean aid request as tantamount to a request for dollar 4 billion in aid, all in yen credits. In view of the current fiscal situation in Japan, it would be "out of the question" to meet such a request, the sources said.

They said the Foreign Ministry will notify the Finance Ministry, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry and the Economic Planning Agency on the new request. But there are no plans for holding discussions on the request among the four government offices, they said.

They added, however, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi does not intend to directly convey Japan's rejection of the request to his South Korean counterpart Yi when the two meet in Tokyo next Monday. Instead, Japan will give a formal answer to South Korea after studying the outcome of the conference of South Korean creditor nations to be held in Paris next Tuesday and Wednesday, they said.

SAKURAUCHI 'STRONGLY' URGES ISRAELI LEBANON WITHDRAWAL

OW010029 Tokyo KYODO in English 0009 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 1, KYODO -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi issued a statement Wednesday night strongly requesting Israel to withdraw from Lebanon as early as possible. The foreign minister issued the statement calling on Israel to exercise self-restraint because of the possibility of a clash between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) as a big gap still exists between Israel and the PLO on conditions for a ceasefire.

The government issued a strong warning to Israel on June 8 against the country's invasion of Lebanon and revealed it may have to reconsider its policy toward Israel. It again asked Israel to exercise self-restraint on June 25 saying that Israel's advance into West Beirut will have a serious international impact.

In his statement, the foreign minister said that if fighting spreads to West Beirut, innocent citizens will become the victims and peace in the Middle East will be dealt a blow. He also said the U.N. Security Council resolutions calling for early withdrawal from Lebanon by Israeli forces should be carried out. The foreign minister also indicated a posture of supporting the Palestinian right for racial self-determination.

He also said Japan basically supports the statement issued by the European Community last Tuesday calling for immediate withdrawal of Israeli forces from around Beirut and a simultaneous pullout of Palestinian guerrillas in the west of the Lebanese capital.

SAKURAUCHI TO STUDY SDF ROLE IN UN PEACE MISSIONS

OW301107 Tokyo KYODO in English 1052 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 30, KYODO -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi made a major departure from a current government policy Wednesday and said he will study if Self-Defense Forces (SDF) can be sent overseas for U.N. peace-keeping missions. Under the present SDF law, Japan cannot dispatch SDF personnel out of the country for active service.

Speaking at a House of Councillors (Upper House) committee meeting, Sakurauchi said the government must take action to revise the law if necessary. But he added that Japan still cannot send SDF men for an overseas U.N. mission if it involves military combat.

The remarks were made in response to a committee member who called for sending SDF overseas for U.N. peace-keeping missions, including supervision of a truce. In the past, government officials said they had no intention of revising the law to allow the sending of SDF men abroad.

The statement by the foreign minister is certain to arouse sharp reactions by opposition parties in the current Diet session. The SDF are regarded as unconstitutional by the Japan Socialist Party and the Japan Communist Party.

Sakurauchi also told the meeting that Japan is ready to send officials to Namibia to help the world body in monitoring proposed national elections in the south African country to be held under U.N. sponsorship. "We are allowed to do this much under the present law," he said.

The remarks followed a speech by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki earlier in June at the U.N. special session on disarmament in New York. In the speech, Suzuki said U.N. peace-keeping machinery should be strengthened.

Suzuki Denies Policy Change

[Text] Tokyo, July 1, KYODO -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki indicated Thursday the government has no intention to amend the Self-Defense Force (SDF) law enabling SDF to provide its personnel for U.N. peace-keeping missions.

Suzuki gave his view in the Upper House Budget Committee in response to Seiko Okawa of Komeito. Okawa asked Suzuki for his comment on a remark made by Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Wednesday suggesting he favored SDF law amendment.

Sakurauchi told the same committee Thursday that revision of the SDF law should be considered if SDF participation can be limited to a purely peace-keeping and noncombat role in a U.N. supervisory mission.

FINANCE MINISTRY TO LIMIT DEFENSE SPENDING GROWTH

OW010119 Tokyo KYODO in English 0110 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] Tokyo, July 1, KYODO -- The Finance Ministry will limit the growth rate of defense spending in fiscal 1983 to not more than the previous year's 7.5 percent, a senior ministry official indicated Wednesday night.

The official, who declined to be identified, said less increases will have to be allowed for defense spending, overseas economic aid, energy and other "special" programs in fiscal 1983, beginning next April 1.

The ministry is to exclude these programs from its budget-making policy calling for 5 percent cuts in appropriations to help hold down a swelling budget deficit. But the 7.5 percent limit will be no easy ceiling to keep because the defense agency wants to raise spending nearly 10 percent, most of it to cope with a pay raise and other unavoidable cost increases, government sources said.

AEC OUTLINES 10-YEAR NUCLEAR DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

OW301217 Tokyo KYODO in English 1208 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 30, KYODO -- Japan's Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) Wednesday decided on a 10-year nuclear power development program aimed at developing fast breeder reactors for practical use around 2010.

The AEC, headed by Ichiro Nakagawa, cabinet minister and chief of the Science and Technology Agency, compiled the sixth long-term project after reviewing the present plan worked out in 1978. Officials said the new program was mapped out in view of inflated expectations for stabilized supply of nuclear power.

The new long-term plan, budgeted at yen 5,400 billion (at 1982 prices), estimates nuclear power in fiscal 1990 at 46 million kilowatt-hours (KWH), rising to 90 million KWH in fiscal 2000.

It recommends that the next-generation fast breeder reactor be brought into commercial operation by around 2010, and that 3,000 SWU (separative work unit) tons of enriched uranium be produced domestically annually by around the year 2000.

The AEC also proposed full utilization of plutonium through the advanced thermal converter reactor and the light-water reactor by 1990.

It looked forward to private industry's positive collaboration in building and running these plants, and suggested that the time has come for Japan to consider exporting nuclear power technology and related equipment.

With these prospects in mind, the AEC emphasized the need for the nation to promote a nuclear nonproliferation policy.

EDITORIAL WELCOMES LOME REUNIFICATION MEETING

SK010115 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2239 GMT 30 Jun 82

[NODONG SINMUN 30 June editorial: "Powerful International Support for the Cause of the Korean People for the Fatherland's Reunification"]

[Text] Amid the great concern of the Korean people and the world's people, a meeting of the governments of the African region will be held in Lome, capital of the Republic of Togo, on 1 and 2 July to support Korea's independent and peaceful reunification.

High-level government delegations from many countries on the African Continent, respecting world peace and security and showing great interest in the question of Korea's reunification, will participate in this meeting, the convocation of which the governments of many African countries had proposed.

The meeting will discuss ways to accelerate Korea's independent and peaceful reunification, alleviate tension on the Korean Peninsula and achieve durable peace. It will extend support for the righteous cause of the Korean people for the fatherland's reunification from the governments of African countries. Coinciding with the 10th anniversary of the issuance of the historic 4 July joint statement, the meeting will be held when the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has won broad support at home and abroad and the desire and expectation of the Korean people and the world's peace-loving people for peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea has increased with each passing day.

The government-level meeting to be held in the African region to support Korea's independent and peaceful reunification powerfully demonstrates the international support for and solidarity with the righteous cause of the Korean people and is of great significance in strengthening and developing the international solidarity movement to support Korea's reunification. Also, the meeting will greatly encourage the Korean people and the world's progressive people who are striving to prevent the increasing danger of war and perpetual division caused by the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers for aggression in Korea and to achieve the country's independent and peaceful reunification. The meeting will encourage the South Korean people struggling to force the U.S. imperialists aggressive troops to withdraw and achieve the country's independent reunification. This will deal severe blows at the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets frantically running amok to fabricate two Koreas and make preparations for a new war.

Through the meeting, the friendship and unity between the Korean people and the African people will be consolidated and develop further. Mutual cooperation and ties among the governments and peoples of African countries will be strengthened further in accomplishing the common cause of opposing imperialism, colonialism and racism and for achieving the complete liberation of the African Continent.

Our people extend congratulatory greetings to the meeting of the governments of the African region to be held in Lome to support Korea's independent and peaceful reunification and express deep thanks to the governments and people of African countries for sending their representatives to the meeting.

The fatherland's reunification is the supreme task of our people and the urgent demand of the contemporary era. Occupying South Korea for 37 years, the U.S. imperialists have forced our people to suffer the pain caused by the division of the national territory and the people. A tragic situation has developed, preventing families and relatives separated in the North and South from enjoying reunion and from exchanging letters on whether they are alive or dead. Under the U.S. imperialists' barbarous, fascist colonial rule, the South Korean people are suffering immeasurable misfortunes and disasters.

Because of the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers to provoke a war, tension has heightened further in Korea and the danger of a new war has increased with each passing day. After deploying hundreds of nuclear weapons in South Korea, the U.S. imperialists are trying to ship to South Korea neutron weapons and medium-range nuclear missiles. They are recklessly staging nuclear war exercises. To continuously maintain South Korea as a colony and as a military base, the U.S. imperialists are trying to fabricate two Koreas and perpetuate the division of Korea. The U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and their unjust interference are the source of all misfortunes and hardships suffered by the South Korean people, a basic obstacle to the reunification of our country and a major factor threatening peace in Korea and Asia.

Ending the U.S. imperialists' interference and achieving Korea's reunification is a vital requirement related to the life and death of our people and a common desire of the world's peace-loving people, including the African people, who demand that peace be preserved in Korea and Asia. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: The most important thing is independently achieving the fatherland's reunification is to force U.S. forces to withdraw from South Korea and end the U.S. imperialists' interference in the internal affairs of Korea.

The U.S. imperialists have no reason or ground whatsoever for roosting in South Korea. If the U.S. imperialists withdraw from South Korea, all the Korean people of the North and South will peacefully resolve the question of the country's reunification by themselves based on the principle of democracy to meet their desire and interests. The U.S. imperialists should withdraw from South Korea without delay, taking along their forces and nuclear weapons and take their hands of interference off Korea.

The practical and rational way to independently and peacefully achieve Korea's reunification through the independent effort of out people without anyone's interference is to reunify the country by founding the DCRK. The proposal for founding the DCRK clarified by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is aimed at achieving Korea's reunification by establishing an independent, peace-loving and nonaligned confederal state, based on the principle of having the North and South recognize and tolerate the ideology and system possessed by their counterpart and using the method of establishing a united people's government equally participated in by both sides.

The proposal for founding the DCRK and the 10-point administrative policy to be adopted by it is a most practical one correctly reflecting the concrete situation in Korea and the trend of the present era for independence and helping expedite Korea's reunification. This proposal is a fair and just one which could be accepted by everyone. This proposal meets the interests of the Korean people, of the people of the countries surrounding Korea and of the world's people.

When our new proposal for reunification won broad support from all the Korean people and the world's peace-loving people, the U.S. imperialists reacted to this by stepping up their maneuvers to fabricate two Koreas. The unification proposal advanced by the South Korean fascist elements has been formulated in accordance with the scenario of the U.S. imperialists, representing a brazen, fraudulent trick designed to mislead international public opinion and perpetuate the division of Korea.

For the governments and peoples of world countries, paying close attention to the Korean question, to vigorously carry out the international solidarity movement to achieve Korea's independent and peaceful reunification is of great significance. The struggle of the Korean people to force the U.S. imperialists to withdraw from South Korea and independently reunify the fatherland is closely linked to the struggle of the world's people to oppose all forms of domination and subservience, protect peace and achieve independence all over the world. Respecting justice and peace and regarding the cause of the Korean people for reunification as their common cause, the world's people have raised their voices to demand the withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Korea and carried out various activities to support Korea's independent and peaceful reunification. Responding to a recent international signature campaign to support the proposal for founding the DCRK and the 10-point administrative policy of this united state, many world countries, including African countries, have taken positive measures. This signature campaign, which was conducted on all continents and in all regions of the world on an unprecedented scale for 1 year or so by the end of last March, was supported by over 1.6 billion people, including many state heads, party and government leader and social figures from more than 100 countries and 24 international organs. This shows that the world's people are greatly interested in the question of Korea's reunification and that this has become an uncontrollable, powerful trend of the contemporary era. Such support and encouragement of the world's people has provided an international atmosphere for ending foreign forces' interference and achieving Korea's independent reunification.

We firmly believe that the meeting of the governments of the African region supporting Korea's independent and peaceful reunification greatly encouraging the struggle of the Korean people will attain good results amid the unanimous desire and expectation of our people, the African people and the world's peace-loving people for Korea's reunification. The Korean people firmly believe that, just as they did in the past, the governments and peoples of African countries will, in the future, too, positively support the cause of our people for the fatherland's reunification. Positively supported and encouraged by the world's people, our people will surely accomplish the historic cause for the fatherland's reunification.

Kim Il-song Banquet Speech

SK302312 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2247 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 1 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, arranged a grand banquet last evening in honour of the government delegation of the Republic of Malta headed by Prime Minister Dominic Mintoff on a visit to our country. Follows the full text of the speech of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the banquet:

Your Excellency esteemed Mr. Prime Minister Dominic Mintoff, esteemed guests from Malta, comrades and friends:

It is a long time since I met you last and I am greatly pleased to see you here now again, Your Excellency esteemed Mr. Prime Minister Dominic Mintoff, a close friend and comrade-in-arms of mine.

Last April, you were unable to visit our country against your hope because of ill health, and you sent her excellency president of your country as an envoy to congratulate us. Today you have come all the way to see us as you promoised us at that time.

I am deeply moved at the fact that you have come to visit us again, prompted by your respect for our friendship, and I feel all the more keenly true friendship you cherish towards us.

From the bottom of my heart I warmly welcome Your Excellency Prime Minister, a close comrade-in-arms of mine, and your company on this occasion overflowing with friendly feelings.

Your Excellency Prime Minister, your current visit to our country greatly inspires our people in their struggle to build socialism and reunify the country and will mark an epochal event in promoting our personal friendship and developing the friendly relations between Korea and Malta onto a new higher stage. We consider that your current visit to our country is of great significance in strengthening unity and cooperation under the present situation.

The present world situation is more complicated and tense than ever before. Today in the area on the Mediterranean Sea where Malta is located, the flames of a new war are raging because of the reckless aggressive acts of the Israeli Zionists under the active aegis of the U.S. imperialists. The Israeli aggressors have occupied a vast area in Lebanon and, under the signboard of "ceasefire", are massacring Lebanese and Palestinian people and continuing their provocative attack against the Syrian Army which is performing its lawful mission to maintain peace in Lebanon.

This extremely aggravates the tense Near and Middle East situation and seriously jeopardizes peace and security of the world as a whole.

All this fact shows once again that U.S. imperialism is the very root cause of aggression and war and the international gendarme. It also clearly shows that, indeed, the Israeli Zionists are heinous aggressors and disturbers of peace who are resorting to every means and method in order to fulfil their ambition for territorial expansion.

Today the danger of a new war hovers over Korea and the rest of Asia, Europe, Africa and Latin America. The prevailing situation demands that all peace-loving peoples of the world unite their efforts and take a more powerful joint action to frustrate the fiendish invasion on Lebanon and massacre by U.S. imperialism and the Israeli aggressors.

The peoples of socialist countries, non-aligned and all newly-emerging nations should before anyone else make every possible effort to defend the just cause of the peoples of Lebanon, Palestine and Syria and the rest of Arab peoples. Therefore, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea has solemnly declared that it will give all aid and support including the dispatch of volunteers to the Palestinian people and other fighting Arab peoples, if they request. We consider that this is an internationalist duty of comrades-in-arms who are fighting shoulder to shoulder on the front of anti-imperialism and independnece.

We strongly hold that the Israeli aggressors must immediately stop their criminal invasion against Lebanon and unconditionally withdraw from the area under their occupation without delay, and that the legitimate national rights of the Palestine people including their right to establish an independent state be restored at the earliest date.

Today, in many countries of the world including Asia and Europe, anti-war, anti-nuclear peace movements are vigorously developing on a massive scale.

The Maltese Government and people under the leadership of Your Excellency Esteemed Prime Minister have completely abolished the imperialist military bases which had existed in the Maltese territory for nearly 200 years and are steadfastly following the policy of independence, neutrality and non-alignment.

We express our firm solidarity with you in your maintenance of independence in accord with the trend of the present times, in your proclaimed neutrality and in your great efforts to build a prosperous new society, and wish the Maltese people a greater success in their future struggle for their just cause.

Proceeding from its principled foreign policy, the Maltese Government has invariably supported and encouraged our people's just struggle to ease the tension in Korea and achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country. I would like to take this opportunity to express my deep thanks to Your Excellency Esteemed Prime Minister, the Government and people of Malta for their sincere support and encouragement to our people in their cause of national reunification.

It is now an irrestible trend of the times that the world people desire independence and follow the road of peace and democracy, national independence and socialism. We are convinced that, if all countries and all nations of the world oppose all forms of foreign domination and subjugation, maintain independence and unfold a vigorous struggle in firm unity to frustrate the imperialists manoeuvres of aggression and war, they will be able to bring independence to the whole world and preserve peace and security, the common aspiration of mankind.

I think we will have time to sit together during your durrent visit to discuss fully the question of friendship and cooperation between our two countries and also joint measures to cope with today's tense situation.

Your Excellency esteemed Mr. Prime Minister, On this happy occasion when I met you again, the distinguished leader of the Maltese people and a close friend of ours, I would like to propose a toast:

To the brotherly friendship and solidarity between the Korean and Maltese peoples, to the prosperity and development of the Republic of Malta, to the long life and good health of Your Excellency esteemed Mr. Prime Minister Dominic Mintoff, to the health of the guests from Malta, and to the health of all comrades and friends present here.

Mintoff Speech

SK302247 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2223 GMT 30 Jun 82

[Text] Pyongyang, July 1 (KCNA) -- Maltese Prime Minister Dominic Mintoff made a speech at a banquet arranged on the evening of June 30 by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, in honour of the government delegation of the Republic of Malta on a visit to our country. He said:

From the tiny Republic of Malta, so far away geographically, we bring the very sincere greetings of our government and people to the Government and people of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

During our brief stay here my delegation and I have been once again greatly impressed by the achievements of a people modelling itself on the revolutionary chuche idea of self-reliance under the enlightened guidance of an esteemed leader. Any visitor to this country can see all around him tangible evidence of what a people can achieve by inspired leadership, socialist determination and patriotic fervour.

Since our last visit in January, 1975 our small island republic has shed forever its role as military base with a fortress economy serving a foreign colonial master. With widespread support, particularly from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, we have rid Malta of foreign domination. The people of Malta do now vow that they will never allow foreign bases on the sacred soil of their motherland. By exploiting its strategic position in the Mediterranean, Malta is striving to become a centre for peace bridging Europe in the north and the Arab countries in the south.

The Democratic People's Republic of Korea also has made great strides in its long and steady march towards the sacred goal of reunification of all the Korean peoples.

The principles for this reunification set out by the great and beloved leader President Comrade Kim Il-song have rightly earned the support of Malta and of many other progressive states in the Third World. We believe the day for reunification is now much nearer and the workers of Malta and their socialist government will stand by you with all the moral strength that they can master until this final battle is won.

Referring to the naked and brutal aggression by Israel of helpless Lebanon in an attempt to destroy the Palestinians whose only crime is to seek for and establish a country of their own, he went on to say: Malta has been the first non-Arab country to condemn Israel and to call for international support which would compel the aggressor unconditionally to withdraw her forces. We note with satisfaction that for the first time the majority of the states inside the European community have unequivocally joined the Third World in the condemnation of Israel and are now slowly becoming convinced that there can be no security in the Mediterranean and therefore in Europe without a just and honourable solution of the Palestinian problem. The moment of truth is close at hand: Let us hope that where all pleas for justice have fallen on deaf ears in the past, urgent considerations of self-preservation, when danger of a general conflagration is so close, will make commonsense prevail.

These happenings — the latest of many warlike upheavals in our turbulent Mediterranean region — have not made it easier for our small and young nation to meet the challenges presented by its infant economy. Inspite of all our efforts Malta's economy is suffering from the effects of the world recession which has also affected even more severely the more developed and the more technologically advanced countries of Europe. Thus we are now caught in a vicious circle. We have to increase our exports in order to increase our industrial production and become competitive, but we are facing a shrinking European market where imports are decreasing and this decrease is making our products costlier and therefore less competitive.

All this should make it clear to all our Korean friends how urgent it is for us to translate Maltese-Korean political solidarity into a concrete mutually advantageous economic cooperation. Without this, my second visit to your country would have been in vain. This is the economic and political climate in which Malta finds itself now in the year in which Your Excellency celebrated the 70th birthday and was elected president for life of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. I had wished to be here on that memorable day but my health and other impediments had made this impossible. Now may I repeat in person our felicitations and our joy and that of the Maltese people. May I also thank you for the welcome and warm hospitality which Your Excellency extended on that memorable occasion to my friend and former colleague Agatha Barbara, the president of the Republic of Malta.

Our visit to this magnificent country and our second meeting with the respected and beloved leader of the Korean people, President Comrade Kim Il-song and the brave and heroic people of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, should now serve to launch a beginning of much needed commercial and economic ventures between our two countries.

Your Excellency can rest assured of Malta's solidarity with your brave and heroic people, with the continuing effort of Your Excellency to achieve the three principles namely, independence, peaceful reunification and great national unity with the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo.

Lastly he proposed a toast: To the close friendship and solidarity between the Maltese and Korean people; to the happiness and prosperity of the people of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea; to the health of His Excellency Comrade President Kim Il-song, the great and beloved leader of the Korean people; to the health of His Excellency Comrade Premier Yi Chong-ok.

[Text] Seoul, July 1 (YONHAP) -- The Agency for National Security Planning (NSP) has arrested three North Korean spies, including former residents in Europe, it was announced Thursday.

The NSP identified the three as Kim Chin-mo, 43, a former miner in West Germany, Kim Tong-hyon, 25, an ex-resident of Sweden, and Kim Yang-su, 46, who has collaborated with North Korean agents in Japan.

According to the announcement, Kim Chin-mo was recruited by a North Korean agent while a miner in West Germany in 1977, and subsequently underwent espionage training in North Korea. Kim reentered West Germany with an operational fund of 10,000 U.S. dollars provided by the North Korean authorities. Kim entered South Korea last March 20 under the guise of a North Korean doctor who had been in exile in West Germany.

Kim Tong-hyon, the announcement said, left Korea for Europe on Sept. 4, 1981 with a student passport. Kim visited the North Korean Embassy in Stockholm last April 27, and solicited for residence in North Korea, it said. He was instructed by the North Korean Embassy to cause a disruption in the relations between the South Korean Embassy and the Swedish Government before coming to North Korea. He tried to carry out his instructions by making a false allegation before the Swedish authorities last May 3 that the South Korean Embassy put him in custody at a Stockholm hotel for three days. When this attempt failed and the Swedish police asked him to return to South Korea, Kim reentered the country posing as a North Korean agent defecting to the South. According to the announcement, however, his real purpose was to spy for North Korea.

Kim Yang-su was recruited by a North Korean agent in Japan in December 1965, and has since provided classified information about military installations in South Korea to North Korean agents in Japan, it said. In October 1981, Kim revisited Japan on a commercial passport and provided his North Korean contracts with South Korean industrial information.

The NSP, in making the announcement, warned South Korean nationals traveling abroad to guard against overseas North Korean agents seeking to win over prospective spies, adding that North Korea is stepping up its anti-Seoul activities.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON NEW ECONOMIC MEASURES

Small Firms Aided

SK010043 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 1 Jul 82 p 1

[Text] Drastic financing support will be extended to small firms which are promising but in financial trouble. Regulations on short-term trade credits will be lifted to help prevent foreign exchange reserves from being depleted. These are some of the detailed programs for the pump-priming package which was announced June 28, the Finance Ministry said yesterday.

According to the ministry, all banking institutions will handpick small- and medium-sized firms which stand on sound footings but without sufficient funds available. The promising firms of small scale will be able to meet their requirements for loans, and competent but ill-financed firms will obtain loans without security.

The selected companies wanting quick loans in emergencies will get the required money first and then provide security under an ex post facto system.

Under the lending first, security second system, the maximum amount of loans will be 100 million won to a firm.

The loans to small companies will carry an annual interest rate of 10 percent and are scheduled to be released starting July 5. To cope with a possible drainage of foreign reserves arising from low interest rates on domestic loans, the government has decided to allow short-term credit imports of all items.

With bank interest rates readjusted on June 28, the domestic lending rate went down to 10 percent compared with the U.S. prime rate of 16 percent. In the past D/A and usance imports were permitted of items carrying tariff rates of 40 percent of under. Local enterprises were also authorized to get both cash and commodity loans from overseas on their own credit, and without requirements of bank guarantees.

The government will also strictly control earlier payment of the existing foreign loans than scheduled to prevent foreign currency for going overseas.

The ministry also disclosed that a special investigation team would be established to intensely check the movement of financial markets daily.

The team will be composed of working-level officials from the Finance Ministry, the Economic Planning Board, the Office of National Tax Administration and Chongwadae. The director general of the Finance Ministry's Finance Bureau will head the committee.

The team will keep close tabs on money flow in banking and finance circles and the curb loan market, speculation in real estate and other areas.

If it finds abnormal financing activities, the team take immediate action to correct the abnormality.

Ministers Reveal Policy

SK010241 Seoul YONHAP in English 0207 GMT 1 Jul 82

[Text] Seoul, July 1 (YONHAP) — The South Korean Government will not extend relief funds or loans to insolvent enterprises because the new economic policies announced June 28 will provide enough assistance to financially troubled companies, Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister, Kim Chun-song disclosed in a TV interview Wednesday evening.

The nation's top economic policymaker also expressed the government's firm determination to fight speculative investments in real estate. "If the June 28 measures rekindle speculation, we will promptly raise tax rates and take other countermeasures," Kim emphasized.

The comprehensive anti-recession package, highlighted by the reduction of bank interest rates and corporate taxes, is feared to cause a massive transfer of funds from banks to real estate. Asked about the possible drop in tax revenues caused by the package, Kim made it clear that the government will not borrow money from the state-run Bank of Korea even if it suffers a large deficit. "The government will not implement inflationary measures to make up for any possible tax deficits," Kim said, adding that the tax deficit would not be as big as anticipated because the latest measures will help enterprises expand their business activities, resulting in increased tax revenues.

Kim said that because the measures aim at helping enterprises rather than increasing the personal gains of businessmen, enterprises which do not help themselves will enjoy little benefits from the new policies.

Meanwhile, new Finance Minister Kang Kyong-sik, in another Wednesday TV interview with the Korea Broadcasting System, said that the government will allow the establishment of more short-term financing firms, mutual savings and finance companies as part of its efforts to attract as much curb money into secondary banking institutions as possible. Concerning the government plan to turn the country's commercial banks over the private management, Kang said that Korea can hardly expect further economic development without autonomous lending operations of banks.

Planning Minister Interviewed

SK010025 Seoul HANGUK ILBO in Korean 29 Jun 82 p 3

[Interview with Deputy Prime Minister Kim Chun-song, concurrently economic planning minister, by economic editor Pak In-sun — date and place not given]

[Excerpts] The 28 June measure is considered emergency treatment aimed at escaping from the economic recession which has lasted for 3 years. It also is accepted as an epoch-making turnaround because it is a sudden move toward growth in the economic policy of a government which has so far laid stress only on stability. Through an exclusive interview with Deputy Prime Minister Kim Chun-song — the midwife of the 28 June measure — by economic editor Pak In-sun, we will hear about the background of the measure and supplementary measures.

[Pak In-sun] The latest measure is considered a sudden turnaround in economic policy. We may call it a sudden turnaround from the basic policy toward stability to policy toward expanded growth. Although there are many things on which we can place our hopes in this measure, it is feared that because the measure might cause harmful effects such as people's apprehensions over commodity prices, the favorable effects which the government has expected might be offset by the ill effects.

[Kin Chun-song] The basic policy toward stability remains unchanged. In the process of curbing runaway inflation and prices, the ill effects, which gave rise to domestic business recession, have been caused. The government has not been in a position to strive toward a single goal, so the government took the best economic measure within the limits of stabilization. The 14 January and 18 May measures were part of the work of laying the foundation for the latest measure.

These days, the government has come to have confidence in prices and the balance of international payments position has been improved remarkably. Our economy has come to take shape as an advanced type operated by the capitalistic market function; the U.S. economy is in a recovery trend; and, in recent days, our economy has taken an upward turn while the arrival of letters of credits has increased. Therefore, we have felt the necessity of giving a strong stimulus to this uptrend. Although people have said that due to the overall unfavorable business trend, imports have decreased. Imports, on the whole, have decreased because of a decrease in food imports as well as of saving energy. Imports on raw materials, on the other hand, have increased.

Speaking of the interest rates, because prices have been stabilized and the level of prices in our country is higher than our competitors — such as Hong Kong and Taiwan — there has been room for lowering the rates. This is a kind of synergism in which the interest rates decrease when prices decrease and vice versa.

The total money supply itself cannot be a goal. Our country is the only one which carries out an economic operation after deciding on an increase in the rate of the total money supply.

In addition, our goal for the total money supply is small in comparison with the gross national product [GNP]. The increase in the rate of the total money supply to the GNP of our country is merely 20 to 25 percent while that of the United States and Japan stands at 60 to 80 percent. Thus, the government has decided to operate the total money supply in consideration of prices, interest rate and fund holdings and to maintain an appropriate level of total money supply on the basis of the GNP. It seems that such a turnaround has confused people and enterprises, which have been seized with apprehension over inflation.

[Pak In-sun] It is expected that if the demand for funds rapidly increases because of the drastic lowering of the interest rate, we might see inflation caused and it would be difficult to achieve price stabilization of a single digit. Many have the view that the recent price stabilization is attributable to a nosedive in the prices of international raw materials and to an inactive purchasing power.

[Kim Chun-song] Our policy is that the government will increase the money supply within the limits of avoiding inflation and stimulate investments and production activities in keeping with such a business trend. The government is not going to release such funds to stimulate consumption and give rise to a contrived demand. A long period would be needed in expanding production and increasing employment. However, the government is immediately going to keep under strong control any speculative activities.

[Pak In-sun] I think that a low interest rate is not always a good one. The introducation of foreign capital arranged in accordance with a difference between the interest rates of the debtor nation and the creditor nation or the conversion of loan funds into domestic funds would grow. Would you say something about any government measure to defend or improve the balance of international payments position?

[Kim Chun-song] Even before this measure was taken, the domestic interest rate had been well under the international interest rate. In this connection, the government has carefully reviewed how the funds had been transferred. In case of a long-term loan, we had no problem because many loans were linked to introduction of equipment. Thus we had no choice but to depend on foreign financing and the lenders were banks and public institutions. What is a problem is a short-term loan. The government is planning to devise various measures to take follow-up steps. In the past, the amount of transferred funds obtained in accordance with the difference between the interest rates of our country and foreign countries totalled only several hundred millions of dollars. We do not have to worry about this.

[Pak In-sun] Because the bank interest rate is lower than the market rate, would it not be difficult to obtain a bank loan and possible that the money-lending might be arranged through graft?

[Kim Chun-song] I do not rule out such a possibility. As the interest rate is cut, the demand for funds will increase; if institutional financing is not sufficient, the interest rate of curb loans will increase. The curb loan is a necessary evil. We should bring the curb loan into the open so that those in curb loan markets will pay taxes and do business legally.

[Pak In-sun] The weakest point of our economy is that the enterprises' financial structure is weak. This is an aftermath of the government-led economic operation. The latest measure is accepted as one to break away from the economic recession through invigorating domestic business. However, it can be said that the government-controlled financing is, on the contrary, being strengthened. Therefore, it seems that the economic system is going back again to the government-led economic system.

[Kim Chun-song] No, you are wrong. As long as I remain in the government I am going to do my best to return the economic operation system to one led by the private sector. Among the steps in the latest measure, the adjustment of tax rates and control of the money supply are the government's inherent function in controlling business. The government is planning to put all interest rates under the function of the market structure except for the rediscount rate of the Bank of Korea next year.

[Pak In-sun] Though some banks have been placed in private hands so far, many people have divergent opinions about whether those banks had really been placed in private hands.

[Kim Chun-song] When two banks are put into private hands this year and another one next year, the banks will be totally free of government control. In the future, the government will never release relief funds for enterprises, even conglomerates, and will leave the financing to be controlled by the market function.

[Pak In-sun] There is the possibility of speculation of converting money into goods such as real estate, securities and valuables because of the low public interest rate and apprehension over the curb loan market.

[Kim Chun-song] I do not expect that such hectic speculation as in 1978 would occur again. However, if such a thing should happen again, the government would curb it by immediately increasing the flexible tax rates of the transfer income tax.

[Pak In-sun] You have said that the government would stimulate the economy by boosting domestic business producing goods for home consumption. However, what is problematic is the purchasing power of the domestic market. The increase of wages has been substantially curbed at a single digit. This is much the same as limiting the purchasing power, thus inevitably curbing total consumption. In this regard, can we expect that business would be boosted through promotion of purchasing power?

[Kim Chun-song] When the enterprises are in a better condition by the government lessening the burdens of the enterprises and alleviating their tax burdens by lowering the interest rate, the standards of workers' income will eventually be enhanced. We should not look forward to a sudden stimulation of the economy, but I can confidently say that after a sufficient lapse of time the latest measure will take effect and thus the economy will be stimulated.

CHOSON ILBO Editorial

[Editorial: "Drastic Economic Measures -- Shocking Treatment, What Is the Problem"]

[Text] We understand that the government had to take drastic measures to overcome a protracted economic recession, but whether they are the best approach is open to question. If the government was forced to come up with such shocking and drastic treatment to revive the moribund economic situation, it would have been wiser for the government to approach this problem with various other effective measures.

The so-called "policy package to reinvigorate the national economy by means of promoting investment" announced by the government on 28 June was truly shocking, even to firms -- recipients of these drastic benefits. The economic policy slashed an additional 4 percent off the interest rates, which are far below the international interest rates as a result of repeated decreases in the past, and cut corporate tax rates to 20 percent at one stroke.

What fortunate measures are these for firms which are under a heavy burden of debt! The government measures for economic invigoration are said to lessen the tax burden by 200 billion won for these firms. These measures will undoubtedly help firms reorganize their financial structures and revive vigor in the management of the firms.
